The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 1 82 January 1, 1945

Murray Hails ACA; Wire Vote Slated Jan. 2-10

A personal letter to each of 60,000 Western Union employes was sent this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray urging that they vote for the CIO American Communications Assn. in a Labor Board election to be held Jan. 2-10. Murray described the ACA as "an effective, responsible organization, devoted wholeheartedly to the interests of the people."

He urged the Western Union employes to examine the records of the opposing unions "with extreme care" and warned against diversion by "false issues."

The election, which will be held among all telegraph employes throughout the nation during the week of January 2 to 10, is one of the largest ever conducted by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. Nearly 60,000 employes in 5,000 communities will be eligible to vote either for the ACA-CIO or the designation "AFL," which represents a combination of four AFL unions in the industry.

Murray, in his letter to the workers, recalled the growth of the ACA since its affiliation with CIO in 1937, stating that it has "provided real leadership for employes in every section of the communication industry and has a noteworthy record of accomplishment in bringing economic benefits to those employes."

Emphasizing his close association with the leadership of the ACA-CIO over a period of years, Murray characterized it as "sound, constructive, intelligent and energetic."

He expressed full confidence in its ability to bring to Western Union employes "the improvement in wages and conditions of employment to which they are so clearly entitled by reason of their skill, training and experience."

The CIO has given all-out support to the ACA in this drive to organize Western Union employes. In addition to financial support from the National CIO, individual CIO unions have contributed large sums ranging from $10,000 contributed by the United Auto Workers to $5,000 each from the Steelworkers, National Maritime Union, Electrical Workers, etc.

FDR Blasts Avery; Ward Plants Seized

(See Page 3)

★ ★ ★

CIO Calls White Collar Parley

(See Page 2)

CONGRESSMAN DRIPP by Yomen

"IT MUST BE A GOOD RESOLUTION—I STUCK TO IT LAST YEAR"

City By City Dates For Vital Western Union Balloting

The Natl. Labor Relations Board election among 60,000 Western Union employes scattered in nearly 5,000 communities throughout the nation will be held during the week of January 2 to 10 in accordance with the following schedule. The vote will take place at designated spots in principal cities and will be by mail in smaller communities. The dates of the election in principal cities are:

January 3—Boston, Atlanta, Washington, D. C., Newark, Albany, New Orleans, Jacksonville, Knoxville, Tampa, Portland, Seattle and Spokane.

January 4—Buffalo, Rochester, New Haven, Bridgeport, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Birmingham, Syracuse, Columbia, S. C., Denver, Kansas City, Wichita and Omaha.

January 5—Chattanooga, Pittsburgh, Hartford, Miami, Nashville, Savannah, Lincoln, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco and Phoenix.

January 6—Springfield, Mass.

January 8—New York City (metropolitan, Eastern and home units), Jersey City, Chicago, Milwaukee and Peoria.

January 9—Providence, Alameda and Richmond.

All CIO forces are urged to communicate with ACA offices in all principal cities to assist in getting out the vote on election day.

All CIO forces are urged to visit Western Union employes in smaller communities, where voting will be by mailed ballot, to see that ACA votes are mailed promptly upon receipt and no later than January 19. No mailed ballots will be counted unless they are received in Washington on or before January 22.

We Can't Sit on Our Hands and Get 60 Million Jobs—Wallace

Daring originality to guarantee full employment after the war was called for this week by Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace, in a speech before the American Statistical Assn., in Washington, D. C. Supporting the Murray 60-million-jobs bill reported favorably last week by a Senate subcommittee, Wallace declared:

"The essential idea is that the federal government is ultimately responsible for full employment and can discharge its responsibility only by planning in advance to synchronize all of its programs with the programs of private enterprise so that the whole national income will be maintained at the full employment level.

"As the common man, the statistician and the statesman look toward the future, they know that supreme emphasis must be placed on full use of all resources of man, nature and technology to raise the standard of living of all the world," Wallace said.

ENORMOUS PRODUCTIVE POTENTIAL

He pointed out that America's productive potential is enormous, but that full development of it calls for "daring economic projections and bold statesmanship." He cited predictions of governmental economists who said a national income of nearly 200 billion dollars could be achieved, and pointed out that the war has proved them right.

"Contrast their imaginative daring with the fearful, halting attitude of certain nostalgic editorial writers or with those who would have us wait until unemployment is upon us before taking coordinated, preventive measures," Wallace said.

Wallace declared that "the concept of jobs for all is even more important than price 'equality for agriculture.'"

"Farmers," the Vice-President pointed out, "are much better off with price equality with full employment than they are with price equality and unemployment. In other words, a medium piece out of a big pie of consumer purchasing power may be a whole lot larger than a large piece out of a small pie."

White Collar Parley Called by CIO for Jan. 15

A national conference of white collar and professional organizations will be held in Washington, D. C., January 15, to call attention to the "continued neglect of the economic and social problems of millions of white collar and professional employes," and to promote measures for their prompt correction, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey announced this week.

Invitations to participate in the conference have been sent to a large number of organizations in the educational, scientific, entertainment, medical, welfare, cultural and other fields as well as to trade unions and other associations having white collar and professional employes in their membership.

The initiative in calling the conference was taken by the CIO and affiliated international unions with white collar workers in membership, including the Newspaper Guild; State, County & Municipal Workers; United Steelworkers; Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes; Federal Workers; Office & Professional Workers; Automobile Workers; Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians; Rubber Workers, and Textile Workers Unions.

BROADLY REPRESENTATIVE

However, it is planned to make the conference as broadly representative as possible of all white collar and professional organizations. A special subcommittee has been designated by President Murray, including Carey, Vice-President and Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, UOPWA Pres. Lewis Merrill, and Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers, to handle the conference details.

The conference call stated:

"The CIO profoundly realizes that the well being of our Nation and its effectiveness in war and peace demand that every section of our population must be made secure and placed in a position to make their maximum contribution to our country, today for the swift achievement of victory and tomorrow for the achievement of a durable peace and lasting prosperity.

"The CIO is of the opinion that the continued neglect of the economic and social problems of the millions of white collar and professional employes must be promptly corrected in the interest of the entire nation.

"Responsibility for enactment of a program directed to this end rests, in the final analysis, on business and government. Nevertheless, the CIO is prepared to help in every constructive way to enable our country to deal properly with this question."

The Conference will convene at 9:30 A.M., January 15, in the Hotel Mayflower, Washington, D. C.

Says GI Joes Draw 'Blanks' In U. S. Army Orientation

The U. S. Army's orientation program fails to tell GI Joe why he is fighting, Joseph G. Velosky, director of the CIO United Auto Workers Veterans Dept., asserted in an article in the December issue of Ammunition, monthly UAW publication.

An Army veteran with eight years' service including two in the present war, Velosky commented on an article in an earlier issue of Ammunition by Maj. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, director of Morale Services Division of the Army Service Forces.

"General Osborn's article contains a good program," Velosky said. "But, now, six months after the article was written, we find very little of this program in effect in the Army camps at home and overseas."

Velosky said that although the program outlined by General Osborn "sounds fine the experience of UAW-CIO veterans and servicemen still under arms indicates that this laudable program is merely a paper program."

How the orientation program fails to fulfill most of the objectives outlined by General Osborn was told by Velosky.

"The orientation courses have given a good summary of the diplomatic and military events leading up to the outbreak of World War I," Velosky declared. "But the courses have hardly mentioned the main points, namely, that fascism and nazism breed war, and that the countries overrun by these dictatorships could have been stopped if the United States had joined other peace-loving nations in collective action before the outbreak of the war.

Velosky said that courses give little information on the political and economic nature of fascism, and on China and Russia.

With the carrying out of the objective, "Know and Have Pride in Your Outfit," Velosky had "no quarrels."

"The standards and the viewpoints of the commercial press and radio are accepted by the Army," the article pointed out, "with no serious attempt to refute the lies and distortations which characterize these organs."

Velosky also asserted that "careful handling of the race and the nationality questions" and "objective handling of the labor question" are largely ignored.

Legion Hails UAW Vets' Seniority Plan

The Detroit District Legion Assn., representing 76 American Legion posts with membership of more than 12,000 World War I veterans, has adopted a resolution endorsing the model contract seniority clause of the CIO United Auto Workers. The clause covers ex-servicemen not given seniority rights under the Selective Service Act.

"In adopting this resolution," District Commander Walter Scott said, "we endorse the policy of affording seniority rights to honorably discharged veterans who do not have such seniority rights because they either had no employment before entering service or because such employment was temporary."

The model contract clause provides that veterans not employed on entering service who obtain employment in a plant covered by a contract shall receive seniority credit equal to the length of time they spent in service.

The clause also provides that so-called temporary employes shall accumulate seniority during their period in the service and shall be reinstated to their jobs in accordance with accumulated seniority.

UP IN ARMS: Girls brought from the Ukraine by the Germans for forced labor in a factory in Schirmeck hoist Lt. J. B. Keely of Houston, Tex., up in the air to celebrate their liberation by the Americans. (Federated Pictures)

Steel Worker Wins Silver Star Award

Intrepid gallantry during a landing in Italy has won a Silver Star for Tech. Sgt. Leroy I. Tharp, 26-year-old infantryman from Granite City, Illinois, and a member of Local 30, CIO United Steelworkers.

Section chief of a 75 mm. self-propelled cannon, Tharp took charge of the platoon when his sergeant was wounded, and destroyed two enemy machine gun nests. He then carried two wounded comrades to safety under heavy enemy fire.

Extension Given Vets Ruled Retroactive

Honorably discharged veterans separated from service prior to December 8, 1944, but not more than 90 days before, are entitled to take advantage of the time extension provided by the recent amendment to the Selective Training and Service Act, according to Selective Service.

The amendment extends from 30 to 90 days the period in which veterans may make application for reinstatement in their former positions.

FAECT Victories

CIO's Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians scored Natl. Labor Relations Board victories among engineering employes at the Cox and Stevens Co. and the Boland and Bryce Co.

Guns, Jobs GIs' Main Wants, CIOer Finds

Gerald Fielde, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union, was back on his union job this week, a little thinner from his experience of dodging Nazi submarines, bombs and mines for the past year.

Fielde was re-elected at the recent FE convention, and returned to his union job at the request of the Executive Board.

He was full of praise for his mates in the merchant marine, and their matter-of-fact attitude as they manned the ships, efficiently and calmly sailing through mine-infested waters.

On his last trip, which took him out of the U. S. for eight months, his ship touched the shores of Africa, Italy, Corsica and France. In Toulon he saw the scuttled French fleet, the superstructures of the sunken vessel standing above the water like "tombstones of some vast and ghostly graveyard."

"The Mediterranean is ours now," Fielde said, "but I know the terrific battles our Army, Navy and Air Force and merchant marine put up to win it.

"I have seen the American fighting men in action and I want to impress that picture in the mind of everyone on the home front. The GI wants two things from us. First, to give him everything he needs to win the war and get him home. Second, to have a job waiting for him when he gets here.

"That's our union's program. I'm glad if I can help to carry it out."

CIO's First 2 '45 Radio Shows Slated for Jan. 6

Tune in this Saturday afternoon and evening, Jan. 6, to the first of two dramatic nationwide broadcasts of CIO's new radio shows.

CBS stations throughout the nation are being offered the network's CIO show, "Job for Tomorrow," at 3:45 p. m. EWT. The first show on a 13-week series will be Jan. 6, with listeners being taken on a tour of some of America's basic industries to acquaint them with union workers and the job they're doing.

Blue Network stations will be offered CIO's weekly program at 6:45 p. m. EWT, and every Saturday thereafter for 26 weeks. The program, following a "March of Time" technique, will include news, dramatization of issues, commentary and interviews with CIO leaders and other prominent persons.

The first Blue program will feature CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

CIO officials throughout the nation are urged to check their local CBS and Blue Network stations to see whether or not they will carry the programs. Reports pro and con should be sent immediately to the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

55c Wage Minimum Wholly Inadequate, Textile Union Says

A wage increase of 5 cents an hour discussed by the public members of the Natl. War Labor Board will completely fail to solve any of the grave problems raised by the CIO Textile Workers Union in its effort to bring the living conditions of half a million cotton textile workers up to a decent American level, TWU Pres. Emil Rieve said this week.

"If the public members of the board seriously are proposing to set 55 cents an hour as the minimum wage in the cotton textile industry," Rieve declared, "they are obviously blind to the cold realities of the situation that now faces the country.

"The public members of the board have before them tested statistics which show that in order to live even on the bare subsistence level defined by the WPA in the depth of the depression in 1935, a worker with a wife and two children to support now needs 72 cents an hour, or $28.80 a week.

"The public members of the board would completely ignore this need and say, in effect: 'You'll have to get by on $22 a week.' The proposal would be ludicrous if it were not so tragic."

Half a million cotton textile workers are now getting grossly substandard wages and are living in conditions which are a mockery to the much-publicized "American standard of living," Rieve said.

TEXTILE PAY LOW

"With two exceptions, cotton textile workers are paid the lowest wages in all manufacturing industry," he declared.

"And what has been the result? Critical shortages in cotton textile products which are necessary to the winning of the war—tents and tarpaulin material, cord for heavy trucks and airplane tires.

"The shortage has become so acute that Chairman Krug of the War Production Board has seriously proposed using sheet steel instead of duck for tents to shelter our fighting men in the Pacific. The U. S. Army is even now sending soldiers into cotton textile mills to get out the needed production.

"Cotton textiles are so greatly needed in some war theatres that they are being flown to the battle fronts.

"Government agencies make no secret of the reason for the shortages. They have said time and again that there is a manpower shortage, and there is a manpower shortage because of low wages in the cotton textile mills. To this shortage must be added a less vital but still critical shortage in such civilian essentials as infants' clothes and work clothes."

Up Foundry Pay To Aid Shortage Of Manpower

Critical foundry production problems resulting from manpower shortages in the industry were met by a Natl. War Labor Board resolution this week.

The WLB will approve or grant average wage increases up to 10 cents an hour above the established approvable rate in voluntary or dispute cases in foundries certified as requiring such action.

This recognition by the Board that wage levels are a contributing factor in the foundry manpower shortage is in line with the CIO Textile Workers Union's contention that the shortage of cotton duck for tents and tarpaulins results from a manpower shortage could be corrected by an increase in the minimum wage rates from 50 to 60 cents an hour.

22% Output Hike Is 'Birthday' Gift To Armed Forces

A "birthday" present to the fighting forces of a 22 per cent increase in production was chalked up Dec. 27 by members of the CIO United Steelworkers employed at the Rustless Iron & Steel Corp., Baltimore.

The firm, which employs 2,300 workers, celebrated its 20th anniversary Dec. 27. It fabricates about 25 per cent of the stainless steel produced in the United States.

FDR Blasts Avery; Ward Stores Seized

The head of the second largest mail order house in the nation virtually was accused of sabotaging the war effort this week as President Roosevelt ordered Army seizure of the firm's stores in nine cities. The man is Sewell L. Avery. The firm is Montgomery Ward & Co.

Avery, who is rumored to be on the way "out" of his job, was accused by FDR of waging "a bitter fight against the bona fide unions of (Ward) employees throughout the war in reckless disregard of the government's efforts to maintain harmony between management and labor."

The President ordered seizure of Ward properties in Chicago, St. Paul, Denver, Detroit, Dearborn and Royal Oak, Mich., Jamaica N. Y., San Rafael, Calif., and Portland Ore.

This is the third time in eight months that Ward property has been seized by the federal government, as the aging Avery continues his four-year vendetta against wartime labor regulations.

Avery's lack of patriotism was outlined by inference in FDR's statement. He said:

"Our commanders in the field are demanding weapons in increasing quantities so that they may hit the enemy harder and harder. The supreme effort of all of us here at home is imperative if we are to give them what they need.

"The government cannot and will not tolerate any interference with war production in this crucial hour.

"The confidence which employers and workers rightly place in this structure for the impartial adjudication of disputes is being threatened by consistent and willful defiance of its decisions by the head of one of the great corporations of this country—Sewell Avery, chairman of the board of Montgomery Ward & Co.

RECKLESS BATTLE

"This company, under Mr. Avery's leadership, has waged a bitter fight against the bona fide unions of its employes throughout the war in reckless disregard of the government's efforts to maintain harmony between management and labor. Its record of labor relations has been a record of continuous trouble.

"Strikes in wartime cannot be condoned, whether they are strikes by workers against their employers or strikes by employers against their government. All of our energies are engrossed in fighting a war on the military battlefronts. We have none to spare for a war on the industrial battlefronts."

Seizure of the Ward property followed Avery's continued refusal to abide by a Natl. War Labor Board decision calling for maintenance of membership, arbitration, check-off of union dues, seniority and payment of back wages.

BACK WAGES DUE

FDR's order requires payment of back wages out of net operating revenue. The total due the workers was estimated at $2 million by Samuel Wolchok, president of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. This organization and the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union represent a majority of the company's 70,000 workers.

The company is expected to make capital out of the case if Avery's policies prevail, probably taking it to the highest court in the land in an effort to prove that the wartime seizure was "unconstitutional."

The President in his seizure order pointed out that the firm serves 30 million customers, that an interruption of service would impede the war effort, and that the preservation of the wartime structures of labor relations and economic stabilization depend on compliance of both employers and employes with WLB directives.

72c Wage Floor Asked By Labor

Any pay below 72 cents an hour should be considered substandard, considering the present cost of living, labor members of the Natl. War Labor Board said late last week.

The labor members urged the Board to hike the present 50 cent substandard floor by 22 cents, pointing out that "evidence submitted to the Board indicates that, in order to maintain even the barest minimum standard of living, an employe should receive no less than 72 cents an hour."

The suggested policy would allow the Board to approve voluntary applications to increase the minimum to 72 cents an hour, although in dispute cases the Board might take into consideration factors which allegedly might justify a lower rate. Under present policy, 50 cents an hour is the top for correction of substandard pay in voluntary requests for adjustments.

Declaring that the Board has evaded the issue of substandard pay the labor members said:

"The Board has persisted in this conduct despite Presidential assurances, despite powers granted in statutes and executive orders, despite its own brave words that action would be taken to meet the problem of eliminating substandards of living. It is late indeed, but not too late, for the Board to act courageously and effectively."

The labor members quoted FDR as telling Congress last January: "It is our duty now to begin to lay the plans and determine the strategy for the winning of a lasting peace and the establishment of an American standard of living higher than ever before known. "We cannot be content, no matter how high that general standard of living may be, if some fraction of our people, whether it be one-third, or one-fifth, or one-tenth, is ill-fed, ill-clothed, ill-housed and insecure."

FEPC Bans Job Bias in St. Louis

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice cracked down on discriminatory practices at one of the nation's big munitions plants this week, ordering the U. S. Cartridge Co. at St. Louis, Mo., to stop laying off workers through a dual seniority system that "is not applicable equally to Negro and white workers."

The FEPC directed the war plant to accept available and needed workers without discrimination because of race or color and not to maintain any racial quota system of employment.

The committee's action followed public hearings at which CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers representatives testified that it was impossible to apply equitably the principle of seniority at the company which segregates units in its plants. UE is collective bargaining unit for the company's 12,000 war workers.

A company witness admitted that examination of cutbacks last spring showed the use of different seniority systems, one for Negroes and another for white workers, resulted on one occasion in more Negroes being discharged than "would have been under the single seniority system provided in the labor-management contract with UE," and cutback problems would have been more easily solved had Negro workers been fully integrated in the first place.

To Heck With Green's 'Organic Or Bust' Policy

Carry-over from the pre-election local unity of CIO and AFL forces was the action this week of a legislative conference of the Pennsylvania AFL Federation of Labor which unanimously supported joint labor political action.

The conference, meeting in Harrisburg, decided that AFL Pres. William Green's "organic unity or bust" attitude was wrong, and authorized state AFL officials to cooperate with the CIO, Railroad Brotherhoods and legitimate independent unions on important legislative matters.

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

Program for Victory—1945

By PHILIP MURRAY

At the beginning of this year, the Congress of Industrial Organizations rededicates all its strength to the twin goals of winning the war and winning the peace.

To make 1945 our Victory Year, America will redouble its productive efforts. It will not be lulled into complacency by false optimism nor tolerate any lag in war production while American soldiers still depend for their lives on the output of American industry. It must and will adhere faithfully to its no-strike pledge until the German and Japanese military forces are completely destroyed.

The CIO recognizes that national unity behind our Commander-in-Chief and our armed forces, and the closest unity of the United Nations, are the key both to early victory and to lasting peace and postwar prosperity.

On the domestic front, the CIO will devote its industrial, legislative and political activities to achieving a stabilized wartime economy, in which wages shall be fairly adjusted to living costs, prices held down to prevent inflation, and the burden of taxation justly distributed on the basis of ability to pay.

It will work for the unity of all labor and progressive forces, through joint action for common constructive purposes that are in the interest of the whole American people.

It will vigorously oppose all those who preach division and disunity, both within the United States and between the United Nations, and particularly the purveyors of the Hitleristic doctrines of racial and religious discrimination and intolerance.

The CIO in 1945 will work for a carefully planned program of reconversion, as and when it becomes necessary, in which the human welfare of veterans and war workers will be carefully safeguarded, as well as business interests. It will work for a greatly expanded program of social security, for increasing purchasing power, for a guaranteed annual wage, for new enterprises both private and public, and for all other steps necessary to assure full production and jobs for all after this war.

The CIO recognizes, as most of the American people have come to recognize, that our country does not and cannot stand alone. Just as the freedom-loving peoples of the world must fight shoulder to shoulder to overcome the forces of fascist tyranny, so too must they plan and work together for postwar rehabilitation, for higher living standards, and to safeguard the peace of the world.

That is why the CIO supports the proposals for world organization outlined at Dumbarton Oaks and opposes all isolationist and imperialist obstructions to the success of such plans for world security. That is why it supports the plans laid at Bretton Woods for the expansion of world trade and the promotion of world prosperity.

In order that labor may play its full part in achieving the above goals, and may receive the recognition and representation that are its due in the councils of the nations, the CIO will also dedicate its efforts in 1945 to the promotion of greater world labor unity through the formation of a new and powerful international labor body including all the unions of free countries on a basis of equality.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

BEFORE we make our predictions for 1945, let's see what happened to some of those 1944 predictions.

Reaction was riding high at the start of the year. The trend was all that way, we were told.

So a lot of the boys in Congress set out to ride with the tide. They predicted they would do a job on Roosevelt and labor.

They passed a feed-the-greedy tax bill and banned the federal soldiers' ballot. They gleefully overrode FDR's vetoes of both measures. They opposed effective price control. They indulged in constant administration-baiting, labor-baiting and United Nations-baiting.

They did a job all right, but on themselves—as many of them now have ample leisure to reflect.

★ ★ ★

Something happened to that trend and to those predictions. It was labor political action.

Remember all those contradictory pre-election predictions about CIO's PAC? It was going to give the kiss of death to Roosevelt and all progressives. It was going to capture the Democratic party and run up the red flag over Congress and the White House.

What happened to those predictions?

★ ★ ★

Then remember those predictions about the inadvisability and impossibility of the second front—the impregnability of Hitler's Fortress Europe.

Yet D-Day came in 1944—one of the most magnificent achievements in military history—and the Nazis were driven back to the German borders.

But don't forget the tragedy and heartaches of 1944's victory predictions. V-E Day was predicted for August, September, or at the latest by the end of October.

Remember the discussions of V-E Day celebrations, the agitation for rescinding the no-strike pledge on the grounds the war was nearly over, the preparations for returning to business-as-usual.

★ ★ ★

So when we look ahead to 1945, let's not kid ourselves.

Let's not underestimate our enemies' strength. And let's not underestimate our own strength to reverse trends and to achieve the seemingly impossible—if we mobilize sufficient intelligence, effort and determination.

What do we hope for in 1945?

We want to see Hitler completely licked—and soon—so we can devote all our efforts to polishing off Japan in the shortest possible time.

We want wages to be adjusted to increased living costs, and the minimum raised to assure at least a living wage.

We want real price control to prevent inflation, a fair distribution of the tax burden according to ability to pay, and expanded social security.

We want the polltax abolished, a permanent FEPC and strong steps against all racial and religious hate and discrimination.

We want proper planning now for reconversion, with adequate compensation for veterans and war workers affected by cutbacks.

We want planning now for jobs for all after the war, based on increased purchasing power, a guaranteed annual wage and expanded production by private industry and public enterprise.

We want a world organization of all the free countries to safeguard world peace, to expand world trade and generally to promote world prosperity.

★ ★ ★

What steps must we take to achieve these goals?

(1) Concentrate on all-out war effort first of all, adhere faithfully to our no-strike pledge, and no slackening so long as a single American boy depends on us for his life and his speedy return.

(2) Build the strength of our unions, organize the unorganized.

(3) More and more legislative and political action, to make sure that Congress fulfills the mandate of the 1944 elections.

(4) United labor and progressive action, building unity from the ground up.

(5) Promote national unity by fighting racial, religious and other discriminations, and by cooperating with farmers, industry and all other groups for victory and postwar prosperity.

(6) Promote United Nations' unity for winning the war, safeguarding the peace and raising world living standards.

(7) Unite labor internationally through a new world labor body including all unions of all free countries.

★ ★ ★

Those are labor's resolutions for 1945. If they are kept, we can confidently predict that labor's goals for the new year will be achieved.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 January 1, 1945 No. 1

Scarcity Causes More Rationing

Fifteen Washington representatives of organized consumers this week viewed the Christmas week-end order placing principal meats and canned goods back on the rationing list as assuring more equitable distribution of these items.

The 15, including the representatives of the CIO Cost of Living Committee and the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, wired approval of the action to Economic Stabilizer Vinson, Price Administrator Bowles and War Food Administrator Jones.

"We have already brought to your attention," the wire stated, "the desire of our members that rationing be restored for foods whose supply is still short, in order to protect consumers who have neither money nor storage space to hoard, and to assure fair distribution of supplies."

Detroit Tenants Pay Rent With Security Money

Security deposits demanded by landlords have flared back at them in Detroit.

More than 15,000 tenants in priority-built homes in the Detroit OPA District will be able to pay their rent with security deposits as a result of a decision by Circuit Court Commissioner Fitzgerald.

In Detroit area alone a half-million dollars are involved.

If the ruling of the OPA regulations that landlords of priority homes are not entitled to collect advance security deposits is upheld throughout the county, millions more will be involved.

The opinion was given in a case brought by Miller Homes, Inc., against one of their tenants for nonpayment of rent.

The tenant had deposited $60 with Miller Homes as a security deposit, which the company refused to give back, defying OPA regulations.

Miller Homes sued for eviction. The OPA intervened, with the result that the court ruled that landlord had no right to a deposit and allowed the tenant to withhold rent in a like amount.

ACT NOW! BOOK IT FOR YOUR SPECIFIC MEETING DATES!
Service Points Nation-Wide
BRANDON FILMS
1600 BROADWAY • NEW YORK 19, N. Y.

HOW TO DESTROY LABOR

Charge Navy Officers Fought CIO Union

U. S. Navy officers took part in anti-union activity at the Naval ordnance palnt at Milledgeville, Ga., according to a Natl. Labor Relations Board examiner's report issued this week.

During a campaign against the CIO United Steelworkers, Capt. Russell G. Sturges, Naval Commander at the plant, and a Lt. Comdr. Banks helped the management of the Reynolds Corp. fight the union, the NLRB said.

Commander Banks allegedly at one time addressed the workers on company time in the place of the commanding officer who was unable to attend, and claimed that anyone who took the workers' mind off their work was "guilty of treason as the deserter who assists the enemy." The NLRB examiner stated that the effect of this speech and that of one given by company manager Harry G. Smith was to align the company in the eyes of the employes against the CIO.

The examiner recommended that the company's Workers Welfare Ass'n. Inc. and the grievance committee be disestablished, and that the company cease discouraging membership in the USA-CIO or interfering with employes in their organizational rights.

The report said that last April two CIO organizers came to Milledgeville at the request of a number of workers and opened an office. Immediately local business men began an anti-CIO campaign. A licensing ordinance requiring union organizers to pay a fee of $5,000 per year and establish 12 months' residence in the town as a condition of licensing was passed by the council. One of the CIO organizers was immediately arrested.

Not long after this the "independent" Workers' Welfare Association was set up. The examiner pointed out that despite management's claim that workers were free to join the union or not, foremen permitted solicitations for the Welfare Assn. on company time while "CIO adherents were watched, reported, questioned, reprimanded and discharged."

We Must Have Unity in '45 To Win—Murray to Nation

Plenty of blood, sweat and tears still face both our fighting forces and the home front before victory will be won, and continued cooperation of all forces in the nation behind President Roosevelt is vital to our cause, said CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week in a speech scheduled for nationwide broadcast on New Year Day.

Participating on a program "Forecast 1945" carried by the Blue Network, Murray said:

"The CIO in 1945 will work for united action by all labor and progressive forces, together with farmers, industry and all other community groups, in the spirit of national unity behind our Commander-in-Chief and our armed forces.

"But in the coming year we must also look forward beyond victory to the difficult days of postwar reconstruction. We must plan now a reconversion program that will safeguard the human welfare of veterans and war workers as well as business interests.

"We must plan now for greater purchasing power, more social security, a guaranteed annual wage, industrial expansion and all other steps necessary to assure full production and jobs for all."

NLRB Sets Precedent

A precedent affecting the right of the nation's technical, professional and white collar employes to organize into bonafide unions was set by the Natl. Labor Relations Board recently.

The NLRB held that the General Motors Corp. was guilty of an unfair labor practice and of anti-union discrimination when it transferred salaried employes to hourly status after they had chosen the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians-CIO as a collective bargaining agency.

Consumers Get Little Action in Clothing Crisis

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Most American mothers will applaud the telegram the St. Albans, Vermont, Mothers Club sent to Senator James Mead, of New York, urging him to switch from investigating the cigarette shortage to investigating the disappearance of children's clothes.

The clothing situation is just about the worst blot on our civilian war record. Disappearance of reasonably priced garments, combined with the much poorer quality of the more expensive clothes on the market, has resulted in doubling and even tripling clothing costs.

Consumers have been urging drastic action for well over a year. They have made it clear that they did not want in any way to interfere with military requirements. But they have been asking that all cloth and yarn available for civilian needs be used for necessary durable clothing, especially for children and war workers.

They have urged the War Production Board to require all manufacturers of yarn and of cloth to make durable, inexpensive materials instead of luxury fabrics, and to require clothing manufacturers to use these materials to make only needed durable clothing until essential needs are met.

They have wanted to see WPB require clothes to be made according to certain standards which would make them wear. They would like to see it made illegal for manufacturers to waste materials and manpower making clothes, like those piled up in basement stores today, that fall apart after one washing.

Consumers have been urging action by OPA to set dollars and cents prices on clothes, as on groceries, and to require that clothes be preticketed with those prices, as rayon stockings are.

Finally consumers have been asking, in the face of a shortage which is critical now and is expected to last for at least two more years, why doesn't WPB order clothes rationing?

The results of consumer pressure on clothing have not been very impressive to date. For the last year there has been a children's program each quarter which has allocated cloth to meet only a small part of the need. Both the quality of material and the standards required in that program have improved in the last quarter and OPA is now preparing to put dollars and cents ceilings on the clothes made under it. Those clothes should hit the civilian market about March, 1945, and they'll be gone just about as fast as they go on sale.

Then there is a program under which allocations were made for low priced shirts, shorts, house-dresses and slips. The manufacturers have not wanted to make those garments because the OPA ceilings really held prices down. But even if they had all been made, they would have met only about 10% of the need.

In October all civilian denim was finally reserved for certain definitely specified work clothes. That's the kind of action needed on many other vital fabrics.

One of the discouraging features of the whole clothing campaign has been the unwillingness of the government agencies, and especially of WPB, to buck industry opposition and try to meet the situation. Over and over again consumer representatives have been told in effect: "We won't do anything industry doesn't like—and anyway, it's too late, the war is almost over."

Now that the Nazi offensive has brought home to us all how far it still is to Victory, we should be able to get action. It's more imperative than ever because military needs are being revised upwards.

It's up to Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson to tell the agencies concerned to use their war powers to get essential, durable, low-priced clothes made before luxuries and rationed to ensure fair distribution. Write him to act quickly.

MVA 'Must' for '45 Congress, Says FDR

President Roosevelt this week renewed his support for creation of a Missouri Valley Authority to control floods, reclaim land, develop hydroelectric power and aid navigation.

FDR signed a bill providing $1 billion for postwar flood control projects with the understanding that nothing in it would jeopardize creation of an MVA with $400,000,000 to spend in the people's interests. Roosevelt said that MVA plans "should receive the early consideration of the next Congress."

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

Labor Smear Film

Glorifying A Union Baiter

The film about Eddie Rickenbacker, notorious baiter of war workers, is now in full production at 20th Century-Fox studio, reports Ted Taylor, Federated Press' Hollywood correspondent.

It has been in preparation for 22 months at an expenditure of some $750,000 to writers and $80,000 to Rick's fellow castaways, not to mention the considerable sum spent by union officials and locals for wires protesting against glorification of this labor-baiter.

Fred MacMurray plays Rickenbacker on the screen with Lynn Bari as his love interest. Others in the cast are James Gleason, Charles Bickford and Donald Meek. The director is Lloyd Bacon. The picture is called "First, Last and Always."

Rickenbacker cannot expect to include many war workers in his audiences, says Taylor, after his efforts to boost their morale by telling them that in the foxholes absentees "would get a bayonet in their bellies."

His favorite argument, Taylor recalls, "was that production could be doubled if troops were brought back to man the factories and war workers were 'put in foxholes with filth, vermin, malaria and the Japanese.' (Newspapers headlined Rickenbacker's hysterical speeches and ignored the report of aircraft companies that 95 per cent of absenteeism was due to illness or transportation difficulties.)"

Many labor protests on the Rickenbacker film went to the late Wendell L. Willkie as chairman of the 20th Century-Fox board, Taylor says, and "Willkie told Pres. A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad rainmen he thought some understanding had been reached with AFL and CIO.

"Whitney checked this and advised Hollywood unions that William Green and Philip Murray 'both vigorously repudiated any thought that any understanding favorable to the production of this film had been reached.' Six Hollywood unions, through the conference of Studio Unions, then renewed their protests to 20th-Fox.

"Sheehan, the producer-promoter, and his chief writer, Howard Emmett Rogers (union buster and baiter in his own right), went east to consult Rickenbacker. Newsmen were later informed that Sheehan had obtained personal assurance from Green and Murray they would do nothing to interfere with the Rickenbacker film."

Gallup Says Figures Aren't Pure

The Gallup poll, like Old Golds, isn't quite all it seems. Something new has been added to the famed poll as well as to the famous cigarette.

Followers of the political predictions of Gallup found this week that the extra ingredient in its figures result from mental exercises of some hired hand at Princeton and not from the opinions of persons polled.

Although Dr. George Gallup adds something different from apple honey, he told the House campaign expenditures committee in Washington that he varies the mix according to the state involved, the registration figures and some other factors.

Chairman Clinton Anderson (D., N. M.) told Gallup that in the 1944 election the Gallup poll went wrong in every state casting over a million votes—and in every instance the vote for Roosevelt (not Dewey) suffered thereby. In California, Gallup was off 4 points, Illinois 3, Texas 5, Minnesota 6, Michigan 5, and New York 3.

Gallup replied that "we always underestimate the vote for the Democratic party" because of the difficulty of reaching the lower income groups who are heavily in favor of Roosevelt.

Originally the Gallup Poll in 1944 showed Roosevelt ahead of Dewey by 51 to 49 per cent, but Gallup figured that there would be no more than 39 million voters and thereby knocked off two points from Roosevelt and gave them to Dewey. This was done independently of any polling—just knocking out two points from FDR because Gallup thought the vote would be light.

As the campaign progressed, Gallup saw the registration figures mounting and was prepared to remove the two-point handicap he'd placed on Roosevelt when he "found the Dewey trend increasing and put it back."

The "raw figures" on New York State, for instance, showed that Roosevelt had 52.5 per cent of the vote. But Gallup's various factors, including the national average that showed Roosevelt with only 51.5 per cent, and the two point deduction, brought him down to 49 per cent and gave Dewey the state.

All this brought Chairman Anderson to inquire whether a "pure food law for polls" to show that "artificial coloring has been added," wouldn't be a good idea. Gallup promised to send more figures to the government experts helping the committee and the hearing adjourned.

Argentine Revolt Near, CTAL Parley Hears

CALI, Colombia (ALN)—The time is ripe for a revolt in Argetina because of the approaching slump in that country brought on by a decline in trade with the United States and the isolation of the Axis, Ruben Iscaro, Argentine delegate to the congress of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), which has just concluded its sessions here, declared this week. "The Argentine people swear that the dictatorship will not last much longer in our country and we will soon return to the democratic fold," the Argentine labor leader stated.

Following Iscaro's speech, in which he also revealed that there are 2,000 political prisoners in the Neuquen concentration camp suffering Nazi-like tortures, the CTAL voted to call a token strike on January 26 in protest against the Argentine dictatorship, but stressed that the strike must not interfere with the war effort.

CTAL affiliates in 16 Latin-American countries will take part in the action. The congress voted to aid in the overthrow of the Farrell-Peron dictatorship and to help restore democracy in Argentina.

The CTAL voted to support the creation of a world community of nations and a security organization under the responsible leadership of the United States, Great Britain and the USSR and urged full respect of the rights of self-determination and adherence to the Atlantic Charter and Teheran agreement.

Labor representation in the peace and security organizations and the formation of an international labor federation were also urged. Death for war criminals, and reparations, were demanded.

In a speech to the congress, CIO fraternal delegate Joseph Selly declared: "The CIO defends the social equality of all men as the only basis for economic equality." If President Roosevelt had not been reelected, he added, "it would have caused complete chaos."

O. A. Knight, the other CIO fraternal delegate, declared that "the CIO is ready to fight to the death for democracy, but will not shed a single drop of blood in defense of King George of Greece and his like."

GI'S PAY IN BLOOD: These wounded veterans know the miracles of blood plasma. Convalescing at the Percy Jones Hospital in Detroit, they repay the blood transfusions which saved their lives on the fighting fronts by donating blood for other servicemen. Give your pint to help save a life. (Federated Pictures.)

Bulgarian Unions Freed, Workers Flocking to Them

A national conference of the General Workers Trade Union will take place in Bulgaria February 4. At this first free national conference representatives of workers from all trades and professions coming from all parts of the country will discuss points connected with the restoration of free Bulgarian trade unions.

Most progressive Bulgarian workers are united in trade unions and are establishing connections in every city and village.

Particular attention is being devoted to the formation of trade union organizations in large-scale enterprises, mines, institutions and transport.

In the course of three months of their lawful existence, trade unions have been joined by thousands of workers.

Union organizations pay special heed to all demands and proposals made by workers with a view to improving living conditions. They draw up new wage scales, insist on installation of safety devices, carry on cultural and educational activities among workers, and assist in the organization of cooperatives in order to bring about improvement in living condiitons.

EXDOUS A MYTH

Workers Walk, Not Run For Peacetime Jobs

"The exodus" of war workers to peacetime jobs is exposed as a creation of the press and certain Army officials in the current issue of CIO's Economic Outlook.

The CIO Dept. of Research & Education, which publishes the Outlook, made a study of the "quit rate" to expose the fictional character of "the exodus." The quit rate represents the number of workers leaving their jobs voluntarily.

The study which compared the quit rates in 28 war industries for May-October last year with the corresponding period this year showed:

Of the 328 quit rates available for comparison, in 201 instances the rate decreased in 1944, and in 13 it remained the same.

In only 25 cases was the quit rate appreciably higher in 1944 than in 1943.

"We do not question the fact that in some instances workers are leaving their war jobs for jobs with peacetime security," the Outlook states. "We do believe the seriousness of this problem has been greatly overstressed."

Another Outlook article warns that laws passed by state legislatures in their early 1945 sessions "will set the reconversion pattern on such vital problems as union rights, election machinery, unemployment compensation, workmen's compensation, safety, hours of work, special protection of women and children, education, housing, health, public assistance, planning, public works and taxes."

Attention is directed to the importance of political activity on the state level, since "some reactionary groups are saying frankly that now that the states are their chief hope for anti-labor measures which they cannot secure in Washington."

Separation Rate Lowest Since '43

With 64 out of 1,000 workers leaving or discharged from their jobs in October, the separation rate for that month was the lowest since November 1943, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported this week.

For every 1,000 workers on factory payrolls in October, 50 quit, six were discharged, five were laid off, and three left to enter the armed forces, she said.

The quit rate in war industries was 48 per 1,000 compared to 56 per 1,000 in both August and September.

The rate of hires for both men and women more than compensated for their quit rate, said the secretary.

Murray Hails Italian People

"The revival of a free trade union movement in Italy reveals more than any other fact the complete repudiation of fascism and nazism by the Italian people," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in an overseas OWI broadcast to Italy.

"It is a symbol," Murray declared, "of the fundamental unity of the people and their will to take their place, shoulder to shoulder, with the people of the United Nations, in the creation of a world of justice for the common man."

The occasion for the speech was the coming free national convention of Italian unions, first since the suppression of labor organizations by the fascists. The meeting is scheduled for Naples, Jan. 28.

Ask High Court Hear Bridges' Case

Pres. Harry Bridges of the CIO International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union this week appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court for revocation of the deportation order against him.

Counsel for Bridges filed with the high court a petition for a writ which, if granted, will bring the seven-year-old case before the court for full hearing and final judgment.

Bridges, a native of Australia, entered the United States legally in 1920 and has been here ever since. After his rise to a position of influence in the labor movement, strenuous efforts were made by various anti-labor groups to deport him.

A brief entered in support of the request for a Supreme Court hearing outlines three reasons why it should be granted:

1. The evidence against Bridges was so flimsy that finding against him was a denial of due process of law guaranteed to citizens and aliens alike by the fifth amendment of our Constitution.

2. The procedure employed in bringing about the deportation order—"demonstrably the result of unrelenting persecution extending almost over a decade"—constitutes a further denial of due process.

3. The law as applied against Bridges denies him the freedom of speech and freedom of association guaranteed by the 1st and 5th constitutional amendments.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Outstanding Accomplishments of 1944:

The United Nations assembled the largest armada carrying the greatest military force in the history of the world; successfully invaded the European Continent; liberated France. In addition, the striking force of freemen liberated the following capitals: Rome, Brussells, Bucharest, Athens and Sophia. Finland, Roumania and Bulgaria are out of the war!

General MacArthur and men successfully invaded the Philippines, conquering Leyte and Mindora, following the liberation of Saipan. The United States Navy rendered crushing blows to the Japanese Navy and now dominates the Pacific Ocean.

Russia is about to conquer Budapest and the road to Vienna. The Western Allies are resisting Hitler's military peace offensive. China is on the upsurge. The offensive in Burma is developing.

On the home front production records reached a new high. President Murray and the CIO lead in promoting an international labor conference. The PAC-CIO activized people to register for full citizenship participation in the elections; rendered effective support to eliminate isolationist-reactionary Senators and Congressmen in the primaries—defeated Costello, Clark, Starnes, Cotton Ed Smith—Reynolds and Dies chose not to run. Willkie advocated international cooperation against Nazis and permanent peace—rejected by Republicans. Dewey nominated. Roosevelt accepted nomination for fourth term.

PAC-CIO endorsed Franklin D. Roosevelt in support of progressive candidates. Isolationists and reactionaries viciously attacked PAC. Workers and all liberal forces gave effective reply. Worked untiringly. Roosevelt reelected. Leading isolationists such as Gerald Nye and Ham Fish repudiated. Democratic forces at home strengthened and encouraged throughout world.

United CIO Convention

CIO Convention held in Chicago. Recorded as most united, enthusiastic gathering labor ever held. Decided to continue PAC; declared for vigorous program to organize the unorganized. Progressive win-the-war and win-the-peace policy. Growth in CIO membership commendable.

War Labor Board rendered decision on United Steelworkers case, granting up to 5c per hour for adjustment of inequalities; basis laid for severance pay; improved vacations; proposed commission to study "guaranteed annual wage in American industry." The demand for lifting the "Little Steel" formula referred to Pres. Roosevelt without recommendation. The fight goes on.

For 1944 we can truthfully say to all—WELL DONE. For 1945 we join with our Commander-in-Chief and the leaders of our armed forces in the war for ever-increasing production to enable our fighting men and women and those of our Allies to win at the earliest date possible and bring peace to all people of good will. We of the CIO will join with all human forces everywhere to establish and maintain a peace guaranteeing to all those basic liberties, including labor's right to free organization and freedom of speech and assembly and freedom of worship without which freedom cannot prevail.

We dedicate ourselves to the task of organizing the unorganized and obtaining for them wages, working conditions and job security essential to their and the nation's well-being. We pledge to work for the proper and humane protection of all returning war veterans, with jobs at American standards for all; opportunities for youth; security for the aged and care for the afflicted.

So, to all, a New Year that will provide opportunities for accomplishments and the will to do. That will truly be a Happy New Year.

The Marine & Shipbuilding Workers came through with flying colors in the election at the Sun Shipbuilding Company, Chester, Pa., winning five to one. About a year ago the company union contested the election which the CIO won then, only to prove that the workers overwhelmingly want CIO. Congratulations to all participating in this splendid victory.

Big UAW-CIO Victory

UAW Reg. Dir. Joseph Mattson reports: Chicago Screw Co., CIO 1,064, AFL 778. UAW-CIO had been the bargaining agency following a successful election over two years ago. However, company opposition to the local delayed negotiation of a contract for many months. Finally, upon orders of the WLB, the company signed a contract. Upon expiration of the contract the company notified the union they would no longer recognize the UAW because there was a question of representation. UAW requested an extension of the contract until the question of representation was settled.

In a precedent-shattering action the National WLB tied, with the public and CIO members voting for extension and industry and AFL voting against. The local consented to another election and the above results fully repudiated the interference of the company. The old contract has been extended and negotiations are proceeding on a new and improved agreement.

UAW-CIO Intl. Rep. M. J. Meiner reports: Park Drop Forge Boiler House voted for CIO 11 to 5.

Oil Workers Dir Org. Wm. B. Taylor advises: Division 2, War Emergency Pipe Line, Inc., CIO 80, AFL 30. E Texas Salt Water Disposal Co., Kilgore, Tex., CIO 85, against 34.

FAECT-CIO reports: Engineers and draftsmen at Cox & Stevens Co., CIO 94, no union 58. Boland and Boyce, tool and machine designers, voted for CIO 29 to 1. Negotiations have begun at Lloyd Rogers Co., tool designers, where engineers and draftsmen had recently chosen CIO as their bargaining agency by a vote of 171 to 51.

CIO Field Rep. Virgil Burtz reports: Firestone, Ferndale, Wash., CIO 258, no union 12. Field Reps. Burtz and H. I. Tucker had charge of the election, assisted by Dist. Rep. Floyd Gartrell of the United Rubber Workers.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Nekoos A. Edwards Paper Co., Atlantic Mine, Mich., CIO 29, no union 1.

Sun Ship Stooge Outfit Seeks Beating—Gets It

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 30—A thumping defeat to a company union which had petitioned for the election was handed out by nearly 20,000 workers at the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Corp., here when they voted five to one for the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in a poll held last week by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. The vote was 15,597 for the CIO to 3,274 for the Sun Ship Employes Assn., and 474 for neither.

The election was held on a petition filed by the SSEA company union, which was defeated last year by Local 2 of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers in an NLRB election. In November, 1943, Local 2 signed a collective bargaining agreement with Sun Ship which expired last month.

Expiration of the contract was taken advantage of by the rejected company union for a renewed attempt to oust Local 2, whose bargaining rights it had been unable to upset in a year of court litigation challenging the outcome of the election.

Local 2 hails the results of the election as a strong vote of confidence by Sun Ship workers in the union agency which has been their bargaining agency during the past year.

Thousands of new members joined Local 2 during the two months preceding the election in a drive headed by Thomas J. Gallagher, Natl. organizational director.

Sun Ship employes recently were granted more than two million dollars in back pay based on retroactive wage adjustments won by Local 2 under last year's contract by application of the Shipbuilding Commission's Atlantic Coast wage reclassification plan.

CIO Wins 11 Out of 12 Gold Mines

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 30 — Election victories won in 11 out of 12 gold mines at Timmins by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers brings the year's record for CIO unions in Canada to a triumphant conclusion in which they outdistanced the AFL in number of elections won.

The Mine, Mill union won the gold mine elections with a combined vote of 3,791 to 1,300, and lost out in the twelfth mine by only three votes.

The CIO's record for the year was further advance by an election victory at a synthetic rubber plant in Sarnia where the CIO United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers administered their first defeat to the AFL Chemical Workers by a vote of 572 to 44.

Oil Union Appoints O'Connor

Fort Worth Tex., Dec. 30—Harvey O'Connor, Chicago correspondent for Federated Press, has been named publicity director of the Oil Workers Intl. Union, only CIO international with headquarters in the South. The union will begin publication of The Intl. Oil Worker about Feb. 1.

O'Connor is director of the American Labor Planning Service, which services nearly 100 members among AFL and CIO papers interested in labor planning for 60,000,000 jobs and lasting peace.

Illinois CIO Votes Thumbs Down On Wartime Strikes

CHICAGO, Dec. 30—Plans for active political action and legislative programs were formulated and the no-strike pledge was reaffirmed at the convention of the Illinois CIO Council held here last week. Delegates representing some 300,000 workers throughout the state attended the meeting.

The convention voted to put political action on a precinct basis in preparation for the Chicago election in 1945 and the Congressional election in 1946, and to cooperate with the AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods, small farmers, businessmen and church groups, working within the two existing parties. The resolution stressed that more labor representatives should run for office.

The legislative program adopted calls for the setting up of a permanent legislative office in Springfield and the publication of a weekly newsletter to be sent to Illinois unionists.

In the debate on the no-strike pledge, delegates expressed strong opposition to any type of wartime strike and the resolution was passed with only a few dissenting votes. Montgomery Ward and the company's fire-eating head, Sewell Avery, were condemned for the vicious anti-labor campaign being waged in their stubborn resistance against accepting the directives of the War Labor Board.

The WLB, however, was attacked for refusing to recommend upward revision of the Little Steel formula and for continuing to "fumble, procrastinate and delay, reflecting its own weaknesses, fears and lack of course." The convention urged that the WLB be continued but asked that its procedure be revised to speed up decisions.

Other important actions taken included a resolution urging establishment of a world labor organization to include representatives of Russian unions and one condemning Great Britain's "present reactionary and destructive policy in Greece, Belgium and Italy."

The convention also condemned the Chicago Tribune and its publisher, Robert R. McCormick, as "sworn enemies of organized labor" who it charged were "in open alliance with American Nazis and Fascists."

OIL UNION OFFICERS: Elected recently by referendum of the membership of the CIO Intl. Oil Workers Union were, left to right: Second Vice-Pres. A. R. Kinstley, Pres. O. A. Knight, Secy-Treas. E. C. Conarty and First Vice-Pres. E. Carl Mattern.

CIO Aids Fire Victims

Cleveland's CIO workers contributed $13,000 to aid victims of the recent Ohio Gas fire disaster here, it was announced in a report issued by the Cleveland CIO Council today. The fire swept 64 city blocks, killing 138 people.

More than 200 persons in 58 families, left destitute by the most terrible fire disaster in Cleveland's history, were aided by the CIO fund.

To date, $7,244 has been turned over to these families for clothing, housing and other immediate needs.

THE ADVENTURES OF JIM BARRY, TROUBLE SHOOTER

DRAWN BY MORT MESKIN

STORY BY JOSEPH GREENE AND JERRY COLE

Copyright Natl. CIO NEWS

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 2 82 January 8, 1945

GIs Meet Bloody Death in Germany; Army Needs 100% Backing at Home

This is the harrowing story of the agonizing advance of the U. S. Army's 4th Infantry Division through Germany's Huertgen Forest. Through dark and dripping fir trees barring the approaches to Cologne, combat infantrymen crawled and fought their way forward. Violent death was the fate of many. Murderous mortar fire, crippling mines and snipers' whining slugs slowed the GIs' progress. But they fought on . . . and won.

Their feats were recorded for posterity by Sergeant Mack Morris, writing in the Jan. 5 issue of the Army weekly, Yank. The CIO NEWS this week reprints excerpts from the article, with the hope that it will give to folks on the home front a better understanding of what GIs face . . . of what they expect from us . . . of what their attitude well might be if the home front should let them down.

To those millions of CIO members who are resolutely standing by their no-strike pledge with the knowledge that its maintenance helps to guarantee the full production the GIs need . . . to all patriotic Americans—this article (please turn to page 12) should be an inspiration.

FDR Hails UAW No-Strike Pledge

Congratulations to Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union for the UAW's patriotic renewal of its no-strike pledge at the last convention have been extended by President Roosevelt. In a letter to Thomas, FDR recently wrote:

"That pledge has been a great factor in our record production of the weapons and materials of war and I am sure it will always be reaffirmed by the responsible men of labor. The war situation demands more and more production of the things our soldiers, sailors and marines must have to beat the enemy and shorten the conflict. This can be accomplished only by uninter--rupted and united effort."

FREED FROM HELL: Change the uniform on this Nazi killed in Italy, wipe the books clean of his brutal Nazi philosophy, and you might have a GI Joe from back home. Millions of Americans will have a better chance of living out the hell that is war if we at home back up to the limit our CIO pledge of all-out, continuous production.

Steel Wage Hikes OK, Says Vinson

The CIO United Steelworkers this week had the wage boost recently ordered by the Natl. War Labor Board approved by Director of Stabilization Fred M. Vinson. The union has asked the U. S. Steel Co. to reopen contract negotiations immediately.

Vinson based his approval on assurances from the Office of Price Administration that the wage boost would not cause an increase in steel prices because the OPA is about to authorize price hikes irrespective of the wage decision. The increases are necessary under a law which provides for adjustments in "hardship" cases when price ceilings do not cover "out of pocket" costs.

Vinson's approval of the WLB order covered an award of premium pay of 4 to 6 cents an hour, respectively, for second and third shifts, elimination of wage inequalities, dismissal pay in principle, and improved vacation schedules.

Negotiations with U. S. Steel had been broken off in December, pending action by Vinson. Affected are about 200,000 workers. The union hopes to conclude negotiations with this company shortly, and to use the U. S. Steel pact as a model to work from in negotiating others affecting an equal number of workers in other basic steel companies.

Further negotiations are scheduled with "non-basic" steel firms employing about 500,000 other workers.

Win 'Frame' Case in N.C.

The frame-up case against William DeBerry was shattered today as the North Carolina Supreme Court dismissed the assault charge against him. DeBerry, Negro international representative of the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural and Allied Workers Union of America, was sentenced to 60 days on the road by the State Superior Court on July 14 on a trumped-up charge of slapping Louise Johnson, a white company-union leader at the R. J. Reynolds "Camel" cigarette company.

Determined to crush this attempt to smash the CIO by the use of race prejudice, the DeBerry Defense Committee appealed the case. The State Supreme Court ruling upheld the committee's argument that the State has no jurisdiction over the case since the alleged assault occurred in a Federal courtroom.

Safety Drive

By reduction of job accidents 40 per cent in the next six months the woodworking industry plans to meet a large part of its manpower shortage, Secretary of Labor Perkins announced this week.

A cooperative safety drive is being opened by labor unions, industry, State Labor departments, national safety organizations, insurance companies, the U. S. Dept. of Labor and other Federal agencies.

CIO On The Air

The dramatic story of the maritime workers' contribution to the war effort, and relations of CIO with servicemen, will be the subjects of the next two nation-wide CIO radio broadcasts, next Saturday afternoon, Jan. 13.

The maritime program will be carried by CBS stations at 3:45 p.m., EWT, and the CIO-Servicemen's program will be carried by Blue Network outlets at 6:45 p.m., EWT.

Scheduled as featured speaker on the Blue program is Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

CIO officials throughout the country once again are urged to report on whether local CBS and Blue Network stations are carrying the CIO broadcasts. These reports are the only accurate check that the national CIO has on the number of persons reached by the programs. Reports should be sent to the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Ward Pay Boosts Due, Says Army

Despite the fact that top employes of Montgomery Ward and Co. have supported Sewell Avery's continued defiance of legal government procedures, the U. S. Army was successfully operating seized Ward properties in nine cities this week.

The Army not only was putting into effect wage increases approved by the Natl. War Labor Board but also was making plans to pay in the immediate future nearly $300,000 in back wages due under a retroactive pay principle ordered by the WLB.

The seized plants were being operated by the Army under the authority of Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Byron, who warned that any cases of obstruction will be reported promptly to the FBI and the Dept. of Justice.

Apparently some Ward officials have cooperated in developing orderly relations with the Army, according to a statement by General Byron, who said:

"I have been at great pains to avoid any act that would prevent Montgomery Ward & Co. from conducting the rest of its business in a normal manner, and I am gratified that the management has at last recognized the necessity for sitting down with the War Dept. to work out a program for keeping all parts of the business functioning efficiently and without inconvenience to the public."

1st House Vote of '45 And Not So Hot!

This is the vote in the House on Rep. John Rankin's (polltaxer, Miss.) motion to make the un-American Dies Committee a permanent House committee.

Almost all the southern polltax Democrats voted for the motion, together with almost all the northern Republicans. The new Democratic members, almost without exception, voted against it. Several Republicans whose records are not good on other issues also voted against Rankin.

The vote against the motion was 186, for 207. Forty-one failed to vote. The vote against was higher than any previous vote against the old Dies Committee. The anti-Dies high mark was 96 on the occasion of one of the committee's annual renewals. Many of these nay votes, however, were in protest against the procedure Rankin used, not against witch-hunts as such.

The vote is listed alphabetically, not by states. The CIO News will endeavor to carry future record votes by states.

A "Nay" vote is a vote against making the un-American Dies Committee permanent; a "Yea" vote is a vote for it.

NAYS—186

Anderson, N. Mex.
Arnold
Bailey
Baldwin, N. Y.
Barrett, Pa.
Barry
Bates Ky.
Bender
Bennet, N. Y.
Biemiller
Bland
Bloom
Bolton
Bonner
Boren
Bradley, Pa.
Buckley
Bulwinkle Bunker
Burch
Burgin
Byrne, N. Y.
Canfield
Cannon, Mo.
Carnahan
Case, N. J.
Celler
Chelf
Clements
Cochran
Combs
Cooley
Crosser
Curley
Dawson
De Lacy
Delaney, James J.
Delaney, John J.
Dickstein
Dirksen
Douglas, Calif.
Douglas, Ill.
Doyle
Durham
Eberharter
Engel, Mich.
Engle, Calif.
Ervin Feighan
Fernandez
Flannagan
Flood Folger
Forand
Gallagher
Gardner
Geelan
Gerlach
Gordon
Gorski
Granahan
Granger
Green
Gregory
Hagen
Hand
Harris
Hart
Havenner
Hays
Healy
Hedrick
Heffernan
Herter
Heselton
Hoch
Holifield
Holmes, Mass.
Holmes, Wash.
Hook
Huber
Hull
Izac
Jarman
Johnson, Calif.
Johnson, Luther A.
Kean
Kee
Kefauver
Kelley, Pa.
Kelly, Ill.
Keogh
Kerr
King
Kirwan
Kopplemann
Kunkel
LaFollette
Lane
Lea
Lemke
Lesinski
Lewis
Link
Luce
Ludlow
Lyle
Lynch
McCormack
McDonough
McGlinchey
Madden
Mansfield, Mont.
Mansfield, Tex.
Marcantonio
Merrow
Miller, Calif.
Monroney
Morgan
Murdock
Murphy
Norton
O'Brien, Ill.
O'Brien, Mich.
O'Connor
O'Neal
O'Toole
Outland
Patman
Patrick
Patterson
Pfeifer
Pickett
Plumley
Poage
Powell
Price, Ill.
Priest
Quinn, N. Y.
Rabaut
Rabin
Rains
Ramey
Ramspeck
Rayfiel
Resa
Robinson, Utah
Roe, N. Y.
Rogers, N. Y.
Rooney
Rowan
Ryter
Sabath
Sadowski
Satterfield
Savage
Sheppard
Sheridan
Smith, Maine
Snyder
Sparkman
Spence
Starkey
Stevenson Stockman Sullivan
Tarver
Taylor
Thom
Thomas, Tex.
Thomason
Tolan
Torrens
Towe
Traynor
Vinson
Voorhis, Calif.
Walter
Wasielewski
Weaver
Weiss
Welch
Whittington
Wolverton, N. J.
Woodhouse
Woodrum, Va.

YEAS—207

Abernethy
Adams
Allen, Ill.
Allen, La.
Andersen, H. Carl
Anderson, Calif.
Andresen, August H.
Andrews, Ala.
Andrews, N. Y.
Angell
Arends
Auchincloss
Barrett, Wyo.
Bates, Mass.
Beall
Beckworth
Bell
Bennett, Mo.
Bishop
Boykin
Bradley, Mich.
Brown, Ga.
Brown, Ohio
Brumbaugh
Bryson
Buffett
Byrnes, Wis.
Camp
Campbell
Cannon, Fla.
Carlson
Case, S. Dak.
Chiperfield Church
Clason
Clevenger
Cole, Kans.
Cole, Mo.
Cole, N. Y.
Colmer
Coope.
Corbett
Cox
Cravens
Cunningham
Curtis
D'Alesandro
Daughton, Va.
Davis
Dolliver
Domengeaux
Dondero
Drewry
Dworshak
Eaton
Elliott
Ellis
Ellsworth
Elsaesser
Elston
Fallon
Fellows Fenton
Fisher
Fuller
Gamble
Gathings
Gearhart
Gibson
Gifford
Gillespie
Gillette
Gillie
Goodwin
Gossett
Graham
Grant, Ala.
Grant, Ind.
Griffiths
Gross
Gwinn, N. Y.
Gwynne, Iowa
Hall, Edwin Arthur
Hall, Leonard W.
Halleck
Hancock
Hare
Harness, Ind.
Hartley
Hebert
Hendricks
Henry Hess
Hill
Hinshaw
Hobbs
Hoeven
Hoffman
Hope
Horan
Howell
Jenkins
Jensen
Johnson, Ill.
Johnson, Ind.
Johnson, Okla.
Jones
Jonkman
Judd
Kearney
Keefe
Kilburn
Kilday
Kinzer
Knutson
Landis
Lanham
Larcade
LeCompte
LeFevre
McConnell
McCowen
McGehee
McGregor
McKenzie
McMillan, S. C.
McMillen, Ill.
Mahon
Maloney
Manasco
Martin, Iowa
Martin, Mass.
Mason
May Michener
Miller, Nebr.
Mills
Morrison
Mott
Mundt
Murray, Tenn.
Murray, Wis.
Norell
O'Hara
O'Konski Pace
Peterson, Fla.
Peterson, Ga.
Philbin
Phillips
Pittenger
Ploeser
Powers
Price, Fla.
Randolph
Rankin
Reed, Ill.
Reed, N. Y.
Rees, Kans.
Rich
Richards
Riley Rivers
Robertson, N. Dak.
Robertson, Va.
Robsion, Ky.
Rockwell
Rodgers, Pa.
Roe, Md.
Rogers, Fla.
Rogers, Mass.
Russell
Sasscer
Schwabe, Mo.
Schwabe, Okla.
Scrivner
Shafer
Short
Simpson, Ill.
Smith, Va.
Smith, Wis.
Springer
Stefan
Stewart
Stigler
Sundstrom
Taber
Talbot
Talle
Thomas, N. J.
Tibbott
Vorys, Ohio
Vursell
Wadsworth
West
White
Whitten
Wickersham
Wigglesworth
Wilson
Winstead
Winter
Wolcott
Wolfenden, Pa.
Wood
Woodruff, Mich.
Worley

NOT VOTING—41

Baldwin, Md.
Barden
Blackney
Brehm
Brooks
Buck
Butler
Chapman
Chenoweth
Clark
Coffee
Courtney
Crawford
Dingell
Doughton, N. C.
Earthman
Fogarty
Fulton
Gavin
Gore
Hale
Harless, Ariz.
Heidinger
Jackson
Jennings
Johnson, Lyndon B.
Latham
Neely
Reece, Tenn.
Rizley
Sharp
Sikes
Simpson, Pa.
Slaughter
Smith, Ohio
Somers, N. Y.
Sumner, Ill.
Trimble
Weichel
Zimmerman

NEW—JUST OFF THE PRESS

ELECTRICIANS HANDBOOK

A Book Every Electrical Worker Needs

Here's a BRAND NEW, up to the minute Electricians Handbook. A book electrical workers need for reference on the job. Over 5,000 electrical facts—wiring diagrams—essential electrical formulas—latest code rules, tables, charts, and wiring methods. Includes Industrial Electronics data. A practical book every electrical worker can use every day. Pocket size, flexible leatherette cover to stand every day usage.

Electricians Handbook

See this book FREE for 7 days. It's a book electricians have been waiting for—350 pages "chuckfull" of VALUABLE ELECTRICAL DATA that can earn it's small cost many times over. Price $2.75, payable after 7 days' FREE inspection.

ELECTRONICS

The QUICK Way To BIGGER PAY

GET THESE BOOKS 7 DAYS FREE

To get ahead in Electricity NOW and in the future you should know ELECTRONICS. It is the big pay field for Electrical workers. Coyne's new 400 page book — just off the press is especially written for busy electricians who want practical "on the job" simplified, electronic information. This is no text book — it's a practical book written for practical men. Electricians should find this book a "GOLDMINE" of EASY TO FOLLOW electronic data. Priced at only $4.95 — payable after 7 days' FREE inspection.

Send No Money

See both of these books FREE for 7 days. Here's my offer. I'll send either or both books to you for 7 days' inspection at my expense. If you decide you don't want the books, send them back and you owe nothing; if you keep either or both you can pay as outlined in the coupon. Don't delay — SUPPLY LIMITED due to paper restrictions — send that coupon NOW!

COYNE ELECTRICAL SCHOOL

H. C. LEWIS, President
500 S. Paulina Street, Dept. 94-KY
CHICAGO 12, ILLINOIS

Send me the books checked below on 7-day free trial. I'll either return them in 7 days or pay for them according to the plan I select as outlined here

☐ Coyne Electricians Handbook: 1 Volume. Price $2.75 after 7 days FREE examination.

☐ Electronics for Electricians & Radiomen: 1 Vol. Price $4.95 after 7 days Free examination.

SPECIAL PAYMENT PLAN
If you keep both books you can send $2.00 in 7 days and pay $2 monthly until $7.70 is paid.

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____ Zone _____ STATE _____

☐ If you want books sent C.O.D.—you pay postman cash price (shown above) check here. Same 100% satisfaction guarantee.

Clarion RADIO

calls the world to your door

TODAY ALL-OUT FOR VICTORY

TOMORROW ALL-OUT FOR FULL EMPLOYMENT

WARWICK MANUFACTURING CORPORATION

4640-50 W. HARRISON ST.

CHICAGO 44, ILL.

Congress Cooks

CIO Stirs Broth With Program To Aid People

The new Congress started its first session this week. For the next two years, this group of men and women will have to make laws affecting the progress of the war, the strength and stability of the home front, and the peace to come after victory.

It is a better Congress than the one that went just before it. It will have even more important issues to deal with. Although it got off to an unfortunate start with the vote to make the Dies Committee permanent, there will be plenty of opportunity to take genuine, progressive action on issues affecting the whole country and the world.

Here is a brief summary list of these major issues, as the CIO sees them, and brief indications of the action that should be taken on them.

* * *

FOREIGN POLICY

A secure peace after victory depends not only on the kind of peace treaty to be ratified by the Senate after it is signed, but also on preliminary steps taken now, while the war is still being fought.

Chief among these is Congressional endorsement of United Nations agreements such as the one worked out at Bretton Woods. The Bretton Woods agreement provides for orderly and peaceful world trade, without financial or economic aggression of the kind that prepared the way for this war and the last. It will mean at least five million jobs for American workers in the export trades, if it is carried out by Congress.

Congress leaders expect to bring it up by the end of this month. Big bankers are fighting it because they think it will deprive them of some of their huge profits from international financial maneuvering.

The U. S., along with all the other United Nations, is expected to put up a share of the cost of Bretton Woods. This cost will be returned many times over in increased U. S. export trade and in jobs.

Opposition to Bretton Woods will come mainly from northern GOP men who will center their fire on the U. S. share of the cost. They will ignore the practical benefits to us, and will not care about the jobs involved.

Action: Start writing your Congressman and your two Senators now; urge them to vote for the bill to carry out the Bretton Woods agreement to be brought up this month.

* * *

ECONOMIC STABILIZATION

Under this long heading come such issues as taxes, price control, wages, protection of the farmers, and the like.

Taxes: A new tax bill will come up, most likely fairly early in the session. Watch out for renewed attempts to put over a sales tax; prepare to press for adequate taxes on big incomes and profits, tightening of present loopholes.

Price control: The price control act will have to be renewed early in the summer, together with new appropriations for OPA. The usual attempts to cripple the act, through weakening amendments and through hamstring riders on funds will be made.

Wages: Principal current item here is the bill in the Senate (S Con. Res. 48) to put a 65-cent floor on wages. 10 million workers today get 50 cents an hour or less, many of them in essential war industries.

Protection of farmers: Crop insurance, to guard against unforeseen losses, farm pricing, incentive payments to farmers on essential crops, will be up in Congress. CIO stands for a fair break for farmers; it asked at its 1944 convention for a guaranteed annual income for them.

* * *

CIVIL RIGHTS

Polltax repeal is the principal issue here. Last year's bill (HR 7) passed the House by two to one, was blocked in the Senate by a threatened filibuster. Getting a similar bill to a vote in the Senate on its merits is the job this year. It will pass if it reaches the floor.

Along with polltax repeal go measures to repeal the Hatch Act that freezes millions of Federal employes out of normal political action; a bill to give the vote to the 800,000 people who live in Washington, D. C., and a proposal to lower the voting age to 18.

The soldiers vote law, which in its present form prevented about 60 per cent of the armed forces from voting in 1944, should be amended to provide a simple, uniform, Federal ballot.

A bill to make the Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency, thus aiding the struggle against Jim Crow and other job discrimination, was pending in the 78th Congress, should be pushed early in this session.

Bills to bar anti-Semitic and other race-hate material from the mails are another holdover from the last session that should be passed this year.

* * *

RECONVERSION, SECURITY

Main need here is for an adequate reconversion bill, as proposed in the Kilgore bill last year. This would help war production now and reconversion later by adequate planning, protection for war workers and veterans, retraining, etc.

Adequate social security as provided in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill was ignored by the 78th Congress for almost two years. The bill provides greatly increased coverage larger benefits, new protection to people previously not covered.

Merchant seamen, of whom more than 5,000 have died in active service since the war, must also be included. Write your Congressman and Senators, to get the bill out of committee, hold hearings, pass it.

* * *

HOUSING, MVA

Nothing was done about housing in the 78th Congress. We will need more than 1,500,000 new housing units a year, for 10 years, to be built by private industry and government.

Big regional projects, like TVA, are needed in many areas to save eroded land, provide power, raise living standards, furnish millions of jobs. The Missouri Valley Authority plan was dumped in the last minutes of the 78th Congress. It must be revived and passed this session, as a major part of the CIO plan for 60,000,000 postwar jobs.

LABOR SPOKESMAN: From the ranks of labor to the new Congress comes Rep. Charles Savage (D. Wash.), former business agent of the Intl. Woodworkers (CIO), who will stand firm for progressive legislation. (Federated Pictures.)

* * *

EDUCATION, YOUTH CARE

Federal aid to education is needed on a big scale to raise shockingly low school standards in a big portion of the states. Teachers' wages are low, school facilities shabby or completely lacking for more than a third of our children, can only be raised by Federal aid.

Maternity and child care, including special projects for child care in war industry centers, must be continued and expanded.

* * *

WOMEN

Of special importance to women workers, and to all workers, is defeat of the mis-called "Equal Rights" Amendment which, if passed, would be a wedge to wipe out laws protecting first women and then all workers. It can be countered by pressing for a bill for equal pay for equal work, thus eliminating the main inequality now between men and women workers.

* * *

SOLDIERS, VETERANS

CIO fought for the original GI Bill of Rights, for increased allowances for soldiers' dependents, for maternity and infant care for their babies, and for increased pay. This year, CIO will continue to urge expansion of these benefits, will ask to have merchant seamen included.

* * *

ROUNDUP

This is a bare outline of the program CIO will urge on Congress this session. Other issues will come up as the session goes on.

Speedy mobilization of all labor, liberal and progressive forces will be needed this year more than ever before. The new Congress, despite a bad beginning on the Dies Committee, can be worked with successfully.

Success depends on us and on our neighbors—workers, farmers, businessmen, professional people, housewives. The Congress is part of our government, which we elected.

Most Congressmen are fair minded, patriotic people like other Americans. They need our help in combatting the few who are neither fair nor particularly devoted to winning the war. With our help, this 79th Congress can and will do a good job.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Congress and US

GOP-Polltax Gang Pulls A Fast One, But Can Be Stopped

The first day of the 79th Congress was marred by a large and disturbing cloud, in the renewal of the un-American Dies Committee as a permanent committee of the House.

The job was done partly through slick parliamentary maneuvering by Rep. John E. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) but mainly by the continuing strength of the polltax Democrat-reactionary Republican coalition that did so much damage in the 78th Congress.

The new Dies Committee, now that it has become permanent, is in a stronger position than the old one was. Being permanent, it won't have to come up for annual renewal and funds as the old one did. Its record won't be subject to review by the whole House, the way the old one was. It can recommend and sponsor bills, which the old one couldn't do. And finally, though Rankin probably won't be chairman, he's a much smarter reactionary than Dies ever was and will give it much more astute guidance.

ANTI-WAR COALITION

But the most significant part of Rankin's coup is the early showing of strength by the polltax-GOP coalition. A quick analysis of the vote shows the familiar pattern, almost all of the southern polltax Democrats voting with almost all the northern Republicans.

This is the same gang that passed the Smith-Connally Act, that passed the 1944 tax bill, that robbed 60 per cent of our soldiers of the vote, that tried to wreck price control, that sabotaged reconversion, that tried to water down the GI Bill of Rights in the 78th Congress.

Its early success, however, doesn't inevitably mean continued success. In fact, this early success, if it acts as a warning and a jolt to the voters back home, can make things tough for the anti-war coalition from now on out.

The material to beat this coalition is in the new Congress. Many of its former leaders are dead ducks, having been defeated in the election. Many sound progressives are in their places.

The decisive element, and the largest one, that we will have to call on for this job is the "middle-of-the-roaders" in the new Congress. These are the people who aren't always sure of how they're going to vote, but can be worked with. They need constant explanation and persuasion to help them make up their minds.

The polltax-GOP trick on the Dies Committee was smoothly and deliberately planned to put this vote over before the new Congress could get acquainted with itself and its tasks.

There is no point in blinking the fact that this vote is a setback. There is even less point in taking the defeatist line that such setbacks will continue to happen. If we do our job of explaining, educating, telling Congress what's wanted from the voters, the setback will not be repeated.

Ask Pact Extension

Continuation of the UAW-CIO contract terms at the Centerline Westinghouse Ordnance plant when it is taken over by the Navy was urged by UAW President R. J. Thomas this week.

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 256 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

SOLD EVERYWHERE
5c
Planters Salted Peanuts
EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

Let's Meet The Challenge

There is a sharp warning for labor and all progressives in the disgraceful incident that marred the opening day of the Seventy-Ninth Congress.

After House Speaker Sam Rayburn had voiced an eloquent plea for national unity in Congress and throughout the country, Rep. John Rankin, the most disruptive of polltax reactionaries, brazenly defied the whole spirit of national unity by demanding revival of the notorious un-American Dies Committee with a permanent status.

What the American people think of this labor-baiting, administration-baiting Committee was eloquently expressed in the last elections, when most of its members were retired from public office.

The fact that the House gave a new lease of life to a group whose function has been to disrupt national unity by reckless slanders and smears against the Roosevelt administration, the CIO and all liberals and progressives in public life, is disturbing enough in itself.

But even more disturbing is the nature of the unscrupulous combination that took control of Congress in this instance, in defiance of the American people's election mandate—and the menace it represents for the future.

The 1944 Presidential elections gave a sweeping popular mandate to President Roosevelt to carry on with winning the war, organizing the United Nations for lasting peace, and with a progressive domestic program.

The elections made a definite improvement in the composition of Congress—as was indeed reflected in the greatly increased vote against the Dies Committee (186-207) as compared with similar votes in the past Congress.

But, the The CIO News pointed out immediately following the elections, the new Congress does not reflect the people's will as clearly as did the Presidential election. National issues were confused in Congressional elections by local and sectional issues, and many tories rode in on such issues. Furthermore, the polltax regularly assures the re-election to Congress of many anti-New Deal reactionaries by minority vote.

We warned that, despite the great progressive victories of the elections, there was still "danger that Southern polltaxers and tory Republicans will again combine to dominate Congress and to defy the people's mandate for Roosevelt's progressive policies."

This, of course, is exactly what happened in the Dies Committee vote. Seventy Democrats, mostly polltaxers, joined with 137 Republicans in making a joke of Democratic control of the House; while the Roosevelt administration was supported by only 150 Democrats and 34 of the more progressive Republicans.

There are therefore no grounds for undue pessimism, since attempts to revive the reactionary Republican-polltax combination that dominated the last Congress were to be anticipated; and since many middle-of-the-roaders may be won over on other issues to deprive it of its present slim majority.

But at the same time, the success of this combination on the first day of Congress should serve the sharpest possible warning on labor and all win-the-war progressives that they must be vigilant as never before during the present Congress to prevent the polltaxers and tory Republicans from usurping control on other issues as well.

This calls for maintaining constant personal contact with our Congressmen, for active legislative committees in every local, and for continuation and intensification of the political work so well begun by CIO's Political Action Committee.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THERE is an old Persian proverb—"Help thou thy brother's boat across the stream—and lo! thine own hath reached the shore."

It expresses the essence of labor unionism—and of labor's no-strike pledge.

"I'm for me—and to hell with the rest" is the slogan of the non-union scab. It leads to worse conditions for all, including the guy who thinks it's smart to be selfish.

Unions are built on the opposite idea: "Each for all"—"in union there is strength"—"an injury to one is the concern of all."

All such union slogans stress helping our brothers, the whole group, and thus incidentally helping themselves.

For the individual, this may mean some personal sacrifices. But in the long run, by building a strong union, he benefits—along with all the rest—more than he could have done by following the scab's philosophy.

★ ★ ★

When America entered the world war against fascism, labor might have succumbed to the scabby idea—"let's go out for us, and to hell with the rest."

It might have argued, "Here's our chance to get what's coming to us, by striking when the country needs our labor most of all."

This would have been unpatriotic and a stab in the back for our fighting men. But it would also have been stupid and short-sighted even from a selfish point of view.

Suppose some momentary wage gains might have been made in this fashion. They would have been more than cancelled out by the revulsion of public opinion against labor, by a flood of union-busting and wage-cutting legislation, by the lengthening of the war, and perhaps by the victory of fascism—from which workers would be the worst sufferers.

★ ★ ★

For sound union reasons, American labor (both CIO and AFL) took the opposite course. It voluntarily and unanimously made its unqualified no-strike pledge to the nation.

It took the attitude that victory in this people's war must be the first consideration, that we must back up our fighting brothers with maximum and uninterrupted production.

Was this mere flag-waving? Was it a weak-kneed betrayal of labor's interests? On the contrary, it was not only true patriotism but also militant and practical unionism.

Certainly some employers have taken advantage of labor's no-strike pledge. Certainly labor has had to make sacrifices for victory.

But, more important than this, the no-strike pledge has helped America to outproduce the Axis. It has helped to save the lives of many of our fighting men, and to hasten the day of final victory.

In so doing, the no-strike pledge has also helped to make the labor movement stronger than it has ever been; to make it an effective and respected force in politics and in the nation's councils; and to draw it closer to our servicemen and to all other sections of our population.

The unions have thus been enabled to protect their members better than they could have done by striking, and to build up a reserve of strength and public goodwill that will be sorely needed in the difficult postwar years.

★ ★ ★

But what if labor should now welch on its no-strike pledge?

The war is daily growing in intensity. The toughest fighting lies ahead. Our troops need more supplies and weapons than ever before.

To let them down now would lengthen the war, would mean death and injury to our own kith and kin. It would also create searing hatred among returning servicemen, making them prey to the designs of union-busting reactionaries.

In Congress it would mean the passage of bills to break unions, cut wages and enslave labor.

Why is it that all of labor's best friends and most militant leaders, like President Roosevelt and Philip Murray, so urgently plead that labor maintain and adhere to its no-strike pledge—while anti-union employers, defeatists and pro-fascists constantly try to provoke strikes?

Obviously it is because labor's worst enemies would like nothing better than the scrapping of the no-strike pledge, to turn servicemen and the public against labor, and to bring a general crackdown on the unions.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 January 8, 1945 No. 2

OUR PLEDGE TO THE NATION

The CIO News

A Special Supplement of the Official Publication of the CIO

• PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT: "American men and women on assembly lines, at machines, in mines, at counters, in office work, on farms and those directing production have, almost without exception, done everything humanly possible to help our brave fighters carry on against ruthless enemies. We must, and I know we will, keep turning out the weapons and materials needed by our fighters so that the war may be shortened, lives saved and our boys returned at the earliest possible moment to their homes and loved ones."

• GENERAL EISENHOWER: "The hardest fighting of the war is in progress. If we are to step up the force of our offense and bring the war in Europe to an early finish, we must hit the enemy harder than ever. To do that, we need an immediate increase in shipments, particularly of artillery and mortar ammunition, tanks and trucks. The speed and cost of our victory depend on the support we get in the weeks ahead."

• PHILLIP MURRAY: "The country needs your no-strike commitment. Every single, solitary one of the young men and women in the armed services needs your no-strike commitment, and the fathers and mothers of these young men who are now serving you overseas are praying for the maintenance of your no-strike commitment to protect the lives of the children God gave to them."

The CIO Pledges . . .

"The CIO reaffirms its solemn pledge that until we have accomplished a complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge. Each member and leader of organized labor must make it his responsibility to discharge with scrupulous care this sacred obligation."—CIO Convention, 1944.

Don't L

Deat
No-S

TO those who woul
create in the public labor is losing ground ica it is rather interes veal that the Congre trial Organizations in actual dues-paying m during the past 12 m spite no-strike con
some 669,000.

DO you know why la
United States is all-out support to th of the war? Look bac dark pages of Nazi h
the history of Fasci were the first groups terminated? Whose did they first seek?

The history of th countries in Europe with the destruction o unionists. All over E ler and Mussolini cohorts determined t tators were going to must first seek the de
the trade union move

• MEN, MONEY, WEA eaten up by war. Scor
and millions of man-h lost when a Nazi torpe the U. S. oil tanker, a thousands of our figh like those below, are ca every battlefront. All us back home is that turning out what the whip the Axis.

et GIs Down!

h Takes No Holidays In Foxholes!
trike Pledge Is Sacred—Murray

d seek to mind that in Amer-ing to reof Indusreased its embership oths, demitments,

bor in the giving its winning k over the story and sm. Who to be exestruction occupied is replete free trade rope Hit-nd their at if dicail they ruction of ment. So

PONS are s of lives ours were o blew up left, and ting men, ualties on hey ask of e keep on need to

"The no-strike pledge is a sacred obligation that you have to your son, to your daughter, to your brother, and to your sister, fighting somewhere, yes, perhaps dying somewhere, living in some global hellhole, bleeding, yes, dying, and whilst young men and women are making sacrifices of that description for you and me back home, the least, the very least that we can do to help them is by giving them every assurance that every single weapon that they need to win this war shall be provided them." Thus spoke CIO Pres. Philip Murray to the 1944 CIO Convention. Major excerpts from his address are carried on this page.

they set out to destroy the trade unions of Europe and within a comparatively short time the strong, powerful labor movements of Europe were rendered extinct. They were destroyed, and their leaders were either put in concentration camps or brutally murdered.

UNDERNEATH this no-strike commitment which your organizations have made to the President of the United States and have made to one hundred and thirty million souls in this country and have made to eleven million young people now in the armed services, underneath all of that was this record of the Nazis, this record of the Fascists, when they did bring about the destruction of the trade union movement in Europe.

No responsible leader of labor in the United States of America under circumstances such as that can hope to serve the best interests of the members which he is privileged to represent if he attempts by word of mouth or by act to set aside labor's no-strike pledge in the course of this present war.

It is a sacred obligation. It is an obligation that you have to your son, to your daughter, to your brother, and to your sister, fighting somewhere, yes, perhaps dying somewhere, living in some global hellhole, bleeding, yes, dying, and whilst young men and women are making sacrifices of that description for you and me back home, the least, the very least that we can do to help them is by giving them every assurance that every single weapon that they need to win this war shall be provided them.

The record of American labor in the United States in the course of this war has been an almost miraculous one. To maintain that kind of a record, and, yes, improve upon it, if need be, is what we all look forward to.

The miracles of production referred to by General Sommervell in the course of his talk to the convention here today attest more loyally than any words I might give to you the remarkable achievement of American labor in the field of war production since the beginning of the present war.

I am looking forward to the growth of this movement. There isn't any force big enough anywhere in the United States of America to destroy—yes, to even weaken — the influence or the power of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

We live because we provide workers a good example; we are not irresponsible, we maintain our collective bargaining commitments with our employers, and we maintain our no-strike commitments to the American people in the course of a war. We don't make pledges today and break them tomorrow.

Our organization was builded upon a rock. That rock is a rock of truth, a rock of honesty, a rock of integrity. That rock upon which this organization is being builded has won for itself the respect and admiration of all workers throughout the United States of America, and the right-thinking citizens of our country as well.

A union can no more disregard its pledges than a man can and maintain its own self respect, and the respect of the community and the nation, whilst violating its pledges.

Our unions have maintained their no-strike commitment. Our unions have been loyal to our boys overseas, and they have been devoted to the cause for which they are now fighting, and the members of these great unions who are the soldiers of production on the home front here, will continue to maintain that same degree of loyalty until all forms—all forms of oppression and aggression have been wiped from the face of the earth completely.

Weapon-Gulping War Wrecks Equipment; CIO Renews Pledge To Keep It Coming

"We planned this war to use up munitions to save men's lives and, with more than 12 millions of men under arms, with over half of them overseas, we are committed to backing them up with everything America has. . . . We are calling on American productive power for a supreme effort to meet a supreme crisis. The doughboy has fought his way ahead of schedule and we have to catch up with him. When a division commander calls frantically for guns or tanks or ammunition, we should be able to say, as General Pershing told Clemenceau in the desperate spring of 1918: 'All that we have is yours.' And we must see to it that we have enough to give—enough for victory." Those words were addressed to the people of America by Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commanding general of the Army Service Forces, who spoke at the recent CIO Convention. He heard the strongest organization in the United States unanimously renew a pledge that it will continue to do its part to see that we fight the war by expending more powder and shot than blood and lives. CIO's pledge, to keep the weapons coming, follows:

CIO's No-Strike Pledge

WHEREAS, The working men and women of this nation desire above anything else to exert all their effort and energy toward achieving maximum producton of war materials. The CIO, at the outset of this war, gave its no-strike pledge, which it has religiously maintained;

WE recognze that a strike or stoppage of work, frequently provoked by management or caused by the weaknesses and delay of government agencies, must necessarily interfere with this effort for all-out production and to that extent actually assists our enemies and endangers the life of those men and women on the battlefronts fighting the Axis armies;

LABOR does not regard its no-strike pledge as a bargaining matter with our nation. To the contrary, we recognize that the enemies of our war effort would constantly seek to provoke labor into engaging in strikes and that there are employers who, for their own personal profit, would endeavor to take advantage of our war situation and attempt to exploit labor regardless of the impact of their policies upon the war effort. This has involved sacrifices by labor to assure continuous and maximum production of war materials for our armed forces; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the CIO hereby reaffirms its solemn pledge that until we have accomplished a complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge.

Each member and leader of organized labor must make it his responsibility to discharge with scrupulous care this sacred obligation.

WE must recognize that for the duration of the war all issues in dispute between labor and management must be adjusted through the peaceful means of collective bargaining, mediation, or through disposition by the National War Labor Board.

FURTHER, we must recognize that to assure the prosecution of the war program and to prevent special groups from exploiting labor or benefiting from the sacrifices of others, organized labor has the task of mobilizing the people on the legislative and political fronts behind a program designed to meet the basic economic problems arising out of the war and to protect the interests of the common people.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Sewell Avery is on the rampage again! Just a wilful, foolish man who puts his personal prejudices above the Nation's well-being and again is resisting the application of the War Labor Board's directive. All fair-minded people throughout the Nation must recognize that during the period of war—when our Nation is struggling, along with the United Nations, for democracy—there must be a mechanism established to adjudicate problems of the kind involved in this directive which Avery refuses to accept.

Americans are good sports. When umpires are created, they abide by their decisions. They may protest but they abide by them in the interests of the game. Here is an individual who tries to create chaos, to destroy confidence, at a time when we need unity more than ever. Men are dying on the battle fields all over the world, fighting a foe who has resorted to vile and brutal practices that have shocked the whole world.

What does this matter to Avery—as long as he can get the public eye by his unAmerican conduct? He would rather pay for costly ads in all leading newspapers of the country than pay the wage increases ordered by the WLB some two years ago. His attempt to distort the meaning of the maintenance of membership award, to make it appear that this means a closed shop, is hypocritical and false, as his high-salaried lawyers and legal counsel well know.

The directors of Montgomery-Ward cannot escape their responsibility in this disgraceful act of Sewell Avery, their chairman. Neither can the stockholders. As for the CIO, Mr. Avery can rest assured that the task of organizing his employees is going on and even if it extends into the postwar period, ORGANIZED LABOR WILL WIN, because it is right. Others have had to recognize the unions and deal with them properly and so will Mr. Avery. King Canute Avery cannot stop this tide. It is the tide of democracy which will eventually overwhelm all those who stand in the way. Trade unionism is here to stay and to become more and more a part of our democracy.

Avery should receive the condemnation of every American who has faith in the institutions of democracy. He loudly proclaimed that his employees didn't want unions. Where elections have been held, the answer has been given in no uncertain terms as to what they want. This doesn't satisfy Mr. Avery.

President Roosevelt is to be commended for the stand he has taken in this situation. Mr. Avery will go down in labor history as one of those who tried to bring disunity and impair the war effort. The Union will win!

CIO ELECTIONS WON

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Ralph Tillotson reports: Struthers-Wells Corp., Titusville, Pa., USA-CIO, 546; AFL 123. CIO, 97; AFL Blacksmiths, 7. CIO, 85; AFL Electricians, 10. Olympic Luggage Co., Kanes, Pa., CIO Fur Workers, 15; No. Union, 11.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, advises: Park Drop Forge Boiler House, CIO 11, Against 5.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Org. Dir., Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, reports: Timekeepers of the Beth-Fairfield Yard, Baltimore, Md., CIO 85; no union 8.

Thos. F. McGuire, MMSW Field Rep., reports: MMSW Local 241, Timmins, Ontarion, won 11 out of 12 mines at this camp with a vote of 3199 for CIO, 1290 against.

Secy-Treas. John Lawson of Stone & Allied Products Workers advises: Lastic Products Co., plant, Wampum, Pa., CIO 32; District 50, 2. Rep. Lewis R. Lowry represented the union in organizing these workers.

Wm. Mayo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., South Bend, Ind., reports: Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, won an election at Warren Feather Bone Co., Three Oaks, Mich., involving some 245 employees. Rep. Mildred Stout was in charge.

NCNW Cites Mrs. FDR, Mrs. Bellanca

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was named this week by the National Council for Negro Women as the Woman of the Year.

"Her varied activities in the field of human relations, her courage, her energy, and her deep concern for national and international unity have given inspiration to women all over the world," said Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the council.

Mrs. Dorothy J. Bellanca, international vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was among the others named by the council as outstanding women for 1944.

She was cited for her effective assistance in mobilizing women industrial workers for "registration and participation in local and national elections in 1944."

OTHERS LISTED

Others on the council's list of outstanding women of the year were:

Anna Arnold Hedgeman, executive secretary of the National Committee for the Establishment of a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission; Mary S. Ingraham, president of the National Board of the YWCA; Mabel Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Alice T. McLean, founder-president of the American Women's Voluntary Services; Daisy Lampkin, field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Katherine Shryver, executive secretary of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax; Dorothy Thompson, columnist; Lovonia H. Brown, founder-lt. general of the Women's Army for National Defense; Lillian Smith, editor of "South Today" and author of the novel "Strange Fruit"; Bettye Murphy Phillips, newspaperwoman of the Baltimore Afro-American; Lena Horne, singer; Thomasina W. Johnson, legislative representative, National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs; Pauline Redmond Coggs, executive secretary of the Washington Urban League; and Jeanetta Welch Brown, executive secretary of the National Council of Negro Women.

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Consumer organizations won a real victory for the American people when most meat and processed food went back on rationing. And OPA acted very courageously and in the best interests of all of us when they cancelled back ration stamps. There's been some complaining about it, but that's because housewives haven't had the facts.

The basic fact is that there's less food available for civilians for the year 1945 than during any other year of the war—in spite of the fact that food production is at an all-time high.

Take canned vegetables, for instance. The civilian supply of the 1944 pack which must last until the new crop is packed next summer, was one-third less than last year's supply. By December 1—with no rationing—stocks on hand were reduced to just a little more than half of what was available to civilians at the same time last year.

Think about that a minute—only half as much canned food on hand for us as last year. And yet lots of us have several months' supply of unused blue stamps. Supplies were not big enough to go around until next summer unless those back stamps were cancelled.

The situation was similar on sugar. Military and lend lease requirements will be 300,000 tons greater this year than last and there's no way to increase the supply. It's limited by lack of shipping for one thing—because our ships must carry supplies to the front. Our sugar stocks right now are at the lowest point in years. We used 500,000 tons more sugar than we could afford in 1944.

The result is that we will only have 78 pounds per person in 1945 compared with 104 pounds each in 1941. But we couldn't have that much unless back stamps were cancelled. Even with the cancellation, our ration for at least one ration period will have to last us three months instead of the present two and a half.

It's the same with meat. The 1945 supply is estimated at two billion pounds less than last year and our Army and our fighting allies need increasing quantities. Soldiers in the field now get fresh meat at three meals a week. The Quartermaster Corps wants them to have it at two meals a day. We'll be glad to do with less so they can have it.

In addition, we want to see fair distribution of the supply that's left for us. We haven't had that the past few months because such a small part of the meat supply was rationed. Now that 85 per cent of meat is back on the point system we can expect to see a better variety of meat in our butcher showcases before long.

Opponents of the administration both in Congress and on the radio have tried to make American housewives feel that they've been betrayed by OPA. That's dangerous business. It undermines our war effort by encouraging the black market.

Carey Urges Break With Franco Spain

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey this week joined Dr. Juan Negrin, prime minister of the last Republican government in Spain, Thomas Mann ,author, and others in urging that the U. S. break off relations with the Franco regime at once.

Speaking at a mass rally for Republican Spain, held in New York City last week, Carey called upon U.S. officials to see to it "that America's leadership is regained in the ranks of freedom-loving people everywhere."

Declaring that the U.S. helped to maintain Franco in power, Carey said:

"He could not have survived the lack of our economic support. The same holds true today. Franco is still dependent upon us—not we on him.

"If we mean to give encouragement to the democratic forces throughout the world, and particularly in South America and the West Indies, we must relegate our hypocritic acts to the background, and recall that nations and individuals are judged by actions as well as words—we must sever our relations with Franco now."

Dr. Negrin's message to the rally was cabled from London and read to the meeting after the British Foreign Office refused to allow it to be broadcast. Breaking what he called a self-imposed silence of five years, Negrin declared that the United Nations owed a debt to Republican Spain, the country in the vanguard of the fight against fascism, which could be paid only by a complete break with the Franco regime.

SPEAKS FOR SPAIN

Denying that Republican Spain, "the real Spain," had ever given up the struggle against fascism, Negrin said: "It is in the name of this true Spain that I am speaking to you, my American friends, so as to assure you that the Spanish people are ready and able to handle their own affairs, on condition that our hands are not tied, on condition that we are not subjected to pressures and maneuvers from without.

"We do not ask for—and please get this—we do not ask for and do not want intervention by other Governments and armies."

Speakers at the rally, all of whom urged a break with Franco, included Democratic Representative John W. Coffee from Washington; Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of New York; Dr. Frank Kingdon, news analyst; Frank Gervasi, war correspondent; Freda Kirchwey, editor of The Nation; Dr. Francis E. McMahon, former Notre Dame professor; William Shirer, radio commentator; Allan Chase, author of "Falange"; Quentin Reynolds, writer, and others.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill

"A federal bill to abolish the poll tax is a clear necessity as well as a national obligation," Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member of the National War Labor Board and president of the University of North Carolina, states in an article in the last "Ammunition," UAW-CIO monthly.

Senate Group Urges More Health Centers

Health centers in every community so that medical care is within easy reach of every group were recommended in proposals placed before the new Congress this week by the Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.).

The health centers would be part of the system advocated before the committee by the U. S. Public Health Service, and would consist of community health centers, rural hospitals, district hospitals and large base hospitals.

EXCHANGE OF PATIENTS

The health centers would provide preventive, diagnostic and curative care, and between the various units of the whole system there would be a constant exchange of information, training, consultation service and personnel. There would also be referral of patients between the various units.

The subcommittee made no specific recommendation on health insurance, the main feature of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, which is supported by the CIO, but found that the pay-as-you-go method of meeting medical bills is unsatisfactory for most people.

The report declared that "remediable action is overdue and should not be delayed," and advocated "some form of group financing." Voluntary prepayment, compulsory insurance, tax-supported medicine, or a combination of these methods, were cited as possible alternatives.

The concentration of physicians in prosperous areas where hospitals are located was attacked.

"Rural counties have only one-third as many physicians as do urban counties," the subcommittee found. "Counties with no hispitals have 60 per cent fewer doctors than counties with the same income and general hospitals."

Federal, state and local cooperation was proposed in planning and financing the network of medical facilities. Before Federal funds could be granted, the state plans and individual projects should be approved by the U. S. Public Health Service to make sure that the proposals are up to standard, Sen. Pepper's group reported.

Increased enrollment of women in medical and dental schools and in preparatory courses for such schools was urged.

Other recommendations of the subcommittee included:

Mental hygiene clinics to serve all groups, including veterans.

Improvement of school health programs.

Postwar public health construction to provide sewerage, water, sanitation and milk pasteurization facilities, especially in rural areas.

THE ADVENTURES OF JIM BARRY — TROUBLE SHOOTER

DRAWN BY MORT MESKIN

STORY BY JOSEPH GREENE AND JERRY COLE

Copyright Natl CIO NEWS

Vets Get Score On Unions, Jobs In New Booklet

Any ex-GI Joe who reads the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' pamphlet "When You Come Back" should face the future with confidence, with all misconceptions about the CIO and the UE swept away.

And most returning servicemen who get the pamphlet should read it. It is told in story form, with an attractive cover and illustrations throughout.

The story in a nutshell is that of Tom, discharged serviceman, who is taken in tow by his father's friend, Marty, who convinces him that there can be jobs for all and sends him to a UE Veterans Committee for answers to other quesions.

The committee first gave him a calendar of events to show what happened while he was away. It tells of labor's no-strike pledge, withdrawal of the United Mine Workers from the CIO because the CIO insisted on full support for the war effort and for President Roosevelt, formation of the CIO Political Action Committee, and PAC's endorsement of President Roosevelt.

Tom was also told his rights under the GI Bill, by the committee. At the UE Servicemen's and Veterans' Canteen, Tom was given an official circular from the War Department authorized by Chief of Staff, General Marshall, which told that loss due to strikes from shortly after Pearl Harbor to July 1, 1944, amounted to less than "one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total labor time available."

To set Tom straight on the notion that there is going to be a depression, he was informed:

"A nation can prepare for peace as it did for war. As a matter of fact, this is the first war in history in which plans for peace were made before the war actually ended. Unless forces which seek to destroy the unity of the nation succeed in their desire, America faces a period of expanding commerce, prosperity and jobs for all."

Information on established veterans organizations, the program of the UE for veterans, and a record of what the union has done to aid veterans were also given Tom.

All the Toms returning to civilian life should get a good start when they read the booklet, which was written by Bill Cahn, illustrated by Julian Brazelton, and prepared under the direction of the UE National Servicemen's and Veterans' Committee.

Intended for mass distribution, "When You Come Back" sells for 5 cents a copy, $4.50 per 100 and $37 per thousand. It may be mailed to servicemen anywhere in the world for 6 cents postage, and may be ordered from UE, 11 East 51st St., N. Y. 22, N. Y.

Transport Service Union Buys Building

A union center and national headquarters of the CIO United Transport Service Employes of America will be established in a new building just purchased by the UTSEA in Chicago, Pres. Willard S. Townsend announced this week.

The Binga Bank Building at 35th and State Streets bought by the union at an estimated cost of $25,000 will be remodeled into a modern union center containing club and recreation rooms, a credit union, a union counselling service department to work with community social agencies, and a private cocktail lounge for members and friends.

Purchase of the building was authorized recently by the union's general executive board in compliance with a resolution adopted at the annual convention held last May.

Auto Union Bowling Match

A national bowling tournament for members of the CIO United Auto Workers will open in Detroit at the Bowl-O-Drome Sunday, Feb. 4, announces the union's recreation director, Melvin West. It will be the biggest ever held by the UAW or any union, he says, with entries exceeding the record total of last year by 25 per cent.

A $200 first prize will go to the high team in each of the five-man classifications; $50 to high teams in each classification for all events, and war bonds will be given as prizes for tournament individual high game in each classification.

Majority of the entries will be from Michigan, with scattering representation from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Union Bookshop Best Sellers

Current best sellers at the United Auto Workers Union Bookstore, in Detroit, are reported to be: Fiction—Strange Fruit, Leave Her To Heaven, Freedom Road, Earth and High Heaven and Bell for Adano.

Non-fiction—Prejudice by Carey McWilliams; People on Our Side by Edgar Snow; Black Mail by Henry Hoke; Facts & Fascism by George Seldes, and I Never Left Home, by Bob Hope.

Check-Off Awarded

Maintenance of membership and check-off provisions have been granted the United Steelworkers of America for approximately 650 employes of the Maryland Sanitary Manufacturing Co. in Baltimore. Industry members of the War Labor Board dissented.

World Neighbors

Murray, British Union Leaders Hail World Labor Meeting Feb. 6

MOSCOW, (ALN)—The importance of the forthcoming world labor conference in ensuring that the close collaboration of the United Nations be continued and extended after the war was emphasized this week in articles by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Will Lawther, president of the Miners Federation of Great Britain, and Jack Tanner, president of the British Amalgamated Engineering Union, in the current issue of "War and the Working Class."

(Pres. Murray's article was carried in full in The CIO NEWS of Dec. 25.—Ed. note.)

Discussing the "isolationist" stand of the AFL, Tanner pointed out that the AFL "is a conservative organization built on the craft principle, and refusing to take in whole sections of workers." Stating that differences are bound to arise on the issues confronting the conference delegates, he stressed that "national interests should be subordinated to international exigencies."

The February conference will become "a landmark in the history of the international labor movement," Lawther stated, adding that "despite the regrettable attitude of the AFL, the conference will achieve the long-cherished unity of the world labor movement, the lack of which was so keenly felt before the war."

U. S. Brings Freedom to Germany--Murray

"Every act of cooperation with the Allied Military Government brings nearer the dawn of a new day of freedom for German labor and emancipation from present, actual enslavement under the Nazi party," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in an OWI short wave broadcast beamed at Germany.

Noting that General Eisenhower's recent announcement to German workers pledged the unqualified restoration of trade unions and the right of collective bargaining, Murray said:

"Every German will find conclusive proof that a United Nations victory over the Nazi tyrants means not enslavement, as Hitler and Goebbels would have him believe, but a revival of freedom for the German trade union movement."

TWU Bond Record

Local 100 of the Transport Workers' Union, CIO oversubscribed a $500,000 Sixth War Loan quota, with final figures still to be reported.

Labor's New Strength Chills Business Mag.

Some chilling thoughts about labor's increased political power are plunked like ice cubes into the minds of union-fearful employers in the current (December 15) issue of Modern Industry, monthly magazine for "management men."

"New headaches for management" lurk in the months just ahead, warns MI—a hangover from labor's show of political power in the November election.

"Almost overlooked is the fact that labor, while proving its strength in the national election, also enhanced its power and prestige locally," says this management mouthpiece. "Labor endorsed candidates—and in many instances actual labor leaders—" (how awful) "were not only elected, to Congress, but to state legislatures, county boards, municpal councils.

"And the politicians, at all levels, have a new respect for the organizational talents demonstrated by the unions in the presidential elections.

"PAC will continue as an 'educational' adjunct of the CIO, as will other independent groups organized during the recent campaign for the support of the Democratic administration. At the least they will operate as pressure groups to influence national labor policy and legislation. Or they can become potent political forces carrying the balance of power in city and state elections."

Just what are the things this "politically minded labor movement" is trying to get that mean "headaches" for management? They are "obvious," says MI—"Quick abrogation of the Little Steel Formula, annual wage, increased Social Security benefits, socialized medicine, higher minimum wages."

"These are important issues, their effect upon industry is readily recognized, and the fight is in the open," MI declares, but they don't include all the headaches menacing industry. There are also the "sleeper" bills, those "simple municipal ordinances and innocent-appearing state labor laws" which "can prove more costly to management than revision of the Little Steel formula."

The trend in state legislation, warns MI, "may be a swift reversal of the 1942-44 trend "that sharply limited labor prerogatives and afforded management more adequate protection against labor excesses."

Labor can only accept all these dire predictions cheerfully, and hope that MI is right.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS
BRUnswick 7815

GIs Meet Bloody Death

(Continued from Page 1)

WITH THE 4TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN HUERTGEN FORREST, GERMANY—The firs are thick and there are 50 square miles of them standing dismal and dripping at the approaches to the Cologne plain. At the height of a man standing, there is a solid mass of dark, impenetrable green. But at the height of a man crawling, there is room, and it is like a green cave, low-roofed and forbidding. And through this cave moved the infantry, to emerge cold and exhausted where the forest of Huertgen came to a sudden end before Grosshau.

The infantry, free from the claustrophobia of the forest, went on, but behind them they left their dead, and the forest will stink with deadness long after the last body is removed.

For Huertgen was agony, and there was no glory in it except the glory of courageous men—the MP whose testicles were hit by shrapnel and who said, "OK, Doc, I can take it"; the man who walked forward, firing tommy guns with both hands, until an arm was blown off and then kept on firing the other tommy gun until he disappeared in a mortar burst.

MEN OF THE 25th, 43d and 37th Divisions would know Huertgen—it was like New Georgia. Mud was as deep, but it was yellow instead of black. Trees were as thick, but the branches were stemmed by brittle needles instead of broad jungle leaves. Hills were as steep and numerous but there were mines—S mines, wooden shoe mines, tellermines, box mines.

Foxholes were as miserable but they were covered because tree bursts are deadly and every barrage was a deluge of fragmentation from the tops of the neat little firs. Rain was as constant but in Huertgen it was cold, and on the line there was constant attack and a stubborn enemy.

The advance through Huertgen was "like wading through the ocean," said S-3 at the regiment. "You walk in it all right, but water is all around you."

HUERTGEN had its roads and firebreaks. The firebreaks were only wide enough to allow two jeeps to pass, and they were mined and interdicted by machine-gun fire. In one break there was a tellermine every eight paces for three miles. In another there were more than 500 mines in the narrow break. One stretch of road held 300 tellermines. There were 400 anti-tank mines in a three-mile area.

The infantry went through Huertgen's mud and its splintered forest growth and its mines and its high explosives, mile after mile, slowly and at great cost. But it went through, with an average of perhaps 600 yards gained each day.

The men threw ropes around the logs of the roadblock and yanked the ropes to explode the mines and booby traps in the roadblock, and then they shoved the trees aside to clear the way. The engineers on their hands and knees probed the earth with No. 8 wire to find and uncover nonmetalic shoe mines and box mines which the Germans had planted by the thousands.

FREEZING IT OUT on the Western front are these U. S. 1st Army second division infantrymen, crouched in a snow-filled ditch, seeking shelter from a German artillery barrage.

A wire or bayonet was shoved into the ground at an angle in the hope that it would touch the mines on their sides rather than on the tops.

Scattered on the ground were little round mines no larger than an ointment box, but still large enough to blow off a man's foot.

HOW THE Germans met our assault was recorded in the brief diary of a medic who was later taken prisoner. The medic refers to the infantry as "Ami," colloquial for American. These are some excerpts:

"To our left machine guns begin to clatter—and there comes Ami.

"In broad waves you can see him across the field. Tanks all around him are firing wildly. Now the American artillery ceases and the tank guns are firing like mad. With a few shots we can see several tanks burning once again. Long smoke columns are rising toward heaven. The infantry takes cover and the attack slows down—it's stopped. It's unbelievable that with this handful of men we hold out against such attacks.

"And now we go forward to counterattack. The captain is leading it himself. We can't go far though. Our people are dropping like tired flies. We have got to go back and leave the whole number of our dead and wounded. Slowly the artillery begins its monotonous song again—drumming, drumming, drumming without let-up.

"Our people are overtired. When Ami really attacks again he has got to break through. I can't believe that this land can be held any longer. Many of our boys just run away and we can't find them and we have to hold out with a small group, but we are going to fight."

Then two days later came the final entry:

"Last night was pretty bad. We hardly got any sleep, and in the morning the artillery is worse than ever. I can hardly stand it, and the planes are here again. Once more the quiet before the storm. Then suddenly tanks and then hordes of Amis are breaking out of the forest. Murderous fire meets him, but he doesn't even take cover any more. We shoot until the barrels sizzle, and finally he is stopped again.

"We are glad to think that the worst is past when suddenly he breaks through on our left. Hand grenades are bursting but we cannot hold them any longer. There are only a very few left, and here he is again. There are only five of us. We have got to go back.

"On the road to Grosshau we take up a new position. We can hear tanks come closer, but Ami won't follow through his gains anyway. He's too cowardly for that."

PERHAPS this German who called the infantry cowardly and then surrendered to it will never hear the story of one 4th Division soldier in Huertgen. He stepped on a mine and it blew off his foot. It was one of the wounds in which the veins are forced upward so they are in a manner sealed, and bleeding is not so profuse as it otherwise would be.

The man lay there, but he wasn't able to bandage his own wounds. The medics tried to reach him but were fired upon. One was hit, and the trees around the man were white with scars of the machine-gun bullets that kept the medics away. Finally—after 70 hours—they managed to reach him.

He was still conscious, and for the medics it was a blessing that he was conscious; and for the man himself it was a blessing. For during the darkness the Germans had moved up to the wounded man. They took his field jacket from him, and his cigarettes They booby trapped him by setting a charge under his back so that whoever lifted him would die. So the wounded man, knowing this, lay quietly on the charge and told the men who came to help him what the Germans had done. They cut the wires of the booby trap and carried him away

The green mounment of Huertgen is a bitter thing.

SCREAMING NAZI SHELLS forced these American infantrymen to seek shelter behind a U. S. tank. In the background are the ruins of Geich, Germany, sample of the terrific destructive power of the pulverizing artillery barrages both sides have to face on the border of Nazi-land.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 3 82 January 15, 1945

No-Strike Pledge Is Vital To War, Murray Tells Auto Workers

(See Page 12)

★ ★ ★

'Equal' Rights—Neither Equal Nor Right!

(See Pages 6-7)

★ ★ ★

CIO Union Show

(Pictures, Story on Page 5)

Thomas Victory Blow To South's Anti-Labor Laws

Texas came back into the Union this week, via the U. S. Supreme Court. The Court, in a 5 to 4 decision, held that Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union could solicit union members in Texas without taking out a license.

Reversing a lower court decision which OKed a three-day jail sentence and a $100 fine for the CIO Vice President, the highest court in the land said that the Texas law requiring labor organizers to register before they start "beating their gums" is a violation of the Constitutional right of free speech and free assembly. Thomas had been arrested after making a speech at a CIO Oil Workers rally without having registered.

ANTI-LABOR LAWS

The decision was hailed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and by Thomas as a decided setback for the anti-labor Christian American Assn., which supported the Texas law and other legislation designed to encircle and annihilate the labor movement south of Mason Dixon. Said Murray:

"The decision, in emphasizing the values for which this war is being fought, should be hailed by good citizens everywhere. In announcing that freedom has no geographical frontier, and that the rights of labor and working people have equal constitutional standing with those of other citizens, the Court's opinion serves the national interest in an important way."

Thomas declared that the decision will serve as a warning to other states which contemplate similar legislation, and added that "the UAW-CIO has been pressing this case vigorously because it involved a fundamental principle, the right af labor to exercise its constitutional freedom."

R. J. THOMAS

CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman pointed out that the Court rejected the view that solicitation of individuals to join a union is a business practice such as selling real estate or toothpaste. Pressman said that the decision also was important because it stressed the constitutional right of peaceful assembly, a right that rarely has been emphasized by the Court.

The decision came shortly after the Southern Patriot, publication of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, warned that fascist-minded forces are plotting to railroad anti-union laws through the eight Southern state legislatures which will meet during 1945.

"The spearhead of these groups is an organization flaunting false colors and faking patriotism, ironically named the Christian American," states the Southern Patriot, which devotes its current issue to exposing this conspiracy and its national connections.

"The organization, neither 'Christian' nor 'American', has from its beginning in Texas in 1936, fought every Roosevelt measure," reports the paper. "Lately it has concentrated its attack, through the press and state assembly halls, on labor."

Its anti-union measures are disguised as "anti-violence-in-strikes" laws and "right-to-work" amendments to state and Federal constitutions; would ban the union shop and repeal the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

"Should Christian American plans succeed," warns Southern Patriot, "the general public will be the loser as much as labor, because lower wages and working

(Continued on Page 3)

5,000,000 Jobs for U. S. In Postwar World Trade

How Bretton Woods Provides A Key To World Prosperity

BY C. W. FOWLER

JOBS FOR 5,000,000 American workers from foreign trade are in sight—when Congress passes a law ratifying an agreement made in a little New Hampshire resort town in the summer of 1944.

The agreement, which went under a long official title, "United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference," was signed by the U. S. and by 43 other countries. It aims to do four basic things:

1. Guarantee jobs and prosperity for all countries through free international trade.

2. Prevent financial and economic aggression of the kind that helped Germany and Japan prepare for this war.

3. Make impossible for financial interests in this and other countries to help foreign aggressors, the way Germany and Japan were helped before this war.

4. Raise the standard of living in "backward" countries to the point where they can buy the things we make.

Jobs First

First, the question of jobs for American workers. President Roosevelt and CIO President Murray have set the goal at 60,000,000 jobs to keep America secure and prosperous after the war.

A big slice of these jobs must come from foreign trade. As President Murray has pointed out in his "CIO Re-Employment Plan":

"The continued prosperity of Americans is directly tied to the prosperity of people of all other nations. In addition to a domestic program for full production in the U. S., there must be a vigorous, long-term program of international commerce."

Now, foreign trade doesn't just happen. People in other countries have to have something more than just the desire for American goods. They have to have money to buy them with.

In the days before the war, people who wanted to buy goods from other countries got the money only when and if private banking interests were pleased to let them have it.

Remember the 30's?

THOSE WHO remember the '30's will recall how some countries deliberately drove down the value of their own money in order to undercut other countries on exports. The other countries then, of course, tried the same thing. This destroyed world trade. And with that destruction of world trade came, also in the '30's, the most terrible depression in history and the preparation for World War II.

The only countries that profited out of this world trade chaos were the fascist countries preparing for war. They used their superior economic strength to force weaker countries to give them valuable raw materials in exchange for worthless goods. This was done by the Nazis, who paid for imports in "blocked marks," spendable only in Germany. For these blocked marks the exporting country usually got nothing better than harmonicas or aspirin.

How It Works

Foreign trade is a two way street. To sell goods to a country, you have to buy things in return. One country cannot expect to go indefinitely selling to its neighbors unless its neighbors can sell to it.

For steady payment you need steady currencies. A U. S. exporter must be sure of getting his price for his exports in dollars. A Frenchman buying U. S. goods must be sure of a steady price when he pays for them in francs. If the rate of exchange—that is, the number of francs it takes to equal a U. S. dollar, changes sharply against the franc, the deal is off because it will take many more francs to buy the same amount of U. S. goods.

Neither the U. S. exporter nor his European customer control the rate of exchange. All they know is that suddenly the cost of the U. S. product to the European customer has been jerked up—and the customer for U. S. goods is jerked away.

All the U. S. exporter can do is to try to cut his price, which usually means an attempt at a wage cut, or stop exporting, which means layoffs.

The Fund

THIS is where the International Monetary Fund proposed at Bretton Woods comes in. Countries whose currencies may be threatened with a deep cut in exchange value can come to the Fund and borrow either gold, or dollars, or some other exchange medium, to restore their own currency to health.

Thus they will not be forced to drive their own currencies down in order to stimulate exports and cut down on imports. Weaker countries will be protected against the "harmonica and aspirin" kind of deal that helped Germany arm for World War II.

The Bank

But stable currencies are not enough. Countries wasted by war and undeveloped countries will need loans to rebuild and to develop. They will need money to help them get started on buying American products.

This is where the Bank for International Reconstruction and Development proposed at Bretton Woods comes in. Long-term loans will be guaranteed by the Bank, after investigation to make sure the borrowing country plans to use the money in a productive way and therefore will be able to repay the loan.

Control of these loans will not be with one banker or with a group of bankers. Control will be with the United Nations—which will see to it that loans do not mean exploitation and imperialism as they used to mean.

Profit for All

As U. S. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has said of Bretton Woods, loans will be made:

POSTWAR JOBS by the millions are tied up in U. S. shipping, which either can lay idle as it did after the last war or be put to work under a plan that will aid the international exchange of goods. Bretton Woods is the answer.

". . . to promote sound industry and increase industrial and agricultural production in nations whose economic potentialities have not yet been developed."

Our hope for 5,000,000 jobs through foreign trade lies in the industrialization of nations and continents such as China, Africa, Latin-America, India, and a big expansion of industry in the Soviet Union.

This means profit for all. We do not have to be afraid of competition from these countries. On the contrary, the more they are built up, the more they can buy from us. Canada is a highly industrialized country and has always been one of our best customers.

In a peaceful and stable world, made possible by the Bretton Woods kind of planning, the fact that millions of people have well paid jobs in other countries will mean millions of well paid jobs for us.

What's It Cost?

WHAT is the cost of Bretton Woods? The new Bank and the new Fund will of course take money to set up and run. It will be a pretty big investment to start with—$10 billion for the Bank and $8.8 billion for the Fund.

The U. S. share of this investment in world stability will be $3.2 billion for the Bank and $2.8 billion for the Fund. The U. S. is the world's richest country, and will have the largest say in controlling both Bank and Fund.

This money is invested, not spent. Countries that borrow from both the Bank and the Fund will repay the loans. The fact that loans will be made only for productive purposes is the guarantee of that.

Who's Against It?

You might think that there would be no opposition to such a sound and sensible plan as Bretton Woods. At the time the agreement was worked out in the summer of 1944, there was very little—and it wasn't vocal.

Only a handful of diehard Republicans, led by Senator Taft in Congress, opposed Bretton Woods then. Taft's criticism was the false one that it would cost U. S. taxpayers a lot of money. He ignored the fact that our share of the total—$6 billion—is an investment, not an expenditure.

But since the agreement was signed a small section of big bankers in this country and in England has decided to oppose Bretton Woods. Not too publicly, of course, but the decision has been made to fight it.

This decision is based on a professed fear that Bretton Woods will wipe out private banking. This is not so, since banks will continue to make loans—supervised by the Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

THE real reason behind this minority opposition is a hankering for the "good old days" of uncontrolled currency manipulation, uncontrolled lending, and speculative profits for the few.

The big banks didn't lose anything when countries such as Germany defaulted on loans. That loss was taken by the suckers who bought German bonds from the banks. In the same way, a handful of banks made big profits on loans to "backward" countries that were used not for production but solely for the purpose of extracting high interest rates.

Up to Congress

The Bretton Woods agreement is now up to Congress, which will have to pass a law authorizing the U. S. to join in the Bank and the Fund and appropriating the money for the original investment.

Congress thus has to decide whether or not we will have those 5,000,000 jobs in foreign trade. A bill to do this is being prepared, will be offered early in 1945.

Start writing your Congressman and your two Senators now. Urge them to make Bretton Woods a reality by voting the full amount needed from the U. S. to start it working. Urge them to reject limiting or crippling amendments.

Five million jobs isn't hay!

London Union Congress To End 'Dead Hand' On World Labor Solidarity

Any attempt to breathe new life into the old bones of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions (IFTU) at the February World Trade Union Congress in London will be hotly opposed by the CIO, Pres. Murray said this week in a pre-Congress statement issued in Washington.

Instead, the CIO delegation, which Murray will head, will press hard for the "immediate organization of a new world trade union federation to which all the trade union centers of the freedom-loving nations will be eligible," he said.

The IFTU, which the AFL is trying to revive, has been a dead hand on world labor for years. As Murray points out, it has always excluded the CIO, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the Soviet trade unions. As a result, it "has for many years been ineffective and today has largely ceased to function."

Murray's position is actively backed by the Soviet unions, as shown in recent Soviet statements blasting the IFTU, and by the British Trades Union Congress delegates at the preliminary meeting, who went along with CIO. As Murray points out:

"The results of the meeting of the preparatory committee for the World Trade Union Congress, as reported to me by the CIO delegates, are most gratifying. Representatives of the CIO, the British TUC and the Soviet unions met and conducted their business in an atmosphere marked by complete friendship and harmony."

Decisions on agenda and rules for the world meeting were worked out in three days, with a unanimity that "augers well for the success of the World Trade Union Congress when it meets in February," Murray said.

AGENDA CHANGE

The agenda, as reported by Murray, names point three as discussion of the "Basis for a World Trade Union Federation." This is a change from the original agenda sent out by Sir Walter Citrine, head of the TUC, which said "Reconstruction of the world trade union movement," leaving the way open for revival of the IFTU.

This change will be a considerable disappointment to the AFL, which, while flatly refusing to attend the February meeting, has announced plans for a meeting of the IFTU at about the same time.

Under the IFTU constitution, only one union body from each country can belong, and as Murray points out, this freezes out the largest sections of the world trade union movement—CIO, the Brotherhoods, and the Soviet unions. In addition, some four million Latin-American workers in the CTAL are also excluded.

AFL top officials have come to regard the IFTU and world labor representation generally as their exclusive bailiwick. For many years they had the help of the officials of the British TUC, including Sir Walter Citrine, in maintaining this attitude. They also worked closely with reactionary trade union leaders from the European countries.

Now this AFL stranglehold on world labor is being broken, on the initiative of the CIO. The final basis for creating a new, inclusive world union organization has been laid at the preliminary conference. As Murray said on receiving the report of the three CIO delegates to this pre-congress meeting:

"They pointed out that no world organization of the free trade unions which is either inclusive or effective exists at the present time and that the need for an organization which can speak effectively for the world labor movement is immediate and urgent."

FRENCH JOIN IN

The French trade unions, which had a leading part in the resistance to the Nazis, will also be at the World Trade Union Congress and will play a part in the new organization, according to a Reuters story in the N. Y. Times.

This story is further confirmed by the decision of the pre-Congress meeting to make French one of the four official languages, the others being English, Russian and Spanish.

The Murray statement and the agenda for the February Congress show that the dead hand of the IFTU is being shaken off by world labor. In its place will be a new world union body that:

" . . . shall include all the unions of free countries on a basis of equality, excluding none and relegating none to a secondary place, and that shall be capable of defending the interests of the common man."

On the Air with CIO—Tune In Sat.

CIO's next two big radio shows will dramatize the tremendous production job done by members of the CIO United Steelworkers, and will call the score on Congressional action during the past week. Both shows are on Saturday, Jan. 20.

The Steelworkers' program will be heard at 3:45 p.m. EWT over CBS outlets, on the "Job for Tomorrow" series.

What's cooking in Congress will be the subject of a 6:45 p.m. EWT broadcast over the Blue Network.

Both programs have been given preferred rating on several major newspapers' radio pages. Listen in!

Byrnes Hits Ward Policy

A re-hash of arguments in the Montgomery Ward case featured a hearing in Federal District Court in Chicago last week, with the Federal Government asking for an injunction which would restrain Ward Chairman Sewell Avery and other company officers from interfering with Army operation of seized Ward properties.

The company lawyers piled affidavits on affidavits to try to prove that the firm, which employs about 60,000 workers, is not a business which affects the conduct of the war, but their guns were largely spiked by a statement from James F. Byrnes, War Mobilization director, who said in an affidavit:

"Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., has persistently refused to settle labor disputes arising in its plants and facilities, located in some cases in vital centers of war production, and to adjust its wage rates in accordance with the decisions of the Natl. War Labor Board.

"It is my opinion that the continued refusal by Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., to conform to those procedures for the adjustment of wartime labor disputes and for the maintenance of wage and price stabilization threatens to disrupt those procedures and that the company's conduct, if allowed to continue, will seriously interfere with the successful prosecution of the war."

Ask Annual Pay For State City, County Workers

As a part of postwar prosperity insurance for everyone, to guarantee 60,000,000 jobs and a $200,000,000 national production level, the national executive board of the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers last week recommended a guaranteed annual wage for all State, county and city workers of $2,500 a year, and a five-billion-dollar program of public construction.

Pointing out the importance of the purchasing power or lack of it of 30,000,000 Government employes, they urged expansion of public service, more progressive tax measures, and increased Federal aid for public works and services, with set minimum standards and freedom of disbursement by State and local agencies.

Murray Speech On Our Pledge In Pamphlet

"Our Pledge to the Nation," a new pamphlet containing CIO President Philip Murray's speech on the renewal of the no-strike pledge at the 1944 CIO National Convention and the convention resolution reaffirming the pledge, has just been issued by the CIO Publicity Dept.

Sixteen pages and amply illustrated, the pamphlet is available 100 for $4.00, 500 for $15.00 from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Appeal Denied In Lynn Case

The appeal for a hearing on the Lynn Case which challenged the legality of the Negro quota system in the selection of military trainees has been denied by the Supreme Court.

Wilfred Lynn, now a corporal serving in the South Pacific, based his legal argument on Section 4(a) of the Selective Service Act which states that "in selection and training of men under this Act . . . there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race or color."

Help To Bring Victory
Buy A War Bond Today

Thomas Victory

(Continued From Page 1)

conditions always hurt the entire community."

Chief-cook and bottle-washer of the Christian American outfit is a man named Vance Muse, who has a long record as a lobbyist for big business, says the paper. "From time to time he has received financial contributions from such big Northern industrialists as the duPonts, Armours, Wideners, Sam Insull, Stone & Webster, John J. Raskob, Howard C. Hopson of Associated Gas & Electric, E. W. Mudge of Weirton Steel, Ogden Mills, Alfred P. Sloan and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. among others.

"The titular head of the "Christian Americans," a Texas realtor named S. Valentine Ulrey, is chiefly noted for advocating a 12-hour work day, a six-day work week, and less than regular pay for all overtime work. He has also helped distribute the propaganda of Gerald Winrod, whose connections have been exposed by the book, "Under Cover."

The documentary material printed in the Southern Patriot was prepared by Stetson Kennedy and will appear in his forthcoming book, "The Four Freedoms Down South," to be published in September by Doubleday, Doran.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 256 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c
EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

TUA
TRADE UNION AGENCY
CONSULTANTS TO UNIONS ON ALL INSURANCE PROBLEMS
80 WEST 40TH STREET, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.
Group Insurance · Pensions · General Insurance

No Time to Take It Easy!

Blow For Southern Liberty

BY PHILIP MURRAY

The Christian American campaign in the Southern states to cripple labor unions and to undermine their strength was dealt an effective blow this week by the decision of the Supreme Court in the Thomas case. We believe that the Court has made it clear that a state may not, in the camouflage of treating a trade union as a commercial enterprise, interfere with the exercise of those basic rights which the organization and formation of trade unions necessarily entail.

The decision, in emphasizing the values for which this war is being fought, should be hailed by good citizens everywhere. In announcing that freedom has no geographical frontier, and that the rights of labor and working people have equal constitutional standing with those of other citizens, the Court's opinion serves the national interest in an important way.

We believe that the CIO, in testing the right of Mr. Thomas to speak, has advanced the cause of liberty everywhere. We particularly hail the concluding language of the Court which is in the great tradition of a democratic government:

"The restraint is not small when it is considered what was restrained. The right is a national right, federally guaranteed. There is some modicum of freedom of thought, speech and assembly which all citizens of the Republic may exercise throughout its length and breadth, which no State, nor all together, nor the Nation itself, can prohibit, restrain or impede. If the restraint were smaller than it is, it is from petty tyrannies that large ones take root and grow. This fact can be no more plain when they are imposed on the most basic rights of all. Seedlings planted in that soil grow great and, growing, break down the foundations of liberty."

Teachers Need Better Pay

Low salaries in the teaching profession—which is one of the worst paid of all the "white collar" occupations—have their evil effects not only on the families of the teachers but also on the children of the entire nation.

As conditions in education and in the teaching profession stand today, our children are being robbed in huge areas of the nation of the right to an adequate and good education. Once lost, this can never be replaced.

For several years now educators and unions have been trying to get Congress to pass a Federal aid to education bill, appropriating some $300,000,000 to raise salaries from sub-standard levels and to improve school facilities.

Opponents of the bill have contended that this means "Federal control" of education, which they picture as something ominous. Actually no "Federal control" is contemplated. The funds in the bill will be administered by the local educational systems.

Sub-standard wages for teachers and lack of funds for schools are working incalculable harm to the future citizens of America. The means to end much of this damage lies at hand in the bill just offered in Congress. It should have the support of every parent and every American interested in our country's future.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

The following article by CIO Pres. Murray is run this week in place of Len De Caux's usual column, in the absence of the CIO Publicity Director, who is away from Washington on business.

THE results of the meeting of the Preparatory Committee for the World Trade Union Congress, as reported to me by the CIO delegates, are most gratifying. Representatives of the CIO, the British Trade Union Congress and the Soviet trade unions met and conducted their business in an atmosphere marked by complete friendship and mutual understanding.

It is anticipated that tthe February conference will be attended by approximately 150 delegates, representing 40 national trade union organizations in upwards of 30 countries. The inclusive and representative character of the conference demonstrates the desire on the part of the free trade-union movements of the world to enter into close working arrangements and establish an effective instrumentality through which to exert labor's full influence in shaping the vital decisions in connection with the peace settlements and postwar political and economic problems.

★ ★ ★

The agenda which the Preparatory Committee approved and will recommend to the World Congress for adoption, calls for consideration and discussion of the basic problems of winning the war, exterminating every vestige of nazi-ism and fascism, organizing international cooperation for an enduring peace, and establishing an economy of abundance for all of the people of the world.

The agenda agreed upon by the Preparatory Committee follows:

Item 1. The Furtherance of the Allied War Effort.

Item 2. Attitude of the Trade Unions toward Anticipated Peace Settlement, for instance, general organization of world peace; Allied occupation of ex-enemy countries; Reparations; Treatment of Germany; Representation of the Trade Unions at the peace conference at the preparatory commissions or conferences for relief, rehabilitation and post-war reconstruction.

Item 3. Basis for a World Trade Union Federation.

Item 4. Immediate Trade Union Demands for the Post-war Period.

Item 5. Problems of Post-war Reconstruction; General principles for the social and economic demands in the national and international fields; the fundamentals of social security and full employment.

★ ★ ★

The work of the Preparatory Committee was confined to the consideration of matters of procedure and did not concern itself with the merits of the questions which will come up for discussion at the February conference. The CIO delegation, however, took occasion to state the position of CIO on the question of a world trade union federation, which will be discussed as Point 3 on the agenda of the World Congress.

In accordance with the stand consistently taken by the CIO and reaffirmed at its Chicago convention in November, the CIO delegates stressed the need of organizing a new world federation of trade unions and proposed that the February conference should direct itself to that end.

They pointed out that no world organization of the free trade unions which is either inclusive or effective exists at the present time and that the need for an organization, which can speak authoritatively for the world labor movement, is immediate and urgent.

Under the rules and constitution of the IFTU, any effort to reconstruct it by securing the affiliation of those trade union centers now excluded would entail prolonged delays and deprive labor of an instrumentality for making its full influence felt in world affairs at the very moment when the creation of such an instrumentality is most important.

★ ★ ★

It is the intention of the CIO delegation to submit to the February Congress a proposal for the immediate organization of a new world trade union federation to which all of the trade-union centers of the freedom-loving nations will be eligible for membership.

I am confident that the World Trade Union Congress will make a significant contribution to the attainment of labor's common objectives by uniting the labor movements of all freedom-loving nations to work together for speedy and uncompromising victory over the enemy; for international cooperation to secure a lasting peace, and for an economy which will assure to all peoples high living standards, full employment and greater security.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 January 15, 1945 No. 8

CIO Shipbuilders Salute The Wounded

MYRNA LOY wearing this dress at "Salute to the Wounded," presented by the CIO Shipbuilding Workers at New York City, caused the boys to stare, even though her own eyes were closed when this shot was taken with two heroes, Marine Cpl. William Sheean, left, and Staff Sgt. Arthur Moore.

← A COUPLE OF PURPLE HEARTS Both Jane Froman and a sailor from one of the military hospitals in the New York area, are recipients of the Purple Heart. Jane was awarded the Purple Heart because she was hurt when her plane crashed off Lisbon while she was touring camps.

LUCKY FELLOW is this hero, Master Sgt. David Statland, pictured with Screen Star Kay Francis at "Salute to the Wounded."

CIO SHIPBUILDERS UNION GIVES $50,000 to the Chaplains' Funds of the five military hospitals in the New York Area before the show "Salute to the Wounded" started. John Green, president of the union, is presenting checks for $10,000 each to two chaplains, Lt. Col. N. M. Reynolds, left, and Capt. T. B. Harp, U. S. Navy.

Halsey on Luzon Thrust Eve Hails U.S. Production

Almost on the eve of the Luzon invasion, the Navy Dept. issued a statement by Admiral William E. Halsey, Jr., Third Fleet commander, hailing the "productive power of America" as aiding the Navy to rout the Jap fleet in the Battle of the Philippine Sea last year.

Presumably this productive power aided in the latest thrust against the Japs. Attempting to break up units of the Third and Seventh Fleet as they advanced to Luzon, the Japs lost 79 planes, a midget submarine and 2 destroyers, according to the Associated Press.

The Navy issued Halsey's statement just three days before American forces landed at Luzon.

"You know the thousands of tons of ammunition, trucks, guns, and supplies needed to keep an army on the offensive," Admiral Halsey's timely statement said. "You cannot but see that more armies will soon be engaged in a similar offensive closer and closer to the heart of the Japanese empire if this stubborn enemy is to be decisively beaten.

"You must know that thousands of ships and thousands of planes must be employed to land and support these armies. If anything, the demand on you for production support will increase —I repeat, increase."

•

The CIO United Auto Workers, heavy producers of equipment used by our fighting forces and those of allies, this week announced that honorary membership will be given to soldiers furloughed by the Army to work in war production plants covered by UAW contracts.

The announcement was made by President R. J. Thomas. Receiving all the privileges of the union and all benefits of the union contract, the soldiers will not be required to pay dues or initiation fees. Each one will be issued a special membership card similar to the one held by UAW members in the service.

Help To Bring Victory
Buy A War Bond Today

$50,000 Raised For Chaplains' Funds By Show, More Coming

The star-riddled "Salute to the Wounded," presented at Madison Square Garden last Tuesday night by the CIO Shipbuilding Workers is being acclaimed one of the finest contributions labor has made to helping fellow Americans injured fighting Nazis and Japs.

The entire proceeds of the show, presented as a tribute to the 200,000 members of the union in the armed forces, will go to the Chaplains' Funds of five military hospitals in the New York area—St. Albans, Mitchel Field, Mason General, Halloran General and U. S. Marine. Boys from all over the country in every service, including the Merchant Marine, will benefit.

Payment of $10,000 to each of the hospitals was made by President John Green of the Shipbuilding Workers before the cheering audience of 18,000. It is expected that the contribution will amount to $75,000, as proceeds from tickets sales were still coming in as the CIO News went to press.

"Please extend my greetings to the wounded veterans who are guests upon the occasion of 'Salute to the Wounded,'" said the telegram from President Roosevelt which one of the galaxy of stars, Myrna Loy, read to the audience.

"I join with your sponsoring committee," the telegram continued, "in honoring the men to whom America and the civilized world is so everlastingly indebted. That debt is gratefully acknowledged by all Americans."

HUGE FLAG RAISED

The show was opened by Don Albert's WHN band which also played for all acts. Miss Lucy Monroe sang "The Star Spangled Banner" as a huge American flag was raised to the roof of the garden.

The audience included 10,000 members of the armed services—many of them Purple Heart wearers—all the guests of the Shipbuilding Workers, and other labor unions and individual contributors.

More than 700 entertainers appeared in the show which lasted five and a half hours—and the most enthusiastic members of the audience were the servicemen and women who stayed until the last number was presented.

Ed Sullivan, chairman of the show committee, was master of ceremonies. Performers included:

Milton Berle, Gae Foster Roxyettes, Kay Francis, Myrna Loy, Marjorie Lawrence, Tommy Dorsey's band, Ralph Edwards and his truth or consequence show; Ethel Merman, Woody Herman's Band, Fred Waring's Glee Club, Louise Rainer, Harvey Stone, Louis Armstrong's Band, Peters Sisters, Bill Robinson, Perry Como, Jerry Lester, Jane Froman, George Olsen, Radio City Music Hall Rockettes, Lionel Hampton's band, Billy Vine and The Latin Quarter Revue, former New York Mayor James J. Walker, who introduced war heroes, Sgt. Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champion; Lorraine Rognan and Lew Parker.

Neither Equ

Proposed 'Equal' Righ Wage-Hour Laws and Ot

A golden apple filled with acid has been dangled for t last 21 years before the eyes of American woman, u der the seemingly harmless advertising slogan of "Equ Rights." Last year both Republican and Democratic n tional conventions urged American women to take a bi and this year there is real danger that Congress will off the apple on a silver platter.

The poisonous fruit consists of a so-called "Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. It is thr sentences long (see text below). Its meaning is contain in this sentence: "Equality of rights under the law sha not be denied or abridged by the U. S. or by any state account of sex."

THE fraudulent base of the "Equal" Rights Amendme was exposed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who sa that the proposal "actually conceals the means of robbi women of many states of the rights and protections th have been won for them."

"It would not secure equality of treatment for wo en, except at the heavy cost of abandoning the great bo of laws that protect women workers from exploitation he declared.

"Laws limiting the hours women may be required work, regulating health and other working conditions, s curing minimum wage rates in traditionally low-paid i

Hidden Jokers—What They Would Do

THE so-called "Equal" Rights Amendment is loaded with more jokers than there are marked cards in a gambling house. One of the most widely circulated phoney reasons in support of the Amendment is that it will be the magic wand that will establish equal pay for women when their work equals men's.

The Amendment simply says that states cannot deny equal rights under the law. It cannot require equal pay for equal work. It is up to the 48 states to pass laws providing for equal pay. So far five have done so—without benefit of an Equal Rights Amendment—and the other 43 can do so too, also without the Amendment.

More important to women workers is the fact that the "Equal" Rights Amendment would wipe out legislation which provides for minimum wages in intrastate industry.

Twenty-six states and the District of Columbia have minimum wage laws for women. Not a single one of these laws covers men too. If the "Equal" Rights Amendment were passed, all these laws would be wiped off the books.

The laws cover mainly the service industries, such as laundries, hotels, restaurants, stores, etc., that have a long history of low-wage exploitation. The need for maintaining wage legislation in these industries is shown by the fact that hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in back pay due women and minors is being collected from employers every year under such laws.

For example, in New York State during 1942 and the first half of 1943 there was collected $224,477 from 7,464 employers which had paid 21,000 workers less than the legal minimum wage. The figures are especially shocking when it is realized that no N. Y. law provides for an hourly minimum over 36.7c.

OTHER laws that would be wiped out, and the number of states that have them on the books, include: Maximum hours—43 states; limitations on night work—19 states; prohibition against work in coal mines—15 states; restrictions on lifting heavy weights—nine states; providing seats—44 states; day of rest—27 states, and rest periods—eight states.

Extensive and careful investigations of the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Dept. of Labor over many years show that these laws have not caused women to lose jobs. On the contrary, the laws have brought material benefits to women in the form of higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions.

Who's Against The Amendment

Practically every responsible women's organization which has the interests of the working members of the sex at heart is flatly opposed to the "Equal" Rights Amendment.

Besides the CIO and AFL, and the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, the following organizations are on record against the amendment, according to the U. S. Secretary of Labor:

National Council of Catholic Women.
American Assn. of University Women.
Natl. Consumers League.
Natl. Women's Trade Union League.
Natl. League of Women Voters.
Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference.
Natl. Council of Jewish Women.
Natl. Board of YWCA.
Girls' Friendly Society.
Natl. Service Star Legions.

If it develops that any of these laws safeguarding women is, in fact, harmful to them, the sensible thing to do is to repeal those laws. It would be the height of folly to not only eliminate all of them but also to forbid passage of any other beneficial legislation which experience shows is needed.

THE Amendment would upset the application of legal measures protecting women as wives and widows. A striking illustration of this is the old-age and survivors' insurance benefits of the Social Security Act. Since no parallel benefits are paid to the husbands or widowers of women who are insured individuals, it would be necessary for Congress to wipe out the benefits to women or to make equal provision for men. Doing the latter would seriously disrupt the financial planning of the government, and if Congress failed to approve such a step, the wives and widows might be left without a cent of protection.

Confusion compounded on confusion would be the lot of women if the "Equal" Rights Amendment should become law. The best legal minds in the U. S. Dept. of Labor are responsible for the statement that "on the date of its ratification and for many years thereafter, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain, without extended litigation, which of a host of laws with respect to property rights, marital obligations, social insurance benefits, etc., now on the statute books, are valid. No one can foretell the construction which the Court will accord to the terms 'equal' and 'right.' What is 'equal' in Mississippi, with respect to a particular subject, may not be considered 'equal' in Vermont; what is a 'right' in California may not be a 'right' under Federal law."

SAMPLE of the confusion that wou be caused was presented in tes mony by Miss Frances Perkins, head the U. S. Dept. of Labor, before Co gress. Miss Perkins said:

"If it is established and accepted a state that it is too dangerous to t life and health of women to work mines or quarries, or to lift and car heavy objects, the command of t Amendment is that women must be pe mitted to hazard such occupation or, the alternative, that no man be pe mitted to work in mines and quarri either.

"The ridiculous alternative, course, will never be adopted—but sta legislation giving women the freedom ruin their health in places unsuitab for their physical structures is not be regarded as an ideal."

MISS PERKINS pointed out th legislation is gradually elimina ing undesirable differences in the trea ment of men and women as the need f such laws become obvious.

It's Simple But Dangerous!

Here's the "Equal" Rights Amen ment, simple and apparently innocuou but loaded with more dynamite than a Army ammunition truck:

"Equality of rights under the la shall not be denied or abridged by t U. S. or by any state on account of se

"Congress and the several stat shall have power within their respecti jurisdictions to enforce this article b appropriate legislation.

"This amendment shall take five years after the date of ratification al Nor Right!

's Amendment Would Wreck er Legislation Protecting Women

dustries and the like, would cease to be effective, if this amendment were to become part of our Constitution.

"In addition, laws and other beneficial provisions such as maternity aid, widows' pensions, aid for dependent children and other social security protective measures that apply 'unequally' to women would also be abolished."

THE disruptive possibilities of the "Equal" Rights Amendment have been recognized by socially conscious women all over the nation, as well as by CIO and AFL. Organizations ranging from the American Assn. of University Women to the Natl. Council of Catholic Women and the Natl. Women's Trade Union League have registered their opposition.

Testifying against the proposed Amendment, Secy. of Labor Frances Perkins said that "its effects upon the institution of the family would be appalling."

"The Amendment," she declared, "might well strike down the right of married women to support from their husbands—a right that we are not prepared to give up so long as the family remains the basic unit of our society. The Amendment, in the name of a spurious 'equality,' would either deprive the wife of the right to demand support from her husband or give the husband an equal right to demand that he be supported by his wife.

"One has only to investigate the pathetic nonsupport cases brought into the domestic relations courts to realize what great injustice to women and what disasters to the family would result if the protective arm of the law were withdrawn."

POINTING to the basic physical differences between men and women and to the need for protective legislation which prevents employers from exploiting women in jobs which are harmful not only to them but to the entire race, Miss Perkins said:

"It is well established that, as a class, women workers are more susceptible to exploitation by unscrupulous employers than are men," Miss Perkins declared. "This is because, typically, they are not the primary family breadwinners and, in order to supplement the family income, will work for a lower wage than men. Because they are frequently casual workers, and as such are not as well organized in unions as men; and because of blind and unreasonable prejudice against women workers.

"Unless, therefore, the exploitation of women workers is controlled by appropriate legislation, many of them will become industrial casualties at an early age, public charges, and unable to fulfill the functions of womanhood. They did before these beneficial laws were passed, and will do so again if the laws are stricken down."

THE real effect of the Amendment would be to add longer hours, smaller pay envelopes and lower standards to the hardships of working women. It would not protect them from exploitation nor would it relieve them of their double duty of home makers and wage earners.

If you haven't already written your Senators and Congressman in opposition to the Amendment, sit down right now and tell them what you think about it!

PROTECTIONS ABOLISHED: If the "Equal Rights Amendment were passed, women like those in the sweatshop, top, would have the right to work for wages just as employers wanted to set them, under conditions as bad as bosses wanted to provide, and for as long as the workers could stand on their feet. Special rest times like those enjoyed by the girls in the center picture could be abolished, and heavy jobs like tapping aluminum furnaces (below) could be thrown open to women if any of them were hard pressed enough for money to want to take them.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

President S. H. Dalrymple, Un. Rubber Workers, advises: B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron (office workers), CIO, 789; no union, 343. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Plant Protection Employes, Akron, Ohio, CIO, 98; no union, 22. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Windsor, Vt., CIO, 395; no union, 150. United States Rubber Co., Woonsocket, R. I., CIO, 494; Independent (ITU), 59.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner, New Jersey, reports: Walloomsac Paper Products plant, Walloomsac, N. Y., CIO, 53; AFL, 12. Rep. Fred Sandner was in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Campaign, reports: At Texas Co., Pipeline Cut Bank Sunburst, Mont., employes voted six to four for CIO.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael, Boston, Mass., reports: Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston, Mass., CIO, 35; no union, 2. Webster Lens Co., Webster, Mass., CIO, 66; no union, 43.CIO Rep. Robert W. Davis handled this election and was in charge of these campaigns.

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig, Philadelphia, reports: Globe Hoist Co., Montgomery County, Pa., USA-CIO, 79; against, 12.

F. J. Michel, CIO Reg. Dir., Wiscon, reports: City Car & Yellow Cab, LaCrosse, Wisc., CIO, 16; no union, 3.

Un. Retail, Wholesale & Department Store employes won an NLRB election at Rumford Baking Co., Boston, Mass., by a vote of 66 for CIO and 4 for no union. CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael reports this victory.

The Railroad Drive is rolling on among the railroad shop crafts on the PRR under the directorship of Brother A. B. Martin. Cards are being presented to the National Mediation Board and an election has been ordered on the PL & E in Pittsburgh and CIO's name is also to go on the ballot. Every indication for a victory there.

Congressman Rankin from Mississippi, representing reactionary forces, succeeded in getting through endorsement of the Congress for the continuation of the Dies Committee and efforts are being made to load it down with anti-labor Congressmen for the purpose of harassing labor throughout the nation.

Delegates from the CIO, comprising the president, secretary-treasurer and nine vice presidents are preparing for the trip to the International Labor Conference to be held in London on February 7th. The writer is one of the delegates and out of this conference can come, if there is a will to do it, a real foundation for the establishment of human rights everywhere and for permanent peace. Labor can be the mightiest force in supporting the cause of international cooperation and human brotherhood.

The AFL has refused to participate in this world conference, taking the ridiculous attitude that they will not meet with the Russians, who are our Allies and who are fighting the Nazis along with our armed forces and other Allies. It is all right to fight together but not to work together, so it seems according to their attitude, and this at a time when the future of the world is in the making!

Western Union Vote To Be Counted Jan. 23

Washington, Jan. 13—Results of the elections conducted among 60,000 employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co. Jan. 2-9 will not be known until the last week in January, the Natl. Labor Relations Board announced this week.

The ballots will be opened and counted in the presence of all parties, in Washington, beginning Jan. 23, the board stated. Elections were conducted in 77 cities. At the close of each poll the boxes in which the individual voters placed their ballots were sealed and will not be opened until Jan. 23, when the counting starts.

In addition to the elections held at appointed polling places, a number of ballots are being sent in by mail. These are not due in Washington until Jan. 22. They will also be opened Jan. 23 and counted along with the ballots cast at the election polls.

The last three of the elections were held Jan. 9 in Providence, R. I., St. Louis, Mo., and Oakland, Calif. On Jan. 8, elections were held in five cities—New York, Milwaukee, Chicago, Peoria, Ill., and Montgomery, Ala.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER TEAM: Three mother-and- daughter teams who have seen husbands and sons off to war hit the waterfront lines every day at 7 a. m. at the Todd shipyards in Brooklyn, where the Intl. Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, has a contract. They are (l. to r.) Mrs. Anna Masucci and daughter Lee, Mrs. Louise Mesagno and daughter Mrs. Jenny Cirella, Mildred Harrington and her mother, Mrs. Martin McKie. (Federated Pictures)

Two CIO Women To Make Goodwill Tour To England

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—The two CIO women chosen to go with the group of four women trade unionists who will take off shortly for a goodwill exchange trip to England are mighty pleased about it. They were here this week for a fast-moving round of conferences, dinners, picture taking, interviews, luncheons and speech-making that would have worn them to a frazzle if they hadn't been held up by their good spirits and excitement.

TALKING IT OVER: CIO Secy.-Treas. James Carey discusses the trip these two CIO women are going to make to England. Anne Murkovich (left) is an organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Mrs. Grace Blackett is intl. representative for the United Auto Workers.

CIO members of the delegation are Mrs. Grace Blackett, international representative of the United Automobile Workers, and Miss Anne Murkovich, organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, an affiliate of the Textile Workers Union.

AFL delegates are Mrs. Maida Springer, Brooklyn, N. Y., Negro member of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, and Mrs. Julia Parker from Boston, member of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The trip was arranged jointly by the Office of War Information and the Office of Labor Production of the War Production Board, at the invitation of the British Ministry of Information, and is a feminine counterpart of an earlier trip made by four union men some months ago. When the women return, four British union women will come with them as members of an exchange delegation.

Both Mrs. Blackett and Miss Murkovich have long been active in the labor movement and have important union jobs which will enable them to make good use of the information and impressions they gather on the trip.

Anne Murkovich's dark eyes shine when she tells about her work with the hosiery union in the Reading, Pa., hosiery area. Her life has been centered in the hosiery industry since she went to work at the Phoenix Hosiery mill in Milwaukee on her first job. She stayed there until 1938 when she was appointed organizer for the Hosiery Workers union. She has been on the job ever since. There's very little she doesn't know about her industry.

Born in Stajnica, Jugoslavia, Miss Murkovich came to this country in 1912 as a small child and attended school in Jessville, Mich., and Chisholm, Minn. She has been living in Reading, Pa., since 1938.

In telling of her union activity, Grace Blackett puts first the fact that she is the first woman international representative to be appointed by the United Automobile Workers. She is assigned to the UAW staff in Chicago.

As a member of UAW Local 50 at the Ford Willow Run plant Mrs. Blackett worked for more than two years as an aircraft parts assembler until she was granted leave of absence at the request of the UAW to work on union problems affecting women. At a conference held in Detroit in December, she was elected chairman of the Natl. UAW-CIO Women's Committee.

Her husband, Cpl. Laurence F. Blackett, is in service overseas. Her father is chief steward for Packard UAW Local 190. Mrs. Blackett started her union activity as a member of the Women's Auxiliary of Local 190 when it was first organized.

Southern Mills Owners Accused of Covering Up

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—Southern mill owners are trying to stir up political prejudice against the Natl. War Labor Board to cover their own failure to pay decent wages in the cotton textile industry, Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America charged here this week.

Replying to a telegram sent to all Southern members of Congress by W. H. Hightower, of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Assn., Rieve accused the mill owners of making use of "utterly misleading propaganda."

"This group of employers is telling the Southern Congressional bloc that the wage differential between the North and South is being wiped out," he stated. "Neither the union nor the employers know just what the proposed NLRB order in the cotton textile case will contain, but both sides can be certain that the elimination of the wage differential, which the union has always fought for, is not in the picture at this time.

"The basic demand of the Textile Workers Union in this case is for a minimum wage of 60 cents an hour and a wage increase of not less than 10 cents an hour for all workers. There is every indication that the NLRB will order a minimum wage of 55 cents an hour and an across-the-board pay raise of 5 cents per hour to all Southern cotton textile workers.

"How can any American citizen oppose a minimum wage of 55 cents an hour, especially in view of the uncontroverted evidence presented by the union to the NLRB proving that a Southern worker would need at least 72 cents an hour to maintain a standard of living of the most meager character?"

Drive On In Pullman Repair Shop

Chicago, Jan. 13—A drive to organize the several thousand Pullman repair shop workers in plants located at Chicago, Buffalo, Wilmington, St. Louis, Atlanta and Richmond, Calif., was announced this week by the CIO United Transport Service Employes of America.

Edward K. Welsh, the union's director of organization, will be in charge of the drive at the six Pullman repair shops among the company's carmen, laborers, electricians, sheetmetal workers, blacksmiths and machinists.

Tenn. CIO Goes After Legislators

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 13—Tennessee CIO unions will ask the legislators convening in Nashville to ratify the long-pending child labor amendment, enact a state wage-hour law and increase and extend unemployment compensation, reports Pres. W. A. Copeland of the Tennessee CIO Council.

Memphis legislators, comprising the key delegation in the general assembly, will be presented with this 4-point legislative program before the opening of the session, he said.

Ben Yomen, who draws the Congressmen Dripp cartoon, is joining the staff of the CIO United Auto Workers' Educatiion Dept. in Detroit, announces Federated Press.

Classes for NMU Boatmen

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 13—An education class for river boatmen to start here Jan. 15 has been announced by the Natl. Maritime Union. Subjects include the Job of the Boat Delegate, What Your Contract Means, How to Run Meetings, History of the NMU on the Rivers and Education and Political Action on Boats.

Continental Red Seal Engines

CONTINENTAL MOTORS · Powers the Nation · AMERICA'S STANDARD

AVIATION

AUTOMOTIVE

TANKS

WATER BUFFALOS

POWER TO WIN

Skilled experience in Research, Design, Engineering Development, Facilities, Correct Tooling, Coordinated Planning and Manufacturing are proportionately responsible for the splendid reputation of Continental Red Seal Engines.

This "Know How" plus many Continental features including individual porting, roto valves and Con-Tem Cooling Systems are responsible for such dependable, economical power, that mighty Red Seal Power — the Power to Win.

Our fighting men will long remember how they could always depend on Continental Red Seal Engines.

Your Dollars are Power, Too! Buy War Bonds and Keep Them!

INDUSTRIAL TRACTORS

FARM TRACTORS

Continental Motors Corporation
MUSKEGON, MICHIGAN

OIL FIELD

TRUCKS

ARMY E NAVY

Awarded to the Detroit and Muskegon Plants of Continental Motors Corporation for High Achievement

ROTARY SNOW PLOWS

ROAD BUILDING

FIGHTING PLANES

BATTERY CHARGER

MINING & TIMBERING

BUSES

PORTABLE POWER TOOLS

AIR CONDITIONING

HOISTING

MARINE

Drawn by MORT MESKIN

THE ADVENTURES OF JIM BARRY — TROUBLE SHOOTER

Story by JOSEPH GREENE and JERRY COLE

COPYRIGHT NATIONAL CIO NEWS

Can Kill and Cure

Putting Science To Work For Peace

A program for putting American science to work for the peace as fully as it has worked for the war has just been published in pamphlet form by the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, under the title of "The Future of American Science."

It was written by Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, Geology Professor at Harvard University; Dr. Harry Grundfest, assistant in physiology at the Rockfeller Institute (now on leave with the War Department); and Dr. Melber Phillips, Assistant Professor of Physics at Brooklyn College.

Taking as its point of departure four questions raised by President Roosevelt in a recent letter to Dr. Vannevar Bush, head of the Office of Scientific Research & Development, on how new wartime scientific advances can be adapted to peacetime needs, the pamphlet calls for national planning to insure the expansion of scientific research to meet the needs of an expanding economy and to promote the health and well-being of the American people.

"It is a tragic fact that hitherto full use has been made of science only during war, when its work must be largely destructive," states the pamphlet. "Our country must be resolved to make equal use of science's constructive possibilities for human advancement."

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

The three scientists propose that the scientific knowledge and data acquired during the program of war research be gathered together and coordinated for the postwar period "through special committees appointed by the Natl. Research Council, supervised by the OSRD and by representatives of Government, particularly of the Armed Forces and of the Depts. of Commerce, Agriculture and Labor."

In the field of medicine, the scientists propose the development of a program for "applying the results of medical research to improving the national level of health." They recommend that the Committee for Medical Research immediately set up a committee of representatives from the fields of medical research and medicine to work with legislators in helping formulate a comprehensive program of medical care for the nation.

The many new research facilities developed during the war, they say, "should be maintained after the war as part of an enlarged program of research in public health and industrial medicine.

POSTWAR CHANGES

"For example, the various laboratories now concerned with aeromedical work might continue after the war as centers for research in industrial medicine and physiology. Likewise, the medical research center of the Chemical Warfare Service could become a center of research in the chemical war against disease and against plant and animal parasites."

In conclusion the pamphlet stressed the importance of international scientific cooperation through the establishment of an international scientific organization as part of the United Nations Organization, and points to the need for a national scientific survey.

"Such a survey is made as a matter of course," the pamphlet says, "by the scientists of the Soviet Union to help them plan their scientific programs. The scientists of Great Britain, the Parliamentary and Science Committee and the industrialist of the Federation of British Industries, are now engaged in examining the state of British science.

"For our country, the survey proposed here would have the inestimable advantage of presenting to our scientists and to our citizens' future goals for scientific achievement in the interest of the national welfare."

The Future of American Science; published by the United Office & Professional Workers, 1860 Broadway, New York 23, N. Y.

Saving Lives of Mothers, Children, Is Survey's Aim

Proper medical facilities for all mothers and children in America is the purpose of a proposed nation-wide survey endorsed by the advisory committee of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Dept.

The bureau's figures show that 200,000 babies are born each year in the United States without a physician in attendance and that half of the mothers who died in childbirth could be saved if they had medical care.

However, the survey would not confine itself to maternity care, but it is proposed to develop for each State such figures as distribution of children in urban and rural areas; status of public health and pediatric nursing; status of free social services, and of school health services.

A plan evolved from the survey would likely become part of the over-all health center program recommended by the Pepper subcommittee on wartime health and education. (See Page 9, National CIO News, January 8.)

The survey will be made by the American Academy of Pediatrics in cooperation with the bureau and the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Martha Eliot, associate chief of the bureau, announced that the advisory committee had endorsed the survey.

The committee consists of 70 leading physicians and professional workers with the following chairmen: Dr. Nicholson J. Eastman, professor of obstetrics at the School of Medicine, John Hopkins Univ., and Dr. Henry F. Helmholtz, chief of the pediatric dept. of Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

Leaves CIO for Wacs

Elizabeth Josephine Benedict, former employe at CIO headquarters, has begun training as a Wac. One of her sisters, Sgt. Myrtle Marie Benedict, is on duty with the Wacs in France. They are daughters of Mrs. George H. Benedict, Washington, D. C.

British Trade Unions —How They Operate

By GLADYS CHASINS

(As background for the world labor conference, which opens in London on Feb. 6, Allied Labor News is preparing a series of articles on the labor movements of the United Nations, of which this is the first. Articles on labor in Latin America and the USSR will follow next week.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (ALN)—During the five years of the war, the British Trades Union Congress has increased its membership by 50 per cent until it now represents close to 7,000,000 workers.

While its main attention has been centered on the war, through participation in joint production committees and the entrance of its members into leading positions in the wartime coalition government, the TUC has laid careful plans for the post-war period—two goals being the election of a Labor government and the introduction of public ownership and control of basic industries.

The TUC has worked out a detailed program for the introduction of a controlled economic system, which it terms "a modern necessity." The program, which deals thoroughly with all phases of the operation of publicly-owned plants, regards the immediate public ownership of the fuel, power and transport industries after the war as "essential for effective planning nationally."

It urges "some measure of direct public regulation" over a long list of major industries, including automobile, aircraft, shipbuilding, cotton, shoe, clothing, rubber and electrical appliances.

It further calls for government control of land and other natural resources of the supply and availability of cash, credit and money; the rate of gross investment and the supply of capital; the location of industry and general physical planning; foreign trade and foreign lending and investment.

The TUC has taken firm stands on the questions of housing, health, social security, and has set as its goal a general standard of a 40-hour week and a guaranteed annual wage. Its desire to work closely with government and management wherever possible to secure these aims was voiced recently by TUC general secretary Sir Walter Citrine, who stated that "our policy is toward more direction, cooperation and discussion with employers and away from the primitive method of the strike."

Closely related to these goals is the effort to secure a victory for the Labor party in the next general election, which Prime Minister Churchill has announced will be held as soon as possible after the defeat of Germany. Trade union leaders have been among the most vociferous supporters of a united electoral slate of all the progressive parties, many trade unionists having expressed the fear that the running of separate candidates might lead to another victory for the Conservative party because of a split labor vote.

Full support of the principles of the Atlantic Charter and Teheran accord is the basis of the TUC's international program, which charges that the German people cannot be absolved from responsibility for war crimes, urges international cooperation to develop backward areas of the world and expresses strong condemnation of international cartels.

In its relations with the international labor movement, the TUC is united with the Soviet trade unions in the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee, formed in September, 1941, and has recently resolved to revive the Anglo-French Trade Union Committee. TUC general secretary Sir Walter Citrine is president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, but large sections of British labor have indicated their support for a new organization of world labor rather than a revision of the IFTU constitution to permit entry of the CIO and Soviet trade unions.

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

One of the most shocking facts about the health of our children that was presented to the Senate Sub-Committee on Wartime Health and Education is that almost 1,000,000 American children under 21 were born with syphilis.

This points up to the great importance of the campaign which has been undertaken by many of our leading women's organizations in America to educate their members to the need for action in combatting venereal disease. They are circulating through their organizations a new pamphlet called "Meet Your Enemy" which deals with this problem.

It was prepared by the Federal Security Agency with the assistance and advice of the National Women's Advisory Committee on Social Protection.

The pamphlet presents an excellent summary of the whole problem of elimination of venereal disease. It gives the facts which we must face—as, for instance, that one in every 42 Americans had syphilis in 1941. It points out that we must cut loose from the "hush-hush" attitudes which have made this part of the fight for better national health so difficult. And it outlines a program of community action which can be undertaken by women's organizations.

National Social Hygiene Day, February 7, 1945, will provide an opportunity for building interest in community action. This day is sponsored each year by the American Social Hygiene Association, a voluntary health organization allied with official federal and military agencies in fighting the threat of venereal disease to wartime fighting and working efficiency.

Women's organizations should urge their members to participate in the meetings, forums, conferences and radio programs which will be put on that day in thousands of American communities. Local health departments, Social Hygiene Societies and Councils of Social Agencies can supply information on community plans. These departments and agencies can also supply assistance if members are interested in forming classes dealing with sex and family relations.

That social hygiene problems are a matter of vital concern to the family is becoming more widely recognized. Most States have laws requiring blood tests for men and women contemplating marriage, and laws requiring blood tests for expectant mothers. These premarital and prenatal laws are designed to guard the family health and to protect the unborn against syphilis.

The job of controlling and preventing venereal disease requires an all-out attack. In the words of the American Social Hygiene Association, "a complete social hygiene program — which can stamp out VD in our time—calls for the mobilization of all community forces — medical, public health, law enforcement, business, labor, moral, the church, the school and the home."

And ASHA adds that "in our democracy, a community can have no better program for the control of the venereal diseases, the repression of prostitution, the educating of young people to live full and useful lives than its citizens ask for and will support."

For copies of "Meet Your Enemy" write to the Social Protection Division, Federal Security Agency, Washington 25, D. C.

L. J. IMBER
COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE
METAL LITHOGRAPHED
BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS
BRUnswick 7815

Congress of Industrial Organizations

718 Jackson Place, N. W. • Washington 6, D. C.

Office of
THE PRESIDENT

January 12, 1945

EXECUTIVE 5581

Mr. R. J. Thomas, President, UAW-CIO
411 W. Milwaukee
Detroit, Michigan

Dear Sir and Brother:

This is directed through you to the membership of the largest union in the world.

Your union is about to vote on upholding its pledge not to strike. It is a sacred pledge, made to 11 million soldiers, sailors, and marines who are giving their lives in a killing struggle. Their minds are weary and their bodies are exhausted.

Yet through the cloud of suffering and death that overshadows the battlefronts, there shines a beam of confidence -- confidence that the folks back home will not let their fighting men down. The staggering record of continuous production piled up by working people is mighty evidence that they are more than fair weather patriots.

These are critical days. Mighty offensives are grinding forward. The work and sweat and production of the past are the tanks, planes and guns expended now against the enemy. The struggle is long and costly. Yet our fighting men are determined to win.

To the millions of men in uniform sweating out their lives for victory, it is entirely logical that the labor movement should pass resolutions not to strike and should maintain them inviolate. It would be entirely illogical to expect our fighting men to understand or to accept any other action.

It takes time to settle grievances -- aginst the Axis, and against some American employers. Our fighting men expect to settle the former grievances themselves with force. They expect us back home to settle the latter grievances within a peaceful pattern of labor relations that guarantees uninterrupted war production. For if delay on the home front is hard to take, delay on the battlefront means loss of life, and often is the difference between defeat and victory.

Our pledge not to strike is as sacred as our fighters' pledge to give their lives, if necessary, to defeat the enemy. It would be just as foolish to say that either fighters or workers could revoke their pledges and still give every ounce of energy toward victory. You don't win battles with retreats -- even if they are advertised as "psychological only"

Despite some setbacks, this has been a year of major progress on the military fronts. It has also been a year of progress on the home front. CIO added 669,000 new members, many of them in your Union. CIO helped re-elect President Roosevelt and elect a more progressive Congress. CIO unions, maintaining their no-strike commitments, have scored decisive gains for millions of workers, with millions of dollars in benefits yet to come as the National War Labor Board makes retroactive pay decisions.

With more than one million members, the UAW-CIO is the strongest union in America. Its continued growth, its very existence, depend on the record it builds during this war. I urge you to keep that record clean in the minds of millions of servicemen by voting to retain your pledge not to strike.

Fraternally,

Philip Murray

Philip Murray
President

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 4 82 January 22, 1945

CIO Says

Manpower Muddle Needs Cooperation, Not Compulsion

(See Pages 3, 6 & 9)

Thomas Will Head U. S. Delegates to London Parley

President Philip Murray announced this week that he will not be able to head the CIO delegation to the London world labor meeting Feb. 6. Negotiations on the steel wage case will force him to remain in this country, he said.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO and a delegate to the preliminary meeting last December, will head the CIO group, Murray said. Sidney Hillman will also be a delegate, taking the place of Frank Rosenblum, vice-president of the Clothing Workers, who was designated earlier.

CIO will leave a two-man continuations committee behind in London, Murray said, to work out details on the new world labor federation expected to come from the meeting. These two men will be Michael Ross, of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and Martin C. Kyne, vice-president, Retail & Wholesale Employes.

Texas Bugle Boy Apes Nazis, Leads Campaign to Outlaw Unions

Tells How 'Christian' American Gang Does Its Dirty Work

HOUSTON, Tex.—Christian American bugle boy Vance Muse will swear by the Holy Bible and the W. Lee O'Daniel News that he's "a friend of labor." An angelic light plays over his big beefy face as he proclaims before God Almighty and the ghost of Thomas Jefferson that he believes in "the right of workers to organize, strike, and bargain collectively."

His "love for the working men" is the reason that his outfit is sponsoring measures in 19 state legislatures, now in session, to outlaw the union shop and virtually to outlaw the labor movement. Eleven states—Texas, Arkansas, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Colorado, Kansas, South Dakota, Minnesota, Idaho, and Wisconsin have already passed legislation "regulating" labor as a result of blitzkrieg propaganda campaigns staged by the Christian Americans and their jumping jacks in public office.

"We just want to protect the working man in his God-given right of earning his living by the sweat of his brow without paying tribute to the labor racketeers," Muse said in his office in the Kirby Building here.

It was the first interview ever given a labor paper by this six-foot-four Goliath who is making all his rival fascist fuehrers of Dixie look like minnows trying to run interference for a whale.

"We can protect the working man by putting the right to work amendment, just incorporated into the Arkansas and Florida constitutions, in the federal constitution, " he continued. "We are asking the legislatures of the different states to petition Congress to submit this amendment for ratification. Submission is mandatory if the legislatures of 32 states ask for it."

Muse reached on his desk, picked up a copy of The CIO News, and threw it in the wastebasket. His heavy hand fiddled with some papers on his desk. Then he read off the list of states in which the Christian American henchmen will introduce their pet measure — sponsored in Washington as a proposed constitutional amendment by Texas Senator "Pappy" O'Daniel—during the current sessions of state legislatures.

These states—all of them predominantly agricultural areas or sections where labor could be stronger—are:

Oregon, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Minnesota, Iowa, Arkansas, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia, Maryland, Texas ("we'll guarantee this one," Muse boasted) Tennessee and Georgia.

State legislation muzzling labor is usually presented by people close to the Christian Americans whenever the "petition" to Congress is introduced in a state legislature. Even before the Christian Americans launched their present campaign to put "the right to work" amendment into the federal constitution, they had secured the enactment of their peculiar type of Nazi legislation in the eleven states mentioned.

The Christian Americans apparently have learned a lesson from their recent trouncing by the voters of California. Hereafter, their policy toward the big industrial states will be one of "encirclement." They know that they will get no hearing in the shops and the factories of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Ohio but they hope to put across their "message" in the RFD boxes of the grassroots sections.

RURAL PRESSURE

Eventually, they hope that pressure from the rural and small town states will compel Congress to submit the amendmemnt and that enough of these states will ratify it to make it a part of the federal constitution.

Muse refused to give the names of his financial contributors as he refused three times to give them to Congressional committees which have subpeonaed him. However, the Southern Patriot, official organ of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in Nashville, Tenn., says in a special issue exposing the Christian Americans that:

"From time to time, he (Muse) has received financial contributions from such big Northern industrialists as the du Ponts, Armours, Wideners, Sam Insull, Stone and Webster, John J. Raskob, Howard C. Hopson of Associated Gas and Electric, E. W. Mudge of Wierton Steel, Ogden Mills, Alfred P. Sloan, and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. among others."

Muse's original "angel" was John Henry Kirby, millionarie Texas lumber man, who employed the big fellow as his publicity man. Muse ran the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution for Kirby and helped ex-Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia stage the infamous "grass-roots" anti-Roosevelt "Democratic convention" at Macon, Georgia in 1936.

Since Kirby's death, Muse's main financial supporter in the South seems to be Maco Stewart, Galveston millionaire and foaming-at-the-mouth Roosevelt hater, who sits on the Texas state board of education. Chairman of the Christian American outfit is Lewis Valentine Ulrey, Indiana ex-state senator, advocate of the 12-hour day, and geologist for Stewart's oil company since his removal to Texas.

'CHRISTIAN' AMERICANS' MUSE

CIO News' Latest Comic—See Page 11

CIO Pushes 1¾ Million Yearly Housing Plan

A program calling for 6½ million jobs in the building construction industry, for the erection of 1¾ million homes a year, and for the creation of a Federal Dept. of Housing & Community Development was urged this week by R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee.

Thomas, who is president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, made his proposals before the Special Committee on Postwar Economic Policy of the U. S. Senate, and in a speech before the Natl. Assn. of Home Building Builders in Chicago.

Thomas' program pointed to the need of public planning if the construction industry is to employ 6½ million workers—about 2 million more than had jobs in 1940—and if the 1¾ million yearly housing goal is to be reached by builders who never before have topepd the million mark.

PLANNED PROGRAM

"Our analysis of the over-all problem indicates that the one major field for employment expansion lies in that of replacing the economically and socially obsolete structures of this country," Thomas declared.

"We believe that ultimately, as a nation, we will not be engaged upon just a program of home building, but rather upon a planned program of rebuilding our cities, towns and other living facilities. It is from this consideration that we believe that a full-time employment of 2¼ million workers in the home building industry and an annual production of 1¾ million homes are conservative goals."

Thomas warned that the building industry, through efficient mass production methods, must cut the cost of housing if the suggested program is to be successful. He said that up to now most new rental and sales housing has been produced to meet the needs of the upper 21 per cent of the population paying more than $40 a month in rent or its equivalent.

"A little over half of all American families in 1942 had annual incomes of less than $2,000," Thomas pointed out. "If we are to solve the market phase of our housing problem we must begin to think and act in terms of a housing program that will provide decent, safe, new living accommodations for slightly over half of our Americans with incomes not over $2,000 a year.

"In no other way can high volume production and high employment in the home building industry be reached and sustained."

Thomas pointed out that after the war it will be unlikely that all family income will permit the purchase or rental of adequate housing, and said that where such facilities cannot be provided at a profit by private enterprise, government should be called on to furnish subsidized public housing.

Thomas also urged:

1. An addition to the U. S. Housing Act which would prohibit government aid to housing developments which practice racial or other forms of discrimination.

2. Purchase preference to occupants of permanent war housing when the government puts it up for sale, and immediate removal, after the need for it exists, of temporary war housing, unless housing shortages make this inadvisable.

3. Change in the GI Bill of Rights fixing a 10-year period instead of two years in which a veteran may take advantage of the bill to help in buying or building a home.

WORK TO DO: Sample of slums that needed to be cleared and replaced with healthful housing is this back alley row of houses in Chattanooga, Tenn., featuring unsanitary outside toilets—one for each two-family house—and outside water faucets and open drains.

Postwar Pork Chops Need Labor, Industry Govt. Cooks—Murray

A warning that labor and industry must work with government to help guarantee postwar jobs was sounded this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a speech at New York City before the Natl. Industrial Conference Board.

Declaring that servicemen and war workers who have experienced a state of full production and full employment would not accept a return to the jobless 30's, Murray pointed out:

"To those who say that five to 10 million unemployed would be a good thing, I say: 'Wake up!' Because once you open the sluice gates of unemployment, the deflationary flood will be uncontrollable. How will you care for the unemployed and pay an annual six billion dollar carrying charge on the national debt with mass unemployment and the accompanying low level of national income?

"Clearly America's future does not lie along the dark, dismal road of 'a manageable level of unemployment,' as mass unemployment, like a rampaging flood, cannot be controlled. It will run its course, and that course may well be the destruction of America's free institutions."

Murray called for a guaranteed annual wage for basic industries as a partial solution to the employment problem. He stressed the need for wage increases, not only from a current viewpoint but from the standpoint of postwar prosperity.

"It is commonly believed," he said, "that postwar prosperity will be built upon the accumulated savings of the American people. But the facts are to the contrary. OPA studies show that for 1942, 66 per cent of the spending units—families and single consumers—received $2,500 or less in annual income, and they have only 11.6 per cent of the total savings."

Murray said that "free enterprise" alone is not capable of guaranteeing postwar employment.

"It is not even organized to handle the war program alone," he declared. "It needed a lot of help and guarantees from government, and it needed the cooperation of labor. So, too, in postwar: 'free enterprise,' unless similarly aided, is going to doom America to chronic mass unemployment."

Close's Phoney 'Facts' Force Mutual to Grant ACA Retraction Time

A precedent in radio was set last week when the CIO American Communications Association obtained coast-to-coast network time free over Mutual's chain to present a true picture of its activities, to correct false and misleading statements made about the union by one of Mutual's most vicious anti-labor commentators, Upton Close.

In a nationwide broadcast on December 31 Close, referring to the elections being held among Western Union employes, indulged in the usual red-baiting, maligning the leadership of the ACA and urging employes to vote for the AFL. On January 7, in spite of protests, Close again talked about the elections, this time saying that 85 percent of the employes had already voted for AFL. He urged all the rest to join the bandwagon. He again maligned the ACA.

Acting upon ACA's complaint, the NLRB in Washington issued a press release pointing out that any statement by anybody who claimed to know the results of the Western Union balloting was false adding that no one would know the results of the official count until after January 23.

As a result of ACA complaint, the Federal Communication Commission asked Mutual for copies of Upton Close's script. At ten p. m. the same day Mutual put on the air during a regular news period a correction of Upton Close's statements in which the NLRB release was quoted in full.

As a result of ACA objections, Mutual put out a correction of the Close broadcast, during a regular news period. ACA, however, felt that the correction was insufficient, and obtained a five-minute period on a coast-to--coast hookup to refute Close's charges.

Cooperation Sparks CIO State Plans

Cooperation with other progressive groups is the keynote of CIO state legislative programs, according to the January issue of the CIO Economic Outlook.

The program for the States includes:

Broadening of the unemployment compensation laws to cover more people, efficient employment service under the Federal government, public works program during the reconversion period, more schools, better pay for teachers and improved child labor standards.

Qualification of the states for federal grants and loans for slum clearance and housing; improved workmen's compensation laws; safety standards laws with teeth in them; minimum wage laws for all workers, including agricultural and domestic; elimination of the polltax, educational requirements and strict residence qualifications for voting; and fair employment practices laws.

530,000 Are Aided

About 530,000 unemployed workers collected unemployment benefits during 1944, the Social Security Board announced this week.

Ask Clear Road For Bridges' Citizenship

The California CIO Council executive board, in joint session this weekend with the CIO state Political Action Committee, today wired President Roosevelt and Attorney-General Francis Biddle to dismiss all charges against California CIO Director Harry Bridges and thus clear the way for Bridges to "become a citizen of the country he has served so loyally."

The CIO characterized the order to deport Bridges as "as blow at all the forces of unity" which it said, would become a "burden on the conscience of the American people."

Fur Workers Win New Pact

The Furriers Joint Council of N. Y. representing all fur manufacturing workers in that city this week announced the signing of a two-year agreement with the Greater N. Y. Retail Furriers Assn.

The association, which represents 250 fur manufacturing retail firms, accepted a Natl. War Labor Board decision which calls for arbitration of discharges alleged to be without cause; 10 months' equal division of work, one week's paid vacation annually after at least one season's employment, retroactive to 1944, and other benefits.

CIO Radio Shows Draw Praise from 'Variety'

CIO's two new national radio shows got nearly a column of praise in the Jan. 10 issue of "Variety," show business magazine, which listed CIO's "Jobs for Tomorrow" series over CBS as "by far the most effective in starting the big educational job that organized labor is attempting."

"The launching of the labor programs by CBS, NBC and the Blue over the past weekend," commented "Variety", "represents a far cry from the days not so long ago when the socially-minded guys who recognized the necessity of labor getting a hearing were obliged to knock at the doors of broadcasters and plead for a break."

"Variety" praised CIO's Blue network program too, but said the AFL's show over NBC was "too general, tried to include too many statistics and . . . failed to hold sustained listener interest."

The next CBS "Jobs for Tomorrow" show will be heard at 3:45 p. m. Saturday, Jan. 27, featuring a major industry that CIO has organized.

The Blue network show will feature a discussion of how the postwar export trade will affect the program for 60 million jobs. Time: 6:45 p. m. Saturday, Jan. 27.

Tune in to your local CBS and Blue stations. If they're not carrying the broadcasts,please report to the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Hails Italians

Confidence that workers in northern Italy will make a substantial contribution to their nation's fight for liberation from the Nazi yoke was expressed this week by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey in an OWI shortwave broadcast beamed at Italy.

"A wave of new strikes has broken out in the Piedmont and Lombardy areas," Carey said. "According to Swiss dispatches, the German garrison in Turin has had to be reinforced and hundreds of workers have been arrested.

Congress and US

Senate Committee Lineup Improves

Much of the strategic work in this new Congress, as in all Congresses, will be done in House and Senate committees. Before a bill actually reaches the floor, it has to go through various committee stages, depending on the nature of the bill and on the plans its sponsors have for it.

Here the bill gets its first public discussion. Witnesses are heard for and against, and the committee members, in theory basing their decision on the testimony, can move the measure through quickly, amend it, block it, or delay it indefinitely. The Wage-Hour law, for example, was held in the Rules Committee for two years, because the committee majority was anti-labor.

Committee appointments are made at the beginning of each Congress by the dominant parties. People who follow Congress watch them closely, to see how the wind will blow on the next two years of legislation.

A number of appointments have already been announced, with more to come. They give a pretty good clue as to what we can expect on legislation during the next two years.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which handles Price Control and other important issues, has been strengthened by addition of Sen. Glenn Taylor (D., Idaho), a new member supported by CIO. Sen. Clark, an anti-New Deal Democrat, was defeated by Taylor and so loses his place. Sens. Maybank (D., S. C.), and McClellan (D., Miss.), have been removed. Both fought price control last year.

The Senate Education and Labor Committee has gained by appointment of Sen. Fulbright (D., Ark.), and by removal of Sen. Eastland (D., Miss.). Finance, which deals with tax measures, remains about the same, with George (D., Ga.), still chairman.

Most significant changes occured in the Democratic appointment to Foreign Relations, with the defeat of three leading isolationists—Reynolds (N. C.) Gillette (Ia.), and Champ Clark (Mo.), among the Democrats and two—Nye (N. D.), and Davis (Pa.), from the Republicans. The GOP, however, put three isolationists in their places, Austin (Vt.), Bridges (N. H.), and Wiley (Wis.).

Military Affairs profits by the replacement of Reynolds (D., N. C.), as chairman with Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), and with the addition of Wagner (D., N. Y.), and Stewart (D., Tenn.). GOP Sen. Holman, defeated by Wayne Morse (R.) in Oregon is gone, which helps.

The final important change occurred in the Privileges and Election Committee, which lost Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith (D., S. C.), who was defeated. Sen. Green (D., R. I.), remains as chairman, and while not the strongest chairman in the world, is still fairly good.

This is the Senate lineup. Next week, this column will list and discuss changes in the House. Keep the list—you'll find it helpful in taking action on bills in the decisive period before they reach the floor.

CIO on Manpower

Cooperation Needed, Not Compulsion

(See Text—Page 9)

CIO's alternative to the May-Bailey labor draft bill (HR 1119) is based on an immediate conference of labor, industry and government to get at the facts of production shortages, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told the House Military Affairs Committee in testimony this week at Washington.

"We cannot wait to get improvements," he said. "We need them now, and to introduce a system of compulsion will create general confusion and delay, and reduce rather than increase our productivity."

Murray's testimony came after two CIO meetings—one of CIO's executive officers and the other a production conference of field delegates—worked out a similar program involving full use of present manpower and facilities rather than depending on legislation.

As Murray pointed out to the committee, "the problem we propose to lick is a series of local problems, and can only be licked locally. We are today abreast of or ahead of most war production schedules. Where we are not, it is due to step-ups in a few lines of war products, or to errors in scheduling by procurement agencies. We must correct and overcome these situations by joint cooperation between labor, industry and the war agencies."

WHAT TO DO

The meeting that Murray and the CIO officers propose would be called by James F. Byrnes, head of the Office of War Production, and would discuss and work out solutions for these problems:

1. Find out the plants and areas where production is short, and make sure that all available labor, plant and materials are being fully used.

2. End all unnecessary and luxury production now, and not piecemeal but in one decisive move that will stop waste of labor, plant and supplies.

3. Pay workers shifted from one place to another their transport expenses and guarantee them against any loss of wages or accumulated seniority.

4. Face the fact that substandard wages usually go hand in hand with poor production—particularly in textiles and foundries.

5. Eliminate completely all discrimination against Negroes, women and other minority groups.

This program, Murray pointed out, would eliminate the need for compulsory legislation. At the conference, he added, necessary legislation to deal with these problems could be worked out, and would have CIO support.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 350 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

CIO Tells Facts of Life In War Production

Washington, Jan. 20—CIO delegates from the field met in Washington to tell government officials—not the top shots but the working people in the agencies—the facts of life about war production, in a conference called by Pres. Murray last weekend.

Purpose of the conference was to deal with specific examples of lagging production and to show the officials of the WPB, the Army and the Navy and other war supply agencies just where production was slowed and the real reasons behind manpower "shortages."

Among specific instances cited were failure to employ Negroes and women—most glaring in Detroit, where 20,000 experienced women war workers have been refused jobs—and the failure to run foundries at anything like full capacity.

Women in Detroit "are continually being forced off war jobs and replaced with men in anticipation of the postwar period," one of the delegates from the UAW-CIO reported. Recently in six ammunition plants 5,500 women were laid off and replaced with men, while the foundries lack men to the extent of cutting down night shift operations by 75 percent.

Up in Schenectady, N. Y., 8,000 workers have been laid off at GE, according to a report from an Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers delegate. The company first lays off the workers, giving cutbacks as the reason, and then tries to hire them back at lower wages. When the workers refuse, the company claims a "manpower shortage."

In textiles, the crux of the problem, according to the CIO Textile Workers delegate, is that average earnings are around $24 a week. This industry, one of the most critical, has lost 40,000 workers in the past two years. Textile's wage case has been hanging fire in the WLB since December, 1943.

Apparently simple things like eating add further to manpower "shortages." Again up in Schenectady, the Baldwin Locomotive Co. can't get foundry workers because a WLB wage directive is not enforced. The company has brought in Negro workers from the South, but they can't eat simply because the plant cafeteria is closed Saturday nights and Sundays.

Labor management cooperation has helped greatly in the places where it operates successfully. The case of the Copperweld Steel Co. and the USA-CIO proves this. Last September the plant was short 400 workers. The manager went to the union, told the story, asked for help—and got it. The union keeps a list of men willing to work on days off, or work an extra turn. As a result, the plant has cleaned up its backlog, is now producing many tons more steel than ever before.

The "Pass the Ammunition" program of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in Connecticut was also reported as an example of successful work. Here the union sent 80 delegates to a meeting, secured promises from 1,800 workers to do extra time, and met their quota. The only thing holding them up now is a threatened shortage of metal for ammunition fabricating.

The conference, presided over by President Murray, showed conclusively that manpower shortages can be overcome by full use of existing labor, by diligent work to overcome adverse conditions, by an end to discrimination, by improvement of wages where needed, and by labor-management-government cooperation.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c
EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

TUA
TRADE UNION AGENCY
CONSULTANTS TO UNIONS ON ALL INSURANCE PROBLEMS
80 WEST 40TH STREET, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.
Group Insurance · Pensions · General Insurance

- UP at 6:45 a.m. and helping to get breakfast (top, left). Joanne contributes $8 a week to her family out of $20.65 she has left from her pay check after deductions.
- JOINING the crowd that scurries into the city's tall office buildings, Joanne comes out of the BMT subway at 49th and Broadway, in the heart of the entertainment industry. Transportation costs her $1 a week.
- BRINGING sandwiches is one way to cut the high cost of lunches. Even with drugstore meals, Joanne's lunch budget averages $4 a week. Here she eats with two fellow workers, Shirley, who also makes $25 a week, and Helen, who is a stenographer and makes $3 more.

Life's No Picnic On White Collar Pay

This is the story of Joanne Paulin, stenographer at United Artists, and how a white collar girl lives in New York City on $25 a week.

It is also the story of thousands of other Joanne's and Dorothy's and Mary's in the offices of the nation—of millions of Americans, both men and women, in the banks, offices, laboratories, and universities which play such a vital part in administering and servicing our nation in war and peace.

Their salaries have never had a come-back from the deep cuts of the depression. During the war the cost of living has soared past them, leaving high-skilled professionals, men and women with family responsibilities, trying to do important work and maintain health, morale and efficiency on less than $3,000 a year.

Joanne Paulin welcomed the news of the white collar conference called by the CIO. She believes the more people who get together to do something about low white collar salaries, the better. She thinks we owe it to our boys overseas to bring them back to jobs with good salaries. And she's sure that a better break for white collar and professional workers is a better break for America.

- JOANNE (left, above) stares wistfully at the latest model in a Fifth Avenue store. After home, lunch and transportation outlays, Joanne has just $7.85 left to cover all other expenses.
- AT A UNION MEETING. United Artists office and professional workers are organized in the Screen Guild, Local 1, UOPWA. The union has lifted minimums from $15 to $20 and got everybody cost-of-living raises of $3.50 to $5. But it's an industry in which everything is "colossal" except the salaries!
- GOOD GROOMING is an important asset for a white collar girl. Her clothes must be clean, well-pressed and attractive if she wants to hold her job. Here she brushes her hair in preparation for a date at UOPWA's Silver Screen Canteen.
- AT THE CANTEEN. Recreation is a difficult problem for a girl these days with most of the boys at war and not much money to spend. Joanne goes to a movie once a month. Here she is at the Canteen, where the film girls are hostesses.
- AT HOME AGAIN Joanne prepares for the next day by washing out her stockings, a big item in a practically non-existent clothes budget. Beauty parlors are too expensive for Joanne so she has mastered the art of beauty care herself.

CIO's 1st Natl. White Collar Parley Features Unity to Boost Wages

ANOTHER "first" made history in Washington last week when delegates from 40 white collar and professional organizations met with CIO Unionists in a White Collar conference, the first of its kind, to discuss their common problems.

The conference, which was called by CIO, clarified the common aims of the groups and resulted in plans for like sessions in the future.

One after another throughout the day-long meeting, delegates rose to tell of their problems and of their hopes and plans for solution. Agreement seemed unanimous that the first step toward solution lay in cooperation between such groups as those assembled.

The widespread lack of mass organization among the white collar workers and therefore the lack of means to give voice to their demands was pointed out by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in his talk leading off the conference.

Objectives of the conference, Murray said, "should be what you want them to be." An individual cannot protect his economic status by himself; he needs an organization to back him, Murray said.

CIO Offers Aid

One depressed group is a millstone around the neck of all working groups, he continued. The CIO wants to be helpful to these groups, "unselfishly so," he said, in whatever problems the conference should set forth. But the initial responsibility for action lies with the oppressed groups, he declared.

REV. CHARLES C. WEBBER (above), delegate from the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, speaks during discussion at the While Collar Conference. (Right) CIO President Murray leads off the conference.

The session was chaired by James Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, until the election of Dr. Donald DuShane, secretary of the Natl. Education Assn's. Commission for Defense of Democracy Through Education, as non-labor chairman. Dr. Melba Phillips of the American Assn. of Scientific Workers was elected secretary of the conference.

Dr. DuShane emphasized the importance of having well trained teachers in our schools. The welfare of the country depends on the training of the voters of the country, he said. We have lost during the war thousands of highly trained teachers. Teachers in the south have an average salary of less than $700 a year and thirty states lack the resources for adequate training, he pointed out, urging the adoption of federal aid to education, and freedom for teachers.

White Collar Problem No. 1, according to the conference participants, and a problem that touches nearly everyone in the nation in some way, is the unfortunate deterioration in quality of trained workers available for white collar jobs due to low rates of pay.

Lack Job Security

Trained teachers, social workers, scientists, are leaving the positions for which they were educated because of lack of job security, according to the delegates. Delegate after delegate, union and non-union, spoke of the deplorable effect of this condition and urged cooperation between all white collar groups to improve the situation.

This tie up between conditions of work and quality of work was brought out in the resolution adopted by the conference.

"Whether early victory will be achieved," the resolution began, "whether our final military triumph will be followed by a durable peace, whether domestic prosperity is made possible will be decided in great part by whether all groups in our nation are able to devote themselves fully to the stern and bitter tasks that lie ahead.

"The millions of men and women engaged or employed in the sciences, professions, and educational institutions, the millions of salaried employes in our nation's commercial and industrial establishments and in the employ of federal, state and municipal governments, are anxious to make their fullest contribution to the winning of the war and the solution of post war problems.

Slows War Effort

"Continued neglect of the problems of this important section of our population slows the entire nation in achieving its war aims.

"The representative organizations of white collar and professional employes of this country understand that solutions to their common social and economic problems cannot be discovered independently of what happens to the nation. They are aware that post war problems can only be solved if our national economic policies achieve the 60,000,000 jobs necessary to maintain our peacetime production at wartime levels.

"In the achievement of such a program, including broadened social security measures, federal aid to education, expansion of health and welfare facilities, expansion of scientific and research activities, the continuance of strengthened national unity is imperative.

"It is of the greatest importance, therefore, that all organizations seeking to bring about improvement in the status of the salaried employes and in the improvement of the cultural, educational, health, social and economic conditions of the people, be prepared to cooperate in the achievement of their separate programs."

Advisory Committee

An Advisory Committee consisting of one representative from each group participating in the conference was established, as well as a Continuing Committee to explore further the questions discussed, to devise an appropriate program, call any future conferences, and bring about influence on business and government in support of the objectives agreed upon.

Members of the Continuing Committee are: James Carey, chairman; Dr. Phillips, Dr. DuShane, Dr. Annabelle Lindsay of the American Society of Social Workers; Clara Harden of the YWCA Business and Professional Clubs; David McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers; Lewis Merrill, president, CIO Office & Professional Workers; and Joe Konowe, CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

Groups Participating In White Collar Meet

Participating in the White Collar Conference were the following CIO Unions: Clothing Workers, Newspaper Guild, Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, State County and Municipal Workers, Textile Workers, Auto Workers, Federal Workers, Office & Professional Workers, Electrical Workers, Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Workers, Rubber and Steelworkers.

Other organizations represented were:

American Assn. of Engineers, American Assn. for Health, Physical Education & Recreation, American Assn. of Junior Colleges, American Assn. of Medical Social Workers, American Assn. of Schools of Social Work, American Assn. of Scientific Workers, American Assn. of Social Workers.

American Assn. of University Women, American Council on Education, American Institute Cons. Engineers, American Institute Mining Engineers, American Labor Education Service, American Library Assn., American Medical Assn.

American Public Welfare Assn., American Society Civil Engineers, American Teachers Assn., Automotive Council for War Production, Johns Hopkins Trade Union Study, Natl. Assn. Civilian Naval Inspectors, Natl. Assn. Negro Business & Professional Women's Clubs, Natl. Assn. of Secondary School Principals of National Educational Assn.

Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference, Natl. Consumers League, Natl. Council of Negro Women, Natl. Educational Assn., Natl. Lawyers Guild, Natl. Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of A. K. A., Natl. Organization for Public Health Nursing, Natl. Religion and Labor Foundation.

Natl. Urban League, Natl. Women's Trade Union League, Southern School for Workers, Summer School for Office Workers, Civil Service Investigating Comm. (House of Representatives), FWA, OWI, War Man-power Commission, Dept. of Labor, Young Women's Christian Assn.

Best by Every Test!

For Total Mobilization

Total war mobilization has long been the demand of the CIO. It believes that every step necessary to mobilize all our economic and manpower resources for the speediest possible victory should be taken.

But at the same time, the CIO believes that the hysterical approach of rushing through ill-conceived and anti-labor measures will only aggravate manpower problems and make no real contribution to their solution.

Among the many reasons for such manpower shortages as arise at the present time are refusal to make full use of Negroes and women in war production; substandard wages; lack of coordination on the part of the various government procurement agencies; continuation of unnecessary or luxury production; failure to make proper transportation, housing and seniority provisions for transferred workers; and a frequent failure to make maximum use of available plant, materials, manpower and management.

What is necessary is to get to the root of these and similar problems and to enlist the coordinated and cooperative efforts of labor, industry, agriculture and government for their prompt solution.

That is why President Murray and the CIO executive officers have urged the government to call an immediate meeting of "the people who know at first hand what production problems are," including labor, industry, agriculture and government leaders.

The CIO has pledged its complete support to the measures that may be worked out at such a conference, to the immediate use of all powers under existing legislation and directives, and to any necessary legislation which will achieve the desired objectives.

That, it believes, is the practical and patriotic approach to achieving the total mobilization for which President Roosevelt has called.

A Promising Development

The conference of white-collar and professional organizations which was held recently in Washington was an important step in the direction of better conditions for America's millions of salaried employes, more solidarity between industrial and white-collar workers, and greater national unity for winning the war and promoting postwar prosperity.

It was natural that the CIO should take the initiative in calling such a conference, since it has always been a leading champion of the rights and interests of white-collar workers, and its unions have made susbtantial progress in organizing them as well as industrial workers.

But the broad character of the conference, in which the CIO was only one of many participating organizations of all kinds representing millions of salaried employes, gives promise of a greater degree of cooperation for common objectives than has ever been achieved before.

United action along these lines cannot fail to bring far-reaching benefits to America's white-collar workers, to labor and professional organizations, and to the whole American people.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WHILE CIO delegates are on their way to London, to meet for the first time with other labor delegates from all over the world, we may reflect on the curious circumstance that it has taken a world war to bring the ideal of world brotherhood into practical politics.

But the fact that American boys are fighting all over the globe has given both them and their families a sense of closer neighborhood with peoples and countries that seemed entirely remote before.

It has also made most of us realize the interdependence of the United Nations both for winning this war and for building lasting peace and prosperity after the war.

* * *

As a member of the American delegation to the conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations at Hot Springs, Va., the writer has just had an excellent opportunity to see how CIO ideas stack up against those of our neighbors around the Pacific.

Present at this unofficial study conference were delegations from Britain, France, Canada, China, Korea, the Philippines, Indo-China, Thailand, Netherland Indies, Burma, India, Australia and New Zealand.

The war news has brought all of these countries closer to America, and the presence of American troops in most of them has aroused a new interest among their peoples in American affairs and attitudes.

It was gratifying to note the delegates' interest in the growing influence of the CIO in American affairs, and to find how closely CIO foreign policy fits in with the aspirations of our Pacific neighbors and contributes to the common goals of all freedom-loving peoples.

* * *

In discussing, for instance, the future of Japan, the note most insistently sounded was the importance of a strong and united coalition of the United Nations to prevent any reemergence of Japanese or other aggression.

This attitude, of course, is basic to CIO policy. And CIO's emphatic support for an international organization to preserve peace, as planned at Dumbarton Oaks, helps to allay fears among Asiatic peoples of the emergence of a new American imperialism or of combinations among some of the powers that might lead to a new world war.

Similarly, CIO's stand for maximum opportunity for the peoples of India and Asia generally "to manage their own affairs with a view toward achieving self-government and the right of self-determination," is a substantial contribution to removing one of the most dangerous sources of future friction in the Pacific area.

* * *

But perhaps CIO's greatest single contriution to American standing and better international relations in the Pacific is its leadership in demanding "abolition of all forms of economic, social or political discrimination based on race, creed or color."

When Americans criticize the imperialistic policies of other powers, their sincerity is frequently questioned by representatives of such powers and of the colonial peoples themselves, on account of the discriminations practiced in America against the Negro people and against some of our Asiatic allies.

The CIO can show that it is one substantial group of Americans that fights aggressively and consistently against all forms of racial discrimination and "master race" theories.

CIO's policies of organizing without discrimination, insisting on equal job rights, fighting against the polltax, and opposing national or racial discriminations in regard to immigration and citizenship—as shown by its successful efforts for repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act—are becoming more and more widely known among the Asiatic people.

These policies have contributed both to United Nations' solidarity for winning this war and to the better international understanding on which future peace must be built.

* * *

The program of CIO for 60 million jobs and postwar prosperity also has an important bearing on America's Pacific relations.

Basic to CIO's program for full postwar employment is the expansion of our foreign trade. For this, the rapid industrialization and advancement of social and economic standards in China and other Asiatic countries is a prime necessity—in addition to peace and stable democratic government among our neighbors.

In advancing the economic interests of American working people and the general welfare of our country, the CIO has logically evolved policies which are heartily welcomed by the peoples of other countries as contributing also to their welfare and to the promotion of world peace and prosperity.

That was one of the most encouraging impressions I gained at the IPR conference.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 January 22, 1945 No. 4

Surgeon General Urges Health Plan For All At UAW Institute Opening

The CIO United Auto Workers Health Institute at Detroit "represents a broadening concept of organized labor in this country which parallels the broadening concept of public health," Dr. Thomas Parran, U. S. Public Health Service Surgeon General, said at the dedicatory banquet of the institute last Thursday.

In easy reach of a third of a million UAW members, the institute was the home of the late Edsel Ford, who with his father, Henry Ford, fought the union long and hard. The Ford Motor Co. is now operated under UAW contract.

Overlooking the Detroit River, the three-story building will have a medical library on the first floor. There are on the second floor five examination rooms; a laboratory; rooms for basal metabolisms and electrocardiogram tests, and an X-ray department containing two machines. On the third floor there are offices for the expansion of the institute.

The Surgeon General pointed out that while labor has sought better living conditions, public health has aimed for sanitary environment and suppression of epidemics.

GOOD WAGES AID HEALTH

Shorter hours, better wages and working conditions and better food and housing—obtained by the labor movement—have raised the national health level, the surgeon general said.

"We cannot raise healthy children if there is not enough money to buy nourishing food or to provide decent homes," the speaker said.

Dr. Parran said that to provide health services for all more hospitals, diagnostic clinics and health centers with high standards are necessary in addition to doctors, dentists, nurses, laboratory technicians and other health workers.

More health and medical research and adequate sanitary facilities are also required, the U. S. Public Health Service chief declared.

HOW TO PAY THE BILL

Turning to the cost of treatment of disease, the Surgeon General said: "For the individual family, I believe that these risks should be met on a national basis, either through insurance, or through public taxes, or preferably through a combination of both."

Under the Bill, which is supported by the CIO, deductions from the employer and the employe would be increased to 6 per cent of wages in each case with part of the money providing for medical care. Under another section of the bill, medical care would be provided for the needy aged and dependent children through taxes. Medical care for workers who become unemployed would be provided for under the compulsory insurance provisions of the bill.

"We in this country want nothing less than an equal opportunity for every citizen," the Public Health Service head continued.

Citing the many requirements for public health, he stated that "It is apparent the provision of adequate health care for the people of this country involves a great deal more than simply paying the doctor's fee—basic as this is."

He said that if a medical care program were put in operation "the nation's supply of physicians, nurses, equipment and hospital beds could not possibly meet the demand.

Asserting that "we dare not wait" for a health insurance plan, Dr. Parran declared that studies "show that in the first ten years after the war there should be constructed in the United States 166,000 beds in general hospitals, 196,000 beds for mental hospitals and 60,000 beds for tuberculosis institutions."

Wider distribution of medical personnel, hospitals and medical care centers, particularly in rural communities, and adequate preventive health services were also called for by Dr. Parran.

He pointed out that the CIO National Maritime Union "is actively supporting the mental hygiene program for merchant seamen.

"The Health Institute," Dr. Parran added, "is to be commended for its progressive action in providing psychiatric service to its members."

Although the institute is supported by UAW locals through monthly per capita tax payments, any worker may use its services by paying an examination fee.

Speakers at the dedication of the Institute included UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer and director of the union's Health and Accident Dept., which has jurisdiction over the institute.

Dr. Morris Raskin will be institute director.

POETIC JUSTICE: Formerly the Detroit residence of the late Edsel Ford, this mansion now houses the CIO United Auto Workers Health Institute, which offers medical examinations to members of the UAW and other trade unions.

APPOINTMENT of Kermit Eby as director of the CIO's Department of Research & Education was announced this week by Pres. Philip Murray. J. Raymond Walsh, former director, resigned to give his full time to radio work in New York, where he will broadcast a program over WMCA five nights a week, Monday through Friday from 7:30 to 7:35. Eby has been assistant director of the Department since April, 1943.

Convention Ruling

The Office of Defense Transportation this week announced that after Feb. 1, labor organizations will have to obtain permits to hold conferences of over 50 persons.

Applications must show how the war effort would suffer if the meetings were not held, list the time and place, attendance expected, and why a group of 50 or less with delegated powers cannot transact the necessary business.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

It is significant that four of our eight women members of Congress have been chosen to serve on the Foreign Relations Committee of the House of Representatives. Their appointment emphasizes the very great concern which American women have with building a secure peace.

Two of the women are Republicans, Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts and Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, who served on the Committee in the last session of Congress. The two new women members are Democrats, Helen Gahagan Douglas of California and Emily Taft Douglas of Illinois.

There is good reason to hope, however, that the difference in party will not divide these women in the stand they take on foreign policy. As women, they will have a very deep common interest in helping to create an enduring peace.

WOMEN WANT PEACE

Women are traditionally leaders in movements to build peace in the world. They do not themselves participate in the battles. They send their loved ones, their sons, husbands and brothers, off to face death. And out of the worry and loneliness of waiting at home has grown a deep determination to do everything possible to prevent future wars.

This year, as the armies of the United Nations push forward to crush Hitler Germany, we must take the first steps in that direction.

The ground work has been laid in the Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks agreements. The danger is that when those agreements come up in our Congress they will be weekended to worthlessness by amendments and reservations.

A number of speeches in Congress in the last two weeks should put us all on guard. First, we have the out and out isolationists like Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.) Representative Alvine and O'Konski (R., Wis.) who advocate a negotiated peace. These men are actually helping Hitler, as Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) so well pointed out. They would oppose any effective world organization.

DANGEROUS PROPOSAL

Far more dangerous to ultimate realization of the stable world order we want to build are the implications in Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's (R., Mich.) speech of January 10. He favors authorizing the use of American forces to keep Germany and Japan demilitarized "regardless of what our later decision may be in respect to the power that shall be delegated to the President to join our military force with others in a new peace league—no matter what limitations may command themselves to our ultimate judgments in this regard."

That has an ominous note. It became clear to most of us during the foreign policy discussion of the election campaign that one essential element of an effective peace organization was the delegation to the president of the power to order American forces into action to help carry out decisions of the world organization.

One of the jobs which we must do and which we must call upon our Congresswomen on the House Foreign Relations Committee to help us do, is to arouse the women of the country to the danger of a repetition of the strategy of delay and amendments which kept the United States out of the League of Nations.

We must convince our Senators that American women want a strong United Nations organization with unqualified power to act and act quickly to block aggression.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

USA Sub-Dist. Rep. Harry N. Harper, Chicago, reports: Associated Spring Corp. Chicago, Ill., CIO 299, against 198.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, advises: Clayton Mark & Co., Evanston, Ill., (production & maintenance employes), UERMWA-CIO, 353, against 103.

CIO Reg. Dir. Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis, reports: Packard Manufacturing plant, Indianapolis, owned by Senator-elect Homer Capehart, USA-CIO 545, AFL 182, neither 182. This reverses the victory of the AFL two years ago at this plant and puts it in the same class as "no union" with the same number of votes that "neither" received. CIO Field Reps. McNamara and Markunas helped the United Steelworkers in this election.

Thos. J. Gallagher, organizational director, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, reports: Decatur Iron & Steel Co., Decatur, Ala., CIO 152, AFL 19. Miami Shipbuilding Corp., Miami, Fla., CIO 24, no union 15. Turbine Engineering Corp., Hoboken, N.J., CIO 81, AFL 15.

CIO Reg. Dir. C. H. Gillman, Atlanta, reports: Elberton Oil Mills, CIO 48, no union 9. This drive was conducted by CIO Rep. Tom Jones and Packinghouse Rep. John Henry Hall.

Wm. B. Taylor, Org. Dir., Oil Workers Campaign, advises: Norwalk Refinery, Maricopa, Calif., CIO 34, against 6. CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler, Kansas City, reports an additional victory for Oil Workers, Standolind Pipe Line Co., Kansas, run-off election, CIO 49, against 44.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Wrape Stave Co., Little Rock, Arkansas, CIO 59, no union 27. Rep. John Hawkins was in charge.

CIO Sub. Reg. Dir. John J. Maurillo, Syracuse, N. Y., advises: Marshall, Meadow & Stewart Co., Auburn, N. Y., CIO 121, no union 119.

Alex Bail, Secy-Treas., Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers, reports: Mullite Refractories, Shelton, Conn., CIO 45, against 2. Intl. Reps. Sicignano and Ferrie organized the plant and conducted the election. Mack-Pack Co., Cranbury, N. J., CIO 70, AFL 6. Intl. Rep. Morris Malmignati was in charge

CIO Reg. Dir. Gillman reports: Fox Manufacturing Co., Rome, Georgia, CIO 95, no union 88. This company which has been known for many years as anti-labor, did everything possible to defeat the union in the past election. Furniture Workers Rep. Harvey J. Pike was in charge of this campaign.

National Representative Adolph Germer will act in my capacity while I am attending the World Labor Conference which opens February 6, in London.

Germer Tells Oklahoma CIO About Texas Anti-Labor Fund

ENID, Okla., Jan. 20—A drive started recently by the Texas State Manufacturers' Assn. to build up a big slush fund to fight labor was revealed by Natl. CIO Representative Adolph Germer in a speech given at the annual convention of the Oklahoma CIO Council held here.

Speaking on the opening day of the convention, Germer who brought fraternal greetings from CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood, urged the delegates to back up the resolutions they passed with strong constructive action.

"Action made the CIO the great organization it is," Germer said. "It wasn't merely a motion passed at Atlantic City in 1935 that gave the CIO the prestige and power that it now enjoys."

A backhanded compliment to this power of the CIO, wrapped in a threat, was handed out recently in a form letter sent to members by the Texas State Manufacturers' Assn., Germer told the delegates. After commenting on the "extremely well informed" labor representatives on the War Labor Board, the letter urged employers to see that industry is likewise well represented.

"It is apparently the purpose of the labor unions to endeavor to organize every group in this state," the letter read by Germer stated. "They are concentrating on making such a showing with the War Labor Board as to convince all employees that they should join the unions. We on the other hand propose to make such a showing that employees will think otherwise.

"In order to maintain this enlarged operations employers must raise between $30,000 and $40,000," stated the letter and added: "Labor unions probably have much more money than this with which to operate. We are asking employers to subscribe on the basis of 50c per employee with a maximum of $1,000 . . .

"We ask you to consider this matter seriously and advise us if you will join with other employers in building up this fund. It is not necessary for you to be a manufacturer to participate in this movement. Every employer will benefit from these far-reaching and necessary plans. The manufacturers have taken the lead but we ask you as an employer to also assist.

"Remember the work must be done by someone. Incidentally as a subscriber to this fund you have full right to use this special Employers Service. . . . There is no reason why industry should not be as well protected as labor in these matters. This association is determined that it shall be and we ask your cooperation."

This letter shows what "the money crowd in Texas has in mind," Germer declared. "Don't be fooled into the belief that the money crowd in Oklahoma thinks differently."

Ask Britain Change Policy on Greece

A change in Britain's policy toward Greece was called for by the Maryland & District of Columbia CIO Council, which last week sent a delegation to expound the Council's views to British Ambassador Halifax and Secretary of State Stettinius.

A resolution presented by the delegation called upon Prime Minister Churchill "in the interest of speedy victory and a stable peace to renounce a course of action which is disheartening to millions of patriots in countries still under the yoke of Fascism or recently liberated from that yoke."

CIO Contract Ends Laundry Dispute

A contract covering workers of five major Chattanooga, Tenn., laundries represented by the CIO United Laundry Workers has ended a 4-week walk-out provoked by refusal of the firms to accept an order of the War Labor Board, B. T. Judd, CIO representative, announced here.

The WLB ordered the laundries to increase wages by 21c an hour over the minimum called for in a contract which expired in Oct., 1943. A joint union-management said that the laundries will give a "back-to-work" bonus to the workers instead of the back pay ordered by the WLB.

Mine, Mill Moves Office To Chicago

Headquarters of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers will be moved from Denver to Chicago, Feb. 1, the union announced this week. The new address will be 222 West Adams St., Chicago 6, Ill.

Pres. Reid Robinson and Sec.-Treas. James J. Leary will have offices at the headquarters in Chicago. Vice-Pres. Ralph H. Rasmussen will continue in charge of the Washington office at 930 F St., Washington 4, D. C.

The move which was ordered at the union's convention last September was taken to bring international headquarters closer to the geographical center of the membership.

HAIL AND FAREWELL: Just before they left for their goodwill trip to England, Miss Anne Murkovich of the Fed. of Hosiery Workers, left, and Mrs. Grace Blackett, United Auto Workers, captured CIO Pres. Philip Murray in his office for a picture. He seems to like it.

A flavor that shortens the miles

One of these days when the war is over, you'll travel in amazing new streamlined trains—you'll eat in unique new dining cars, and sleep in luxurious new-type Pullmans. ▪ But you don't have to wait until the war has ended to enjoy perfection in one of the good things of life. Today, in Schlitz, you are truly drinking the beer of tomorrow. ▪ On the dining cars of the future, that famous flavor found only in Schlitz will continue to shorten the miles by adding to the pleasure of travel.

JUST THE kiss OF THE HOPS

...no bitterness

Copyright 1945, Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Invest in Liberty! BUY WAR BONDS

Schlitz

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS

CIO's Position

On WLB Wage Shackles

Among subjects considered by the CIO Executive Officers in their January 12 meeting was the Little Steel formula, and its bad effect on war production. Excerpts from their statement follow:

The facts, when faced, compel the conclusion that in the interest of maintaining our national morale there must be a drastic revision of the national wage policy. The Little Steel formula, rigidly applied, to a completely changed situation, has necessarily created abuse and serious dangers.

The President's Committee on Cost of Living has conceded that the minimum rise in the cost of living since January 1941 has been 30 per cent. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has also admitted that its index of changes in retail prices does not actually reflect the full increase in wartime living costs.

MANPOWER SHORTAGES

Frequently, plants producing critical material have encountered manpower shortages because their extremely low wage standards cannot be improved under the straight-jacket rules governing the War Labor Board.

The CIO and its affiliated unions have with great patience presented their specific cases with a wealth of economic material to the Natl. War Labor Board. But in spite of the fact that this issue has been before the Board for over a year, the Board has failed to make any determination or to submit any report to the President of the U. S.

Mere theory and continued discussion do not meet the acute problems confronting the wage earners in American industry. The commitment given to these people at the outset of economic stabilization that prices and wages would be kept at a relationship which prevailed on September 1, 1942, has not been met. This failure affects not merely the workers but the entire nation because of its adverse impact upon war production.

On Boosting Production

Meeting at a time when production schedules are being greatly stepped up to provide more and still more supplies to the fighting fronts, the Executive Officers of the CIO on January 12 proposed a program for increasing production through a labor, management, agriculture and government production conference. Excerpts from the program follow:

The way to solve the problem of production is not through hysteria or through such unworkable measures as the presently framed May-Bailey bill. The first step needed is an immediate meeting of the people who know at first hand what production problems are. For this purpose, the government should immediately call a conference of labor, industry, agriculture and government leaders.

The CIO pledges its complete support to the solutions that will be worked out at such a meeting, to the immediate use of all powers under existing legislation and executive directives and to any necessary legislation which will achieve the desired objectives and will apply all the strength and skill of six million American workers to carry out the decisions such a conference will make.

This conference must consider at once the following issues and swiftly work out and execute means of solving them:

1. This conference must establish the plants and areas where production is short, for whatever reason.

2. It must establish whether or not there is a maximum use of available plant, materials, manpower and management in those plants and areas of short production. It must also extend this search for full utilization to plants and areas where production is up to schedule, to discover if possible new means of increasing it still further.

3. We must have a determination now to end all unnecessary or luxury production or use of plant, materials, manpower and management. This determination must be put into effect not piece-meal but by a decisive act that will avoid further delay and will obviate all quibbling or hesitation.

4. Where it is found necessary to shift workers from one area to another, their transportation costs must be repaid to them and they must be guaranteed against any loss of accumulated seniority or wages.

4. We must face the fact that frequently the plants and areas where production is bad are those where wages are below prevailing rates or below rates already set. This situation is particularly true of foundries, textile plants, and many other critical industries.

6. Arrangements should be perfected for the maximum utilization of all available manpower necessary for war work and the complete elimination of discriminatory practices against Negroes which prevent them from filling critical manpower needs.

7. The policies and actions of the various procurement agencies of the government must be coordinated to avoid the present prevailing confusion and contradiction relating to production requirements.

On Manpower Legislation

Speaking out in opposition to compulsory labor, CIO President Philip Murray presented a positive program for full use of available manpower to the House Military Affairs Committee considering the May-Bailey Bill (HR 1119) this week. Excerpts from his testimony follow:

We offer an affirmative program to the nation which, we are convinced, will solve problems that cannot be met by legislation. In brief, our program is this:

1. The magnitude of the job ahead is far more manageable than Congress and the public have been led to believe. Moreover, the figures recently given Congress do not represent manpower demands at this moment but over the next six months. If we are properly organized we can meet these demands as they fall due. Outbacks are being made daily and releasing labor for other war jobs.

2. The problem we propose to lick is a series of local problems, and for the most part can only be licked locally. Also, as I shall show, the numbers involved in any one firm are almost always small.

3. We are today abreast of or ahead of most war production schedules. Where we are not it is due to step-ups in a few lines of war products, or to errors in scheduling by procurement agencies. We must correct and overcome these situations by joint cooperation between labor, industry and the war agencies.

4. We cannot wait to get improvements. We need them NOW, and to introduce a system of compulsion will create general confusion and delay and reduce rather than increase our productivity.

5. We need joint cooperation of labor, management and government representatives in each plant and community if we are to get further increases in output. Schedules of output and estimates of needs for manpower and materials must be accurate, and this requires a first-hand observation of capacity, made within the plant and the community.

In this spirit the CIO urges Justice Byrnes to call a conference of labor, industry, agriculture and government leaders. We have proposed this conference because in our considered judgment only voluntary solutions for the current situation can give us the expanded production which is needed.

We oppose proposals for compulsory legislation as not capable of solving these problems which essentially require better organization and more complete voluntary cooperation, especially on the local level.

As proposals for the consideration of the conference I offer the following points:

a) The local labor-management committees operated by the War Manpower Commission have already proved themselves in most cities to be the best instruments for administering manpower controls.

Let this conference determine whether there is any need for legislation to strengthen their operations. Certainly local draft boards are qualified to draft men into the armed services, but not to replace these existing labor - management - government committees.

b) Labor utilization inspection has now been set up by the War Manpower Commission on a nationwide basis. It should be enlarged, strengthened, and given the support needed to inspect war plants where the employer demands a substantial number of new workers.

c) Ceilings on non-essential plants should be enforced by some mandatory powers, but safeguarded by appeals to local labor - management - government committees.

We find that existing manpower needs in plants producing critical war items are relatively small. Overall employment in war production has been on the decline for more than a year and will continue to decline despite the recent increase in schedules for particular items.

THE NEED

Our surveys show:

1. That at least one-fourth of the plants (in the case of steel, the proportion is closer to three-fourths) where shortages were reported, there is actually no shortage at the present time. In many of these plants there have been recent lay-offs.

2. That in the overwhelming proportion of the remainder, where there are not enough workers, there are readily correctible factors which explain the shortage. In some cases—particularly in foundries—wage rates are below those in other plants competing for workers. In other cases, working conditions are so bad that labor turnover is high. In still others, the companies have bad labor relations records.

3. That in many plants, managements are unwilling to employ women and Negroes despite the fact that these workers are ready and eager to get into war jobs.

The CIO pledges its full effort throughout this critical period to coordinating our activities on these essential war programs with all other groups involved in war production.

Like the West, East Has Its Joads

Shocking Conditions Of Migrant Workers Revealed in Report

Most people know about the Joads, the uprooted "Oakies," whose grim story is told in John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath." Their tragic lot as homeless migrant workers following the harvest on California's big fruit and vegetable farms as dramatized by Steinbeck's novel and the movie made from it, created a nation-wide furor not long ago.

But what is not generally known is that New York and other eastern states also have their "Joads"—disinherited families living under shocking conditions of overcrowding, filth, and lack of sanitation quite as bad as those described by Steinbeck.

A pamphlet published this week by the Consumer League of New York graphically describes the lives and work of these "Joads in New York." It is based on a survey of 22 farm labor camps in nine counties housing more than 2,000 men, women and children.

The survey was made last summer at the height of the crop-picking after a truck accident near Binghamton—in which two children and one adult picker were killed and 34 others were seriously injured—had focused public attention not only upon the transportation furnished migrant workers, but also upon hours, illegal child labor and lack of decent living facilities.

CONDITIONS FILTHY

These migrant families are customarily crowded into filthy shacks and sheds, sometimes even in horse stalls, the report reveals, with as many as five to nine persons often cooking, eating and sleeping in space only big enough to hold a bed or two and a table.

Out of 375 permanent farm camps, only 19 had child-care centers last summer, and most of the farm operators look upon this provision for small children as a form of "pampering." Where no centers are provided, young children remain in camp alone every day or else go to the fields "to help Mama pick."

Youngsters are often urged by their families to speed up, since the work is usually paid for on a piece-work basis. One four-year-old proudly told the League investigator that he had picked a bushel and a half of beans that day. At one camp 60 school-age boys and girls were counted in the fields in the fall after school had opened.

The usual work week is 60 hours—ten hours a day for six days—but the hours vary according to the demands of the crop; sometimes running to 12 and 14 a day. Wages, "normally scandalously low among farm laborers," states the report, were far above those of other years last summer, averaging around 50c a bushel for peas and beans. Some other crops paid 65c an hour for men and 50c for women.

Earnings vary. Some families in the state made as little as $75 in six weeks last summer, others made $300 or more.

Large numbers of the pickers are women who go to the farms without their husbands to earn a few extra dollars. Many come from Pennsylvania and other nearby states, others from as far away as Florida. Many are Negroes, others are largely of foreign origin—Italians, Syrians, Poles.

They are hired by agents or padrones who paint glowing pictures of the camps and the work, but provide no written contracts. Workers are usually transported to the camps by these agents in crowded, uncomfortable and dangerous trucks.

The report calls attention to the dramatic contrast between living and working conditions in these permanent camps for American families and those provided workers brought here from Jamaica and the Bahamas under international contracts by the War Food Administration.

These workers often receive higher wages, they are guaranteed work 75 per cent of the time and $3 a day for each day they are not employed. Their contracts are specific as to living conditions, so that their camps are clean, well-equipped and sanitary.

In addition, the Federal Government provides full medical and dental care, and the workers receive protection under child labor laws, workmen's compensation and other Federal and state laws.

Miss Florina Lasker, chairman of the Consumers League, in announcing the report stated: "Our survey reveals that New York State which has taken the leadership in enacting and enforcing protective legislation for its industrial workers, has not developed equally high standards for its migrant labor. Conditions under which these migrants live and work are far below generally accepted minimum standards of health and decency."

The Joads in New York, issued by Consumers League of New York, 170 Fifth Ave., New York 10, N. Y., 15 cents a copy.

The Dumbarton Oaks Proposals are recommendations for a general international organization, agreed to by representatives of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and China and published on October 9, 1944.

The purposes of the organization, to be known as The United Nations, would be to maintain peace and security, to promote friendly relations among nations, and to facilitate international cooperation in the solution of economic, social, and humanitarian problems and the promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Organs

A General Assembly, composed of representatives of all member states, to meet annually or in special sessions.

An Economic and Social Council, operating under the General Assembly and composed of representatives of eighteen members of the organization, these states to be elected by the General Assembly for three years.

A Security Council, composed of representatives of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China, and eventually France, and six nonpermanent members, elected by the General Assembly for two years; in permanent session.

A Military Staff Commitee, operating under the Security Council and composed of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives, with other states participating when necessary.

An International Court of Justice.

A Secretariat, headed by a Secretary General as chief administrative officer elected by the General Assembly.

To Maintain Peace

The member states would obligate themselves to settle international disputes which threaten peace by negotiations between the parties, by mediation, conciliation, arbitration, or by reference to the International Court of Justice. The Security Council could at any time recommend procedures or methods of adjustment.

If these methods fail the parties would be required to refer the dispute to the Security Council, which would have authority to take diplomatic, economic, or other measures and, if necessary, to employ, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee, armed forces to maintain or restore international peace. These armed forces, including national air-force contingents, would be provided by the member states by special agreements among themselves and approved by the Security Council.

To Promote General Stability and Welfare

The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, assisted by expert Commissions, would consider and recommend solutions of international economic and humanitarian problems, including the promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms. They would recommend coordination of the policies and activities of specialized international organizations and agencies which may be brought into relationship with the general organization.

THIS is how the world peace plans worked out at the United Nations meeting held in Dumbarton Oaks last summer will operate. The United Nations have agreed that this is the way to prevent aggression and future war. The next move is up to Congress, which must endorse the agreement before it can become final. Start writing your Congressman now to support the Dumbarton Oaks plan as drawn up by the U. S. and the other United Nations. Urge him to reject all tricky amendments and changes that may be offered by the GOP. Nobody wants another war 25 years from now. Dumbarton Oaks is the way to prevent another war—if it is passed quickly and without changes.

—Courtesy Ammunition

Latin-America's Unions Work For World Unity

By HERMAN SANDERS

(Second in a series of six articles prepared by Allied Labor News as background for the world labor conference, opening in London on Febuary 6.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (ALN)—Representatives of the 5,000,000 members of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) from 16 countries will press for world cooperation in support of the backward nations at the London international labor congress. This principal aim of Latin American workers, according to CTAL President Vicente Lombardo Toledano, is aimed at guaranteeing world peace and "making possible the full development of all nations. This is possible only if the colonial and semi-colonial countries have international cooperation in the achievement of their full independence."

Industrialization of the 20 American republics south of the Rio Grande has been the main long-range program of the CTAL. This, the CTAL points out, cannot be done without the aid of the industrialized countries of the world but, it warns, because: "If we are again victimized by foreign monopolies, it will mean that Latin America will lose the war despite the defeat of the Axis."

At the same time the CTAL feels strongly that the aims for which the United Nations are fighting cannot be effectively realized without the formation of a new federation of world labor. The CTAL sees in such a new world labor body not only an organization of trade unions, but "also an organization of popular forces throughout the world." It declares that the security and organization of the post-war world depend not only on the governments of the United Nations, but on the people themselves.

RELATIONS WITH CIO

Since its formation in 1938 at a constituent congress in Mexico City, the CTAL has enjoyed the friendly cooperation and the full support of the CIO. It has had the active cooperation of the CIO Committee on Latin American affairs, headed by Jacob S. Potofsky, and CIO representatives have attended every CTAL congress, including the first, since the organization's inception. Relations with the AFL, on the other hand, have been strained and the latter organization voted in 1944 to work out plans to establish a rival Latin American labor organization.

Fraternal relations with the British Trades Union Congress were firmly established in 1944 with the visit to the CTAL's congress in Colombia of fraternal delegate Arthur Horner. Although the Soviet labor movement has not been able to send representatives to CTAL congresses, it has warmly supported the Latin American trade union organization.

Both the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (AFL) and the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO and national unions) have also established close ties of friendship with the CTAL, and this together with the friendship of the CIO in the United States may lead to the formation of a western hemisphere trade union federation.

Many of the CTAL's activities, especially during the past year, have been directed toward actively fighting Argentine fascism and the danger it represents to the rest of Latin America. It has branded the Argentine regime "an enemy of democracy" and has pointed out that Argentina "is aiding fascist organizations throughout Latin America in an attempt to establish similiar regimes.

"The operations of Argentine fascism mark it as an ally of international reaction which is attempting to save fascism from defeat." Its "survival may cause grave difficulties for the entire hemisphere in the near future, perhaps before the war's end."

Recognizing that many of the problems of Latin America arise out of British fears that the U. S. is trying to monopolize Latin American markets for post-war trade, the CTAL is expected to try to throw its weight behind the establishment of greater cooperation between the British, the U. S. and the countries of Latin America. This will aid not only in the resolution of Latin American problems, but also in limiting the area of discord between two of the three great world powers.

The CTAL has grown rapidly since its formation in 1938 and now has affiliates in the following 16 countries in addition to one in Puerto Rico: Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Santo Domingo, Uruguay and Venezuela.

World Neighbors

Punishing War Crimes 'Good Neighbor' Need

At first glance, it might seem strange to put an article on punishment of war criminals under the heading "World Neighbors"—but good neighborly relations between us and the rest of the world are directly concerned.

As every household knows, one thug in a neighborhood can make life miserable for everbody until the cops comes and take him away. The peace-loving people of the world are tragically aware of this fact after a decade of fascist war, and are worried about punishment for the Nazi and Japanese thugs who have made this war.

The CIO put forth the demand for punishment at its Chicago convention, when it said: "The full and stern punishment of war criminals must be assured. . . The German industrialists and Junkers shall not receive any amnesty through their business and social contacts in the victorious nations to renew their drive for world conquest in the future."

The demand for punishment of war criminals is not a matter of revenge, though their crimes against the people of Europe and Asia are horrible beyond description. It is a matter of preventing World War III. The same gang of thugs that started this war will try again—unless they're caught and punished this time.

Currently, some people are worried about the "legality" of punishing war criminals. It is even said that it would be "illegal" to try Hitler, Himmler and Co. On this point, the Natl. Lawyers Guild, whose president is Robert W. Kenny, attorney-general of California, speaks with legal authority when it says:

"The Guild is convinced that the punishment of war criminals has a firm basis in well-established principles of law. . . accepted legal processes are adequate and that resolute action need not now be delayed."

The Guild then goes on to make the point that the crimes committed by the Nazi and the Japanese fascist soldiers are not "political" crimes, but are pure and simple criminal acts—murder, arson, rape, robbery and the like. The fact that they are committed on a grand scale or on orders from above is no excuse. You can't murder your neighbor and then claim immunity because some superior ordered you to do to it.

Punishment of war criminals, both now and after the war, is both a war measure and a means of ensuring the peace, the Guild points out; "not only a matter of law and justice—it goes to the root of our war policy, to the basic objective of destroying the system of organized aggression and all its works. It is a war measure in virtually the same sense as direct military action."

Back of the few people who favor letting the Nazi and Japanese war criminals go scot-free to plot more crimes stand, as the CIO points out, "their business and social contacts in the victorious nations." These are the cartelists, the international monopoly leaders who have worked before with the "German industrialists and Junkers," the CIO cites.

Some of them hope to work with the German industrialists and Junkers again. That, and not "humanity" or "legality" is the real reason why we have the current opposition to punishment of the fascist thugs who started this criminal war.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Drawn by MORT MESKIN

Story by JOSEPH GREENE and JERRY COLE

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 5 82 January 29, 1945

Weir—Dictator

By FRED d'AVILA

The last big bridgehead of industrial dictatorship in the United States was staggering this week from a two-front attack by the forces of democracy. The fortress under assault was the rich and powerful Weir-

(Continued on Page 12)

SHERIFF Dick Wright chased USA-CIO members off the streets with clubs last Spring when they distributed leaflets. He now has a job with Weirton Steel. (Top) Wright posts proclamation forbidding assemblages in Weirton. State police later were called in to protect the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly. The USA-CIO now distributes leaflets.

CIO Delegates Tell Of CTAL Convention

The excerpts below are from the joint report of O. A. Knight and Joseph Selly, presidents respectively of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union and the American Communications Assn., on the convention of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor which they visited as CIO delegates.

As can be seen from the attached list of delegates, the CTAL has representation from Central Labor bodies in almost every Latin American republic. The Congress reported that it represented a total of five million Latin American workers. There is no question in our minds that the CTAL is the labor movement in Latin America.

In many of the Latin-American republics the right to organize has been won recently and only after a bitter struggle. The struggle for this right has been accompanied, in each case, by a political struggle for the establishment of a democratic government for all the people.

The CTAL is identified in the minds of the peoples of Latin America as the leading force in the struggle for political as well as economic democracy. Its leaders are in many cases powerful and influential in the governments of their respective countries.

Because of the semi-colonial character of the economy of Latin America, the CTAL has received considerable support from large sections of native capital which is determined, along with labor, to free Latin-America from its semi-colonial and semi-feudal status, and to achieve the success of the industrial revolution.

DIFFICULT PROBLEM

The leadership of the CTAL has had a most complex and difficult political problem in attempting to bring to the peoples of Latin America a realization of their stake in the war against fascism. The years of domination by British and American capital, the bitter memory of those economic and political policies which were characterized as "Yankee Imperialism," have left their mark.

In his opening speech to the Congress, which was a masterful summary of the responsibilities of the labor movement in these trying times, Sr. Vincente Lombardo Toledano said in respect to this problem:

"Fortunately, we have already come a long way from the period in which Yankee Imperialism was confused with the great and generous people of the United States, and British Imperialism with the magnificent people of England."

In contrast to the sincere and warm reception which was given to the CIO delegation, there was an expression of justified resentment and anger at the stupidity and presumption of the AFL which, at its last convention, appropriated a sum of money to try to undermine the CTAL. The delegates were unanimous and firm in their support of Sr. Lombardo Toledano in rejecting the insulting approach of the AFL which is attempting to revive the moribund Pan-American Federation.

UNITY OF THE CTAL

The leadership of the CTAL is not only unchallenged, it is unquestioned. Although there was considerable discussion on many of the complex national issues, there was complete unanimity on the resolutions which summarized the discussion. Judged by this Congress, the CTAL is a strong and completely united organization.

Sr. Lombardo Toledano spoke at some length and took a position identical with that of the CIO in proposing that the CTAL delegates to the London Conference fight for a world labor organization which will include the trade unions of all the United Nations without exception.

The delegates were resentful of the position taken by the AFL on this question, which seeks to exclude the CIO, the Soviet Trade unions and themselves from participation in a world labor organization. On this point the AFL will find itself completely isolated as far as the Latin American trade union movement is concerned.

WAGES, CONDITIONS

The delegates reported spectacular achievements in the field of improvements of wages and working conditions. However, there was a real appreciation expressed in appropriate action of the fact that the standard of living is so far short of adequate as to constitute a danger, not merely to the workers but to the nation.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. That the Latin American Committee carry out, as quickly as possible, its decision to publish a clip-sheet in Spanish carrying significant news of the labor movement.

2. That a study be made of the economic analysis and resolutions prepared by the CTAL with a view to making appropriate representations to our State Department on questions of commerce, trade, investment of capital, labor standards, etc.

3. That the Committee consider a protest to the State Department against the discriminatory practices in the Canal Zone.

4. That international unions be encouraged to correspond with unions in their jurisdictions affiliated with the CTAL.

SOLIDARITY between CIO and CTAL (Latin-American Confederation of Labor) is shown in this picture of Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, Joseph Selly, president of ACA-CIO, and O. A. Knight, president of the CIO Oil Workers. Knight and Selly were sent from the CIO convention to the CTAL meeting in Cali, Colombia, last month.

Urges CIO Unions to Set Up Close Relations with CTAL

By HARVEY O'CONNOR

Impressed by the youthful vigor and drive of the Latin American labor movement, President O. A. Knight of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union returned from the Cali, Colombia, congress of the Latin American Confederation of Labor full of praise for the dynamic leadership of Vincente Lombardo Toledano.

"Our brother unionists south of the Rio Grande have forged a mighty people's movement to uphold the Good Neighbor policy," Knight said.

"Within a few years the unions affiliated with CTAL have been responsible not only for advanced social legislation, but they have put teeth in its enforcement. Many of the delegates at the congress were themselves members of the legislatures of their own countries which enact laws in the interests of the common man."

Knight and his co-delegate, Pres. Joseph P. Selly of the American Communications Assn., recommended to CIO that the various internationals establish fraternal relations with brother unions in Latin America. Knight is submitting such a proposal to the OWIU executive council, meeting Feb. 5 in Fort Worth.

On the initiative of the Colombian oil workers union, a hemispheric oil workers' conference has been proposed for next summer at Caracas, Venezuela, or Barranca Bermeja, Colombia. CTAL President Toledano enthusiastically indorsed the proposal and Sec. Francisco Arechandieta of the Mexican Oil Workers Union has been named chairman of the arrangements committee.

Knight is also proposing to the OWIU council that fraternal delegates be exchanged with the Mexican Oil Workers Union at future conventions, in order to bring the two unions closer together.

"Bad working conditions and low wages in South America can and will drag down the wages and standards of oil workers in our own country. And in a crisis operators could use their South American facilities when North American oil workers are seeking better conditions.

"International labor unity is not merely a slogan and a catchword. It is imperative.

"After the war South America will continue its great expansion, if the CIO and CTAL play their part. Instead of exploitation and dollar diplomacy, we can make the President's good neighbor policy work."

CIO Visitor Finds Cuban Unions Strong, Militant, Friendly

By WILLARD S. TOWNSEND

President, CIO Transport Service Employes

The Cuban Confederation of Labor (CTC) was formed in 1936, emerging out of the coalition of railway, maritime, tobacco, electrical and hotel workers on the island. Its principal base is in Havana. Like the CIO, the Confederation is active in political and legislative affairs, and has sent some of its members to Congress and in recent times has been also represented on the Municipal Council of Havana.

During my first day in Havana, visits were made to the various departments of the CTC.

I visited the labor press where 60 monthly magazines are laid out for printing and the printing establishment which housed modern printing equipment.

Visits were also made to the CTC radio station and medical health center. The medical center is amazingly efficient and accommodates hundreds of workers each week for medical care.

The next night 6,000 people crowded into the National Theatre to witness the opening of the Fourth National Congress. Thousands more were listening in the street, where loud speakers were provided.

Dr. San Grau Martin, president of the Republic, was one of the main attractions. He was followed by Lazaro Pena, CTC's secretary, who, incidentally, is a Negro. Pena reviewed Cuba's labor and social problems and pledged full support of the CTC to the government.

As CIO representative, I was the third speaker on the opening program. I extended greetings from the CIO to the Cuban workers, and following closely CIO's policy, discussed inter-American labor cooperation and the post-war problems of Latin-America.

My impression of the Cuban labor movement is that it appears to be a vigorous and militant assemblage of workers with full determination and emphasis on the improvement of living standards generally. It has 350,000 members.

The CTC has centered its attention during the last two years on laws to give practical application to the labor and social welfare clauses of the 1940 constitution of the Republic. In response to labor pressure, some of these clauses were made operative through presidential decree or by special accord of the council of ministers. The 44-hour week with pay for 48 hours and national holidays with pay are two.

Labor in the United States must interest itself in the Cuban labor movement and the Latin-American labor movement in general. The CIO, with its Committee on Latin-American Affairs, can do much to inform U. S. workers of their inter-dependence in formulating a broad labor program, both north and south of the border.

CIO SPEAKER at Havana convention of the Cuban Confederation of Labor was Willard S. Townsend, president of the Transport Service Employes, sent by CIO as a fraternal delegate.

How Soviet Trade Unions Aid Workers

By GLADYS CHASINS

(Third in a series of Allied Labor News articles on the labor movements of the United Nations.)

MOSCOW, Jan. 25 (ALN)—While the functions of trade unions in the Soviet Union are necessarily different from those of trade unions in the U. S., both have the same broad purpose: to negotiate and protect the wages and working conditions of their members and to advance the welfare of the workers.

The Soviet trade union movement is the largest in the world, with 25,500,000 members, about 85 per cent of the eligible working population. It is organized almost exclusively on an industrial basis, except that because of huge memberships and areas covered, some industrial unions are divided into separate regional organizations.

The basic unit of the Soviet trade union is the local. These locals comprise not only the 168 affiliates of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions but also form regional councils of all trade unions in one locality, similar to the AFL State Federations of Labor or the CIO Industrial Union Councils. Local executive boards are elected by secret ballot for one-year terms at general membership meetings. General membership meetings also elect delegates to national conventions, where national officers are elected. A demand by one-third of a union's membership can force the holding of new elections during the term of an elected officer.

Dues System

Dues and initiation fees, which are uniform in all unions, are 1 per cent of monthly earnings. The management of each enterprise is required by law to pay 2 per cent of the total payroll to the union, which in effect constitutes an addition to the payroll, based on the theory that the broad activities of the union should not place too great a financial burden on the membership. Managements in practically all plants consist of former workers trained especially for their new positions, frequently at the suggestion of the union.

Group organizers, elected on the basis of one for every five to 20 members, correspond to shop stewards in the U. S. In addition, all large plants have shop committees for each department with 100 or more members. These committees are elected by workers in the particular department and shop meetings are held at frequent and regular intervals, where day-to-day problems are worked out.

The AUCCTU is represented on the permanent Economic Council of the Soviet Cabinet, which helps to formulate the entire policy of the government in the economic field and which also acts as a labor relations board. Thus, on the higher level, trade unionists participate in the formulation of the nation's entire economy; and in each industry and each factory, this broad program is applied to the specific situations through negotiations between trade union representatives and factory managements.

Almost every local has the following standing committees: a Wage Committee, which handles pay rates and classifications; a Labor Protection Committee, which supervises the enforcement of laws on labor safety, working conditions, hours and health programs; a Welfare Committee, which supervises workers' housing, dining rooms, etc., and gives assistance to families of servicemen; a Production and Inventions Committee, which stimulates socialist emulation, encourages suggestions from the workers for increasing output, and aids in the training of new workers; an Education and Recreation Committee, which runs union clubhouses, camps and libraries.

Russians Led Way

Although barred from membership in the International Federation of Trade Unions, the Soviet trade union movement is affiliated with British labor in the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee. The recommendation of Soviet delegates to this body that it be enlarged to include U. S., Latin American and Canadian labor led to the idea of a world labor conference.

The formation of a new organization to replace the IFTU is considered by the Soviet labor movement as one of the major problems facing the world labor movement today.

Vasili Kuznetzov, chairman of the AUCCTU, stated sharply on his return from London in October that the IFTU does not meet the demands of a world labor organization which "must have a broad democratic basis; must be a militant organization capable of prosecuting the struggle against fascism and those who preach fascism; it must consolidate the ranks of the working classes of all democratic countries for the solution of present and post-war problems.

HEADS DELEGATES: Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, designated by CIO President Murray to lead the CIO delegation to the World Labor Conference meeting in London, Feb. 6.

Urges Federation To Replace IFTU

MOSCOW, Jan. 26 (ALN) — The establishment of a new world labor federation is "so essential" that it must be discussed by the trade unionists of all democratic countries before the world labor conference in February, E. Vazhenin, chairman of the Soviet Munitions Workers Union and a member of the presidium of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, declares this week in the AUCCTU organ Trud.

Discussing the recent articles in War and the Working Class by CIO president Philip Murray, Will Lawther, acting president of the National Union of Mineworkers of Great Britain, and Jack Tanner, president of Britain's Amalgamated Engineering Union, Vazhenin praises Murray's statement that the chief task of the February conference is to set up a new world labor organization, but adds:

"The authors of the other two articles confined themselves to much less specific remarks about the necessity for international labor unity. If this vagueness conceals the hope that the Federation which before the war united the trade unions of a number of countries (the International Federation of Trade Unions) will be resurrected, then to speak frankly this is bound to call forth serious apprehensions."

The tasks confronting the new world trade union body, Vazhenin continues, are the mobilization of the efforts of labor in all democratic countries "until fascism shall have been completely and finally defeated"; the "effective defense" of a stable and enduring peace; and "determined and consistent" defense of the economic interests of the people and of the existence of their trade union organizations.

In order to achieve these ends, he asserts, the new international labor group must "give every assistance to efforts made to establish a genuine international security organization and must give constant support to measures taken by this organization to ensure lasting peace." Quoting Murray as stating that "after the last war no such strong, representative international body came into existence capable of counteracting the forces which nourished international fascism," Vazhenin declares

IFTU IMPOTENT

In the face of the aggression which was being hatched by Hitlerism, the Amsterdam International (IFTU) proved impotent. This federation pursued a policy of complete non-resistance to the sinister forces of fascism, which were openly preparing for blood-thirsty aggression. And yet it could not have been otherwise, inasmuch as the Amsterdam International pursued the same political line as the League of Nations, which proved incapable of combating fascist aggression."

Another sphere in which the IFTU failed to measure up to the needs of a world labor organization, he charges, was "during the period of severe economic hardships for the large masses of the working people and the terrific international economic rivalry in the world market." The voice of organized labor, he asserts, "was not as strong as it should have been. Clearly in this respect the structure of the trade union organization must differ from that of the Amsterdam International."

Pointing out that militant trade union organizations are "frequently subject to attack," the Soviet labor leader adds that "the prestige of the international organization must be utilized for consistent defense of the rights of trade unions both nationally and internationally."

"Here, too, before the war the IFTU failed to grapple with the tasks confronting it. That is not surprising when we remember that many of its leaders, especially among the reactionary leaders of the German trade unions, deemed it far more important to weave anti-Soviet intrigues and villify the only country in the world where the working class was in power."

There are still leaders in the world labor movement "who place their prejudices and bigotry above the interests of the working class," Vazhenin asserts, citing the attitude of AFL officials toward the February conference. "It must be assumed," he concludes, "that the world trade union conference will not ignore the splitting maneuvers of the AFL leaders; that it will express its weighty opinion on such activities, which are detrimental to the interests of the workers."

Scores Argentine Fascism

Active support for the Argentine anti-fascists came this week from the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee in New York City, which urged the U. S. State Dept. to aid democratic, pro-United Nations forces there.

In a statement issued here, Jacob Potofsky, chairman of the CIO committee, said this week:

"CIO supports, of course, the State Department position and the position of the other Americas that the Farrell-Peron regime in the Argentine is an outlaw in the family of nations, but we believe that a more realistic, hard-boiled approach toward the problem is indicated, if we are to combat the Nazi cancer in the Argentine.

"We have seen the best democratic elements of all classes in the Argentine persecuted and driven underground, while aid and comfort is being given by the Farrell-Peron regime to Nazi agents and other foes of our American way of life.

"Not only is the Argentine regime, by its present actions, actively sabotaging the Allied war effort but it is helping plant the poisonous seeds of a postwar fascist ideology which will require more blood and more lives to erase.

"The United States is bound to fail in securing its own enlightened self-interest, as well as violate its own democratic conscience, if it fails promptly to render all necessary aid to the heroic resistance movement now battling for its life in the Argentine.

"We, of CIO, regard the Argentine democratic underground in the same light as we did resistance movements of France, Poland, Italy, Norway, Czecho-slovakia, Greece and other European lands which have been freed, or shortly will be, from the heel of the Nazi oppressor.

"Surely, the Argentine resistance movement is fighting for the same ideals and fundamentally against the same enemy as are the heroic Philippine guerrilla forces whom we nurtured and gave all possible support."

Potofsky announced that the CIO Committee on Latin-American Affairs plans shortly to issue a publication, in both English and Spanish, for general distribution, dealing with Latin-American problems.

Bookstore Birthday

The second anniversary of the CIO National Maritime Union bookstore will be celebrated this month, the union announced this week.

DELEGATES gather around the education display of UAW-CIO Amalgamated Local 842, at the union's Education Conference.

3 Rs Not Enough; UAW-CIO Pushes Education Program

Looking forward to the postwar period when workers' education will take an increasingly important part in labor union activities, the CIO United Auto Workers, largest union in the nation and pioneer in many phases of workers' education, this month held its second annual education conference, in Milwaukee, Wisc.

Seeking to solve their educational problems, 400 delegates from UAW-CIO locals all over the country met in keen discussion to trade ideas on methods of putting the latest educational programs into action.

The many and varied activities of the UAW education department were reviewed by William H. Levitt, Director of the UAW International Education Dept.

In the last year, the Education Dept. has distributed over three million pamphlets and issued a number of pamphlets written by its own staff. It has set up a Labor Book Club whereby subscribers may obtain popular books at reduced prices. It has secured for distribution films of interest to labor and produced the successful campaign cartoon film, "Hell Bent for Election," which was the only movie of its type circulated throughout the country during the election. The Department also publishes a monthly magazine.

Levitt urged all the delegates to take up their problems with the specialists in the various fields present at the conference and with the full-time education directors employed by the larger locals.

Panel Talks

Much of the work of the conference was done through informal panel discussions. Veterans' problems, political action, postwar planning, consumer problems and cooperatives, shop papers, movies and slide films, health and safety, reconversion, discrimination, international affairs, public relations, legislative objectives, wages and standards of living, and leadership training were among the topics for panel discussion.

Discussion on the "hows" of putting up-to-date educational methods into action centered around techniques of training leaders, use of literature, dramatics, shop papers, movies, visual techniques, questions of health and safety, job evaluation and time study, education programs for new local unions and education for servicemen.

Malcolm Ross, chairman of the FEPC, discussed the local union problems of discrimination as they were raised by the delegates

Lt. Col. B. C. Bowker, head of the army Orientation Branch of the U. S. Army, spoke on the work of his agency.

Army Orientation

It was the primary purpose of the Army Orientation course," Bowker said, "to give our men a sufficiently clear understanding of the issues involved so that each man would make a personal commitment to the war which would parallel our commitment to war as a nation."

To the six original objectives for orientation: Know why you fight, know your enemies, know your allies, know the news and its significance, know and have pride in your outfit and your personal mission, know and have faith in the United States and its future; two others have been added, he said. They are: Know the problems of reemployment and eventual demobilization; and know the problems involved in securing a lasting peace.

Speakers before the general sessions included UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, Secy.-Treas. George F. Addes, Vice-Pres. Walter P. Reuther, and Joseph Mattson, director of UAW-CIO Region Four. Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen's speech was read in his absence.

The important job of the local unions in educating and guiding the membership in the right direction was pointed out by Thomas.

WILLIAM H. LEVITT
Director UAW Education Dept.

"Labor must have a voice in determining the kind of world there will be after the war," Thomas said. "The UAW with other labor organizations must see to it that democracies are established throughout the world and all forms of Nazism and Fascism are crushed."

"We have a very definite stake in world affairs for our whole domestic policy from now on will be influenced by international policy. If some program is not formulated whereby the standards of the workers in other nations are raised, particularly in countries like China and India, there can be but one ultimate result, and that is that our status will slide down to that of theirs."

UAW Auxiliaries Will Compete in Member Drive

The CIO United Auto Workers Women's Auxiliary showing the greatest increase in membership in February and March will be given a $50 cash prize, it was announced this week by Catherine Gelles, Secy.-Treas. of the UAW Auxiliaries.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas has asked all UAW locals to assist the auxiliaries in the campaign, which begins Feb. 1 and closes March 31.

CIO Offers Plan To Correct Misuse Of Textile Labor

Misuse of manpower and not a manpower shortage is what's really wrong with the cotton textile industry, representatives of the CIO Textile Workers Union told the Mead Committee of the U. S. Senate at hearings held in Washington last week.

Present military and civilian shortages "can only be truly solved by correcting the obsolete wage and employment policies in cotton textile mills," TWU Research Director Sol Barkin declared in a statement submitted to the Mead Committee which is investigating the National Defense Program.

On a number of occasions, the TWU has pointed out constructive ways of meeting the shortage, Barkin said, and has appealed to various government agencies without results. Real causes of the shortages, he said, are poor working conditions, management's obsolete personnel policies, inadequate facilities in textile communities, and, finally, "the government's unimaginative and inadequate program for production, particularly as designed by the War Production Board."

John Edelman, Washington representative of the union, told the committee: "Management has fought us; government agencies by and large have ignored us. Maybe this committee will do something about boosting vital cotton textile production by investigating our charges and remedying the real causes back of the cotton textile shortage."

HIGHLIGHTS OF CASE

Highlights of the testimony brought out these facts which the committee indicated it would investigate without delay:

Some 1500 cotton mill workers in Atlanta are black-listed by textile mills and unable to get jobs making the much-needed duck, twill and tire cord.

In the Exposition Cotton Mill at Atlanta 600 of the 1800 looms have been idle since last spring because the mill has been laying off workers known to be active in the union.

For more than two years, the union has been telling government agencies that only wage increases, better working conditions and improved community facilities will increase cotton textile production. The agencies have ignored these recommendations and futilely sought to boost production through such devices as pep meetings, price increases and production directives.

Mill after mill has refused to set up labor-management committees to discuss production problems.

Working conditions in the Lane Cotton Mill, New Orleans, La., which refused to obey a WLB wage increase directive, are deplorable. Weavers worked in water over the soles of their shoes because management failed to repair a leaking roof and rainwater damaged much vital fabric.

Manpower is being drained off virtually every other cotton mill in the country because workers can go to airplane, munition and other plants and get from 65c to $1.20 an hour instead of the 50 to 60 cents they would get in cotton mills.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Among the specific steps the union recommended to the Mead Committee were these:

Urge the WLB to speed up the cotton wage cases now before it and grant cotton workers a 60-cent hourly minimum; a 10-cent general increase; minimum rates for occupations and a third shift differential.

Recommend the establishment of an over-all labor-management committee for the industry to plan production.

Recommend a unified effort by government, labor and management to correct out-of-date personnel and community practices.

Extend Social Security Coverage, Set Up Pre-Pay Medical Plan, Board Urges

Extension of coverage by the unemployment insurance system to some 15 to 20 million workers at present excluded, and extension of the old-age and survivors insurance program to 20 to 25 million additional employes and self-employed persons, were recommended in the ninth annual report of the Social Security Board, submitted to Congress this week by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

The board also renewed its recommendation for a system of insurance to prepay the costs of medical and hospital care.

Liberalization of benefit payments under old-age and survivors insurance, and more adequate payments under the Federal-State programs of public assistance also were recommended.

A system of disability and sickness insurance is also urged in the report, which points out that an average of 7,000,000 persons in the United States are sick or disabled each day, that the annual wage loss from these causes is from 3 to 4 billion dollars, and that the annual loss in working time runs between 1½ and 3½ million man-years.

Speedy Federal action to bolster the system of unemployment compensation is necessary, the report said, so that the states might make the necessary adjustments before the problems of reconversion strike with full force. "Unemployment compensation," the board argued, "cannot cure a prolonged or widespread depression, but can help to prevent one."

In this connection the board recommends increasing weekly benefits to $25, including dependents' allowances; increased duration of benefits to 26 weeks; provision of dependents' allowances for employed workers with families; modification of restrictive disqualifications, a Federal re-insurance system to buttress State reserves, and establishment of Federal minimum benefit standards.

CIO Backs Wallace In Congress Fight

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—The CIO entered the fight for Henry A. Wallace as Secretary of Commerce, with all powers that Jesse Jones used to have, with a letter this week from President Murray to affiliates asking them to wire support to their Senators.

Murray asked CIO members to help get united support for Wallace by urging employers "with which our unions have friendly relations" to write their Senators on the same lines.

"Industry, agriculture and labor should express their united support behind this appointment and the need of retaining in the Dept. of Commerce all the powers it now has," he said.

These powers, which a combination of polltax Democrats and Republicans in the Senate are now trying to take away include the huge apparatus of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., which Jones has sat on for more than 12 years.

By doing this, the polltaxers and their GOP allies hope to keep Wallace out of the foreign trade picture, even though they know he'll be confirmed as Secretary of Commerce.

Wallace's views on the need for a greatly expanded foreign trade are well known. So also are his views on the need for full production and jobs for all here at home. The two things go together, and unless we have a full foreign trade, we won't have full employment.

The polltaxers and their GOP friends know this, of course, but they don't dare to bring the real reasons for their opposition to Wallace and to jobs for all out into the open. This is the reason why they hide behind loud outcries of "inexperience" and why they make the charge that Wallace is "idealistic."

As usual, the Republicans are letting the polltax Democrats front for them in this fight. Sens. George and Bailey (S. C.) are trying to do the hatchet job on world trade and full employment that the GOP gang doesn't want to be seen doing itself.

Wallace, of course, believes in free enterprise. He believes, with FDR and the CIO that we must have "the maximum development of our private business resources for domestic and foreign trade and 60 million jobs at home," as Murray wrote in his letter to CIO.

Free enterprise, however, does not flourish when you have monopoly and cartel control of world trade. Monopolies and cartels are based on trade restriction, not expansion. A man like Wallace, who strongly opposes monopoly and cartels, will be in a key position in the Commerce Dept. to see that free enterprise really gets a chance to be free.

ANTI-FDR JONES

Jesse Jones, a Texas multimillionaire, does not hold with the beliefs of FDR or Wallace. He's an old hand at fighting the progressive policies of FDR's administration, and had a guiding part in attempts to defeat FDR for a fourth term nomination. His nephew was one of the ringleaders of the phoney "revolt" in the Texas Democratic party convention last year that tried to block FDR's nomination. Nephews of rich old uncles don't do such things without consultation.

Trying Quick Vote On Labor Draft

Congress this week was rushing the May-Bailey labor draft bill (HR 1119) to an early vote, in the hope that it could be passed quickly despite CIO opposition and opposition from many employers' groups.

In its form at time of writing (Jan. 25) the bill has lost the anti-union shop clause written into it last week. This would have made it illegal to send a drafted worker into a plant with a union shop contract. An attempt to put in a clause making it a criminal offense to ask a drafted worker to join a union was defeated in committee on a 12 to 12 vote.

The bill freezes all workers 18 to 45 in present essential jobs either in industry or agriculture. They can't leave without consent of their draft board. Men 18 to 45 in non-essential work may be ordered into essential jobs which should be as near their homes as possible.

Enforcement powers in the bill include a maximum of five years in jail or a $10,000 fine for refusal to take an essential job.

CIO's opposition to the bill was clearly stated by President Murray in his testimony two weeks ago before the House Military Affairs Committee. That position still stands. If the bill has not already passed, wire your Congressman today to vote against it.

Asks Better 'Breaks' For Disabled Veterans

It is an ironic fact that a wife frequently receives larger dependency allowances while her husband is in the service than she does after he has been discharged totally disabled, and has to support himself and his family.

That's what Milton D. Cohn, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, last week told the House Committee on World War Veterans Legislation as he sought to have changes made in existing laws.

He said that hospitalized veterans with service-connected disabilities should be considered "totally disabled" during their confinement and thus entitled to receive $115 a month. He urged allowances for dependents of the totally disabled.

Cohn said that veterans adjudged as totally disabled receive only $115 a month, except in those comparatively few cases where they may be entitled to specific statutory awards by reason of the loss of limbs and eyes.

"They receive no dependency allowances whatsoever, whereas Canada provides dependency allowances for families of totally disabled veterans at a rate of $25 per month for the wife, $15 for the first child, $12 for the second child, and $10 for each additional child, without limitation," Cohn said.

CIO Radio Roundup

Next two big national weekly CIO radio shows will be heard Saturday, Feb. 3, with the 6:45 p. m. EWT Blue Network program featuring a two-way hookup with London and expressions of opinion by some of the delegates attending the World Labor Conference.

The 3:45 p. m. EWT Columbia Broadcasting show will dramatically present the contribution to the war effort of the CIO Textile and Amalgamated Clothing Workers Unions.

* * *

Last speech by UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas over CIO's Blue Network program was a honey so far as national unity is concerned. Proof this week was a letter from the president of one of the largest moving and storage firms in Washington, D. C. Said employer Arthur Clarendon Smith:

"Being an employer, I want to congratulate you for the very fine talk on the radio about the CIO last Saturday night. Keep up these radio talks."

* * *

Found: One radio network that's got what it takes to slug it out with Pegler. Credit goes to Blue, whose Vice-Chairman, Chester J. LaRoche, this week hurled back in the columnist's teeth charges that News Commentator William Gailmor was "unfit" to broadcast.

LaRoche rejected Pegler's red baiting, pointing out that "calling a man a communist does not make it a fact," and declaring that "communism is an easy label to apply to a political liberal with whom you disagree."

Result is that Gailmor will continue to broadcast for the Electronic Corp. of America, under a Blue Network policy which permits "broad freedom of expression to its news commentators because, in this way, radio can contribute most to 'freedom of the air'."

* * *

CIO this year will broadcast on 13 weekly national programs over NBC, along with the AFL, Natl. Grange, American Farm Bureau Federation and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Program's name is "America United." Watch for announcements!

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 386 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

CONGRESS AND US

Votes On Barrelhead Test Of Sincerity On Foreign Policy

This seems to be a season for declarations on foreign policy. Following Senator Vandenberg's (R. Mich.) speech of a couple of weeks ago, 16 new Senators (10 Democrats and six Republicans) have signed a letter to FDR giving him their views of the peace that ought to come.

According to the 16 Senators, they favor formation "at the earliest possible moment of a United Nations organization" to keep peace "along the general lines tentatively drafted at Dumbarton Oaks."

Then they want us to assure our allies that we will "share in the direction of and the responsibility for the maintenance of peace." The letter closes with a suggestion that the allies sign treaties "as soon as possible" to disarm Germany and Japan and keep them disarmed. This last point is taken from Vandenberg's speech.

THE REAL TEST

The sentiments in the letter, and for that matter many of those in Vandenberg's speech, are sound. The real test will come, however, not on a letter or a speech or even a series of letters or speeches, but on actual votes on the Congressional barrel-head.

The first barrel-head that will meet the Congressional friends of world security is coming up within the next two or three weeks in the form of endorsement of the Bretton Woods world trade agreement. Later they'll have Dumbarton Oaks as another test.

Bretton Woods provides the basis in expanded world trade for 5,000,000 jobs in this country. It also does away with the kind of economic aggression that helped Germany and Japan prepare for this war. Bretton Woods means peace and jobs. It also means cooperation between 45 United Nations—cooperation for mutual profit.

NO QUIBBLING

We have a right and a duty to ask these 16 Senators, and Senator Vandenberg, and all the Senators and Congressmen just what they're going to do when Bretton Woods comes up. Are they going to vote for the agreement as worked out among the 45 nations or are they going to insist on apparently innocent but actually harmful amendments? Will they vote for five million jobs and world peace or will they try to weave a mess of weasel words around the issue for the sole purpose of defeating it?

The Bretton Woods agreement thoroughly protects the interests of the U. S. The fact that it provides the groundwork for five million jobs in U. S. export trades after the war is proof enough of that. The agreement was accepted by 45 nations. Changing it now means that the whole business will have to be thrown back in to a new international conference, which can take months and years to prepare and which could wreck the whole project.

Ask your Senators and your Congressman now — are they ready for the test of sincerity on world cooperation that will come with the vote on carrying out Bretton Woods?

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

Teachers for

YOUR child is important. He is in to you and to his country. To he's the man who'll be making th ions, casting his vote and discuss issues.

Next to you, his parent, there is closer to him than his teacher. S him six hours a day, five days a we shapes his thinking and his habi moulds his attitudes. She wields a over America's future.

American labor should be concern the teacher, and the role of educati the sake of the child who is most im to you and the world he will live in row.

Teachers have recently organiz the CIO. Large numbers of them affiliated with the State, County & M Workers of America, and have a s ing thought-provoking program that cerned with expanding educational h

FOR the benefit of the child, the S CIO teachers are for:

1. THE CONTINUATION ON A porary basis of Lanham Act fu nursery schools, with a permanent to be worked out with the CIO, W Auxiliaries, Child Care Committees, Teachers Assn. groups, and the U. of Education.

2. SUPPORT FOR THE CON

NEGRO TEACHERS ARE among the lowest paid in the country. They are discriminated against to the tune of $25,000,000 annually. Senator Tunnell of Delaware disclosed this during discussions on the Federal Aid Bill to Education which would provide $300,000,000 for the improvement of teachers' salaries, and for equalizing educational opportunities. This bill won the support of the CIO, and CIO's PAC. The CIO teachers urge resolutions by other trade union groups to support this. Pictured above is Mrs. W. Mae Mahaffey, a CIO teacher, of Local 581-P of the SCMWA. She is a teacher in the Blue Stone High school in Bramwell, West Virginia. She is shown conducting a spelling bee. Teachers work there under difficult conditions, such as overcrowding, and inadequate school buildings.

Democracy

portant
morrow
e decis-
ing the no one he sees

ek. She ts, and weapon

ed with on—for portant tomor-

ed into re now unicipal timulatis conorizons.

CMWA-

TEM-ds for solution
Women's Parent-
. Office

TINUA-

tion and expansion of the Federal School Lunch program.

3. THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A National Youth Authority, as recommended by the Senate Sub-Committee on Wartime Health and Education, for combatting juvenile delinquency.

4. A $200,000,000 FEDERAL APPROpriation to raise teachers' salaries and to hire additional teachers to relieve overcrowding of classes, as originally advanced in the Thomas-Hill-Ramspeck Bill.

5. A $100,000,000 APPROPRIATION IN the same bill for equalizing educational opportunities, between rural and urban communities, between northern and southern communities, between Negro and white areas.

6. THE RIGHT OF EVERY CHILD with ability to attend a free college.

TODAY the national average pay for teachers is $1,550 a year. About 66,000 teachers, eight in every hundred, receive less than $600. Negro teachers in the state of Mississippi get $377 a year. In fact, the Negro teachers lose $25,000,000 a year because of pay discrimination.

The relationship between teachers' salaries and your child is very close. How can a teacher give her best to your child, search his young mind, find out his hidden talents, his hidden troubles, if she is harassed by economic worries of her own, and is swamped by crowded classes?

Good education means individual attention. Can a teacher with 40 or 45 children in a classroom stop to find out what really causes Joe to misbehave? Can a highschool teacher who meets 250 pupils a day have time to find out why Mary doesn't do her homework? The parent who stops to think about these problems soon realizes that the best intentioned teacher under such circumstances can only handle problems presented hastily.

THE salary of the teacher, the size of the class, the size of the school, the condition of the school buildings, the curriculum—all these things—are related to the size of the education budget. And the size of this affects the standards of our children's education. If it is cut, our children suffer, and our community suffers.

As parents, you know that the education you received was inadequate. Only 60 per cent of Americans completed the Eighth Grade or less on leaving school. The lucky ones went on to high school, and an even smaller number went on to college.

The community was the loser. For when America needed men to fight fascism, we lost 750,000 due to functional illiteracy. This was 15 divisions—15 divisions which could not engage the enemy. Of these half a million were white, and a quarter of a million were Negro. It was a costly price for democracy to pay.

THE 1940 draft dramatically pointed the finger at the cost of low salaries for teachers.

For the 12 states that in 1920 paid the lowest salaries to teachers found out 20 years later that 110 men per thousand were not prepared to meet the minimum educational standard of four years of schooling for military service.

The 12 states that paid the highest salaries in 1920 reaped dividends 20 years later in the fact that only 23 men per thousand reported less than four years of schooling.

EQUALITY of educational opportunity has long been a dream of democracy. Today that dream can become a reality. And labor can help to achieve it, for our children, and our fellow workers' children.

President Roosevelt has written into his new Bill of Rights "the right to a good education" along with the right to a job, home, protection in old age and ill health.

And labor has always dreamed of this. Labor and education have had an historic relationship. Since the first strivings of labor as an organized group, unions have wielded a powerful influence for public education. For the struggle for free public schools was one of the first planks in the program of organized labor. An association of workingmen in Philadelphia in 1829 recommended that public schools be erected in every locality of the state, that popular election of school boards be held, and that free education be available for children of the rich and poor alike.

TODAY the CIO teachers show the way to continue that program in a series of legislative demands. It is a program to enrich our American way of life.

They want implementation of that program from the rest of labor. They say: You are a trade unionist, but you are also a parent, and your children are important to you. Have you taken part in parent-teacher association meetings? Has your organized group of parents, your local union, considered taking an active role in your community's Board of Education? Has your leading body of trade unionists looked into the problems of state aid for education? Have you passed a resolution supporting the federal aid bill to education? It is your child, and your neighbor's child and your fellow worker's child whose future is involved and through them the kind of world they will make for themselves.

Watch That New Cook!

An All-American Ideal

The chief accusation brought against Henry A. Wallace by certain reactionaries who oppose his nomination as Secretary of Commerce, and seek to strip that office of authority over many federal loan agencies, is that he is guilty of "idealism."

They cannot successfully contend that this idealism is divorced from practical experience and administrative ability. For Wallace happens to have had a long and outstandingly successful record as an administrator of government business far more extensive than most private business.

So let us examine the ideals to which his opponents seem to object.

Wallace's chief ideal in relation to the job for which President Roosevelt has nominated him happens to be belief in the possibility of attaining an objective overwhelmingly endorsed by the country in the last elections.

This objective is an expanding postwar economy, under our private enterprise system, in which government will play a constructive role in stimulating the cooperative efforts of industry, labor, agriculture and all other groups to achieve full production and full employment, with maximum development of our domestic and foreign trade.

Wallace, as CIO President Murray emphasizes, "has given clear public expression of his viewpoint that within the framework of private enterprise our national objective must protect and secure every person able and willing to work in his right to a job, and business in its opportunity to expand and make a reasonable profit in a world free from monopolistic practices of restricted production."

This ideal is certainly shared by all forward-looking Americans, whether they be businessmen, big or little, farmers, working people, or whatever else their occupation.

It can only be opposed by selfish monopolists who imagine they can profit from curtailed production, unemployment and general national distress.

In Wallace, President Roosevelt has picked for Secretary of Commerce an outstanding exponent of this practical ideal, and a man with the administrative experience and ability to make best use of his important office for its achievement.

Americans in every walk of life who want to see a prosperous postwar America should urge their Senators to confirm Wallace as Secretary of Commerce without delay, and see that none of the powers that now reside in that position are withdrawn.

Logjam Against Labor

The War Labor Board has never been remarkable for its speed in handling cases—to put it mildly. After more than a year, it has still failed to make any report to the President on labor's demand for revision of the Little Steel formula.

To this longstanding injustice against labor, there has now been added the intolerable provocation of a letter from Stabilization Director Vinson which virtually deprives the WLB of any function and is holding up decisions in the CIO Textile Workers' and other important wage cases.

Vinson has asked the Board not to render any decision on even so-called fringe issues such as vacations, reclassifications, shift premiums, etc., without first ascertaining from the OPA whether it may be inclined to grant any price increases.

War morale is suffering from the continued failure to adjust labor's longstanding wage grievances. Vinson's attitude, added to WLB stalling, has now created an impossible logjam. It must be broken through.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

SHIRLEY has a pretty good line on Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks, based on practical personal experience.

She has been aided in her understanding by the fact that, at her age, she glances at articles by economists and monetary experts upside down or sideways, if at all—and the nearest she comes to trying to digest them is in the form of spitballs.

To provide employment for herself, Shirley recently converted her toy stove into a store counter and cash register.

She had little difficulty in producing goods to sell, but more trouble in finding customers, since the possibilities of her domestic market were soon exhausted.

So she went after foreign trade by bringing in the neighbors' children—and ran slap up against the problems that were confronted at the Bretton Woods conference.

★ ★ ★

All of the kids wanted to buy Shirley's goods, and all of them either had, or could produce, goods to sell in exchange.

But Lucy and Jimmy, like the devastated and undeveloped countries, came empty-handed.

The others thereupon hit upon the solution developed at Bretton Woods, and there described as a Bank for International Reconstruction and Development.

They pooled some of their resources and granted a loan to Lucy and Jimmy, so they could run back home and rehabilitate themselves by bringing back some goods and currency.

★ ★ ★

But no sooner had trading begun than another Bretton Woods problem arose, concerning currency and exchange rates.

Shirley's currency was strictly paper money—and some of it toilet paper, at that. Bobby, on the other hand, had pennies and nickels. Lucy returned magnificently rehabilitated with cigarette coupons, while Jimmy brought back marbles.

This variety lent spice to the transactions at first. But then Bobby began manipulating exchange rates to his own advantage, depending on whether he was buyer or seller at the time. The others began to lose out, with their money rendered virtually worthless, and trade was disrupted to the point of tears.

Daddy was consulted as a financial expert and suggested the Bretton Woods proposition of an International Monetary Fund.

A pool was created from which the victims of Bobby's manipulations could restore the value of their currency and continue to buy and sell, at more or less stable rates of exchange.

Bobby, who contributed most to the pool, thought this unfair at first. But when he realized the alternative was an end to the whole trading game, and idleness for himself as well as the others, he saw the point.

★ ★ ★

Unfortunately, however, Bobby later showed more pronounced signs of being an aggressor nation. He tired of trading and just started to grab Jimmy's marbles. A general melee threatened.

The Big Three adults present were appealed to by their respective offspring, with obvious attempts to involve them on opposing sides. Had this occurred, a minor fracas might have developed into a neighborhood war.

But fortunately the Big Three stood together, and the dispute was settled along Dumbarton Oaks lines. Together with the youngsters they formed a Security Council and judiciously decided who was the aggressor.

The "sanctions" of not being allowed to play with the others if he didn't behave, were applied. The armed force of a threatened paddling was held in reserve. And peace was speedily restored.

★ ★ ★

The above procedures seemed as reasonable and natural to Shirley and the other kids, as do the Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks proposals to most Americans.

When the Bretton Woods agreement comes before Congress, therefore, opponents with special axes to grind are not likely to express outright opposition.

They are more likely to say the general idea is all right, but this, that and the other should be changed—until a plan already based on international agreement would be destroyed by a whole slew of destructive American amendments.

Similarly with Dumbarton Oaks, most of the isolationists have changed their tune. Dropping their earlier sneers at the Atlantic Charter and "internationalism" they now say that nothing but the most immaculate internationalism in the undiluted spirit of the Atlantic Charter (as interpreted by them) will satisfy them.

At the same time, they strike at the very basis of Dumbarton Oaks and future world peace—the continued unity of America, Britain and the Soviet Union—by seeking to breed distrust between the Big Three and insisting on conditions unacceptable to one or other of these powers.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 January 29, 1945 No. 5

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Ralph Tillotson, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Erie, Pa., reports: Johnson Bronze Co., New Castle, Pa., UAW-CIO 710, IAM-AFL 35, no union 361. This organizing drive began in February, 1942, and was brought to a successful conclusion by UAW Rep. Harry Delin and Reuban Peters.

Wm. B. Taylor, Org. Dir., Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, advises: War Emergency Pipe Line, Inc., Division one, CIO 48, against 23. Motor Fuels Corp., Levelland, Texas., CIO 34, against 25.

CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, report: Waterbury Rolling Mills, Waterbury, Conn., CIO 72, no union 12.

John C. Lawson, Secy.-Treas., Stone & Allied Products Workers, advises: Everett, Pennsylvania, plant of Pittsburgh Sand Co., CIO 29, no union 6. Rep. Niles Alvine handled the organization of this plant.

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig, Philadelphia, reports: Abrasive Company, Philadelphia, CIO 263, District 50, UMWA, 153. Dist. 50 had a contract here for approximately 19 months and did nothing to improve the working conditions of the employes. Finally the employes decided to come into the CIO. CIO Field Reps. George Bucher was in charge and Victor Ulivitch assisted in the campaign. Congratulations to both for the wonderful job that was done.

Field Rep. B. T. Wolford, Huntington, W. Va., reports: Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., UE-CIO 68.8%, AFL 26.6%, Neither 3.6%. UE Rep. Irene Berman was in charge.

CIO Marine Engineers Have Perfect No-Strike Record; Reaffirm Pledge

Not a single strike of any kind since Pearl Harbor has blotted the record of the CIO's Natl. Maritime Marine Engineer's Beneficial Assn. This 100% perfect record was revealed at the union's 69th annual convention held in Washington Jan. 15-20, when delegates voted unanimously to reaffirm their no-strike pledge.

The Marine Engineers, one of the oldest national unions in the CIO, is composed of licensed officers in the merchant marine. The 24 delegates attending the convention came from the Great Lakes, the Rivers, and Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts.

Pres. Samuel J. Hogan was re-elected unanimously to his fifth term as head of the union and William O. Holmes was elected to his first term as secretary-treasurer.

Also-re-elected were 1st Vice-Pres. Ray H. Robinson and 2nd Vice-Pres. Warren C. Evans. John K. Shepler was elected 3rd vice-president.

Members of the newly elected Natl. Executive Committee are Edward L. Rodgers, Atlantic Coast; R. Meriwether, Pacific Coast; D. J. Hueston, Gulf Coast; O. H. Goodell, Rivers; and William J. Garrett, Great Lakes.

Officers are elected for a two-year term, although conventions are held annually. New Orleans was chosen as the city in which the 1946 convention will be held.

Important part of the program drawn up for the coming year concerns the uniform agreement which the union is seeking to have signed by steamship companies on all coasts. So far 28 companies have already accepted it.

Fur Bosses Take Lessons From Avery, Says Union Board

Bosses in the New York fur industry are trying to pull a "Sewell Avery," the executive board of the CIO's Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union were told at a semi-annual meeting held at Atlantic City, N. J., this week.

Details of the threat of New York fur manufacturers to lock-out of some 8,000 fur workers and to continue their defiance of the War Labor Board after the style of Sewell Avery of Montgomery-Ward were related to the union's executive board by Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers Joint Council.

The dispute between the union and the Fur Manufacturers Assn. of New York has been going on since an old agreement expired in February, 1944. In June a panel of the New York regional WLB issued its recommendations, which included: Equal division of work for a 10-month period; no discharge without just cause; and one and two weeks' paid vacation.

During all negotiations and hearings before the various boards since the contract expired, the Association continued to stall and to refuse to meet the union's demands. Last month the Natl. WLB issued a final directive which was immediately accepted by the union even though it granted only a part of the union's demands. The Association refused point-blank to accept the order, and as in the case of Montgomery-Ward, challenged the Board's authority.

Potash told the executive board that although some manufacturers are being duped by the ring-leaders into defying the Government, many others patriotically desire peace in the industry. He said that almost 600 individual agreements have been concluded by the union and that the recent collective agreement signed with the Retail Fur Assn. covered some 200 firms.

Earlier the executive board heard a report given by Pres. Ben Gold recommending that all steps necessary be taken to meet the Fur Manufacturers' defiance without strikes and stoppages.

The board unanimously reaffirmed its no-strike pledge at the opening meeting and went on record in full support of the National CIO convention decision to continue the pledge until "the complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces."

Something Rotten Going On In Textile Pay Case, Says TWU

By political conniving and pressure on "higher-ups" in the Government, the American Cotton Manufacturers Assn. is trying to prevent the War Labor Board from increasing the miserably low wages of the nation's cotton textile workers, Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers' Union charged this week in Washington.

In a letter sent to all U. S. Senators and Representatives Rieve said:

"Certain forces have sprung brazenly into action to frustrate a pending decision of Natl. War Labor Board in the cotton textile case and according to the written word of their spokesman have secured the aid and assistance of high government officials to defeat one of the most depressed groups of industrial workers in the country."

Rieve explained that he was referring to a telegram which W. H. Hightower, president of the Association, sent to "all Southern Senators and Congressmen with the exception of Arkansas and Kentucky" urging the legislators by a "crafty distortion" of the case to enter a protest to Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson and Director of War Mobilization James Byrnes against the proposed cotton textile wage increases.

"Presumably this brazen call for political interference bore fruit." Rieve told the U. S. Legislators, "for on Jan. 12, 1945, William P. Jacobs, an industry member of the Natl. War Labor Board panel which heard the cotton textile case, who agreed in the finding that existing cotton textile wages are substandard, issued 'Another Progress Report' to cotton textile manufacturers."

In this report, Rieve stated, Jacobs informed the manufacturers that he had "conferred with Judge Vinson, having previously conferred with Justice Byrnes" who "arranged the conference with Judge Vinson for us . . . The matter is now in his hands and from the pressure that we know has now reached him, it is possible to say that for political reasons he may be forced to indefinitely hold the matter, or he may recommend a basis somewhat lower than the WLB would authorize."

"SATISFACTORY" INTERVIEW

Jacob's report, a partial copy of which Rieve made public at a press conference, said that the interview with Vinson was "satisfactory and resulted in a hopeful conclusion, again indicating the effect of pressure from higher up and perhaps from the letters which you have written to members of Congress."

Rieve reviewed the history of the cotton textile wage case which he pointed out had been before the WLB for more than a year and informed the Senators and Congressmen that all government agencies agree that wage adjustments are necessary to hold and procure manpower. The cotton textile industry is now at its lowest ebb since the war began, he said. It has lost 76,000 workers and shortages have become critical.

UE Group Hits Wage Policy

Government agencies and officers responsible for the administration of national wage policy have fallen down on the job, delegates representing 80,000 Westinghouse workers wired President Roosevelt this week from a meeting in N. Y. City.

The Natl. Westinghouse Conference Board of the CIO Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, meeting there this week, voted unanimously to call upon FDR "to counteract the failures and blunders of his subordinates by granting an immediate national cost-of-living wage adjustment of 17c an hour retroactive to Jan. 1, 1944."

Failure of Director of War Mobilization James Byrnes, Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson and the Natl. War Labor Board "to understand their responsibilities to production and to the efficient mobilization of the home front have resulted in a narrowly conceived and rigidly applied wage freeze," states a resolution passed by the conference.

The policies followed by these government officials and agencies, the conference board declared have:

1. Handicapped and limited the attainment of full and efficient war production.

2. Served to prevent the efficient and flexible application of our nation's manpower to the needs of war production.

3. Operated to depress the living standards, health, morale and production efficiency of the nation's workers.

Donner Named Legal Assistant

Frank Donner, a former principle attorney and supervisor of enforcement at the NLRB, was appointed national CIO legal assistant this week, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel announced.

Donner is a graduate of Columbia Law School

Health Plan Pays $500,000 In First Year

Members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers received some $500,000 in payment of sickness and accident claims during the first year of the operation of an insurance plan operated by the Trade Union Accident & Health Assn. of America, according to a report made at a quarterly meeting of the union held this week at Reading, Pa.

The plan, which was originated by Dr. Leo Perlman, was adopted at the annual convention of the Federation of Hosiery Workers in May, 1943. It provides for payment by manufacturers with whom the union has agreements of a premium of 2 per cent of their gross payroll for coverage of their employes for accident, health, hospital, medical and surgical insurance.

Up to Nov. 29, 1944, 3,200 members of the union had received benefits under the insurance plan, the Federation reported.

Streetcleaners Ask Overtime

Vigorous protests against the policy of N. Y. City's Sanitation Dept. of imposing overtime and Sunday work without compensation were expressed this week at meeting of 300 Brooklyn sweepers and drivers affiliated with the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers.

The meeting voted to appeal to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to act on union proposals for time and a half pay for overtime work; Sunday pay; and a conference between the union and Sanitation Dept. officials to help solve problems confronting the workers.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1726-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

WPB, OPA Act to Direct Textiles Into Low-Cost Clothes and Cut Prices

A double-barreled program to increase production of low-cost clothing and to cut its cost 6 to 7 per cent was announced this week by WPB Chairman J. A. Krug and Price Administrator Chester Bowles.

The program marks a victory for the CIO and its Women's Auxiliaries, which have campaigned for low-priced, durable clothing for more than a year.

Heart of the joint OPA-WPB program are restrictions which will force about 75 per cent of all textiles—cotton, wool and rayon—into low and medium-priced clothing.

The program requires more low and medium-priced cotton garments to bear tags marked by the manufacturer at specific dollar-and-cents prices. Retailers will be required to mark all other garments at OPA ceiling prices.

Other phases of the program are:

Equitable distribution by requiring garment manufacturers to sell the same proportion of output as in 1943 to retailers who were customers then.

Production by textile mills of a major percentage of their output—at average prices not exceeding the average prices for the first half of 1943—to fill orders for manufacturers producing essential garments.

FINISHING RESTRICTED

Restricting the amount of "over finished" textiles, thus preventing upgrading of prices on poor quality materials.

Controls "where feasible" over quality.

These steps are expected to alleviate the acute shortage in children's garments, men's and women's underwear, work clothes, men's shirts and shorts, house dresses, towels and numerous other items.

During the first and second quarters of this year the program should provide 38 million and 60 million children's garments respectively, according to Dr. William Y. Elliott, vice-chairman in charge of the Office of Civilian Requirements, WPB.

"During these (past) 18 months," Bowles said, "clothing prices rose 11 per cent. Only a drop of 4.5 per cent in food prices and stability of rent prices have prevented a dangerous rise in living costs.

"We cannot rely on a continued downward trend of food prices. Those who have studied the problem agree that the alarming rise in clothing shows no indication of abating. In fact, quite the reverse. Unless we take firm action now, the entire stabilization program will be in danger."

High Postwar Prices Seen Abolishing Jobs

A warning that increases of postwar prices over the 1941-42 level will increase unemployment was sounded this week by the Office of Price Administration Labor Policy Committee.

"While the OPA can do nothing to force prices back below their pre-war level, labor is convinced that OPA must not permit prices to go any higher than they were in 1941-42," the committee said. "For this reason labor is urging OPA to require producers, with very few exceptions, to stick to their old prices when they go back to production again."

Members of the committee are: Donald E. Montgomery, CIO; Julius R. Luhrsen, Railway Labor Executives Assoc., and Boris Shiskin, AFL.

Ration Units Are Lauded By Murray

The work of the OPA War Price and Rationing Boards was lauded by CIO President Philip Murray on the occasion of their third anniversary this month.

"The CIO is happy to send greetings to the OPA War Price and Rationing Boards on their third anniversary," Murray said in a message to them. "We are especially proud of the work done by the thousands of CIO members of these boards.

"We in the CIO recognize the extreme importance of stabilization measures in times of war; we recognize the equal importance of stabilization measures during the reconversion period.

"We are glad, therefore, to commend the boards on this occasion for the work already done and to wish them even greater success and more effective work in the critical period ahead."

UAW, Farmers To Act Together At South Bend

An example of farm-labor unity are the community discussion groups formed in South Bend, Ind., by educational committees of the St. Joseph County Farm Bureau and the CIO United Auto Workers, Local 5, to study opportunities for common action.

A meeting of all discussion groups will consider bills before the state legislature which are of common interest.

The local has been operating a co-op food store in South Bend since 1942. The store had difficulty finding coal until it concluded arrangements with the Farm Bureau cooperative to handle coal orders.

Out of this agreement grew a series of get-togethers between the members of the two groups, which in turn developed into the discussion groups.

Price Panels Given More Authority

Office of Price Administration price panels now have power to crack down on price ceiling violators on their own initiative — additional authority emphasizing the need for labor representation on panels.

The panels "have been empowered to act for the Administrator of OPA and to negotiate settlement of price violations reported to the panel," it was announced this week by the OPA.

The authority was given "to help fill in the gaps left when the victims of over-ceiling prices fail to take the necessary action against violators." Individual consumers still have the right and the responsibility to take action themselves.

Deliberate violators are subject to fines of three times the amount of the overcharge, or $50, whichever is greater. Unintentional violators are liable to pay a fine equal to the overcharge, or $25, whichever is greater.

If the purchaser takes action, he recovers the damages. If the panel files an administrator's claim, the panel decides whether the overcharge may be refunded to the purchaser.

BY ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Some rather startling information on wage rates for women workers has been released by the Women's Bureau. It shows that even in this war period wages for women workers in service jobs in states which have no minimum wage laws, go down as low as 12 and 15 cents an hour.

Eleven states were studied. Nine of them — Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia—have no minimum wage law. Kansas has no minimum wage rates in effect, and Maine's law applies only to one industry—fish packing.

Average hourly earnings in restaurants, laundries, limited price stores and hotels in 88 cities in those eleven states gave these results:

"The average earnings for some of these women-employing occupations were as low as 18 cents an hour in four localities and less than that in six."

In 50 to 60 areas the average hourly earnings of women in five laundry occupations were less than the 40 cent an hour minimum established for workers in interstate commerce under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Waitresses got less than 25c an hour in one third of the areas. In 70% of the cities reporting wages of hotel maids were under 30 cents an hour. The average hourly wage for women retail clerks was under 40 cents in all but two places.

WAR EFFORT HAMPERED

Wage conditions like these hamper the war effort. Women are needed in all of these occupations to service our war workers and our servicemen and women. We all know that shortages of help in laundries, restaurants, hotels and stores interferes with war production — and especially with the efficiency of women war workers.

One way this situation can be met is state minimum wage laws. And the urgency of the war need for correcting these shocking conditions calls for immediate action. In nine of those eleven states the legislatures are now in session.

Although wages for men in service industries in those states are not nearly as low as those for women, they also fall below minimum decency standards in many places. A state law to give minimum wage protection to all workers is clearly needed.

So far, however, only New York and Connecticut, of the 26 states with minimum wage laws, apply those laws equally to men and women. It has been easier to get passage of laws giving that protection only to women—and there is no question that theirs is the greatest need.

Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment, passage of which would make minimum wage laws for women unconstitutional, have been saying that women no longer need the protection of those laws.

The Women's Bureau figures on these eleven states prove how wrong they are. And they should furnish all of us with very effective ammunition to use in opposing the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, as well as in securing passage of minimum wage laws in states which do not have them now.

Chicago UTSEA Will Study Co-Op Education, Action

A Committee on Cooperative Activities has been formed to study plans for co-op education and action among the CIO Transport Service Employes in the Chicago area.

Cooperative enterprises may result from the activities of the committee, which will study credit-union plans and sponsor neighborhood study groups.

Ernest Calloway, UTSEA educational and publicity director, is chairman.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Drawn by MORT MESKIN

Story by JOSEPH GREENE and JERRY COLE

Ernest T. Weir—Dictator

(Continued from Page 1)

ton Steel Co., sole major holdout against CIO in the industry, squatting black and grimy next to the Ohio River, far up the panhandle of the State of West Virginia.

Weirton Steel and the town of Weirton are dominated by Ernest Tener Weir, $275,000-a-year founder of the company, and chairman of the board of directors of the Natl. Steel Corp. The 69-year-old Weir boasts that "no one ever gave me anything." Most of his employes would be willing to testify in secret before St. Peter that the steel magnate has spent his life making certain that the policy works in reverse.

The appearance of the gray-haired Weir contrasts sharply with his ruthless domination of the lives of his workers. A biographer has described him as looking like a "genial, kindly and prosperous pastor" with a "healthy pink complexion, soft blue eyes and benevolent expression." A non-critical observer might credit this self-made industrial overlord with the principles of Christian goodwill and sympathetic understanding were it not for the documented record of terror and thuggery engaged in by the stooges under his direction.

Witness after witness has testified in government hearings to the use of company "hatchet gangs," the vicious beatings administered to workers and union organizers, and the abrupt dismissals of long-time employes who had the courage to exercise their lawful right to join a labor organization.

Weir's record goes far beyond the barbed wire, tear gas and riot gun relations with his 10,000 employes in Weirton. It has national and international implications.

A long-time Republican, Weir actively backed Governor Thomas E. Dewey's campaign, although other GOP bigwigs made certain the support was on an off-the-record basis because of Weir's anti-labor record. In 1932, the company circulated "Vote for Hoover" buttons, with instructions to wear them or else . . .

Weir was a member of the openly anti-labor Liberty League, that withered like a sunflower in the hail of Roosevelt votes which carried FDR back into office in 1936. Weir was listed by the sensational and well-documented book, "Under Cover," as one of the heaviest contributors to the America First Committee, which crawled back under the rug shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Weir lives in comfortable Pittsburgh, about two hours' train ride east of Weirton through the hills of Pennsylvania. His private barony is the largest unincorporated town in the country, with its 30,000 inhabitants boxed in against the Ohio River, and surrounded by hills.

Key to People

The forbidding cliffs that dominate this vast industrial heart of America, dark and smoky and dirty against a light fall of snow, give a key to the kind of lives that people lead who are virtually chained to the machines that make steel—the most vital single product in the world. Millions of them fled the poverty of Europe—Poles, Czechs, Finns, Serbs, Greeks, Italians and lots more—only to discover that the freedom of America was as hard to win as was the bread to feed their families.

In valley after grimy valley, people like these answered the call of the CIO United Steelworkers when the union held out the hope of organizing for better wages, for decent hours, and for the right of a man to stand up in public meeting and say what he thinks without fear of being fired from his job.

Today, except for Weirton, the workers in every major steel plant in the nation are organized in the CIO Steelworkers Union.

Only at Weirton, which in 1932-33 was the lone profit-making firm in the industry, has management been successful in bamboozling its workers with the hocus-pocus maneuvers of a company-dominated "union." Tens of thousands of dollars and the energy and brains of shrewd and capable propaganda experts have been poured into the task of maintaining Weirton Steel as a tight little dictatorship.

Phoney 'Strike'

The attempt to unionize Weirton dates back to the days of the old AFL Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, which outlawed a Weirton "strike" in 1933. Oldtimers at Weirton today remember that strike as strictly a phoney, and say they believed it was started by company agents with the full knowledge that the workers could not win it, and with the certainty that loss of the strike would mean dissolution of the union.

The strike was a flop. A rigged-up election that followed it was so completely dominated by the company that a government agent, assigned to see that there was fair play, gave up in dismay.

Most of the workers who participated actively in the strike were fired immediately, and the company began a long campaign of weeding out other "disrupters" who believed that the U. S. Government meant what it said when it stated that the people are free to join labor unions for their own protection. Nationality was turned against nationality, brother against brother, and father against son in the terroristic suppression of the slightest step toward industrial democracy.

The company - dominated Employes Representation Plan and the company-dominated Weirton Security League were succeeded by the company-dominated and currently alive Weirton Independent Union Inc., which has been outlawed by the Natl. Labor Relations Board and is now the subject of a court investigation. Workers had to join these organizations if they wanted to keep their jobs, and those who were members of legitimate unions too followed the practice of "keeping a union card in one boot and a company union card in the other boot."

The company developed its own Gestapo system, paying workers to spy on other workers and hiring thugs and strikebreakers to serve on its "hatchet gang" which regularly beat up any employes careless or courageous enough to express pro-labor sentiments.

The company owns large blocs of property, and controls many others. Because of this, it was eight years before the USA-CIO could rent a hall in Weirton. Some of the 60-odd empty store fronts in town are empty because the company rented them to keep the union from occupying them!

Only Big Plant

Weirton Steel was and is now the only big plant in town. It has so dominated politics that until 1935 company police patrolled the streets. This was forbidden finally by West Virginia law.

According to officials of the CIO union—local Director Robert J. Davidson and his assistant Lorne Nelles—the company has four times as many plant protection police as any other steel firm of equal size. It has armored cars—virtual tanks—tear gas and riot guns and machine guns to use. And it has the law of Hancock County on its side because the town of Weirton dominates the County.

This week the law of Hancock County sat itself down to try 29 members of the union, four of them on riot charges and 25 others under the West Virginia Redman Act which makes it unlawful for a group of men to assemble on the public streets if a Justice of the Peace says that such a meeting would endanger the public welfare. They had been distributing leaflets at company gates last Spring when they were violently attacked by members of the company "hatchet gang." Three of the union men were badly injured.

Swung First

Testimony before a jury by Tom Long, a leader of the company union, was that the USA-CIO men attacked company men. But this was flatly contradicted by a resident of Weirton who said that he saw Long swing his fist and tell Charles Barranco, one of the four accused of riot, that, "I'm going to run you out of town if it's the last thing I do."

Other witnesses testified that three union men, but only one company man (Long), were injured in the fight. The arrests, however, were all of union men.

It took the jury just a short time to bring out a verdict of acquittal for Barranco and Louis Capone, another of the four. The trial of the other union men will continue.

The decision was interpreted by USA-CIO leaders as another indication of the seething rebellion which is mounting against Weirton Steel's continued attempt to regiment company workers.

One other straw shows how the wind is blowing. The Weirton Worker, publication of the company union, and the company-controlled press of the vicinity, blatantly supported Dewey and other Republican candidates. The Republican Primary registration in Hancock County was 1,000 more than the Democratic registration. Despite all this, the Weirton voters rolled up a 2,300 majority for re-election of President Roosevelt, sweeping practically every Democratic candidate into ofice.

USA-CIO officers point out that there has been a consistent trend since 1932 in favor of the progressive policies expressed by the Roosevelt Administration. They say that the workers of Weirton know what they want, and will vote to get it, if they can do so by secret ballot. They are confident that when the USA-CIO calls for and gets a secret election, which is guaranteed free of company intimidation, the overwhelming majority of Weirton workers will vote for the union.

(Next week: How the company fools the workers. How the company union operates. How Weirton Steel controls the press. How civil liberties have been suppressed in Weirton. The myth of Weirton's "High" wages.)

ERNEST T. WEIR
"No one ever gave me anything."

WEIR'S TANKS help him to "keep things orderly." This one (No. 9) is said to be equipped with tear gas, machine guns and other lethal weapons.

WEIR'S STOOGES issue proclamations like this, which, under provisions of an ancient law, forbid assemblages of three people or more, and allow Weir-dominated law officers to clap union men in jail on felony charges for exercising their constitutional rights.

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 6 82 February 5, 1945

National Edition

Crisis In The Classroom—U.S. Aid Badly Needed

By SARA LEE DILL

Members of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor this week heard America's need for a workable federal aid to education bill dramatized in the shocking statistics of education experts and in the simple facts presented by rural school teachers.

Statistics presented by Natl. Education Assn. experts and others revealed a deplorable inequality of educational opportunity between the states that drags down the standards of education and therefore the quality of the future citizens of our whole country.

Bare statistics tell the story:

1. In 1943-44 alone 20 per cent of the teachers were new to their positions.

2. At least 50,000 teachers entered the military services or war industries.

3. Nearly 30 per cent of the teachers were paid less than $1200 per year; 5 per cent were receiving less than $600 per year.

4. More than 50,000 teachers were employed on emergency or substandard certificates.

5. At least 8000 classrooms lacked teachers.

The situation was further complicated by the fact that enrollments in teachers' colleges had dropped from 146,000 in 1941-42 to 72,000 in 1943-44—a decrease of more than 50 per cent.

Kermit Eby, CIO director of research and education, testifying before the committee, pointed out the "necessity of taxing wealth where it is to educate the children where they are . . ."

Poor states with incomes per capita and per pupil comparable to Mississippi, North Dakota, and Alabama, would have to make an economic effort to finance education far greater than any other states have yet made, in order to provide a minimum level of support of $1600 per classroom unit.

"The corporations which take the wealth from the states," Eby said, "should be taxed to educate the children of the workers."

The education aid bill before the committee (S 181) appropriates $300,000,000, two-thirds of it to bring teachers' salaries up to the decency level and the rest to improve school facilities. The money is to be spent by the states, which refutes the Republican outcry against the bill on the alleged ground that it means "Federal control."

The stories of rural teachers like Miss Wilma Upchurch told of the human pathos involved in the cold statistics. Miss Upchurch has been teaching the first grade in Douglas County, Nebr., for 16 years. She earns $1,125 a year; and though with her B. S. degree she has been offered jobs at twice the money, "someone must teach the children."

Negro schools in the South are even more crowded than white schools, and the teachers lower paid. Miss Florance Christmas told the committee about her school in Copiah County, Miss., where 190 pupils are taught eight grades by her and two other teachers. Miss Christmas earns a total of $360 for six months' teaching, as much as she earns in six weeks at a job in a factory the rest of the year.

AMERICA'S KIDS deserve the best in classroom equipment and teachers not only in nursery schools but through the entire twelve grades. The earnest faced kid (top) is in one of New York's nursery schools. The influence of teachers on children like the little girl below comes second only to the family. Adequate recreational facilities are needed by kids like those below.

World Neighbors

Bankers Tip Their Hand In Proposed Changes To Bretton Woods Pact

After months of official silence, the American Bankers Association has come out with a statement on Bretton Woods, approving the agreement "in principle" but suggesting certain amendments.

These proposed changes in an agreement for promoting world trade, signed by 45 United Nations and now awaiting Congressional ratification, look harmless by themselves, but the effect they would have if adopted is anything but.

The ABA amendments or any other, for that matter, if adopted, can very easily wreck the whole agreement and lose for America the five million jobs in exports that Bretton Woods makes possible.

Bretton Woods was the result of unanimous agreement among 45 nations. The three most powerful nations in the world—the U. S., the Soviet Union and Britain—signed it. They were able to reconcile not only their own points of view but also those of 42 other nations, large and small, without friction or complaint.

At the same time, the interests of the U. S. were amply protected—as witness the five million U. S. jobs we can expect when Bretton Woods gets to work.

The Bretton Woods meeting took about a year to assemble. Vast amounts of material had to be put together. Delegates had to be brought from all the United Nations, under wartime conditions. The meeting itself took about a month.

THREAT TO JOBS

The agreement that is now being presented to Congress in a bill to be offered early this month represents a long and delicate process of compromise and reconciliation of the points of view of 45 countries. Any changes that are made by Congress will have to be submitted to all of them.

When the business of re-assembling the conference starts. The fact that the U. S. has put in one or a dozen changes will raise demands among the 44 other signers for changes in their interest. As is well known, one amendment in a proposition that all have once agreed on brings others.

The changes proposed by the Bankers Association are thus not so important as the fact that they are changes. Approving Bretton Woods "in principle," they are trying to wreck it in fact.

In this tactic, the ABA follows the line of Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), GOP foreign policy expert, who endorses the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world security after the war in a long speech and then adds a couple of reservations that would make it impossible for Dumbarton Oaks to function.

The answer to the American Bankers Association is to urge your Senators and your Congressman to vote for the bill to ratify Bretton Woods quickly and without changes of any kind.

Five million jobs in U. S. exports is at stake—which add up to more than one or a dozen changes that any banker may propose.

WHY "PROTECTION" DOES NOT PROTECT US

GRAPHIC ASSOCIATES FOR PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE, INC

Guatemala Breaks With Franco; Lists Agents As Enemies

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 3 (ALN)—Following her break in relations with the Franco regime of Spain, Guatemala has placed all Spanish Falangists on her enemy alien list, subject to imprisonment if they continue their activities.

Huge mass demonstrations filled the streets of Guatemala City in support of the government's action as Spanish Minister Sanz Agero was handed his passport. The Minister left with his staff for Salvador, where Spain's envoy, the Duke de Baylen, reportedly heads the North American division of the Falange. Guatemala's envoy to Spain, Francisco Azurdia, was ordered to abandon Madrid and is now en route to Lisbon.

At the same time it was reliably learned that various Latin American countries, including Guatemala, Cuba, Uruguay and Costa Rica, are preparing resolutions for the Inter-American Conference here on Feb. 22, urging a joint Pan-American break with Spain.

It was said that such resolutions will be in order since the conference agenda includes discussions on continental defense and the Argentine question, both of which are closely related to the fascist menace emanating from Spain.

Guatemalan envoy to Mexico Guillermo Toriello, a brother of Jorge Toriello who is one of the leaders of the government junta which took control on Oct. 20, told Allied Labor News that former dictator Jorge Ubico "recognized Franco for reasons of personal sympathy and against the popular desire, while the people were unable to oppose him because of the brutal dictatorship.

"After the revolution," Toriello continued, "the democratically elected National Assembly asked the junta to revoke Ubico's illegal recognition and the junta thereupon decreed relations with Franco non-existent, which means that Guatemala has never recognized fascist Spain.

"The Guatemalan government discovered Falangists actively collaborating with reaction and Ubico's counter-revolutionaries in opposition to the junta with the aim of destroying our democracy.

"We learned that Franco used his minister in Guatemala City to spread his influence. The decree places Falangist agents on the same basis as Axis enemy aliens." Toriello pointed out that the decree termed Franco Spain "a purely totalitarian regime" and "the reactionary center endangering continental security."

Yugoslav Unions Growing

Moscow, Feb. 3 (ALN)—Trade union organization has already made rapid strides in Serbia, Macedonia, Dalmatia, Montenegro and Vojvodina and in the liberated regions of Slovenia, Croatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, and a national conference of trade unions is being planned for the formation of a united trade union federation of Yugoslavia, it was reported here this week.

The movement for the establishment of a united trade union center for all regions and nationalities of Yugoslavia began at a meeting in Belgrade on Dec. 31, 1944, attended by 20,000 professional, industrial and government workers of Belgrade and other towns.

This meeting unanimously adopted a resolution emphasizing that the workers "must play an active part in the restoration of the national economy and in the building of a free, democratic Federative Yugoslavia," and as its first step elected an organizing committee to rebuild the trade union movement.

42 Nations At London Meeting

London, Feb. 3 (ALN)—Two hundred thirty delegates from 42 countries have been appointed to the world trade union conference opening here on Feb. 6, the British Trades Union Congress announced today. The TUC delegation, it added, will be composed of 15 members of the TUC general council.

Declaring that trade unions have found that decent wages and conditions can "only be achieved by the establishment of equal standards in other countries producing similar commodities," Will Lawther, acting presiednt of the National Union of Mineworkers, said:

HITS LEWIS

"This is one of the very important aspects that British trade unionists bore in mind in organizing the coming conference." Deploring trade union isolationism, Lawther declared he believed "the anti-Soviet, anti-British claptrap of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mineworkers, prompted the AFL refusal to attend the meeting."

Chinese Unions Aid Production, Fight In Guerilla Armies

(Fourth in a series of Allied Labor News articles on unions of the United Nations.)

By ANTHONY JENKINSON

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (ALN)—In accepting the invitation of the British Trades Union Congress to attend the world labor conference in London, Chu Hseuh-fan, president of the Chinese Association of Labor, recently stated that so far as the CAL was concerned the main problem before the conference would be "to raise the living standards of the peoples of Asia." So long as labor in the Far East is depressed, he said, "workers' standards can nowhere be secure."

The backward economies of the countries of Asia, according to Chu, are responsible for the small size of their organized labor movements. In June, 1943, the CAL claimed a membership of 594,283—out of a population of 400,000,000. According to Chu, the CAL executive board of 31 includes one representative of the Communist-led guerrilla unions of North China. These unions, grouped in the North China Federation of Trades Unions, claim 1,000,000 members—most of whom work and fight behind the Japanese lines.

The structure and character of unions in the two areas of China are in marked contrast. In central China, unions are obliged to register with the Chungking government, membership is compulsory, and union officials are appointed by the Ministry of Social Welfare.

The National Mobilization Law of 1942, which made strikes and picketing illegal, stated that the "government may prevent and settle industrial disputes by decrees." The CAL itself was established by government decree in 1938 "to aid in stabilization and labor conscription, promote labor welfare and increase production."

In North China, membership in unions is voluntary, union officials are elected by the workers and are subject to recall. According to the 1940 constitution of the General Labor Union of Yenan, guerrilla capital, all workers are free to join the union "regardless of age, sex, nationality, political affiliation or religion."

The labor policy of the Shensi-Kansu-Ninghsia Border Region government, issued in May, 1941, is "to safeguard and improve the workers' livelihood, increase production, and strengthen the workers' organizations so that they may become the backbone and mainstay of the anti-Japanese democratic political structure."

The central policy of the North China unions, as expressed by the GLU executive board in 1940, is "to organize all the workers of the Border Region for active participation in the war of resistance and national construction. In order to guarantee victory, we must increase the discipline and productivity of labor, raise the political and cultural and technical level of the workers, and strengthen the bonds between workers and soldiers. Friendly relations between capital and labor must be maintained . . ."

See OK for Wallace In Delayed Vote

By a one vote margin Henry A. Wallace was virtually assured of confirmation as Secretary of Commerce this week, though the job has been stripped of the RFC loan making powers it had under Jesse Jones.

The one vote squeak-through came on a motion backed by Republicans and reactionary Democrats to call up the nomination for immediate consideration, a move which it was generally conceded would have meant Wallace's defeat.

The final vote on the confirmation will probably come up on March 1, leaving time for a new mobilization of labor and progressive forces to guarantee him an overwhelming vote in the Senate at that time.

CIO did mobilize in Wallace's support, with a letter from Pres. Murray to the field urging united worker, farmer and employer support, and with a statement from Sidney Hillman as PAC chairman. Support also came from businessmen, led by such industrialists as Henry J. Kaiser and Andrew Higgins.

These businessmen, and 12 members of the U. S. Senate, are aware with the CIO and the progressive farm organizations of Wallace's value to them and to the nation. Wallace stands for full production and jobs for all, for expanded world trade and enough food to eat for everybody.

OPPOSITION BLIND

The opposition to Wallace apparently doesn't believe these things are possible or even very desirable. Businessmen like Kaiser and Higgins know that full production with jobs for all is the only assurance that free enterprise will survive and function. The 74 Senators who voted against Wallace by voting to take away the loan-making powers that Jones possessed, while yelling loudly for free enterprise, are actually doing their own cause a dis-service.

The 74 to 12 vote for the George bill that takes the RFC away from the Commerce Dept. is a sharp warning of the strength of reaction in the Congress despite the election. Following closely on the House vote of early January to continue the un-American Dies Committee, it indicates the tremendous job that lies ahead for the '46 elections.

The GOP-reactionary Democrat coalition is strong and is being led by extremely capable strategists—mostly from the GOP side, who use the polltaxers as the front for their dirty work. The coalition can only be broken by the united efforts of labor, farmers, progressive businessmen and housewives.

HENRY A. WALLACE

Manpower Bill Has Plenty Of 'Bugs'

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the May-Bailey manpower draft bill (HR 1752) passed the House and headed for the Senate. The way was cleared for passage when anti-union shop and anti-discrimination clauses were removed, and when Administration pressure was turned on.

As it stands now, the measure provides for use of the Selective Service System in recruiting manpower between 18 and 45 for critical war industries.

The bill forbids a worker to leave a current war job unless his Selective Service Board has determined "it is in the best interest of the war effort." No provision for appeal is included, and the worker is frozen where he is.

There is also no appeal from orders of the Selective Service System sending a worker into a war job, until after he has been inducted. Induction into a particular plant is up to the Director of War Mobilization, who "shall consult with the appropriate representatives of labor, management, agriculture and government." This consultation is not mandatory.

Seniority rights are protected, but there is no protection against wage cuts as the result of transfers. This point was urged by Pres. Roosevelt in his January message asking for the bill, but has been ignored. In the same way, the bill has no provision guarding against discrimination on war jobs due to race, creed, or national origin.

Pres. Murray's repeated requests for a national conference of labor, industry and government to find out precisely where production bottlenecks occur and to remedy them have so far been ignored.

Vote to Kill Georgia Polltax

Georgia took a long step toward a freer democracy this week when its House of Representatives voted to repeal the polltax. The measure now goes to the Governor for signature, since it has already been passed by the state Senate. Gov. Ellis Arnall was one of the main initiators of the fight for repeal.

Earlier, another Southern state took a positive step when it voted to rescind a 1943 resolution asking for a U. S. constitutional amendment freezing the income tax at 25 per cent. The drive for this amendment, which would open the way for a general sales tax, has been sparked by Frank E. Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government, Inc.

Meantime, the campaign for a Federal bill to outlaw the polltax is shaping up in the U. S. Congress. Seven states still have polltaxes, and one, Tennessee, which repealed it by state action a while back, found itself reversed by its own Supreme Court.

Despite Georgia's act, a Federal bill, such as the one that has passed the U. S. House twice now and has twice been filibustered in the Senate, is still needed.

Name Liberty Ship for CIO Marine Hero

The scheduled launching of the Liberty Ship Patrick Bryan Whalen on Feb. 21 will honor one of the militant founders of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

"Paddy" Whalen, as he was known all along the Atlantic Coast to his friends and associates, lost his life as a result of the torpedoing of the SS Illinois in 1942. He was serving as assistant engineer.

Whalen was an NMU official during the formative years of the union, being stationed for some time at Baltimore as port agent. He was one of the first to offer his veteran seaman's skill for his country when war broke out.

The ship to be named in his honor is being built by the J. A. Jones Construction Co., of Brunswick, Ga.

Murray Hits Ward Ruling As Anti-War

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week sharply criticized the recent Federal Court decision, upholding Sewell Avery's policies in connection with the operation of Montgomery Ward, as a blow to labor's wartime policy of peacefully settling industrial disputes. The decision, by Judge Philip L. Sullivan of the U. S. District Court in Chicago, held that U. S. Army seizure of Ward property was unconstitutional. The government is appealing the ruling. Meanwhile, the Army retains control of seized Ward properties.

"The effect of this decision," Murray declared, "is to state to these agrieved workers that they cannot use their own weapons to adjust their grievances during wartime, nor can they expect the government to comply with obligations which it has assumed.

"This creates an unfortunate situation and permits executives of the Sewell Avery type to take advantage of labor during the period of the war to destroy labor unions and the fundamental principle of true collective bargaining."

Stockholder disapproval of Ward's defiance of War Labor Board orders, which led to government seizure of Ward property, was expressed by Miss Zara duPont. Cambridge, Mass. Ward shareholder.

Miss duPont, who is a relative of the Wilmington duPonts, declared that the company has "squandered immense sums in misleading newspaper advertisements," has lessened operating efficiency by fighting the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, and "has destroyed public goodwill, essential to the merchandising business."

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 355 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c
EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEE YOUR
SINCLAIR DEALER
for service that makes your car last longer

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

Dr. Parran Asks Health System to Aid All U. S.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general, this week called for a nation-wide hospital system to make medical specialists and modern equipment available "to any patient in need of them and to any physician," while asserting that public health advances have lagged behind scientific discoveries.

The head of the U. S. Public Health Service in his annual report asked for 2,400 health centers tied in with a system of rural, district and base hospitals.

A step in that direction was contained in the Burton-Hill Hospital Bill providing 110 million dollars to aid states in surveying health needs, constructing and administering hospitals.

The bill was referred to the Pepper Committee on Education and Labor.

Dr. Parran recommended full health services for each area containing 50,000 population. He said that full health services should include "early diagnosis of cancer, heart disease and other diseases of middle life, mental hygiene clinics, dental service for school children, correction of deficiency diseases due to malnutrition and bedside nursing care by public health nurses."

The Public Health head compared the percentages of draft rejectees in the first and second World War to show that public health advances have by no means kept pace with scientific discoveries, adding that maldistribution of hospitals has been a central factor in maldistribution of physicians and medical care.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

One of the most encouraging signs of the time is the extent to which women's organizations are assuming the responsibility for building understanding of the importance of American participation in world affairs.

The League of Women Voters has made a campaign for support of the United Nations' organization proposed at Dumbarton Oaks its major national undertaking this year. They've issued a lot of simple material — one - page leaflets, discussion outlines — to help people to understand how much is at stake in building a strong international organization to safeguard peace.

They are holding one day institutes in a number of places where authorities on Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks give the women facts which they need to work for favorable Congressional action. Eight hundred women attended the one here in Washington, including representatives of many community organizations.

"This time we will win the peace" is the New Year's resolution proposed to all Parent-Teacher associations by their national president. The Board of Managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in November went on record for United States membership in an international organization with "power to enforce a just and lasting peace."

The January National Congress Bulletin carries an analysis of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals by Clark Eichelberger which is recommended to local presidents as a guide to action programs in their groups.

These are only two of the important women's organizations which are on the march. The American Association of University Women, the Women's Trade Union League, the National Council of Negro Women, the National Council of Jewish Women and many more have as an important part of their programs educating their members on the necessity for a strong United Nations to guard the peace. The women in CIO and the CIO auxiliaries are working on that job, too.

There is a wonderful opportunity,because of this almost unanimous agreement of women's organizations on the principle of a strong United Nations' organization, to hold women's conferences to discuss these proposals in thousands of communities. There are many small women's organizations which have no national ties that could be reached in that way.

The State Department has women speakers available for such meetings. Two of them are out now in different sections of the country, explaining the Dumbarton Oaks proposals.

Women's conferences of this kind could plan a program to reach every voter in the area with an understanding of the need for United States participation in world organization. They could also undertake community-wide petition campaigns of letters to Senators and Congressmen urging speedy favorable action on specific proposals as they come before Congress.

There is no time to lose in translating the basic agreement of American women with the need for international organization into an active campaign of pressure on Congress. The Bretton Woods monetary agreement which attempts to remove some of the economic causes of war through stabilization of currencies and aid to foreign trade, will be introduced in Congress any day now. The isolationists probably won't try to defeat it outright but they will try to weaken it by amendments and reservations. And the women of the country, standing together on this issue, can see to it that the isolationists are defeated.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick
1725-41 W. North Ave. 7815
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

CIO Radio Roundup

"The Crisis in the Classroom—The Need for Federal Aid to Education" will be the subject of the next national CIO radio show over the Blue Network at 6:45 p. m. EWT, Sat., Feb. 10.

Textile and Clothing Workers Unions will take the spotlight on the weekly CBS show at 3:45 p. m. EWT the same day.

* * *

The CIO United Auto Workers Union has employed what is believed to be the first full time CIO radio representative. He is Allen Sayler, who is working in the UAW-CIO's Education Dept., assisting local unions in putting radio programs on the air, and in setting up local radio committees to monitor the network commentators.

Sayler

Before coming to the UAW-CIO, Sayler was employed with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D. C. Previously he had been an investigator for the Senate Civil Liberties investigating Committee.

* * *

Sharp protest against violently abusive remarks made about Henry A. Wallace by news commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr., was filed this week by Irving Abramson, president of the N. J. CIO Council, with the Mutual Broadcasting System and with a Lewis sponsor, Plough, Inc., maker of St. Joseph Aspirin.

Asking for time on Lewis' regular broadcasting hour to answer the charges, Abramson said in a letter to Plough Inc.:

"If his (Lewis') expressions reflect the company's thinking, I think it would be much more honest for the company to go on the air and pay for political advertising instead of using monies which should go to the government for taxes as a medium for propaganda under the guise of advertising."

* * *

Busy Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., took time this week to praise CIO's last week show over Blue. Said Morgenthau in a letter to CIO President Murray:

"I want you to know that in my opinion the CIO broadcast on the Bretton Woods Conference was exceptionally good. The work the CIO is doing through these labor programs on the air is of tremendous importance."

Every fourth bottle of Schlitz goes overseas

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS

'Cost of Living' Ain't the Same, But BLS Won't Change Its Name

By HAROLD J. RUTTENBERG
Research Director, United Steelworkers of America

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch's Richard Weiss has come through with the best explanation of the BLS "cost of Living Index." He says: "It is a list of numbers proving high prices are not expensive."

Since the last war, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U. S. Labor Dept. (BLS) has published a "cost of living" index that received little attention outside the world of professional students. In 1942 the War Labor Board made it a basis of the Little Steel Formula freezing wages, and suddenly the Cost of Living Index was thrown into the national limelight. Mounting attention, largely critical, led President Roosevelt to appoint a Presidential Cost of Living Committee in October, 1943. The CIO and AFL members of the Committee charged the Index with being (1) too low and (2) misnamed. Thirteen months after its birth the Committee's final report appeared, confirming both charges.

14-17% Error

While the report completely sustained the second charge, it only partially conceded the first one. Instead of the Index standing at 25.5 per cent above January, 1941, as shown by the BLS (labor found it closer to 45 per cent), the Committee's final report found it "to be 29 to 30 per cent."

This is a 14 to 17 per cent margin of error, which in the case of the Gallup Poll would be fatal, but in BLS's case apparently is of no moment.

But the concern of this article is the name of the BLS Index: it is not a cost of living index; it is a consumers' price index—a bit of a difference.

R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president and CIO member of the Presidential Committee, defines labor's position:

"The CIO has contended throughout that, in addition to changes in unit prices, changes in the manner of living, as distinguished from changes in the standard of living, should appropriately be included in the measurement of cost of living changes. Workers' families have incurred a great variety of extra expenditures because of wartime conditions . . .

"We agree, of course, that improvements in the standard of living should not be reflected in a cost of living index. To include forced changes in the manner of living, of the sort described above, however, is not to fall into such an error. This is true because, during the period with which we are concerned, from January 1941 to the present time, there has on the average been no improvement in workers' real income in terms of the actual quantities of goods and services purchased . . .

"The money incomes of workers have, of course, increased. But after deducting taxes and bond purchases and other savings, the resultant money income has not, because of limitations of supply, resulted in the purchase of more goods and services. Indeed, allowing for quality deterioration, there has been some reduction.

"The cost of living, as the CIO understands it, includes changes in the manner of living. To limit the concept to changes in retail prices is greatly to understate the real rise in living costs as we define them.

"The Mitchell Committee agrees that this is the case. They say:

"'The widesread opinion that the BLS Index grossly understates the rise in cost of living is justified, if cost of living is taken to mean the amount of money a family spends for the commodities and services it buys.'

"As the Mitchell Committee says: 'To most people cost of living means the amount of money a family spends.' This common sense conception of the cost of living is the only one utilized by the CIO. It is what workers mean by the phrase."

Name Is Wrong

The disagreement over what constitutes an equitable measurement of the cost of living during wartime accounts for the 15 percentage points difference between labor's figures and those of WLB Chairman Davis. But there is no disagreement that the BLS should change the name of its index, for BLS has publicly agreed that "cost of living" is not the proper name. But BLS has not dropped the "misleading name." Why?

In June, 1944, BLS said it would, but was awaiting Mr. Davis' final report. On November 17, 1944, Davis' Presidential Committee's report appeared. BLS publicly accepted it in full. Being a reasonable man I waited two months for BLS to change the name, but BLS, for all practical purposes, still said: "No." This time the reason was that Judge Fred Vinson, the Economic Stabilizer, might not approve a change.

A. F. Hinrichs, the BLS head who is known among my associates as a personification of a statistic, is a nervous little man. At a recent meeting of union research directors Hinrichs complained that a lot of libraries would be inconvenienced if the name were changed, and anyway a satisfactory new name was difficult to find.

Under some stern cross-examining Hinrichs finally blurted out that Vinson might not approve a new name. Is this why BLS would not admit for so long that it (1) not only did not measure cost of living, but (2) underestimated the rise in retail prices?

Is this why even now BLS still reports a 25 percent rise in its Index and does not report that a Presidential Committee found it to suffer from a 14 to 17 percent margin of error? Is this why BLS will not now drop the false name from its price index? Is this why wages are still frozen? It would be funny if so many millions of people, not libraries, were being so "inconvenienced" by an outworn wage freeze Formula.

Bad to Worse

Finally, last week (January 20) BLS wrote me, and other research directors, that the Index might be called a "Workers' Price Index." This sounds like progress, except that here is how BLS proposes to title the index:

Workers' Price Index (Cost of Living) and Retail Costs of Food in Large Cities

Obviously to include the words "cost of living" in the title (with or without parentheses) is the same as not changing the name. Furthermore BLS proposes to describe the renamed index as "formerly called the cost of living index." To be both accurate and honest, the description should read: "mistakenly called the cost of living index for many years." The proper name, furthermore, is "CONSUMERS' PRICE INDEX."

And, of course, BLS writes that Judge Vinson, the wage freezer, will have to approve "any change in the presentation of the index." Why? American workers know the answer, and none of them like it.

Congress and US

House Committee Lineup Shows Positive Gains

Two weeks ago, The CIO NEWS presented a partial report on the lineup of new committee members in the Senate. At the time, we pointed out how important the various Congressional committees are in legislation, how frequently the fate of a bill is decided in a committee before it reaches the floor for debate and a vote.

This week, we give a partial report on the new House Committees. As in the Senate, the changes are generally good—reflecting the political action work of the CIO in the election:

Appropriations Committee

Has charge of funds for carrying on war activities, for war agencies such as OPA, etc., and can thus either make or break enforcement of a law or the functioning of government departments.

Most positive gain here is paradoxically a negative one—in the enforced retirement through defeat of ex-Reps. Starnes (D., Ala.), former No. 2 man on the Dies Committee, Lambertson (R., Kans.) and Carter (R., Calif.). A positive addition is Rep. Koppelman (D., Conn.) who returns to the House with CIO support.

Banking and Currency

Handles legislation such as Economic Stabilization (Price Control, etc.), will handle ratification of the Bretton Woods world trade agreement. Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.), who had CIO backing, will be on the Committee, as will Rep. Raines (D., Ala.), who defeated a notorious reactionary named Manasco.

Foreign Affairs

Gains in importance as more and more United Nations agreements (as distinct from treaties, which require a two-thirds Senate approval) are presented for ratification.

A number of pro-United Nations' members have been put on, including the two Mrs. Douglases—Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), and Emily Taft Douglas (D., Ill.), who defeated the Chicago Tribune's man Stephen Day.

Newly elected Reps. Joseph Ryter (D., Conn.), and Daniel Flood (D., Pa.), are also expected to support FDR's foreign policy. A loss is former Rep. Fulbright (D., Ark.), who goes to the Senate, and former Rep. McMurray (D., Wis.), who lost out in a Senate race.

Interstate and Foreign Commerce

Will also have to deal with United Nations issues, presented in the form of commercial agreements, and with domestic trade as well. Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), gets a long-deserved post on a major committee. Another FDR supporter is Rep. Luther Patrick (D., Ala.), elected after a two-year absence with CIO support.

Labor

Reps. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.), Frank Hook (D., Mich.), Wm. J. Green (D., Pa.), supported by CIO, are on this committee, which is fortunate in losing ex-Rep. Stephen Day of the Chicago Tribune.

Military Affairs, Naval

The Military Affairs group gains through addition of Reps. Chet Holifield (D., Calif.), and Melvin Price (D., Ill.). The Naval Committee gains through addition of Reps. Hugh De Lacy (D., Wash.), Fogarty (D., R. I.), Frank Havenner (D., Calif.), and Andrew Biemiller (D., Wis.), all of whom had CIO support.

Bridges Wins U. S. High Court Review

A substantial success was scored this week in the fight for U. S. citizenship made by Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

The U. S. Supreme Court agreed to review the effort of the Federal government's attempt to deport Bridges to his native Australia.

Meanwhile, Bridges' case was materially bolstered by publicly announced support of California Attorney General Robert W. Kenny and of Congressmen Ellis E. Patterson of California and Hugh De Lacy of Washington.

Citing strides toward unity of all groups made in California, Kenny declared in a letter to FDR and Attorney General Biddle:

"Harry Bridges and his unions have been enthusiastic collaborators in that purpose, with concrete demonstration on the waterfront as well as in every industrial plant, of a profund understanding of the need to bury differences, to constitute a unified team with their employers and their government."

Bridges entered the United States legally in 1920 and has been here ever since. After his rise to a position of influence in the labor movement, strenuous efforts were made by various anti-labor groups to deport him.

In 1938 the U. S. Dept. of Labor was prevailed upon to issue a warrant for his arrest and deportation as an alleged member of the Communist Party. After a full hearing before Dean James M. Landis of Harvard Law School, the charges were dismissed as trumped-up fabrications of "self-confessed liars and almost pathological prevaricators."

Two years later the immigration law was amended for the specific purpose of aiding new efforts to deport Bridges and after new hearings he was ordered deported.

The four-man Board of Immigration Appeals unanimously reversed the deportation order.

Attorney General Biddle in turn reversed the Board of Immigration Appeals upon—as Judge William Healy of the Circuit Court of Appeals later said — "evidence which would be condemned and proscribed without any hesitation by any American court."

Bridges' application for a writ of habeas corpus was denied by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals of California and the denial was affirmed by a 3-2 split decision of the court.

The way is now cleared for final determination of the issues by the highest court of the land.

Better Coordination Needed

The success of military operations depends upon the closest coordination of all branches of the service. This basic principle also applies to war production, though here it is not so well recognized or applied.

Our chief production problems have resulted not so much from actual shortages as from failures to make full and planned use of all our resources, allocating available supplies exactly when and where needed.

This is particularly true of the manpower problems we are hearing so much about today. The CIO yields to no one in its eagerness to get increased production of critical war goods by whatever means are necessary.

But President Murray points out that "while temporary shortages of labor are appearing in one war industry or community, cutbacks and layoffs are occurring in some other war items hitherto called critical and often in the same community and even in the same plant."

He concluded that "what is needed is not legislation placing our manpower under the control of Selective Service but better coordination between all the groups directly concerned in our production program."

To get immediate action on critical war goods, Murray has asked Chairman Krug of the WPB to call together the chiefs of industry divisions responsible for these critical programs, together with their industry and labor advisory committees, so that task committees may be set up to secure the needed production.

This would be a practical application of the better coordination that is so sorely needed.

'So What?' Says Watt

Like Ferdinand the Bull, the AFL just wants to sit alone under its cork tree—or what have you? It can't enjoy "unity" if it means associating with other people.

All the United Nations want United Nations unity. All the other labor movements want world labor unity. But not the AFL.

The AFL has been successful in keeping the CIO out of the International Labor Organization. It has refused to participate in the London world labor conference, called by the British Trades Union Congress, because the CIO and the Soviet trade unions have been invited.

And now its spokesman at an ILO meeting, Robert Watt, refuses to share the general concern there expressed at the absence of the Soviet Union. He is proudly headlined in the AFL news service as having said, "So what?"

If that's a question, any kid who knows his geography and follows the war news can tell you what's what, Mr. Watt.

The world would not be complete with one-sixth of its surface and 180 million of its people excluded.

The United Nations would not be united, if the other nations refused to play with one of the Big Three. And incidentally, neither our own fighting men nor the Nazis share your boasted lack of concern about the doings of our great ally.

No, Mr. Watt, you can't have American labor unity without including the CIO.

And you can't have international labor unity for winning the war and winning the peace by excluding the CIO, the Railroad Brotherhoods, the Soviet trade unions, the Latin-American CTAL and all the other labor movements the AFL doesn't like.

That's what, Mr. Watt!

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE stuffed shirts of all ages can claim this much credit for human progress. Their pompous assertions that "it can't be done" have always irritated bolder spirits into saying, "the heck it can't!"

That is one of the more encouraging aspects of the rumpus over Henry Wallace, regardless of its immediate outcome.

The real issue in this fight is the practicality of President Roosevelt's goal of 60 million jobs and his economic bill of rights.

The stuffed shirts have lined up against Wallace calling him "visionary" and "impractical" because he proposes to devote his public life to achieving this goal.

The pomposity with which they assert that this can't be done has made millions of Americans fighting mad. If there's one insult Americans can't stand it's any aspersion on their hardheaded common sense.

So full employment in an expanding postwar economy—for which the American people voted in the last elections—will be a flaming issue from now on. And the stuffed shirts have helped to make it flame.

★ ★ ★

As a youngster, I was first drawn to the labor movement by a conversation I'll never forget. I was stirred by a big national strike in progress at the time, and consulted an older person whom I respected.

"It is wrong to strike," he said, "and the men should go back to work at once."

"But," I reminded him, "they say they aren't getting a living wage, and can't feed and support their families properly unless they get an increase."

"If that's the case, it's too bad," he replied. "But the companies can't afford to pay any more than they're paying, so there's nothing that can be done about it."

This complacent attitude that "nothing could be done" was so deeply shocking that its chief effect was to convince me that something must be done.

★ ★ ★

Most of the American people were similarly shocked into action by the attitude of the Hoover administration toward the great depression of the thirties.

In the face of mass unemployment and misery, business bankruptcies, farm foreclosures, breadlines and hunger marches, Hoover and his wise men insisted that nothing could be done but to let the depression run its course.

The result was a wave of popular revulsion that swept into office a new President with the courage and vision to say that something could and must be done.

At every stage in our history, Americans have reacted similarly to the prophets of passivity and defeatism.

★ ★ ★

Today, the Jesse Jones, the Tafts, the polltax reactionaries and all their ilk have thrown down a challenge to America.

Claiming they are "hardheaded businessmen" and "practical people," they sneer at the goal of jobs-for-all and a planned program for expanding postwar prosperity as "visionary" and "starry-eyed." (Remember the Hooverites' similar sneers at Roosevelt's New Deal program?)

But their attitude in essence is the same as that of business misleaders after the last war—namely that war inflation must be followed by postwar deflation, until reduced production, small business failures, unemployment and wage-cutting finally produce a situation in which it is profitable for capitalists to invest in a new expansion of production.

Most of us can remember the hideous results of this philosophy and lack of program after the last war.

But after this war, the results would be nothing short of national disaster—since the proportions of every aspect of this problem have been magnified many times since then.

★ ★ ★

The common sense of the American people has therefore revolted against such a prospect. This they showed in the last elections.

The CIO is by no means alone in its demand for a planned program for full production and jobs for all, through the cooperation of government, industry, agriculture and labor.

Big businessmen like Henry Kaiser, small businessmen without number, progressive farm leaders and forward-looking citizens in all walks of life are also agreed that with sufficient vision, effort and cooperation, and with the aid of increased purchasing power and foreign trade, American production and employment can be expanded after this war as never before.

Henry Wallace, like President Roosevelt, is one who says this can be done—and who has the vision, courage and practical ability to set about doing it.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 February 5, 1945 No. 6

Maternity Plan Lifts Big Worry Off GI Shoulders

"The financial worry is taken completely off your mind," Navy Radio Technician Stanley Seifer, 2nd class, said this week in describing the benefits of the U. S. Emergency Medical and Infant-Care (EMIC) program.

The program provides care from the beginning of pregnancy until six weeks after childbirth—for the wives of servicemen in the four lowest grades, and also medical care for sick babies for a year. Six hundred and forty-five thousand wives and babies of servicemen have received care under the EMIC program during the first 21 months of its existence.

But to return to Seifer, whose wife is expecting a baby in May, the radio technician—thanks to EMIC—is also a "qualified" father with a diploma to show that he has taken a course in infant care.

During the five-night course, which was conducted by the District of Columbia Health Dept., with the aid of EMIC funds, Seifer—a former member of the CIO American Communications Assoc.—learned also when to call the doctor for his wife in the anxious weeks before the baby arrives.

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, New York regional director of the War Manpower Commission, has praised the program as contributing to the morale of the troops overseas. Upon her return from a visit to the front, she said:

"I know from these contacts that servicemen are more genuinely concerned about the welfare of their families at home than about themselves. This is particularly true of those men whose wives are having a child.

"To them the event is frightening. So I believe you can understand how I felt when talking informally to soldier after soldier about his home, his wife, about his expected baby, to hear his relief at the knowledge that EMIC will take care of her back home.

"Sometimes months after the birth of the baby he receives news from her directly that she has been taken care of."

Dr. Martha Eliot, associate chief of the Children's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, which administers the program in cooperation with State Health Depts., listed as EMIC's good points the absence of any means tests; the simplicity of the application procedure, and the completeness of the care provided.

Doctors, nurses and hospitals, cooperating with the State Health Departments provide the care. To meet the cost of this care the Children's Bureau allots to State health departments money appropriated by Congress.

A serviceman's wife may get an application from her physician, from a hospital, a clinic, a local health department or welfare dept., a Red Cross chapter, or a State health dept. Babies of enlisted men in the lowest four grades also are entitled to care, when sick, during their first year.

Dr. Eliot this week pointed out that the wives of enlisted personnel above the lowest four grades are not included in the EMIC program, and that no care is provided for wives of discharged servicemen even if the husbands are disabled.

Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, and Emma Puschner, director of the Child Welfare Division of the American Legion, both told a House subcommittee last year that EMIC should be extended to the wives of all enlisted men.

Eleanor Fowler, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, testified EMIC should include medical care beyond one year for children of servicemen.

HERE'S HOW THE EMERGENCY MEDICAL AND INFANT-CARE (EMIC) PROGRAM WORKS. (Top, left) A serviceman's wife learning she is pregnant signs an application at a doctor's office for physician's and hospital care. (Right, reading from top to bottom) A wife who has been accepted for care under the program receives advice from her physician, who is paid by the State Health Dept., which administers the funds locally. The next picture shows the wife of a Coastguardsman learning how to bathe an infant under a nurse's direction at a class conducted for expectant mothers. As the next photograph shows, there are even classes to show papa how to look after the baby. (Second from the bottom, a sailor's wife takes her son to a clinic for a regular check-up. If the child should become ill during his first year, EMIC also provides medical care. As this picture at the bottom of the page shows there is no discrimination under EMIC. Mrs. Evelyn Jackson, whose husband is in the Army Air Corps, also takes her daughter, Ernestine, to the clinic.

UE Names Vet To Aid Servicemen

The Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, third largest CIO union with 171,000 men and women in the armed forces, has named Lt. Tom Neill, Plainfield, N. J., war veteran, to conduct servicemen's and veterans' welfare work.

Discharged from the Army for medical reasons, Lt. Neill served as a leader of a heavy mortar platoon in the South Pacific. Before entering service, Lt. Neill was a business agent and union organizer for plants in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Jersey City, N.J.

•

The CIO United Rubber Workers executive board has decided that servicemen furloughed to work in the tire building program shall be exempted from paying union initiation fees, it was announced this week.

•

Heroism and two wounds suffered in combat in his native Italy won a Silver Star, Purple Heart and Oak Leaf Cluster for Staff Sgt. Casmer Torrice of Detroit, a pioneer member of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, at the Ford plant.

Unmindful of his own safety, Torrice braved enemy fire to help a medical aid soldier drag a wounded man to safety. He was wounded on this mission and again two months later in action, but has recovered and returned to the front.

•

An Associated Press correspondent was much impressed by the bravery of Pfc. Bill Haber, international representative of the CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers, on leave.

The correspondent told how Haber, who was a personnel clerk, ran into a mortar barrage on the Leyte beach.

Grabbing a rifle, Haber found himself and two others out in front after an infantry charge, which was halted by Japanese machinegun fire. One of his companions was killed and Haber carried the other man, who was wounded, to safety.

•

Pfc. Bruno A. DeProdocini, member of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and formerly employed at American Brass, New Canaan, Conn., has great faith in the 81 mm. mortar.

DeProdocini, who is convalescing at the Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C., from shrapnel wounds suffered in northern Italy, tells how his squad knocked out a 150 mm. machine gun which was shelling an American position in Africa.

Sent over at night to investigate, his squad found that the Germans had brought up one big gun, had built several emplacements for it, and by moving it from place to place on a carriage had prevented our artillery from getting its location.

"We put that gun out of business with no trouble, though," DeProdocini said. "That's the beauty of a mortar. Three men can carry it right to the enemy lines, and still it will do the job of a heavy piece of artillery."

Cooking School

The CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Assn. reports that a six weeks' course in marine baking has been announced by the San Francisco Marine Cooks & Bakers School.

Tales From France

8 Blankets, Mackinaw, Field Jackets Help Keep GI Warm

GIs in France look like over-stuffed sausages at night, piling on top of them as many as eight blankets and any other warm gear they possess in an effort to keep warm. This, and many other fascinating details of Army life are contained in excerpts from letters written by T-5 Thomas Wayne Ball, 33-year-old former member of the CIO Federal Workers Union, to his wife, Marvel, employed in the Natl. CIO Office, Washington, D. C. Some of the latest episodes in the life of a typical GI follow.

11-2-44—I mailed quite a bunch of Christmas cards yesterday. God knows when they will be delivered, but if they arrive on a torrid July day maybe the winter scenes thereon will provide a welcome relief.

11-9—I hit the packpot today with three letters arriving at one time.

A very unfortunate calf happened to wander in front of a bullet the other day and as a result we are having a steak dinner tonight. Quite a pleasant change after canned meat and beans.

11-18—Some more German stationary for me to write you on. It is early in the morning and I'm alone in the CP except for our mascot (a new one—they always leave us).

We have quite a bit of fun rummaging around in old houses. There are layers of debris left by the successive occupants—from the original civilian owners to the most recent GI with his K rations. It is pathetic to notice some of the furniture and household knicknacks and try to picture the family that originally lived there.

There are amusing sights, too—as when I ran across a series of pin-up girls, some rather staid and demure—potential Hausfraus, side by side with hot blondes pinned up by some American soldier.

The carton of cigarettes came yesterday. Thanks. Every time I get to the bottom of my supply some more come and I'm saved. By the way, if the tobacco companies say the reason there's a shortage is that the cigarettes are being sent overseas, they are lying in their teeth because we are issued very few here.

11-20—For the lack of anything else, I think I'll describe our living quarters as they usually are. Generally speaking, they are what a bachelor apartment should look like on New Year's morn. It is a fairly small room. The attractively papered walls have been ruined by nails from which are hanging items of personal equipment—raincoats, mackinaws, mess gear, carbines, etc.

On one wall are some color photos of German planes (a relic of some previous occupants). Today was wash day for one of the boys and his laundry is hanging from a maze of wires criss-crossing the room.

In the middle of the room, a battered round table is covered with a variety of articles—cigarette lighter, one package of Chesterfields, wall mirror used for shaving, a can of lubricating oil, two canteens, several copies of Stars & Stripes and other publications, a gasoline funnel and a portable radio!

Scattered around the room are the beds. One, an infant's bed, is a metal monstrosity, but with sides on it to keep baby from falling out. In the remaining free space are buckets, wash pans, overshoes . . . and German ammunition boxes now holding personal possessions such as candy, cigarettes, stolen K rations, and so on. (By now your fingers should be itching to clean it up.)

11-22—Tomorrow is Thanksgiving and we are supposed to have turkey. However, I have my fingers crossed as to how it will turn out. Now, take pancakes—they turn out a good product there. The night before pancakes the grapevine starts to work, and from 5 a. m. on shadowy figures approach the kitchen from all directions to be there first.

11-27—We have been very fortunate in our living conditions here and can't complain. Bathing facilities are limited to sponge baths, but at least we can take them in front of a warm fire. Usually we manage to find some matresses left behind by the Germans and sleep fairly comfortably, though we take precautions to see there is nothing in them to explode.

It is amazing the amount of excess stuff we pick up and lug along with us; we look like an Oakie caravan. . . . The enemy seems to have the same habits as we do. . . . Armies are all quite a bit alike, regardless of their politics.

12-7—You should see me these cold nights stuffed into my bedroll; 6 American, 2 German blankets, my mackinaw and field jacket on top of that, plus any other odd clothing lying around. It takes about 5 minutes to crawl into all of them, after which I look like a very fat sausage. I'm becoming expert in the art of tucking in the blankets around the edges so as to preserve the maximum body heat. Consequently I'm warm as toast. But it is quite an ordeal to force myself out of the roll in the a. m. into cold clothing and downstairs to work.

Spent the day catching up with my laundry. I have such a supply of underwear and socks that it is a temptation to use up the supply and let the laundry pile up, and that is what has happened.

About one of the French gals—our present sweetheart is named Nicole. We take turns about bouncing her on our knees. However, she is just 5 years old!

It is hard to understand the French peasants' nonchalance to warfare. I think I mentioned before the true story about a soldier huddled up in his foxhole with shells bursting all around him who was startled to have a peasant reach down and tap him on the shoulder, saying "Cognac pour cigarette, Monsieur?" Maybe it is because wars have been so frequent here, almost one every generation. They seem to have a far greater attachment to their little plot of land than we have for ours. It is hard to beat people like that.

We hear some very amusing true stories—amusing to us anyway. There's the one about an Infantry lieutenant on a patrol at night who suddenly found himself face to face with a German officer, also leading a patrol. Each stuck his pistol in the other's belly.

The poor lieutenant started "sweating blood." After a few seconds, the German said "You shoot—I shoot." Deep silence, and the lieutenant frantically tried to remember some training manual dealing with a like situation.

Then the German said "You go back to your lines—I go back to mine." And both about-faced and went back to their own men, each probably expecting a bullet in the back at any moment.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The American Newspaper Guild reports: Union-Leader, Manchester, N. H., CIO 16, against 0. (Employes in the advertising, circulation, maintenance and switchboard departments.) The second oldest newspaper in New York City, the New Yorker Staatz-Zeitung Und Herold, CIO, 17, against 2. (Editorial employes.)

CIO Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton, Minneapolis, reports: Deere-Webber Plant, Minneapolis, UAW-CIO 71, IAM-AFL 19.

CIO Field Rep. B. T. Wolford, Huntington, W. Va., reports: Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., UERMWA-CIO 68.8%, AFL 26.6%. UE Rep. Irene Berman was in charge.

Hugh Thompson, CIO Reg. Dir., Buffalo, N. Y., reports: Western Block Co., Lockport, N. Y., CIO 71, against 15.

Director Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, Wm. B. Taylor, advises: Gulf Refining Co., Houston Pipe Line Division, CIO 31, against 24.

CIO Reg. Dir. Sam Sponseller, Cleveland, reports: Profit Restaurants, National Tube, Lorain, Ohio, CIO 29, District 50 18, no union 6. This drive was conducted by Carl Longwell, USA local.

Helen Kingery, Dir. Publications, UOPWA-CIO, reports: UOPWA N. J. Reg. Dir. advises that timekeepers at Hoboken Shipyard of Bethlehem Steel Co., voted 67 to 2 for CIO. The CIO already represents and recently signed a contract for several hundred office workers at this same yard.

CIO Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone, Connecticut, reports: They have set up a local union in the State Welfare Dept. and have applied for a charter in the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers.

The International Woodworkers of America announce the appointment of Brother Virgil Burtz, formerly IWA and CIO representative, as Intl. Second Vice-President.

Brother Robert C. Edwards, formerly CIO sug-regional director in Huntington, W. Va., who has been with the United States Navy for almost a year, has been medically discharged and has returned to our great movement and has been reinstated as the CIO Sub-Regional Director in the Huntington, W. Va., area. Good luck, Bob, we're mighty glad to have you back with us!

Wage Case Delay Angers Packinghouse Workers

An indignant protest to Economic Stabilizer Director Fred M. Vinson objecting to interference which has further stalled settlement of the 17-months-old wage case of the CIO United Packinghouse Workers was made public this week in Chicago by the union's intl. president, Lewis J. Clark.

The case, which involves some 100,000 employes of the Big Four packing companies — Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Wilson—and the largest independent packer, John Morrell & Co., started in July 1943 when the union served 30-day notice of intention to reopen their contract.

After negotiations broke down, the case was certified to the WLB in December, 1943, and in February 1944 hearings began before WLB's National Meat panel and continued for six weeks.

In August the panel made its report, in September the Board heard oral arguments, and the first week in December began considering the case. Since then the union has been anxiously awaiting a decision, until they heard recently that Vinson was holding up the decision.

"After the lapse of 17½ months we now understand that the Natl. War Labor Board is unable to issue its decision on the merits of the case, with which you will no doubt agree they are familiar, because of a change of the rules in the middle of the game—a change which you have made," Clark said in his letter to Vinson.

Pointing out that this is the fifth time the packinghouse workers have had their case held up by "an ex post facto decree," Clark called Vinson's attention to the fact that these workers have had no wage increase since August 1941.

WAGES ARE LOW

Wage rates for two-thirds of the packinghouse workers range from 54c to 81.5c an hour, Lewis told Vinson, and "the work is unpleasant, hazardous and difficult." Their production job, he said, "has been fabulous and unprecedented."

While the workers have been struggling unsuccessfully so far to get a wage increase, wartime gross profits of the companies involved totaled more than $150,000,000, Lewis stated.

"In view of these facts you will realize why it is difficult to understand your interference with the Board's decision of disposition of the case on its merits. The irresponsibility of this conduct is even more reprehensible in view of Labor's wartime no - strike pledge and the ever increasing needs of our armed forces."

In conclusion, Clark warned Vinson that he was calling a meeting of the union's intl. exec. board "so that these facts may be known in all their fantastic details to the entire membership" and urged him to "remove the blocks that you have placed in the road of the War Labor Board's activities and permit them to proceed immediately toward a final disposition of this case."

Three CIO Union Exec. Boards Act On Vital Problems

UFWA Asks Cost of Living Pay Increase

A demand for a base pay increase of 25 per cent for all Federal workers was drawn up at a meeting of the United Federal Workers' executive board held last week-end in Washington.

The demand was based on the fact that the cost of living has increased slightly over 25 per cent since January 1942, according to the lowest official estimate, while per annum Federal workers have had no increase at all during that time.

To protect lower paid workers, the Board voted to demand that in no case should the increase be less than $400 a year. Board members agreed that the union would probably not seek introduction of its own wage bill into this Congress, but would present its proposals to the House Civil Service Committee when it considers the Administration proposals soon to be introduced.

Recommendations of the Civil Service Commission calling for time and a half pay for overtime work, a night differential of 10 per cent, and reduction in the waiting periods for raises to 12 and 18 months, points which have long been among the union's demands, were approved by the Board.

A plan worked out jointly by the union and the OSC for coverage of Federal workers under unemployment compensation on a uniform scale of benefits was also accepted.

Another proposal voted by the Board provided for establishment by the union of an annual "Good Government Award" to be presented to a selected group of government employes for distinguished service.

manufacturers have refused to accept. The decision, which calls for arbitration of discharges allegedly for unjust cause and a week's paid vacation, was issued in December.

At the final session last Friday, the Board approved the contribution of $70,000 for Jewish nonsectarian war relief, hospitals and other charitable institutions and also approved a request from the Joint Board of Fur Dressers & Dyers for a relief fund of $50,000 for the people of Italy.

A resolution was passed unanimously and sent to the State Department, urging that a constructive program dealing with the problems of Jewish refugees and colonial countries be evolved at the forthcoming conference between Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

UAW Urges Withdrawal From WLB

The Executive Board of the CIO United Auto Workers Union this week urged that the CIO withdraw its representatives from the Natl. War Labor Board.

In a resolution passed at a New Orleans meeting, the UAW Board noted that the WLB cannot render decisions, even on so-called fringe issues, without approval from Economic Director Vinson.

The UAW pointed out that Vinson, before granting wage increases, must first ascertain from the Office of Price Administration whether, in its judgment, such action may involve price increases.

"The Board," the UAW said, "is today without discretion to deal with wage and other economic issues, even those of secondary importance. This has destroyed the usefulness of the Board."

In other actions, the UAW supported the appointment of Henry Wallace to the post of Secretary of Commerce, and opposed any effort, during reconversion to peacetime operation of industry, to reduce labor hourly wage rates.

1,300,000 in Italian Unions

London, Feb. 3 (ALN) — According to an announcement by Guiseppe Di Vittorio, one of the three secretaries of the Italian General Confederation of Labor (CGL), membership in Italian trade unions is now nearly 1,300,000, it was reported here this week. Di Vittorio stated that the majority of local trade unions in liberated Italy have democratically elected executive councils and that the rest will elect officers before the CGL convention.

White Collar Union Urges Pay Upgrading

The urgent need of upgrading salaries of white-collar workers whose "economic plight represents a grave threat to our nation's economic stability" was again stressed at a meeting of the Gen. Exec. Board of the United Office & Professional Workers held Jan. 24-25 in New York.

The Board reiterated its demands for elimination of the Little Steel Formula, and the establishment of a 65c hourly minimum pay rate. It also urged the extension of collective bargaining to white-collar workers through expanding organization as well as by full use of existing government wage policies and regulations.

Full support was pledged to the CIO delegation at the international labor conference meeting in London to work out a permanent program of world unity and confidence expressed that the meeting of Churchill, Stalin and Roosevelt would promote "an unshakeable unity" capable of meeting all problems of the United Nations.

Other resolutions passed included a demand for the reinstatement of Dr. Homer P. Rainey, dismissed as president of the Univ. of Texas by a reactionary Board of Regents, and an expression of solidarity with the United Automobile Workers in the confidence that they will renew their no-strike pledge.

Fur Union To Raise Big Defense Fund

A million dollar defense fund to defeat the threatened lockout of 8,000 workers by the New York fur manufacturers was authorized last week by the unanimous decision of the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers' executive board, meeting in Atlantic City.

The board declared that the threat of the Associated Fur Coat & Trimming Manufacturers, Inc., of New York may affect not only the fur workers but all the 100,000 organized fur and leather workers throughout the country.

The special defense fund will be used to bring about the enforcement of a decision of the War Labor Board which the

56,000 Hurt in Month

Approximately 56,000 workers were disabled by work injuries in manufacturing plants during September, Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins reported this week.

Wage Backlog

An indication of the number of workers trying to get wage increases to help them meet, at least partly, the increase in the cost of living, is shown in the latest monthly report of the Natl. War Labor Board made last week to the Senate.

An average of nearly 3,000 cases a week were received during September, the Board reported. Applications for approval of voluntary wage or salary adjustments for the month totaled 11,741.

Number of cases decided per week averaged 3,452, reducing the backlog of unprocessed applications in the regional office from 15,970 on Sept. 2 to 13,638 on Sept. 29.

Recommended Reading

Berge Tells of Cartels' Dangerous Secret Powers

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Just what are cartels and why should the poor old "common man," already so heavily burdened with his own troubles, have to bother his head about them?

The word has a foreign sound and seems to concern matters remote from daily life, yet the things cartels stand for have had and will continue to have, a tremendous influence on all of us.

What these things are has been explained clearly and simply in an important book by Wendell Berge, U. S. asst. attorney general, who dug out some startling disclosures about cartels in the course of his job as head of the Anti-Trust Division.

"Today hardly a corner of the world remains free from the malignant influence of its latest and most sinister form, the cartel," he writes. Believing that "the people's rights are not won without a struggle and will not be maintained without vigilance," Berge was not content to leave valuable material affecting the general welfare buried in government documents, neatly filed away where it would be available only to a select few.

So that the public too can know what is going on in the cartel field, he worked the material into a book called "Cartels, Challenge to a Free World."

An International Trust

Cartels, as Berge uses the term, "are trusts magnified to an international scale" which through secret agreements, control prices, output and often hold back scientific advancement.

Functioning in essence as private governments, they have, he says, "obstructed and in no small measure thwarted the declared policies of the American Government, placing their own business interests above the public interests."

Here are some of the terrific indictments Berge makes against cartels which show their sinister influence on matters seriously affecting the common welfare.

"America can never have a foreign policy based on the principles of democracy and international goodwill as long as international trade is dominated by cartels."

"The greatest threat to our success in achieving full production and full employment at home, and friendly cooperation with other nations abroad, is the philosophy and practice of privilege embodied in cartels."

"The greatest threat to our success in achieving full production and full employment at home, and friendly cooperation with other nations abroad, is the philosophy and practice of privilege embodied in cartels."

Rule World Industry

"It is essential to understand that cartels seek to divide and rule world industry on the basis of economic privilege. If cartels are successful in gaining a foothold in the postwar period, it will be almost impossible for this nation to maintain a high level of peacetime production or to cooperate in the reconstruction of world trade."

The effects of cartel practices "include reduced production and employment, higher prices and profits, retarded spread of technological improvements and a lower standard of living."

"The conduct of cartels before and during this war has been one of the tragic pages of our history. The shortages of aluminum and magnesium resulting from cartel restrictions forced us to strip the kitchens of America and scar our public squares with scrap piles.

"The scarcity of rubber is a never-ceasing threat to our productive effort. Our armed forces plead with us to contribute our binoculars. The lack of vital drugs and medicines has jeopardized our men fighting in fever stricken areas. in fact, almost wherever there was a cartel there was a shortage."

Usurp Sovereignty

And most serious of all: "These private governments threaten the sovereignty of democratic nations. The political implications of cartel activity threaten to subvert future national public policy of the United States."

"Indeed, it is difficult to see how our future policies — for example the Atlantic Charter— can be executed successfully, if the dispositions made by cartels continue into the postwar world."

Our oil and rubber supplies, "have been dependent upon policies arrived at secretly, operated clandestinely, and run in a manner contrary to the fundamental foreign policy of our country. The public had no voice in making these private policies, yet today it bears the burden of their effects."

"If cartels are permitted to continue to enter into their secret agreements, then it will be impossible for the peoples of the world to develop mutual understanding or to share industrial experience and progress.

"Cartels have been a focus of conspiracy and distrust among nations in the past. It is not too much to say that they will form a nucleus of future distrust and intrigue. A world partitioned by cartels breeds economic friction and disunity."

Some of Their Secrets

Berge proves his arguments by quoting extensively from secret agreements which show the scandalous plotting that international cartels engaged in both before and after the outbreak of the war.

Agreements between I. G. Farbenindustrie, the German Chemical trust, and Standard Oil eliminated competition and made the technology of chemistry and petroleum a "part of their feudal preserve," Berge says.

Under the terms of an agreement made in 1926 and in effect when the war broke out, Standard Oil was given the world right on the oil process and I. G. Farben received the chemical business of the world, with the exception that while I. G. had the right to engage in oil business in Germany, Standard Oil was permitted to engage in the chemical industry in the U. S. only as a junior partner of I. G.

Surrender by Standard Oil of its rights to the chemical field had serious results on this country's wartime efforts, Berge points out, as it included the synthetic rubber, buna, which under the agreements was a German-controlled monopoly.

"When corporations outside the I. G.-Standard Oil orbit attempted to manufacture buna rubber, they were confronted with the combined strength, wealth and power of the private coalition. Goodrich and Goodyear attempted such production, but the former was sued for patent infringement and the latter formally threatened with suit by the Standard Oil Co. under the I. G. patents.

Just Before Pearl Harbor

"This took place in October 1941, a few weeks before Pearl Harbor. Thus, not only did Standard Oil agree with I. G. Farben that the latter should control the exploitation of synthetic rubber, but cooperated in preventing anyone else from producing."

In 1931, I. G. Farbenindustrie, principal producer of magnesium in Germany entered into an agreement with the Aluminum Co. of America, known as the Alig agreement, which among other things, limited production.

Many other incidences are cited by Berge to show how American industrial firms entered agreements that later seriously interfered with supplies of drugs, optical goods, essential metals, and other vital materials needed for the war.

Berge tells of one particularly rascally trick used by cartel agents as "an example of postwar planning which has been all too prevalent in these cartel groups." It concerns the method by which a German company's U. S. patents were taken over by an American cartel partner to avoid seizure by the Alien Property Custodian.

As to the solution for the problems presented by the "intricate and interrelate maze" of the cartel world Berge offers some possible aids:

Some Remedies

1. Encourage domestic research so that it can "be put to use for the general good of mankind."

2. Remove, through inter-governmental action, the waste and misuse of resources which occur when industries cannot compete and are artificially maintained, and urge "the adoption of minimum wage and health standards so that labor exploitation does not become the means of providing a hidden subsidy for industry in the countries with substandard labor conditions.

3. Encourage foreign trade possibilities for small as well as large American firms.

4. Help create an international forum to which countries denied access to raw materials or able to buy them only at monopolistic prices can present their case.

Cartels, Challenge to a Free World, by Wendell Berge, American Council on Public Affairs, 2153 Florida Ave., N.W., Washington 8, D. C.

Labor Education

At Highlander

Five resident sessions, extension work for the Farmers' Union, and a campaign to raise $65,000 for a post-war building program was approved at the annual meeting of the executive council of Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn.

The Council and the Southern CIO regional directors outlined a month's program for the second CIO school to be held at Highlander May 7 to June 3. Plans for a two weeks' United Rubber Workers' session from June 2-15 were presented by F. M. Dickens, URW southern director. The United Auto Workers will hold a session in June.

William Crawford, regional director of the United Steelworkers from Atlanta, was elected council chairman for 1945.

★ ★ ★

Mobile Plan

A workers education program in Mobile, Ala., believed by its sponsors to be the first of its kind in the South is being launched cooperatively by the CIO and the Mobile public school vocational education department.

Courses are aimed primarily at training shop stewards and other union officials, but are open to others interested. Subjects will include labor history, labor laws, union agreements and a study of grievance procedure. Two-hour classes will be held once a week for 15 weeks.

The program was developed by Dr. W. E. Zeuch, educational director for Local 18, CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and Cecil Ward, vocational education director for the public schools, reports the Gulf Coast News Digest, CIO labor paper in Mobile.

★ ★ ★

Cornell Univ.

Cornell University has announced that it will add three labor members and two State officials to its board of trustees, subject to approval of the Governor and the State Legislature. Major labor organizations in New York State will be consulted before the new members are elected. Their addition would increase the membership of the board from 40 to 45.

Dr. Edmund Ezra Day, president of the university, said this action will make it possible for Cornell to open the N. Y. State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Ithaca this fall.

Establishment of the school was recommended in 1942 by the Joint Legislative Committee on Industrial and Labor Conditions to "provide instruction at cost that can be met by labor union members and students intending to enter the field of labor and management."

Art by NORT MESKIN

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Story by JOE GREENE AND JERRY COLE

COPYRIGHT 1945 NATIONAL CIO NEWS

WEIR—DICTATOR

By FRED d'AVILA

(Second of Two Articles on Weirton Steel)

Historians of the steel industry will probably credit 69-year-old Ernest Tener Weir as being one of the shrewdest operators in the business. The honest ones will condemn his labor policies as violently opposed to the best interests of his workers. They also will recognize that he was virtually the only big steel boss who was able as late as 1945 to foist upon his workers a system of labor-employer relations that smacks of the 1890's.

The thrice-married, $275,000-a-year Weir is undisputed king of Weirton Steel, located in the unincorporated town of Weirton, West Virginia, tucked away in the panhandle hills next to the Ohio River. He's on the boards of a yard-long list of corporations, is a strong exponent of cut-throat competition, and claims that "no one ever gave me anything."

He controls the plant he founded (which the CIO United Steelworkers Union is attempting to organize) by a combination of brutality and buncombe.

The Weirton Steel Co. is ideally located for the type of employe relations that Boss Weir wants to maintain. It squats in narrow isolation on both sides of the only main highway that passes through the town, and most of the property that lines the road belongs to the company.

'High Wage' Myth

Weirton Steel's "high" wages are as much a myth for the mass of workers as is Weir's propaganda that the Weirton Independent Union is not company-dominated.

Weir follows a policy of paying a few workers high wages, but CIO steelworkers point out that more men are employed at the 78-cents-an-hour common labor rate at Weirton Steel than at any other comparable plant. An estimated 50 percent of the workers get the minimum rate, and are kept in line by the often illusory hope that they will eventually get some of the richer gravy.

Sharply pointed evidence of this exploitation are discussions heard in some of Weirton's bars—Emil's Place, Sammy's, the Strip Steel Pool Room and the City Grill, which serve a 12-ounce glass of beer for a dime.

Workers buying cigarette papers and tobacco to roll their own "joke" about working a double turn so that they can get "enough to eat"—quietly, for the most part, because there are plenty of stooges about.

Gestapo Control

The company has an employe filing system so extensive that the management knows "whether you had pork chops or pot roast for Sunday dinner," as one long-time Weirton worker put it.

The company has neatly whitewashed its record for the casual observer who does not know of the documented accountings of management's brutality, bribery and cynicism that testimony has uncovered in hearings before the Natl. Labor Relations Board and the courts. A sample of the kind of "front" that the management maintains was the full-page ad in the company-dominated Weirton Observer, signed by Company President Thomas Elliott Millsop, which advised the workers that "we have tried to be a 'good neighbor and true friend' to all of you." Ironically enough, the company put the quotes around "good neighbor and true friend!"

Weir's wage policy would seem to be progressive, were it not for the fact that he so obviously gives increases only with the hope of keeping his workers from joining the CIO Steelworkers Union, which has organized every other major steel producer in the nation.

Co. Union Lies

The most recent example of this involved the wage concessions just won by the CIO Steelworkers through the Natl. War Labor Board. No sooner had the Board OKed the wage gains than the Weirton Independent Union (WIU), with the patent cooperation of the company, rushed to take credit. The company-dominated "union" even signed an "agreement" with the company which was hailed in the WIU's Weirton Worker and the company-controlled Weirton Observer as the first such contract to be completed under the terms of the WLB's wage order.

The WIU's claim that it was winning wage gains for Weirton workers was sharply punctured by a statement of the Cleveland panel of the War Labor Board, which unanimously decided that "the Board will not act upon any Form 10 applications (for wage increases) signed by Weirton Steel Co. and the Weirton Independent Union inasmuch as the Natl. Labor Relations Board has declared this union to be company-dominated. However, the Board will act on applications signed by Weirton Steel Co. alone."

Thus, in stark relief, the WLB exposed the company union as taking credit for something that the company itself had petitioned for—alone, and solely with the purpose of preventing organization by a legitimate CIO union.

The WIU is the company's labor front that was organized to replace the Employe Representation Plan and the Weirton Security League when both these organizations were outlawed by the NLRB and the courts. The NLRB currently has ordered the WIU disbanded, and the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia has appointed a special master to make an investigation of CIO claims that the union is completely dominated by, and is but an instrument of, the Weirton management.

The WIU is management's latest version of a company union. It makes a very good showing indeed on the $4 dues a year that it charges, publishing its own newspaper (sometimes running an expensive 16 pages) twice a month, buying full page ads in local newspapers, spending large sums of money on lavish entertainment, and participating in practically every phase of community activity—even Victory gardening. All this cannot be done for peanuts, so there is obvious validity to CIO questions about where the money is coming from.

According to CIO steelworkers, the company union never holds any mass meetings, for fear that some of the more militant rank and file employes might stand up and holler about some of the unsettled grievances. Outside of the select few in the company union leadership, practically no one knows what is going on. Agreements with the company are arrived at in the deepest secrecy, and are presented in completed form for acceptance by the workers.

Frantic Publicity

A study of the company union paper shows the lengths to which the WIU goes to convince Weirton employes of its genuineness. Five pages of the July 13, 1944, issue were devoted to touting the record of the company union. In the same issue, a main headline announced, "Thousands to Vote in WIU Election." Every other Page 1 headline except one was devoted to boosting the record of the WIU in an effort to convince the workers that there was some point to voting in the election.

The Weirton Worker and the Weirton Observer, published by one James J. Weir, are both filled with CIO-baiting so frantic in nature that it would put a Hearst paper to shame. Neither paper, incidentally, carries a union label.

In a two-page spread, the Weirton Worker's Aug. 24, 1944, edition said: "Weirton Independent Union Inc., Boldly and Without Apologies, Denounces Natl. Labor Relations Board as Tool of the Un-American, Corrupt CIO; Weirton Workers Deplore This Sabotage of the War Effort by CIO-NLRB."

Prior to the November election, with the Democrats sweeping practically every office, the Weirton Observer was filled with FDR baiting, Hillman baiting and pro-Republican propaganda. Key to the Observer's policy was an overline in the Oct. 12, 1944, issue, which said: "When we attack men who furnish payrolls we hit the wage earner, kick his wife, and cuff his children. This is how the CIO works. Stick to your job."

FDR Baiting

The frantic efforts of both these publications to smear the CIO on any pretext is evidence enough to show that the Weirton management lives in deadly fear of its workers eventually discovering what the score is.

The company unquestionably figures that the thousands of dollars spent on publicity and community build-up are well spent, for the institution of real collective bargaining with a legitimate CIO union would cost far more than the propaganda, in terms of wage adjustments, elimination of inequities, equal pay for equal work, etc.

The Weirton management is operating a bit more smoothly now than it did in the hectic 1930's when, as NLRB testimony showed, company terrorists were out to "get" CIO organizers, and workers were given better jobs if they picked fights with CIO members so that the company could fire them.

The company was exposed then by the U. S. Senate's La-Follette Civil Liberties Committee as ordering police revolvers for its gunmen, and as requesting that the weapons be delivered personally to company representatives because it "did not want invoices for riot equipment to run through the general office files."

The firing of scores of workers in this period cost the company about $200,000 in back pay, but management considered this cheap indeed as compared to paying the wage demands that would be won by a legitimate CIO union.

Tide Toward CIO

How long the company can continue to fool the workers, no one knows. CIO Steelworker representatives believe that when the Weirton employes have the right to vote by secret ballot, in an election that is guaranteed free of company intimidation, they will overwhelmingly support the CIO as the only legitimate collective bargaining agency.

If, in the next year, the tide toward CIO runs as strong as the tide has run toward the progressive policies of the Roosevelt Administration, it won't be long until old man Weir has to sit down with his workers and really bargain for wages, working conditions and justice on the job.

LEAFLET distribution by the CIO union at the gates of Weirton Steel. Workers eagerly read CIO publicity despite company intimidation.

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 7 — February 12, 1945

National Edition

Exclusive Union Story On World Labor Meeting

See Pages 2, 3 & 6

Manpower Still Muddled; CIO Firm Against Bill

See Page 4

Wage Delegations 'Storm' Capital, Demand Action

See Page 7

For Justice on the Job

By FRED d'AVILA

More than half a million American soldiers gave their lives in the bloody struggle to establish the principle that this nation cannot exist half slave and half free. Today, on virtually every world battlefront, millions of other Americans are fighting for the extension of that principle. One phase of it at home is the U. S. Government's policy that the right to work is the right to live—set forth in President Roosevelt's Executive Order establishing a wartime Fair Employment Practice Committee that prohibits discrimination in certain jobs because of race, creed, color or national origin. This article is the first of a series outlining the work that the Committee has done, and discussing its good points, its deficiencies and the widely known need for setting up a permanent FEPC that will guarantee, after victory, a fair break on the job for everyone.

"FIVE thousand American colored people were thrown out of their jobs today when the ..... Chemical Corp. shut down one of its three huge plants, in the teeming United States war industry city of Detroit, Michigan. Ten thousand more are momentarily scheduled to be laid off at ..... Airplane Corp., at Long Beach, California. Absolutely no provisions have been made for guaranteeing these workers other jobs. American democracy at work. . . . !"

Radio Tokyo talking. Radio Berlin. Radio Axis any place. And millions of our Chinese Allies, our friends in South America and Latin America and in the South Pacific are listening . . . and wondering.

This week they had more cause for wonder. For a leading spokesman of the American Republican Party gave birth to a bill in the U. S. Senate which would reaffirm United States policy of "justice on the job" and then—to the joy of Axis propagandists—would sabotage that policy and make it completely ineffective.

Taft's Idea

The spokesman was Ohio Senator Robert A. Taft and the bill he introduced would set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee that would be even weaker than the temporary one now functioning. Taft's proposed committee would be completely voluntary in action—its enforcement powers would be zero, and and any employer who didn't like to hire Negroes or Mexicans or Italians or Irish, or Jews or Catholics or Protestants, could thumb his nose at the Taft committee for just as long as he liked.

Taft, who is one of the leading Republican hatchet men, made a great point of stating that he alone, and not the GOP, was the father of the bill. Referring to a Republican pledge in favor of the legislation, Taft said:

"It is entirely my own personal suggestion as to the proper method by which that pledge should be carried out."

The GOP will have full opportunity to disown the Ohio Senator's legislation, for in both the Senate and the House of Representatives are bills which not only set up a permanent FEPC but give it the teeth it needs to do a job. These bills, which have been introduced by a number of Congressmen, are virtually identical. Sub-committees of the Senate and House Education and Labor Committees are now considering them, and are expected in the near future to present them to both houses for action.

The bills will eventually be merged into one measure in each House which labor, liberals and all progressive people interested in building democracy should support.

This measure would continue and extend the influence of the present FEPC, which operates by Executive Order only and which will automatically be discontinued at the end of the war unless permanent legislation is passed.

A permanent FEPC, as the Senate Committee on Eduaction and Labor pointed out, is designed to:

"1. Promote in peace the same national harmony and efficiency we have achieved in war.

"2. Prevent, in the reconversion and postwar readjustment period, fears and injustices which led to mob violence and race riots in the years following World War 1.

"3. Remove a serious obstacle to friendly relations wtih certain of the United Nations who have long been sensitive to the treatment accorded people of similar origin in this country.

"4. Give effect to our declarations for freedom from want and freedom from fear.

"5. Raise the standard of living and purchasing power of our people.

"6. Confound our enemies who hope by dividing us class by class, race by race, group by group, to vitiate the coming victory and to lay the basis for World War III."

Backed by Law

The permanent FEPC would prohibit discrimination by employers or labor unions, and would be backed up by a law which would say, roughly, in part:

It shall be an unfair employment practice for any employer to refuse to hire any person because of such person's race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry, or to discharge or discriminate against him for such reasons, or "to confine or limit recruitment or hiring of persons for employment to any employment agency, placement service, training school or center, labor union or organization, or any other source that discriminates against persons because of their race, color, creed, national origin or ancestry."

Even in wartime, when factories are crying for manpower, Negroes and other minority groups are denied jobs, are discriminated against in upgrading policies, and in general constitute the very bottom of the labor market, "last to be hired and first to be fired."

What this means to Negro people and members of other minority groups that are discriminated against is pretty obvious.

What this means to white people, in terms of very practical self interest, is that selfish American employers who practice discrimination are able to keep at their beck and call a large labor pool which is so anxious to get any kind of work at any kind of wages that it can be used effectively to depress employment standards for the majority of workers.

(Next week: What the present FEPC can and can't do; what its powers would be if it were made permanent; who's for it and who's against it.)

WORKING TOGETHER for victory is this bi-racial team of Kathryn Polinaire and Vivian King, employed in a California aircraft plant. Despite predictions to the contrary, thousands of employers have found that white and Negro employes can work successfuly side by side.

It Ain't the Same Old 'Shell Shock'

By FRED ROSS

World War I caused an appalling number of "shell shock" cases, with thousands of veterans bearing mental scars for years afterwards. Fortunately for millions of men in the armed services, physicians now recognize that "shell shock" is not something to be written off as hopeless. This is the story of a veteran who lost the power to walk, and what modern medicine did about it.

The German artillery had been pounding the American position behind the hedgerow steadily for three hours.

The young soldier from an Ohio steel town suddenly slumped behind the tree where he had taken cover.

Believing that he had been struck by shrapnel, others in his company cautiously made their way to him, questioned him, but found that he couldn't talk.

MENTAL DIVERSION: The Veterans' Administration portable library service supplies plenty of books to keep a veteran's mind occupied until he is completely recovered and ready to take his place in civilian life.

Unable to see any signs of wounds, they also found he was unable to walk as they assisted him to the company aid man.

The soldier—let's call him Harry inasmuch as the Army and the Veterans' Administration do not release names in cases like this—was brought to an Army hospital in this country.

Discharged from the Army, Harry was placed in the psychiatric ward of one of the VA facilities, as the administration hospitals are called.

There psychiatrists had him write his story. They learned that Harry had been a model soldier, had adjusted himself well to Army life, although at first he had religious scruples against killing.

TWO CONFLICTS

But as they examined him further, they found that he had two conflicts which he had apparently never resolved. The first was that he had been thwarted in his desire to study for the ministry because he had to help support his parents. Harry also felt inferior to his younger brother, who was more brilliant than he.

The psychiatrists concluded that he had been suppressing these conflicts, but under the stress of battle had undergone a mental collapse.

They decided to use a treatment known as hydro-galvinism, consisting of a mild current of electricity passing through the body for an hour or more.

At the end of the first treatment Harry turned to a doctor, and said, "How are you, doctor?"

That was the first time he had spoken in four months.

At the end of two weeks' treatment, he was able to walk.

RETURNED TO JOB

Harry since has returned to a job in a steel mill where he worked before his induction into the Army.

Harry was just one of the 669 additional World War II neuropsychiatric cases receiving treatment under VA supervision from December 21, 1944, to January 25, this year, when the total was 8615.

VA officials expect that the number of these cases will continue to increase as long as the war continues.

CHANCE FOR CURE GOOD

Col. John H. Baird, assistant medical director in charge of the neuropsychiatric division of the VA, takes a hopeful view. He points out that the chances for a complete cure of most of these cases are good.

There are two general classifications, he explained, among those suffering mental disorders: the psychoneurotics, with symptoms of sleeplessness, tremulousness, anxiety, headaches, backaches, inability to concentrate and make decisions; and the psychotics, who, to use an Army phrase, are "completely off the beam."

Col. Baird said that most of those in the first classification will rehabilitate themselves when they get a job after discharge and are away from the unfamiliar stresses and strains of the Army.

ADVANCES IN TREATMENT

He said that some of the psychotics will have to be hospitalized, but that because of great advances made in the treatment of such cases since the last war, a good majority of them will be rehabilitated.

He said that one of the greatest advances in treatment since the last war is shock therapy —either by electricity or by insulin injections.

Group psychotherapy is also a new development, which is being used effectively. Col. Baird said that a psychiatrist acts as the instructor of the class. One of the reasons for the beneficial results is that contacts with the others make the patient forget his own problems.

The VA also is planning more beds as well as more hospitals for the mentally unbalanced, and in some cases contracts with non-VA-operated hospitals to take care of the mentally ill.

CIO Builds Unity At London Meet

LONDON, Feb. 10—A dramatic appeal for unity and for equality of treatment to all anti-fascist workers was made by R. J. Thomas, head of the CIO delegation, to end a situation in the World Labor Congress which was providing ammunition to enemies of world labor unity.

The Congress is meeting here.

Thomas's speech, which he gave as CIO leader in Philip Murray's place, was brought on by refusal of Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trades Union Congress, to allow delegates from several countries formerly dominated by the Nazis to have seats.

This would have excluded delegates coming directly from Italy, Finland, Romania, Bulgaria and Poland. The Polish delegates had been refused a seat though the London "government-in-exile" had its representatives there.

VOTING WON

Under Thomas's proposal, the credentials committee will consider the application of delegates from these countries and will pass on their right to seats. John Green, president of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, is chairman of this committee.

Second important gain made in the meeting was on the question of voting. Citrine's early proposal was that the congress should not vote, since it was merely "consultative" and could not make binding decisions.

"Here's a conference we told the world would be consultative and advisory only," he said, "not a conference where decisions would be reached by voting."

Citrine was answered by CIO delegates and by Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin-American CTAL delegation, who said: "We respect the initiative of the Trades Union Congress (TUC) in calling us together, but after we have exchanged views we must reach agreement symbolic of our common purpose. We cannot return to the Americas and report we took no decisions whatever."

Final decision was that the congress could take a vote of "general consent" when three or more delegations asked for it, with a two-thirds majority required to put the conference on record.

According to reports, the dead hand of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions is still felt, with Citrine chiding the "standing orders committee" (corresponding to a rules committee here) for not including the IFTU as a member of the committee on peace settlement.

ROBINSON KEYNOTER

This committee will have a lot to do with postwar reconstruction, and has Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald of the UE as CIO member. The IFTU only a week ago repeated its exclusion of the CIO and the Soviet trade unions.

First CIO keynote speaker was Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, who greeted the Congress in the name of the CIO and President Murray, whose dream of international labor unity is now about to be fulfilled. Robinson argued strongly for a new world labor federation, saying:

"We must act here on behalf of our brothers and sisters in arms. They will expect us to succeed. The best tribute we can give them is to lay aside prejudices and timidities so we may emerge from these sessions bearing to our organizations sound, workable plans for a new World Trade Union Federation."

Who's Who In World Labor

Below are listed the principal countries and unions at the World Labor Congress now going on in London.

U. S.: Represented by the CIO, with over six million members. Delegation headed by R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president. CIO President Murray was unable to attend.

USSR.: Represented by the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions, wtih 27 million members. Delegation headed by Vassily Kuznetsov, steel worker who once worked in the U. S., and chairman of the All Union Council.

Britain: Represented by the Trades Union Congress, with over six million members. Delegation headed by Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of TUC.

Latin-America: Represented by the Confederation of Latin-American Workers (CTAL), with over four million members in nearly 20 Latin-American countries. Delegation headed by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of CTAL.

France: Represented by the General Confederation of Workers (CGT), revived after the liberation of France from the Nazis. Delegation headed by Louis Saillant, secretary of CGT, chairman of the Natl. Council of Resistance that fought the Germans inside France all during the four years of occupation.

Canada: Represented by Canadian Congress of Labor (CCL) with about 300,000 members from CIO and national Canadian unions. Delegation of three, C. H. Millard, Pat Conroy and James Maguire. Unlike its U. S. parent body, the Canadian AFL is for world labor unity, and has sent Pat Sullivan of the Canadian Seamens' Union as a delegate.

China: Represented by Chinese Association of Labor (CAL) Chunking government dominated organization claiming 594,000 members. Delegation headed by Chu Hsueh-fan, CAL president. North China unions with over 1,000,000 members not invited to the meeting.

Australia: Represented by Australian Council of Trade Unions (ACTU) with about one million members. Delegation headed by Ernie Thornton, secretary of the Iron and Munitions Workers Union, Australia's largest union.

India: All India Trades Union Congress (AITUC), with about 400,000 members. Delegation headed by S. A. Dange, AITUC president.

Yugo-Slavia: Will send a five man delegation whose credentials will be considered by the Congress.

"Neutrals" such as Sweden, Switzerland, etc., will be allowed delegates during the second week of the meeting, when post-war economic problems are taken up.

World Neighbors

World Labor Meeting At Same Time as 'Big Three'

(See Other Stories—Page 2, Looking Ahead—Page 6)

Meeting at the same time as the Big Three—Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill—the first really inclusive world trade union congress in history opened Feb. 6 in London with R. J. Thomas heading the CIO delegation in Pres. Murray's absence.

Main issue before the meeting is the creation of a new world labor federation, taking in all trade unions of the anti-Axis countries and replacing the moribund Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, which for years has excluded a majority of world labor.

Main forces at the meeting are the CIO, the Soviet All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions (AUCCTU), the British Trades Union Congress (TUC), the Confederation of Latin-American Workers (CTAL) and the French General Confederation of Workers (CGT). Absent by its own choice is the AFL.

Meeting the week before, the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions (IFTU) went through the dreary motions of again "excluding" the CIO and the Soviet unions. Only live moment in the meeting was a sharp reply from Will Lawther, British miner's head, to a long and scurrilous red-baiting and CIO-baiting speech from Robt. Watt, the AFL delegate.

The IFTU's continued existence was challenged by Louis Saillant, the French delegate from the CGT, who took the point of view that the IFTU has long outlived whatever usefulness it ever had and should be buried before the corpse decomposes any more.

CIO IN LEAD

The opening of the Feb. 6 meeting is in every sense a tirumph for President Murray, even though he could not head the delegation. The CIO has pressed for international labor unity since its formation, and from the time Murray took the presidency, has pressed for a new world labor congress that would take in all unions of the anti-Axis countries without discrimination.

Long delay was caused by the efforts of Sir Walter Citrine, head of the TUC and of the IFTU, to appease the AFL which took the position that only the AFL can represent American workers abroad.

Thomas Helps Chair London Parley

(By Wireless to Allied Labor News)

LONDON, Feb. 10 (ALN)—Opening the first session of the world trade union conference here, which was described by the chairman of the London County Council as "the first world peace conference," George Isaacs, chairman of the British Trades Union Congress, outlined as the fundamental objective of the conference "to concentrate the resources of the inter-ternationally organized movement for the maintenance and extension of the principles of freedom and democracy and to lay the foundations for an international organization to safeguard peace and justice throughout the world."

The platform of the conference was symbolically dominated by representatives of the Big Three powers, with members of the CIO, TUC and Soviet trade unions seated there. The conference is attended by representatives of over 50,000,000 workers in 38 Allied countries, seven neutral countries and 10 international organizations.

The reaction of the British labor movement to the attacks against the CIO and Soviet trade unions repeated by Robert J. Watt of the AFL before the meeting of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions last week was reflected in Isaacs' speech when he said:

"We profoundly regret the absence from this conference of important delegations we had hoped to welcome. Still more do we regret the causes of their non-attendance.

"But we have not wavered in our belief that the effort to rebuild our trade union movement on the broadest possible basis must be made and that the time to make it is now, not at some later date."

THREE CHAIRMEN

At a preparatory meeting of CIO, TUC and Soviet delegates yesterday, it was decided that the conference will have three presidents, alternating at each session, and the first meeting of the conference nominated Isaacs; R. J. Thomas, head of the CIO delegation; and Vasili Kuznetzov, chairman of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR.

In addition, it endorsed as three vice-presidents Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers; Louis Saillant, general secretary of the French General Confederation of Labor; and Chu Hseuh-fan, president of the Chinese Assn. of Labor. All six become ex-officio members of all conference committees.

In addition, the Standing Orders Committee has been enlarged from seven to nine members to be elected one each from the Soviet, British, French and American delegations, and the rest from Europe, the British Commonwealth, Latin America, China and international bodies, including the Christian trade unions, the IFTU and international trade secretariats.

It is expected that the first action of this committee will be to approve the recommendation of the preparatory committee, passed over the opposition of Sir Walter Citrine, TUC General Secretary, that each national organization shall have one vote when it is necessary to decide on important issues.

Speaking at the opening session, CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson declared that the activities of the CIO Political Action Committee during the presidential election campaign were "far from the least of our aids toward victory."

The CIO is now concentrating all its efforts to secure the appointment of former Vice-President Henry Wallace as Secretary of Commerce, Robinson said, adding:

"We shall not rest until he sits securely in the office to which President Roosevelt has appointed him, and as Secretary of Commerce helps to realize the goal of 60,000,000 jobs in the U. S. and world-wide good neighborly relations."

The afternoon was devoted mainly to a speech by Kuznetzov on the first item of the agenda, "Support of the Allied war effort." Kuznetzov emphasized that the military defeat of Germany is only the first step "in the long struggle to defeat the spirit of fascism throughout the world.".

He pointed out that "the masses of the people, especially the entire working class, are now paying dearly for failure to undertake timely and decisive measures against fascism. The lack of coordinated action among the democratic countries and the lack of united action by the international working class movement gave fascism its chance to involve mankind in this terrible war."

Kuznetsov urged that union leaders from "neutral" countries such as Switzerland and Sweden "wage a decisive struggle against the policy of their governments of lending assistance to fascist Germany," and called on workers of all countries "to work for a complete break in diplomatic, economic and other relations with fascist Spain, Portugal and Argentina.

CIO'S NEWEST PAMPLET, pictured above, tells what the Bretton Woods agreement means in jobs for U. S. workers in exports. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl. NW., Washington 6, D. C. Price: 100 for $4, 500 for $14. Illustrated, two-color job, 12 pages.

A Tip of the Hat From Down Under

A message of "warmest admiration for the splendid fight put up by our American comrades in the war against Fascism aggression" was received by the CIO this week from a conference of the Queensland delegates of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners of Australia.

R. J. THOMAS

SIR WATER CITRINE

VASILI KUZNETZOV

American, British and Soviet Labor Leaders in London

AN EDITORIAL

International Security

By one of those rare historical coincidences, the World Labor Congress in London is taking place at the same time at the "Big Three" meeting of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill which is mapping the final end of the Axis and the new world of peace and security.

The London meeting also takes place as the armies of the great alliance—the U. S., the U. S. S. R. and Britain—sweep toward the climax of the war in the destruction of the Nazi military machine. The great victories over Japan in the Philippines further mark the final end of the Axis threat to world freedom.

The workers of the U. S., represented by the CIO under the leadership of Philip Murray, of our allies in the Soviet Union, in Britain and our brothers in Latin America and the other countries at the London meeting have worked long and hard for this meeting.

They have worked for international labor unity because they know that it is the key to complete destruction of Fascism and to a world of security after the victory is won. These are the objectives of the war against German and Japanese aggression. These are the reasons why labor in all the anti-Axis countries supports this war with the blood of sons in the front lines and the sweat of its people on the production lines.

The World Labor Congress in London is mapping future world security and freedom just as the meeting of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill is mapping it "somewhere in the Black Sea area."

The achievements of the London Labor Congress will place an additional responsibility on us here at home. Within the next few weeks Congress will be called on to ratify the United Nations agreements worked out at Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks.

The creation of a new world labor federation at the London meeting will provide a powerful backing for world security plans being outlined now and previously agreed upon.

Our job at home is to back up the work being done in London and in the meeting of the three great political leaders now going on.

Manpower Bill Stalled; CIO Is Firm Against It

The May-Bailey bill (HR 1752) ran into some delays in the Senate Military Affairs Committee this week, with a change in the bill proposed to put the labor draft out of the hands of Selective Service and into those of the War Manpower Commission.

This change, which would mean that local labor management committees would have some say in the application of the law, has been vigorously opposed by the army and navy lobbyists, who apparently would prefer to see local draft boards carrying out the law.

CIO opposition continues to the whole bill, with complete unanimity, despite contrary reports, behind President Murray's position. Meanwhile, CIO affiliates in the field have ben asked to send in reports of local war production shortages, plus reports on recent cutbacks and layoffs, for use in testimony on the bill.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee is holding secret meetings on the bill, and only one CIO witness is scheduled to testify. Clinton S. Golden, assistant to President Murray in the USA-CIO, will present CIO's case. Golden is also vice-chairman of the WPB and the War Manpower Commission.

A resolution will be offered in the Senate and House calling on the administration to use present laws and agencies in overcoming production crises, rather than to pass any more new laws.

Senators should receive wires supporting this resolution and urging them to vote against the May-Bailey bill.

BATTLE WRECKAGE is dramatically illustrated in this picture of war equipment at an ordnance collecting point somewhere in France. Cpl. Bernard L. Arshop, of Indianapolis, is standing by burned-out gun tubes from heavy artillery pieces. In the foreground, a discarded tire; in the background, damaged cars and tanks. Much of the equipment was made by CIO members.

CIO Unions Prove Manpower 'Crisis' Due to Inefficiency, Misuse of Labor

"There is no such thing as an over-all manpower 'crisis'," says the CIO in the current issue of its Economic Outlook. "In plant after plant named by government agencies as critically short of manpower, our unions found misrepresentation of labor needs, faulty scheduling by the procurement agencies, misuse of labor, refusal to hire minority groups, and failure to raise wages, to improve working and community conditions, and to cooperate with workers' groups. These are factors truly relevant to the solution of this 'crisis'."

"National legislation for local difficulties would be like calling the fire department to put out a match," says the Outlook in attacking national service legislation in general and the May Bill in particular. "The proposed legislation leaves untouched the underlying conditions of inefficient management, uncoordinated government policies, and bad labor and living conditions which have caused manpower shortages. It is a quack remedy which would do more harm than good."

In backing up its attack with specific examples of wasted manpower, the article cites reports by CIO unions on given plants. One shipbuilding company, for instance, the article says, put in a requisition with the U. S. Employment Service for 17,000 men, whereas a joint committee of the union and management reported a real need of only 1,000 men; the company had overstated its manpower shortage by some 16,000 men.

The article quotes the Mead committee stamp of "wholly fictitious" on reports of an alleged manpower shortage of 10,000 in a major aircraft plant.

The CIO Steelworkers, the Outlook says, found only 10 cases of genuine manpower shortage out of 41 reported by the armed services to be behind on schedule because of lack of labor.

7 States to Go

Georgia Dumps Polltax

Repeal of the polltax in Georgia was clinched with signature of the repealer bill this week by Governor Ellis Arnall, following an overwhelming vote in the legislature.

At the same time, the Federal bill to repeal the tax in the remaining seven states that still levy it was set for action early in March with the re-introduction of HR 7 by a Democrat-GOP coalition headed by Rep. George Bender (R., O.). HR 7 is the bill offered for the past two seasons by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) which has passed the House but has been filibustered in the Senate.

State action in Georgia reflects a new and progressive trend in the South. Gov. Arnall belongs to the school of thought that believes firmly in industrialization as the key to a better future for the Southern people. New industries have come to the South as the result of war needs for production. Forward looking people want to kep these industries after the war, and thus lift the veil of poverty that has long hid the true face of the South.

As Gov. Arnall's action indicates, they cannot hope to bring modern mass industries to the Southern states without at the same time modernizing their political structure. The polltax is a remnant of feudalism. It keeps the workers, the farmers and the common people generally—both white and Negro—out of the main stream of American democracy.

Georgia's action in repealing its polltax is a long step toward bringing democracy to a section where it has been lacking in the past. It should act as a stimulant not only to other state governments but to the Federal Congress as well to repeal a distinct handicap that has held back the South and the whole nation from the full realization of the democratic way of life.

Drawings Courtesy Southern Patriot

CIO Radio Roundup

The biggest labor news of the week will be the subject of Saturday's 6:45 p.m., EWT, Blue Network broadcast, with CIO delegates to the World Labor Congress speaking from London.

Also on the air at 3:45 p.m., EWT, Feb. 17, will be the CIO Rubber Workers Union, dramatizing its contribution to the war effort over CBS stations.

Incidentally, 105 out of approximately 140 CBS stations are carrying CIO's regularly weekly show. How about the CBS and Blue Network stations in your community? * * *

Somehow, listening to Fulton Lewis, Jr., we never got the idea that the self-assertive news commentator was shy, but it seems that he is . . . and the Mutual Broadcasting System is, too.

Also, Mutual has in its employ one John D. Whitmore, manager of its news division, who should take a few lessons in semantics.

This bit of information is presented through the courtesy of Irving Abramson, president of the N. J. CIO Council, who asked Mutual for time on the Lewis program to answer an obviously editorialized attack on Henry A. Wallace.

Mutual's Whitmore said the broadcast was "a clear-cut reporting job," but Abramson countered with: "Perhaps the standards applied by Paul Goebbels would characterize this as 'news' and as a 'clear-cut reporting job'."

Whitmore rejected Abramson's request for time to answer Lewis, adding however that "if you feel you would like to make a statement in behalf of the CIO, which we can use as a part of our news broadcasts, we hope that you will not hesitate to forward it to us at once."

Abramson, of course, would like to read the statement, so that it wouldn't be subject to some side-bar snide remarks or a lightness of tone ill befitting the seriousness of the subject.

He promises not to bite either Mr. Lewis or Mr. Whitmore—honest! * * *

The Peoples Radio Foundation, Inc., 100 Fifth Avenue, New York City, has issued an invitation to several hundred CIO unions in New York State to purchase shares of stock in its organization on the basis of the resolution adopted by the CIO Annual Convention in Chicago which urged local unions to join with other groups in co-operative establishment of FM stations in areas where operation of commercial FM stations by unions would not be feasible.

Among the sponsors of the Peoples Radio Foundation are a number of leading trade unionists including Joseph Curran, John T. McManus, Arthur Osman, Ben Gold and Rockwell Kent.

* * *

The CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union is making plans to get into FM broadcasting after victory. The N. Y.-N. J. district is buying a large share in the proposed FM station in N. Y. City, and the Ohio district has OKed plans for two FM stations.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The Wallace confirmation as Secretary of Commerce has been put over until March 1, with Senate passage of the George bill stripping the Department of the lending powers under the Reconstruction Finance Corp. GOP strategy in the House version of the George bill is to load it down with still more restrictions in the hope that FDR will have to veto it, thus putting the confirmation issue back where it started.

The May-Bailey bill (HR 1752) is now in the Senate, where it appears headed for delay on the question of placing the labor draft under the War Manpower Commission rather than Selective Service.

Subsidies have come up again in Senate approval of a bill to extend the Commodity Credit Corp. with a limitation on its lending powers and on use of funds for cost of living subsidies.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
George (S 375)	Takes RFC out of Commerce Dept., accepted by FDR as necessary to confirmation of Wallace as Commerce Secretary.	Passed Senate, now in House waiting rule from Rules Com. GOP trying to alter it to force FDR veto, block Wallace.	Wire Representative to work for S 375 as passed by Senate in order to ensure Wallace confirmation.
May-Bailey (HR 1752)	Drafts manpower for war jobs under Selective Service; freezes those now on war jobs.	Senate Military Affairs Com.	Urge Senators to reject.
CCC extension (S 298)	Extends borrowing power of Commodity Credit Corp., which buys and resells farm products, uses subsidies to hold down living costs.	Passed Senate with Taft (R., O.) amendment limiting funds, use of subsidies. Now in House Banking and Currency Com., with move to kill Taft amendment.	Write Representative urging support of move to kill Taft amendment.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Repeals polltax in seven states; gives vote to 8,000,000 Negro and white citizens.	Will become active early in March, with House Discharge Petition.	Write your Senators to support.
U. S. aid to education (S 181)	Sets up $300 million fund for schools; ⅔ for substandard teachers' wages, ⅓ for school facilities. Does not provide "Federal control" of education.	In Senate Education and Labor Com. CIO and Auxiliaries have testified in support.	Urge Representative to support.

The Fight's Getting Tougher—More Help Needed for Wallace

New road blocks on the way to confirmation of Henry A. Wallace as Secretary of Commerce were built in the House this week. The GOP moved to make the George bill, which strips the Commerce Dept. of Reconstruction Finance Committee lending powers, so unacceptable that FDR will have to veto it. This would throw the confirmation issue back to where it started from.

The GOP move came in an amendment by Rep. Wolcott (R Mich.) to the George bill (S 375) that would make it almost impossible for the President to conduct U. S. agencies necessary to the war. It was frankly aimed at Wallace, since it would force the confirmation back to the Senate without the George bill.

COMPROMISE NECESSARY

Both FDR and Wallace accepted the George bill, not because they liked it, but because it was necessary to compromise with the reactionaries led by Sen. George if Wallace is to be confirmed. The promise was made by George and his Senate followers that Wallace's O.K. would follow acceptance of the bill.

With this House move, the Republicans take off the mask they wore in the Senate, where they used George as their front man, leaving the Democratic party with the onus of trying to block Wallace. Apparently they no longer care, or they figure that the voters will forget about the issue between now and Mar. 1 when the confirmation vote is scheduled to come up again.

FDR and Wallace had to accept the George bill because popular support for Wallace hasn't been mobilized enough to place him in the Commerce Dept. with the full powers it used to have under Jones.

SWAMPED BY LETTERS

Letters and wires have been coming to the Senators, to the point where Sen. Bailey (D. SC.), chairman of the Senate Committee passing on Wallace, has complained to reporters. There has been strong suport from more enlightened sections of business, too, with formation of a Businessmen for Wallace Committee and appeals from such men as Henry J. Kaiser, Andrew Higgins, et al.

Both House and Senate, however, need to receive a greatly increased flood of wires, letters and resolutions in the next two weeks. As President Murray has pointed out, every CIO union should make it its No. 1 job to get united support for Wallace in its community, including employers, merchants, farmers, housewives.

The Republicans and a section of the polltax Democrats are going to spend the next two weeks trying to whip up a fever of artificial excitement about the need for "curbing" executive powers through the recently introduced Wolcott amendments to the George bill.

The attempt is so crude that many of the polltax Democrats can't go along with it—George himself saying on Wolcott's amendment: "I think we've gone far enough already."

It can be met, however, if the CIO takes the lead in rallying the widest possible support from all sections of the country to demand no changes in the George bill and confirmation of Wallace. The Wallace nomination is far from a "labor" issue—it is an issue of full production and 60 million jobs, and everyone in the country is involved in that.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Badges
Dues Buttons
Bronze Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

Plenty of Work For PAC—Murray

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10—A reminder to CIO unions that political action must continue and grow for the local elections this year and for the 1946 Congressional elections was sent out this week in a circular letter to all CIO unions from President Murray.

"It is essential that all local unions be advised to continue their committees which functioned during the recent national election campaign and where they do not now exist to establish them," he wrote.

"These committees, together with the state and city councils, must organize at once to exert their full influence in the important local elections which will take place this year as well as to prepare for effective participation in the Congressional elections of 1946."

Citing the resolution at the CIO convention of last November continuing CIO-PAC, he reminded CIO affiliates that PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, now in London for the World Labor Congress at his request, would be returning soon and that political action would then be intensified.

"As soon as Mr. Hillman and the members of the Political Action Committee who are also attending the World Labor Congress return to this country, the work of political education and political action of the CIO will be intensified," Murray said.

News of the Week

U. S. High Court to Probe 2 States' Anti-Labor Laws

The U. S. Supreme Court this week decided to review the constitutionality of anti-labor laws passed by Florida and Alabama Legislatures. The laws have been opposed by joint CIO-AFL legal efforts.

The Florida statute forces labor organizers to take out state licenses, and prohibits the issuance of licenses to persons not of "good moral character"—a provision that would make discrimination easy for an anti-labor state official. Non-citizens and those convicted of felonies are also forbidden to represent labor unions.

The Alabama law requires unions to file detailed financial statements; prohibits unions from charging for work permits; and forbids supervisory employes from joining the same union as production workers.

* * *

Fifteen members of the CIO United Steelworkers were convicted by a Hancock County jury this week on charges of misdemeanor involving the distribution of leaflets last spring before the gates of the Weirton Steel Co., Weirton, W. Va. The company is the only major steel plant that the USA-CIO has not organized.

They were convicted under an ancient state law which makes it illegal for three or more persons to gather on a public street if in the opinion of law officials such a gathering is "creating a disturbance."

The conviction will be appealed to the State Supreme Court, if necessary, according to Robert J. Davidson, district USA-CIO regional director.

* * *

Vigorous support for the health and disability insurance provisions of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill was expressed this week by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the CIO United Steelworkers.

"The cost of needed hospitalization is beyond the means of the great bulk of our population," Golden wrote in a statement for the Commission on Hospital Care. "Therefore, the CIO is strongly convinced that only a universal pre-payment plan can provide the accessability of hospitals to every person—regardless of race, religion, sex or economic condition."

* * *

"Labor has a great stake in the postwar period and we dedicate ourselves to the elimination of prejudice and bigotry which might disrupt the cooperation and teamwork so essential to the solution of any problems in that period," CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey said this week in a statement on Brotherhood Week, Feb. 18-25.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 380 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c
EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

Small Pickings

Public Support for Wage Justice

The CIO has been leading the fight for a long time to revise the unfair and outdated Little Steel Formula and to bring wages into line with the greatly increased living costs.

Every CIO union with a case before the War Labor Board has asked for a wage raise to bridge the gap between the 15% raise on 1941 wages allowed by the formula and the 44.8% jump in living costs between 1941 and 1945, as shown by the report of the labor members of the President's Cost of Living Committee.

So far nothing has been done. Worse than that, the WLB has recently been stymied by Stabilization Director Vinson even on "fringe" awards affecting vacations, reclassifications, shift premiums, etc., which would give some relief without actually breaking the Little Steel Formula.

Meanwhile, after more than a year of stalling, the WLB has still failed to make a report on the subject to President Roosevelt on which he could take action to remedy this longstanding injustice.

CIO unions have constantly been pressing for action from Vinson, War Mobilization Director Byrnes and the WLB.

CIO delegations are also taking the issue to their members of Congress every week, urging them to support CIO's case for a break in the formula, and for a thaw of the Vinson freeze on the fringe awards already granted by the WLB.

Public support is needed to get action from the stabilization authorities and the WLB. In seeking support from businessmen, farmers, housewives and all other groups, the CIO can point out that it is urging something to benefit the whole country, not just labor alone.

Closing the gap between wages and living costs will mean more war production, especially in substandard wage industries. It will mean protection for our men in the armed forces, both now while they fight and when they come back.

It will also mean a solid foundation under the nation's purchasing power for the changeover from war to peace production after victory is won.

What You Can Do

Here's what you can do to help bridge the chasm between 1941 wages and 1945 living costs.

Write your Congressman and your Senators asking them to urge revision of the Little Steel formula and an end to the Vinson freeze on WLB awards already granted.

Write President Roosevelt, Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, War Labor Board Chairman Wm. H. Davis, Washington 25, D. C., with the same urgent request.

Get in touch with the CIO Women's Auxiliaries and all other organized women's groups to write.

Ask employers, businessmen, farmers, merchants, professional people to write, stressing the benefits to the whole community from an upward revision of base wage rates.

Support your CIO delegations when they come to Washington to put the case directly to administration people and Congress there.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THREE international labor gatherings have taken place in London in the past few weeks, to the confusion of many American readers who are dependent on the very skimpy reports in the daily press.

But if we examine the different character and actions of these gatherings, it will throw some light on the problems confronting the most important of the three—the world labor conference called by the British Trades Union Congress, in which the CIO is participating.

★ ★ ★

The first to meet was a conference of the governing body of the International Labor Office (ILO).

This is not an international trade union body, but an offshoot of the League of Nations made up of government, employer and labor representatives appointed by the governments of participating countries.

ILO decisions on labor and social welfare matters, to become effective, require ratification by the respective governments.

The CIO is barred from participation in the ILO by the dog-in-the-manger attitude of the AFL, which has refused to share representation with it on an equal basis. The unrepresentative character of the ILO as a world body is further emphasized by the absence of the Soviet Union from its councils.

The future of the ILO is uncertain in relation to the new and all-inclusive United Nations organization planned at Dumbarton Oaks.

★ ★ ★

The next international body to meet in London was the general council of the International Federation of Trade Unions (IFTU).

Unlike the ILO, the IFTU does purport to be a world organization of trade unions, though most of world labor is outside its ranks.

Never particularly effective or inclusive, the IFTU lost most of its affiliates with the destruction of most of the European labor movements, so that now it has in its ranks little more substantially than the British Trades Union Congress and the AFL.

The IFTU forfeits any claim to being a really inclusive world labor body by barring the labor movement of the Soviet Union and by refusing to admit more than one trade union center from each country. The AFL, in fact, joined it chiefly to keep out the CIO.

At its recent meeting, with AFL Delegate Watt taking the lead, the IFTU maintained its impotence and its exclusiveness by again refusing to admit more than one labor movement per country and still insisting on keeping out the Soviet trade unions.

A report on the subject was referred to affiliates for further consideration at a later conference.

★ ★ ★

Unlike the above two gatherings, the world labor conference in which the CIO is actively participating is really representative of world labor.

Nearly all bona fide labor movements were invited to attend, and only the AFL refused.

At this conference therefore there is a real possibility of laying the groundwork for an all-inclusive organization, which can be the labor counterpart of the world organization of nations planned at Dumbarton Oaks.

The chief obstacles to achievement of this generally accepted goal, outside of the opposition of AFL leaders, are likely to be stalling tactics and the paper jurisdictional claims of the IFTU.

One such obstacle was encountered at a meeting preliminary to the world conference, when CIO delegates took a leading part in insisting that voting provisions be adopted, so that it might be a conference for action instead of just a talkfest.

But there is still leeway for AFL and other obstructionists to make the IFTU a stumblingblock.

One such proposal, for instance, is that the CIO, the Soviet trade unions and most of the rest of world labor should wait outside in the cold, twiddling their thumbs, until the little group running the IFTU makes up its mind if and on what terms it will admit them.

★ ★ ★

There are encouraging indications, however, that most of the organized workers throughout the world, like the CIO membership, are in no mood to let the ghosts of past failures, mistakes and prejudices stand in the way of real world labor unity now for victory over fascism, lasting peace and postwar prosperity.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 February 12, 1945 No. 7

Push CIO Pay Demands

Delegates Besiege Congress

Delegation after delegation of CIO workers from industrial states this month are presenting their case—and the nation's for wage increases.

Hundreds of district and local CIO leaders and rank-and-file workers have already appeared in Washington to tell Congress, the Office of War Mobilization and the War Labor Board why the Little Steel formula must be revised to allow a 17 cent an hour wage increase.

New York State, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Illinois, Minnesota and Ohio workers have appeared. Scheduled to follow them are delegations from Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey, New England, Missouri and New York City.

Two delegations from northern Ohio presented their case last week to their Congressmen, the Office of Economic Stabilization and the WLB.

Pressure Needed

Still more pressure is needed, although the workers have been getting promises from Congressmen that they will ask Stabilization Director Vinson, the WLB and President Roosevelt to boost wages.

An example of the effectiveness of the visits was the reaction last week of Congressmen Feighan (D) and Crosser (D) both of Cleveland; Huber (R) of Akron and Congressman-at-large Bender (R) of Ohio.

All of these Representatives, after hearing impassioned appeals from members of a northern Ohio delegation, were visibly impressed and indicated by words or actions they would make representations in behalf of the workers.

They heard Francis I. Stark, District 28, Steelworkers, which includes the Jones and Laughlin plant at Cleveland, say that employes of that plant were working only 3 and 4 days a week—the firm using a fire as an alibi for lack of work.

Workers Laid Off

Stark asserted that the firm intended to lay off a "turn" of workers making light alloy steel—much needed in war production. Not even since Cleveland was declared a critical manpower area has the local Republic Steel plant worked more than the 40-hour week, Stark declared.

After hearing Stark and several others, Bender said that he would be glad to call WLB Chairman Davis to tell him the need for upward revision of wages.

He said that he didn't get a satisfactory answer from Davis, he would state the workers' case in the House.

Bender, Huber and Feighan all indicated that they would tell administrative agencies of the need for increasing wages.

Additional support to improve the general wage picture came from Vice-President Truman who told a five-man delegation from the CIO Packinghouse Workers that he would ask Economic Stabilizer Vinson to relax his ban against wage increases that boost prices.

Other members of the Ohio delegation stressed the seriousness of the plight of the workers in the face of stabilized wages and increased living costs, which a CIO-AFL committee found have risen 44 per cent while wage increases are held down by the Little Steel formula to 15 per cent.

Victor De Cavitch, president, District 7, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, told Ed Pritchard, assistant to Economic Stabilizer Vinson, before whom the delegation also appeared, that prices had more than doubled. Vinson was not present.

He said that the dress he used to buy for his little girl for $1.50 now costs from $3.50 to $3.98.

"Some have to cash their war bonds to meet the rising cost of living," De Cavitch added.

One worker said that his wife was able to afford a coat when it cost $18, but now the price of a similar garment had risen so sharply that she simply could not afford to purchase a new coat.

At a conference with Dr. George W. Taylor, public member of the WLB, Marie Reed, business representative of UE Local 735, Cleveland, read from a pay voucher showing that in 1941, a worker received $37.66 for a 48-hour week, while last year the same worker got only $35.66 for a similar amount of time.

"Our workers would laugh if we told them they had received a 35 per cent wage increase," she said. Other delegates said that some workers would have to cash their war bonds to pay income taxes. WLB Chairman Davis has said that straight time hourly earnings have increased by 35 per cent.

A clash occurred between Dr. Taylor and a delegate who had been pressing him to state when a recommendation on wages could be expected.

"That's our business," snapped Dr. Taylor.

The delegate replied that it was his business to tell the workers what to expect from the WLB.

At the various conferences Robert Lamb, national CIO legislative representative, pointed out repeatedly that now is the time for action on upward revision of wages. Referring to the changed military situation in Europe, he declared that action is imperative now, and that 60 days from now we are likely to be confronted with the wholesale readjustments in our economy.

He said that a 17 cents an hour wage boost which is sought by the Steelworkers would be just a drop in the bucket. Lamb pointed to a hypothetical case of a worker getting a dollar an hour, and now earning $52 for a 48-hour week.

With the 17 cent wage increase, a worker cut down to a 40-hour week would receive only $47, a slash of $5.

The wage boost would have a beneficial effect on the national economy, because it would add $20 millions to workers' pay, which would have the effect of $10 billions in added purchasing power throughout the national economy, Lamb declared.

"A 17 CENT AN HOUR WAGE BOOST NOW" is the slogan of CIO delegations currently going to Washington to demand that Senators and Congressmen urge the War Labor Board to recommend pay increases for CIO-organized workers. The picture shows Victor De Cavitch, president of District 7, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, stating the case before Congressmen (left to right), Crosser (D) Cleveland, Feighan (D) Cleveland, and Huber (R) Akron.

Public Has Stake in Boosting Wages of CIO Workers

The greatest possible public support is going to be needed to break the freeze of wages, as well as that imposed by Economic Stabilizer Vinson on pay awards made on the so-called "fringe" issues.

Not very many people outside the labor movement understand the issues at stake in the CIO's fight against the Little Steel formula and against Vinson's dead hand on the WLB. Many of them are poisoned by newspaper propaganda, which lyingly tries to present the CIO case as something solely in labor's interest.

The explanation of the case for raising wages below may be old stuff to readers of the labor press, but it puts the case in handy and simple form for explanation to others.

Try it on your friends and neighbors, on stores where you buy your groceries, on your farmer friends, on the local women's clubs through your wife's CIO Auxiliary. You'll find that once these people outside the labor movement grasp the real meaning of the CIO's wage demands, they'll come forward and help — because they'll realize that what helps labor helps them.

WHAT FORMULA IS

Under the present wage stabilization policies the War Labor Board will not grant any general wage increases to the workers of a particular company if, since January 1, 1941, the amount of general increases that have been granted exceeds 15%.

Example: Average straight-time hourly earnings on Jan. 1, 1941, 85c.

Little Steel allowance, 15%.

Cents per hour allowance, 12.75c.

General wage increases since Jan. 1, 1941, 8c.

Amount of general increase permitted under Little Steel formula, 4.75c.

HOW IT IS ARRIVED AT

On Jan. 1, 1941, the Bureau of Labor Statistics "Cost of Living" index stood at 100. On April 12, 1942, the day the Little Steel Formula was adopted, the BLS index stood at 115. This indicates that the cost of living had gone up between January 1, 1941, and April, 1942, by 15%. Therefore, the War Labor Board reasoned that in order to maintain the peacetime standards of the wage earners, general wage increases totaling 15% above the wage rates prevailing on January 1, 1941, were necessary.

WHY THE LITTLE STEEL FORMULA SHOULD BE CHANGED

1. Although the basic wage rates have been kept to the 15% limit, the cost of living has continued to climb upwards.

The BLS figure indicates that the cost of living has gone up since Jan. 1, 1941 by 25%.

President's Cost of Living Committee shows an increase of 29%.

CIO and AFL independent study (Meany-Thomas Report) shows an increase of 44%.

2. The rise in basic wage rates since January, 1941, according to the BLS, is no more than 16.1%.

3. William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, argues that the cost of living has not outstripped wages because average straight-time hourly earnings have increased by 35%.

This figure, however, includes the earnings of incentive and piece workers and does not take into account the shift of workers from low paid civilian production to higher paid war industries.

4. The Little Steel formula should be eliminated and a 17c upward wage adjustment granted for the following additional reasons:

a. Present hourly earnings will decrease drastically whenever war production is terminated because of the elimination of overtime, incentive bonuses and reduction of the work week to 40 hours.

(b) There will be considerable down-grading.

(c) With the return of 10,000,000 veterans, unemployment due to reconversion and down-grading, the possibilities of wage increases in the post-war period will be almost nil.

(d) Prices will very likely increase in the reconversion period due to scarcity of civilian goods.

News Guild Protests

Failure to raise the wage ceiling last weekend also brought a protest from 50 delegates who attended the national wage conference of the CIO American Newspaper Guild, held in national CIO headquarters, Washington, D. C.

The delegates representing three-fourths of the membership of the Guild charged that Dr. Robert Burns and Dr. F. S. Deibler, chairman and co-chairman respectively of the WLB's Newspaper Commission, were not following WLB policy and were thus denying Guild members allowable wage increases.

Burns and Diebler attended and attempted to defend their records. Nathan Feinsinger, WLB public member, outlined WLB policy which lent fuel to the charge of the delegates.

A new approach on minimum salaries, wage step-ups on experience, and merit and length of service increases was adopted and recommended to all locals.

Told In Blood

By Joseph Greene

The hours of slow, stealthy approach through the treacherous coral reefs were over. In the early morning haze, the landing barges had come in close to shore. And then the Marines charged across the sandy beach, their steel bayonets dull in the sunlight. Caught by surprise the Japanese garrison was quickly overwhelmed. But a few of them slipped into the jungle.

Now Captain Jenkins was crouching in the thick undergrowth and rubbing the week-old beard on his chin. He was staring across the level strip of land which the Japanese had made into a 1st class landing field. On the other side, the few Japanese who had escaped the daring raid, had set up a heavy-caliber machine gun. Now they were raking the field from end to end. A squad of Marines had been sent to work their way around to the rear of the machine gun nest. But it would be hours before they cut their way through the thick jungle undergrowth. And meanwhile Army bombers were already on their way to use this field. A landing would be suicidal in the face of the Japanese fire.

It was up to him to have this field ready for use, Captain Jenkins knew. He would be blamed for any slip-up. The high command counted heavily on the use of this airfield to blast Japanese ships out of the surrounding seas. It was his job now to clear the Japanese machine gun nest out.

"Sergeant Ross!" Captain Jenkins called out. "Come here."

Down the line, a handsome young Marine raised his head. Cautiously he crept from tree-trunk to tree-trunk until he crouched beside his captain. "Yes, sir?"

"I'm going to try to make a run for the other side! Cover with rapid rifle fire!"

"Yes, sir!" Sergeant Ross replied. Then he hesitated, studying the open field in front of him. "May I make a suggestion, sir?" he asked.

"What is it?"

"I used to run for my high school track team," Sergeant Ross explained. "Let me try it first, sir. I could sprint across before they could get their rifle sights on me, sir! Please!"

Captain Jenkins hesitated for a long time. Finally he agreed. "If you fail to get across, Sergeant, I'll never forgive myself for letting you try it . . ."

"Thank you, sir," Sergeant Ross replied. He laid aside his rifle and picked up an extra hand grenade. Then he crept to the very edge of the clearing. "I'm ready, sir," he announced, his voice full of quiet confidence.

A split second after the order to fire had been given, Sergeant Charlie Ross leaped out of his cover and began to sprint across the field.

"POW! POW!" Several bullets whistled past his ears. "Mighty close!" Charlie thought as he raced for the cover of the jungle on the other side of the field. Little clumps of dirt flew all around him as the bullets hit the ground. Then a whole string of little explosions threw the earth up just ahead of him. The machine gun was trained on him! He swerved to one side and continued his mad race across the field. Then something hit him over the head like a sledge-hammer. He staggered and fell. For a moment he lay on the ground, stunned.

He felt his head, which throbbed painfully. The steel helmet was gone. When he looked at his hand, it was covered with blood. "I guess they creased me that time—but it takes more than that to knock a Marine out of the fight."

He rose to his feet and continued his run toward the wooded grove ahead. He could hear a hoarse cheer from his buddies behind him when they saw him get up. But the Japanese had seen him, too. And now the air was thick with flying bullets.

His legs were pumping madly. The thicket ahead was growing larger and nearer with every step. "I'll make it! I'll make it!" he kept saying over and over again. Now the jungle was but a few feet away. "Another few steps and I'm across!"

Suddenly something hit him in the shoulder. It packed the wallop of a mule's kick. He spun around from the force of the blow. Another bullet struck him in the ribs. Another in the thigh. Then the earth seemed to rise up toward him and hit him in the face. He lay still, face down.

HOW long he lay there he never found out. But slowly he became aware of the stickiness of his clothes clinging to his body. He knew it was his own blood, flowing from his wounds, soaking his clothes. He dug his fingers into the earth and began to drag himself forward. Just ahead was the jungle. After what seemed like a lifetime, he crawled into the undergrowth. He lay there listening for a while. He remembered exactly where the machine gun was hidden. He still had to knock it out!

Painfully, he began to crawl toward the machine gun nest. Every part of his body hurt. But he gritted his teeth and kept going. "I've got to get them before I bleed to death!" he said to himself.

When he got near enough to the Japanese soldiers, he reached into his pocket and pulled out a hand grenade. It was covered with his own blood. Something was sticking to it. Charlie looked at the piece of paper and remembered suddenly. It was a letter from home—from his mother. He had read it over so many times he knew every word of it by heart. He put the letter on the ground in front of him, gently, lovingly. Then he raised himself and looked over the bushes. The Japanese vere very close to him, too close for the grenade. But he had no strength to throw it far. He could manage, he knew, to throw it only a short distance.

He raised the grenade and pulled the pin out with his teeth. Then he waited several seconds. With his last ounce of strength, he heaved it and fell flat on his face.

A second later, the explosion tossed pieces of earth and bushes over him. But Sergeant Charlie Ross no longer cared. He was lying still, his hand grasping the letter from his mother. His mind was wandering deliriously.

He thought he was looking into the face of his mother and she was smiling at him. Her lips were forming words and he watched carefully. He heard her speak the words of the letter clutched in his hand.

". . . and take care of yourself, son. You are fighting for all of us back home, for your mother and the kids on the block . . . We know it. We are doing everything to help . . . Yesterday I went to the Red Cross and gave my blood . . . Who knows whose life that blood may some day save . . . it—it might be your life, my son . . ."

And then the image of his mother faded. Everything went black and Sergeant Charlie Ross knew no more.

CAPTAIN Jenkins looked at the still body of Sergeant Ross. The first aid man was bending over him.

"It's no use sir!" the first aid man said. "He's lost too much blood. We'll never get him back to the first aid station alive!"

"We've got to!" Captain Jenkins snapped back. "Get that blood plasma ready! We'll give him a transfusion right here!" He picked up a bayonetted rifle and jabbed it into the ground beside Sergeant Ross. Then he taped the jar of life-saving fluid to the butt end of the rifle. "We've got to save him."

It was when they were placing him on a stretcher to carry him to the first aid station that Sergeant Ross opened his eyes. He saw the smiling face of Captain Jenkins bending over him.

"You'll be all right now, Sergeant. That blood plasma from the Red Cross saved your life!"

Sergeant Ross grinned and nodded his head weakly. Then he said something that puzzled Captain Jenkins for weeks afterward.

"Thanks, mother . . ." Charlie whispered, a smile on his face.

Copyright by Joseph Greene

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland, Memphis, Tenn., reports: Plough Plant No. 3, CIO 64, no union 0; Plough Plant No. 2, CIO 70, no union 12. CIO Rep. Henry White and Council Rep. Riley Williams handled these campaigns.

National Produce, CIO FTA&AW 42; no union 7. FTA&AW Rep. Jesse Harrison and Joe Hellinger handled this election victory. Modern Package, Inc., CIO 19, no union 7. Burgie Vinegar, CIO 14, no union 0. Congratulations to all participating in these fine victories!

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, advises: General Box Co., Quinneseo, Mich., CIO 28, against 6. Crowell Spence Lumber Co., Clennora, Louisiana, CIO 105; no union 48. Brother Lloyd Welch was in charge of this campaign.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: Chicago Rawhide Mfg. Co., Chicago, (production and maintenance employes), CIO Fur & Leather Workers 573, 249 neither, 36 for AFL.

Joe Dernoncourt, CIO Reg. Dir., reports: An election among stockhandlers at Armour & Co., Oklahoma City was won by CIO Packinghouse Workers by a majority of five-to-one. Southland Cottonseed Oil Mill, Okahoma City, CIO Packinghouse Workers, won by a vote of three-to-one. Rep. Buck Whittaker handled these campaigns.

Frank Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, reports: Eastern Aircraft Co., Baltimore, Md., M & M Cafeteria Workers, CIO-URW&DSEA 33, Co. Union 1, AFL O. URW&DSEA Field Rep. Sonny Neistadt was in charge.

At the request of the CIO National Office, the British Broadcasting Corp., will produce a special international broadcast on Saturday, Feb. 17, 1945, at 6:45 p.m., EWT, over the Blue Network, from London in which the CIO delegates to the World Trade Union Congress will make a report for the American people. Don't forget to tune your radios in for this interesting broadcast!

CIO Marine Cooks Elect Officers In 3-Month Vote

The CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Assn. in San Francisco has announced the results of the three months' referendum election of officers for 1945, in which a record vote was turned in by nearly 2700 members.

Sec.-Treas. E. F. Burke, who ran unopposed for re-election, received 2,399 votes, and Hugh Bryson was re-elected asst. secretary by a vote of 1963 to 554 for his opponent Merrill White.

Voting was carried on with balloting committees working in San Francisco, Seattle, Wilmington, Portland and New York. Heaviest vote was at union headquarters in San Francisco, with Seattle a runner-up.

Port agents elected were Joseph Harris, Seattle; Joseph O'Connor, Wilmington; John Sneddon, Portland; Rudy Eskovitz, Honolulu; Nathan Jacobson, New York, and C. E. Johanson, Baltimore.

Furniture Union Cracks Hard Nut

One of the biggest anti-labor companies in Southern Indiana, the American Furniture Co., has finally signed its first agreement with the CIO United Furniture Workers.

Behind the contract now awaiting War Labor Board approval lie four years of tough organizing work in the anti-labor town of Batesville, says the union. Negotiations for the agreement continued for six months, after the CIO Furniture Workers had defeated an independent union in a Labor Board election.

The contract calls for a 6-cent per hour general wage increase, back pay, five-cent bonus, seniority rights, paid vacations and other standard union terms.

The union also won elections at furniture plants in Sumter, S. C., and Rome, Ga.

Big Uniform Firm Invites Union In

The largest uniform manufacturer in the country, the Sigmund Eisner Co. of New York, this week took the unprecedented step of urging the Amalgamated unionization of several hundred office and shipping forces in its Red Bank and Newark, N. J. plants. The firm is engaged exclusively in war work.

In an unsolicited communication to Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated, an official of the firm stated that the firm took a significant step seven years ago when it signed its first agreement with the Amalgamated.

"This step marked a turning point in its labor relations," the letter declared. "It was a step never to be regretted by the officials of the company."

Two thousand manufacturing employes of the company were previously under an Amalgamated contract.

Win Over Ward

Maintenance of membership and dues checkoff were awarded to the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes this week by the New England WLB in a dispute with Montgomery Ward & Co. The dispute involved 32 workers at a Barre, Vt., Ward store.

School Aid Gets Labor, Bosses' Help

Labor and business are working together to secure passage of the federal aid to education bill on which hearings were held last week by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Business as well as labor realizes that high standards of education are of benefit to everyone, and business men would regard legislation to provide aid for schools and colleges as an investment, not an assessment, Thomas C. Boushall, chairman of the education committee of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, pointed out at the committee hearings.

While at earlier hearings Jack Rackliffe, representative of the Nat'l. Teachers Division of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers stated that "if any group of American workers is allowed, or rather forced, to remain at substandard or mere subsistence levels, our entire economic structure will be jeopardized."

Education and wages go hand in hand, Boushall said. He described a survey by the chamber that had demonstrated that where educational levels were up, retail sales, magazine circulation and use of telephones were at high levels.

"Postwar problems will not be solved unless the people's technical skills are upgraded," Boushall stated.

Rackliffe, in his testimony, said:

"The American labor movement, which has consistently interested itself in good free public education sees clearly the intimate connection between the quality of education and economic well-being of the teachers themselves.

"The Nat'l. Teachers Division of the SCMWA-CIO maintains that good education on equal terms for all Americans is inseparable from the attainment of good salaries, good working conditions, and a happy and full life for American teachers.

"It is for this reason that this Division is interested in bringing teachers into the organzed labor movement. It is for this reason that the State County and Municipal Workers-CIO support the principle of Federal aid and in particular the bill now before this committee (S 181)."

Senate committee hearings on the bill were held Jan. 29-Feb. 2 and Feb. 8 and will be resumed at a later date.

Germany's Hope Lies in Defeat, Says Mann

The only hope of the German people lies in the total defeat of the German nation, in the opinion of Thomas Mann, famous Nobel Prize novelist who fled from Germany and became an American citizen.

Speaking at the Hollywood premier of the film, "Tomorrow the World", Mann said: "Out of defeat and disillusionment the hope is that the German people will find a new sense of reality and will return to the decent values that once made Germany great.

"Punishment must be stern. The German people must understand that they have taken a licking such as they have never had before. The rise of a democratic and civilized Germany is linked with the establishment of a more secure and civilized world."

An Open Letter To Attn. Gen. Biddle

Dear Mr. Biddle:

In May of last year the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO wrote you at some length about the Fascist activities of a number of so-called "mothers'" organizations in this country.

We pointed out that these groups work in close cooperation with the acknowledged agents of Fascism, that their propaganda is dedicated to stirring up race hatred and to undermining the trust Americans place in their government.

We called upon you to "conduct an immediate investigation of these Fascist women's groups to expose their aims and objectives, to discredit them in the eyes of all American women, and to bring their leaders to trial for their activities aimed at disrupting our war effort."

We have never had an answer to our letter.

Source Of Courage

Since that time the discontinuance of the trial of the 29 indicted seditionists in Washington has given new courage to these organizations. These "mothers'" groups serve as channels of distribution for the writings of a number of the seditionists. The failure of the Dept. of Justice to carry through the trial has apparently convinced these women that they need fear no interference by our federal authorities.

During January, 1945, the Chicago Sun carried two very revealing stories about the present activities of these organizations. They are conducting a compaign to urge that American troops give up the battle in Europe and return home immediately. Mrs. Lyrl Van Hyning told the Sun reporter that he organization, "We the Mothers, Inc.," was cooperating with other groups in a program to flood Congress with letters demanding that they "bring our boys home."

"We believe that further participation in that war is inimical to the welfare of our country, as well as to the small nations," says Mrs. Van Hyning's letter to her co-workers. She goes on to attack our allies and to say "This war means only the utter and wanton destruction of American youths."

On Govt. List

We, the Mothers, Inc., was one of 28 organizations listed by the government in 1942 as being used by the defendants in the sedition trial to break the morale of American troops. It seems obvious to us that they are still being used and that their activities are aimed at disrupting our war effort and disrupting the United Nations

Another Chicago organization also reported in the Sun is "Mothers of America." Their literature called for an immediate armistice and submission of the issues between the belligerent nations to arbitration by neutral nations.

"Why do we let Britain propaganda rule our radio, press, movies, schools, churches, clubs and postwar planners?" their spokesman, Mrs. Martha Hubbard asked, and goes on to attack participation of our allies, Britain and the Soviet Union, in building a lasting peace.

It is almost incredible that organizations like these should be permitted to spread their poison unchallenged. Their activities give aid and comfort to our Fascist enemies.

You have in your power to take action against them. We urge you first to resume at once the trial as we have pointed out has encouraged redoubled activity by these "mothers'" groups as well as other Fascist-minded organizations.

Investigation Asked

Second, we again urge you to undertake a public investigation of the activities of these groups which seek to undermine our war effort by taking advantage of the grief and loneliness of our war mothers. National public exposure of their aims and purposes and prosecution of their leaders would put all American mothers on guard against their vicious propaganda.

In the name of the wives and mothers of over a million CIO men and women in the armed forces, we call upon you for immediate action.

Faye Stephenson, President
CIO Women's Auxiliaries
Eleanor Fowler, Secretary-Treasurer

STARS IN STRIPES: Bathing beauties clad in this peppermint-striped ensemble will soon be decorating our beaches. Mary Gardner modeled the new beachwear at a Chicago style parade. (Federated Pictures.)

Recommended Reading

Unions in The Far East

Trade unionists in this country know very little about their union brothers in the Far East. This is too bad, for in the "One World" coming after the war, the strength of their own unions, their wages, working conditions and general welfare may be seriously affected by what happens to workers in such countries as China, India and Japan.

A timely and excellent pamphlet on the subject called "Labor Unions in the Far East," has just been issued by the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations and is recommended reading for unionists who realize the importance of knowing about the struggling unions of the Far Eastern world.

Speaking of "the menace of cheap Oriental labor" which American workers have long feared, the pamphlet points out that "the only permanent solution is to equalize labor standards in East and West—not by lowering standards in America, but by raising them in the Orient. Cheap Oriental labor will cease to be a menace only when it ceases to be cheap.

"The cheapness of Oriental labor has sometimes been hard on American workers. It is very much harder on the workers of China, India and Japan. Raising the standards of living in Asiatic countries will benefit American workers—not only by removing the 'menace' of cheap labor but also by creating new markets for American goods.

"Toward this goal the working people of Asia are themselves leading the way. They are fighting against tremendous obstacles. It is important for Americans to know what they are doing and to give them intelligent support."

Labor Unions in the Far East, by Eleanor H. Lattimore; American Council, Institute of Pacific Relations; 1 East 54th St., New York 22, N. Y. Ten cents a copy.

Trade Union Handbook

If the great number of inquiries which come to the National CIO office can be taken as a measure of the big demand there is for reference material on specific unions in the United States, a Handbook of Labor Unions by Florence Peterson will fill a need.

The handbook lists 182 national and international unions, councils and committees affiliated to the CIO, the AFL or independent, giving membership, number of locals, coverage, official publication, qualifications for membership, dues and other information.

Unions are listed alphabetically under the key word, and range in size from the giant CIO United Automobile Workers with more than a million members to the tiny Intl. Assn. of Siderographers of the AFL with 48 members.

The reference book suffers from the unavoidable handicap of being out of date in some of its material, particularly in membership figures for CIO unions, as the data was gathered in 1943, and CIO unions particularly, grow rapidly.

As the writer took pains to check her material carefully with officials of all unions included, much time necessarily elapsed before the book could finally appear. In spite of this, the book should serve as a useful reference for students and writers interested in the labor movement.

Handbook of Labor Unions, by Florence Peterson; American Council on Public Affairs, 2153 Florida Avenue, Washington, 8, D. C.

Quick Guide To Labor Laws

Shop stewards and other unionists will be interested in a new reference manual called "A Guide to Labor Legislation" issued by the Division of Labor Standards, U. S. Dept. of Labor.

Prepared in loose-leaf form to State labor laws which may also be obtained in digest form on separate sheets, the 62-page manual contains digests of all Federal legislation of general application and services available through Federal labor agencies.

Material is listed under five general headings: (1) U. S. Dept. of Labor. (2) Basic Federal Labor Laws. (3) Emergency Wartime Legislation and Agencies. (4) Veterans' Legislation dealing with Employment and Labor Matters. (5) Labor Branches of the Procurement Agencies.

Sample copies of a guide to Labor Legislation, Bulletin No. 66A, may be obtained from the Division of Labor Standards, U. S. Dept. of Labor, Washington 25, D. C., so long as the free supply lasts. Orders for additional copies should be placed with the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25. The price is 25c a copy, with a discount of 25 percent on orders of 100 or more. Remittance should accompany the order.

Anti-Race Exhibit to Tour

A life-size, 22-panel exhibit, "The Races of Mankind which is now on display at the 42nd Street New York Public Library under sponsorship of the Mayor's Committee on Unity, is scheduled later to tour the United States.

Included among the places where arrangements have been made to show it are Washington, D. C., Richmond, Va., and several educational institutions in the South, including Tuskogee Institute, Duke University and West Virginia State College.

Unions interested in sponsoring the exhibit in their locality may obtain particulars from Mrs. Edmonia Grant, director of education, Race Relations Division, American Missionary Assn., 287 Fourth Ave., New York 10, N. Y.

BookClubs

Hersey's Novel First Choice

John Hershey's novel, "A Bell for Adano," has been chosen as the first book selected by the United Auto Workers' new Labor Book Club in Detroit. Under the UAW Book Club plan, members receive six books a year for $5. The Club is open to UAW members in locals throughout the country.

Book Find Offers Bargain

A drive to interest trade union members is announced by the Book Find Club, 480 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y. For a limited time, the Club offers membership and selection of two of three books offered for $1.35.

The books are Howard Fast's Freedom Road, Louis Adamic's My Native Land and Theodore Draper's The Six Weeks' War.

NMU Bookstore Has Good Year

The Natl. Maritime Union bookstore which has just passed its first year, reports the sale of more than $18,000 worth of books in 1944. It has aided in compiling hundreds of ship's libraries used by thousands of seamen aboard merchant vessels.

Current best sellers at the bookstore which is located in the lobby of NMU national headquarters at 346 West 17th St., New York, include The First Round, The Cross and the Arrow, Freedom Road, Man's Worldly Goods and Strange Fruit. Technical books dealing with the sea are also very popular.

Anti-Fascist Comic-Strip

A new anti-Fascist comic-strip periodical called "The Challenger" has just made its appearance. Edited by Gerald Richardson, formerly with the War Relocation Authority, and published by Interfaith Publications, Inc. 1, East 43rd St., New York 17, N. Y., "The Challenger" is "intended for children—age range 5 to 75," states the Circulation Dept.

"I HAD THE MOST WONDERFUL DREAM LAST NIGHT—I DREAMED EVERYBODY HAD FILED THEIR INCOME TAX RETURNS EARLY!"

Teachers Union Offers Simple Tax Guide

A simple 16-page Income Tax Guide for Workers and Salaried Employes who have no complicated problems to figure out, may be obtained in quantity orders from the CIO Teachers Union, 13 Astor Place, New York 3, N. Y. Prices range from 10c each for 500 copies, to 2½c for 50,000 copies. Delivery can be made in one week to ten days.

The pamphlet tells the worker how to fill out his return quickly, without trying to make a tax expert of him, and can be understood by anyone who reads English, says Samuel C. Greenfield, chairman of the union's Taxation Committee. He suggests that trade unions could do their members a fine turn and build up some goodwill for themselves by distributing the booklet.

Subtle Hint

All Congressmen should be well informed on the CIO Political Action Committee by now. A copy of Joseph Gaer's book on the PAC, "The First Round" was put on every Congressman's desk when the 79th Congress convened.

Credit Unions

A 16-page pamphlet describing the NMU Credit Union will be off the press late this month, announces the Natl. Maritime Union. It is called "A Weather Eye to the Future."

Headache Relief For Ship Workers

Assistance in filling out income tax blanks is being offered free to members by Local 1, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in Camden, N. J. The Local's income tax committee headed by Thomas Patton has set up a plan under which members, especially those with spouses in the armed forces, may arrange through their shop committee to receive income tax aid.

The ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by NORT MESKIN

Story by JOE GREENE & JERRY COLE

COPYRIGHT 1945 NATIONAL CIO NEWS

Seamen AND Painters!

OLD DAVY JONES must be spitting clam shells in irritation over the rather amazing innovation introduced by a rather amazing organization, the CIO Natl. Maritime Union. For in Davy's book, a paint brush is a mass of broad, thick bristles on a wooden handle, to be used for the application of red lead, and in other assorted and hardly esthetic tasks. And he'd spit in your eye if you handed him anything so flimsy as the camel's hair artist brushes that a lot of NMU members are wielding these days.

Davy wouldn't be able to write off the change to the "younger influence," either, for hard-handed men with years of service in the merchant marine are working side by side with Johnny-come-lately's who still have to learn how to splice a line. For hundreds of NMU men in the past year and a half have learned to put their stories, their feelings and the people they know onto canvas and paper. This talent is coaxed out at the NMU-United Seamen's Service art class, presided over by a personable young woman named Alzira Pierce, who's a working artist in her own right.

The work of eight of these seamen has gone on exhibition at the Natl. NMU building, at 346 W. 17th St. in New York City, and will be on public inspection during the rest of the month from 9:30 a. m. to 6:15 p. m. weekdays, until 7 p. m. on Tuesdays, and until 1 p. m. on Saturdays. The seamen artists are: Robert J. Mirador, Miguel R. Sitchon, John Saito, Jack Condi, Lewis P. Windsor, Pat Turello, Antonio Ditta and Miguel Lopez.

And three members of the NMU were among the eight winners awarded equal prizes in the 1945 Third Annual Merchant Seamen's Art Exhibit, sponsored jointly by the United Seamen's Service and the U. S. War Shipping Administration. They are George N. Payne, of Alabama, and Herman S. Brockdorff and Joe Richards, both of New York. Their paintings are on exhibit as part of a total of 177 others by 56 merchant seamen of nine nationalities. Among the paintings are 52 works by 24 NMU members.

YOUNG NMU artists attend classes twice weekly at the NMU hall. The idea started with Alzira Pierce, who thought that the union could do more to enrich a many-sided existence for seamen, and it was eagerly seized upon by the NMU Education Dept., with the United Seamen's Service coming on the scene a bit later to finance the program.

Are the classes a success? Here's what one of the seamen, Paul Bozant, says:

"This is my first opportunity to paint, and I sure like it. I've painted scenery, mountains, men, ships, harbors—girls too. The next ship I go aboard, some paint is going with me. No reason why I should stop back at sea."

BRINGING IT BACK—BY BRUSH: Electrician Harold McConologue, who's been shipping out for 15 years, painted the maritime scene (top) and Able Seamen Milton Kemnitz, with one year in the forecastle, turned out the picture below it. Left to right: Kemnitz; Alzira Pierce, director of the NMU-United Seamen's Service art class; and Able Seaman Paul Bozant, who said that this has been his first opportunity to paint and "I sure like it." (PILOT Photos).

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 8 — 82 — February 19, 1945

Axis on the Run!

YALTA UNITY: The Big 3 parley in Soviet Crimea struck fear into hearts of Axis leaders, who see their shaky dictatorship disintegrating under blows of American, British and Red Army forces. Above, at the famous conference: Churchill, FDR and Stalin.

POUNDING BERLIN: While the Red Army smashes at Berlin from the East, Allied airmen soften up the heart of Nazidom with thousands of tons of bombs. Here a U. S. 8th Air Force Flying Fortress is shown in the spectacular daylight raid on the German capital.

SMASHING NAZIDOM: Red Army tanks spearhead the attack. These are shown speeding along a snow-covered military highway in Poland, backing up the mighty drives all along the eastern front that are sending Hitler's forces reeling back toward the heart of the Reich.

PHILIPPINE DELIVERANCE: Japan, the junior partner of the Axis, tasted bitter defeat this week as Yank forces smashed into Manila. Here joyous Filipinos rush from the hillsides to greet American forces that landed on Luzon.

Murray Hails Big 3 Action

(See Page 8)

★ ★ ★

Labor Angle On London Meet

(See Pages 2 & 3)

★ ★ ★

CIO Backs New Manpower Bill

(See Pages 8, 10 & 12)

Key to the Capital

The Natl. CIO NEWS this week, in cooperation with the CIO Legislative Dept., starts the publication of a special page devoted to reporting facts for action from the nation's capital. Timely, terse, informative, this page will be a substantial aid to all union officers who need to keep their eyes on what's cooking in Washington. For this week's latest news, turn to page 12 for the

Washington Guide

Drop Bridges Case, Civic Leaders Urge

Civic organizations, government bodies, political leaders and employers throughout the country are urging that the 10-year-old persecution of Harry Bridges be dropped in the interest of war production and national unity.

Within the past few weeks, for example, the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, the Los Angeles Democratic Committee, a member of the Seattle, Wash., City Council, the attorney general of California, most of the California members of Congress and many employers have urged that the case be dropped.

Bartley Crum, leading San Francisco attorney and a high officer of the Republican Party in California, has also petitioned FDR to end the case by voiding U. S. Attorney General Biddle's warrant of deportation.

E. L. Parsons, bishop of California, recently wired President Roosevelt: "Not even his enemies question the great service he has rendered in the war. He stands for unity of effort and for loyalty to the things for which we are fighting. With many others I trust you may see your way to take action in this matter."

Uruging that since "business as usual" and "strikes as usual" have been dropped for the duration, California Attorney General Robert W Kenny wrote to FDR:

"I urge, seriously and respectfully, that the Bridges' proceedings, an unnecessary and dangerous obstacle to the full development of a united state and nation, be immediately dismissed."

AFL Union Asks Bridges' Citizenship

Los Angeles (FP)—Lodge 311, AFL Assn. of Machinists, called on Pres. Roosevelt and Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle "to clear the way for Harry Bridges to become a citizen of the country he has served so loyally in peacetime and during critical war years."

Action of the local, which has 4,000 members in more than 100 plants, urged that the deportation order against the CIO leader "be dismissed without delay as a major contribution toward national unity, victory and a lasting peace."

Citrine Stalling On World Unity

By HERBERT A. KLEIN

LONDON (FP)—A workable agreement on the controversial issue of formation of a new world labor organization was foreshadowed at the World Trade Union Conference Feb. 13 as Sec. Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress made his anxiously awaited counter proposals to CIO Delegate Sidney Hillman's call for a new organization.

Speaking on behalf of the BTUC delegation rather than of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, of which he is president, Citrine's tone was definitely conciliatory to Hillman's proposal the day before for immediate replacement of the IFTU with a new organization.

"I regard Hillman's speech as a constructive contribution to the problem of creating an all inclusive world labor organization though I am unable to share his strictures on the IFTU and AFL," Citrine said.

WANTS NO DECISION

Citrine proposed that the conference should not seek to make definite decisions and recommendations. Instead, he said, it should set up a fully representative "provisional committee" composed of two representatives each from the U. S., Soviet Union, Britain, British Commonwealth, France, IFTU and international union secretariats affiliated with the IFTU and one each from China and the remaining countries in Europe.

Citrine's main object is to avoid or delay definite recommendations from this conference, although the conference has already adopted methods for ascertaining "general consent," instead of leaving the phrase vague or assuming it meant unanimous consent as Citrine appeared to wish.

Veering from the AFL stand on the IFTU voiced by Robert J. Watt at its recent meeting, Citrine said: "Unless a policy is pursued of admitting more than one central body from a country, we will not get an all-inclusive world trade union body."

Citrine's plan was considered by observers as a substantial concession to demands by the U. S., Soviet, Latin-American and other delegates for immediate formation of a bona fide international labor organization. Main weakness of his proposals was considered the inadequate representation he would allow liberated Europe on the provisional committee—one instead of three or more delegates.

CIO News Roundup

The CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and Mine Workers Union are cooperating to fight against three Christian American anti-labor bills that have been introduced in the Tennessee legislature.

One bill would outlaw the union shop, maintenance of membership, or any other union security clauses. Another requires unions to file detailed financial statements which would be available for inspection by employers. The third makes unions liable for any contract violations or damage to property during the existence of union agreements.

* * *

The Natl. War Labor Board needs help in speeding up the handling of cases, Chairman William H. Davis said this week in an appeal to unions and employers.

Davis pointed out that one of the most important steps is the complete use of collective bargaining before a case is brought to the board.

"Too often," he said, "the board finds a tendency among both unions and employers to drop small differences into the board's lap for settlement, rather than to seek agreement through negotiation. This delays the settlement of major issues, since the board refers back to the parties such issues it feels have not been adequately negotiated."

* * *

The Missouri Farmers' Assn., with 86,000 members in the state, this week endorsed the Missouri Valley Authority (similar to the TVA) as a means for providing flood protection and for generating hydro-electric power.

* * *

The Summit County Labor News, of Akron, Ohio, is plugging the establishment of a nationwide Junior Fire Fighters Club as a means of preventing death from conflagrations.

Ex-Enemies Get Bid to London

London (FP)—Following adoption of a successful peace-making proposal by CIO Delegate R. J. Thomas, the afternoon session of the World Trade Union Conference Feb. 8 accepted without opposition a plan unanimously reported by its standing orders committee which had the day before plunged the conference into disagreement.

Reporting out for a second time, the committee proposed that invitations be sent to representatives of Bulgarian, Rumanian, Italian and Finnish labor organizations, leaving the decision on whether they would be seated as observers or delegates to the credentials committee.

Neither Sec. Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress nor the 14 other British delegates objected, as they had the day before, and thus they arrived at the position supported by the Soviet, U. S., French and other delegations. Their objection had been met by Thomas' proposal that the report be sent back to committee.

The second committee proposal, to invite a representative from the Polish Lublin area, still met concerted BTUC opposition, however, and was sent back to committee.

2nd FEPC Story Next Week

The second installment of "Justice on the Job," illustrating the need for creation of a Permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee, will be carried in The Natl. CIO NEWS next week.

CIO Bulletin on Latin-America

First issue of the monthly CIO "Latin-American Bulletin," issued by the Committee on Latin-American Affairs, came off the press this week in Spanish and English.

"The bulletin will attempt to stress the CIO's strong feeling of solidarity and equality with its Latin-American sister organizations in their determined effort to achieve a higher standard of living, greater social welfare and more political freedom," the lead editorial says.

News covered in the first number includes a review of CIO policy toward Latin-America, reports on conferences attended by CIO delegates, the London World Labor Congress, etc.

The Bulletin can be secured from Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman, CIO Committee on Latin-American Affairs, 15 Union Sq., New York 3, N. Y.

CIO to Be at Mexico City Conference

Appointment of Sec. - Treas. David J. McDonald, of the CIO United Steelworkers, to the Foreign Ministers Conference in Mexico City meeting this week marks a further step toward labor representation at major policy conferences among the United Nations. McDonald is a member of the CIO Latin-America committee.

The appointment, announced by the U. S. State Dept., is also a recognition of the role labor will play in the economic and political development of the Pan-American nations. It follows logically on CIO's concern for present and postwar industrialization in this hemisphere as a means of achieving security and prosperity.

The CIO Latin-American Committee, which has sent McDonald, its chairman Jacob Potofsky, and other representatives to several conferences and meetings south of the border, has worked out a plan for industrial and agricultural development in Latin-America.

The plan calls for U. S. aid to these countries not only to help them economically but also as a means of providing a ready-made market for U. S. goods for the postwar period.

Industrialization of such "backward" countries, as President Murray has pointed out, is a necessary step to achieving jobs for all and full production in this country.

This, plus the further advance of political democracy and resistance to fascist forces in such countries as Argentina are expected to be the main subjects at the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Mexico City this week.

At London

CIO Urges New World Labor Body

LONDON—The issue of a new world labor federation — biggest question before the world trade union meeting here — went to committee today (Feb. 14) with the CIO plan given a leading edge over attempts to revive the moribund Intl. Federation of Trade Unions (IFTU).

The CIO plan, presented earlier in the week, calls for a completely new world labor body that will exclude no genuine trade union movement nor offer it any Class B membership. The British plan, presented by Sir Walter Citrine, calls for a provisional committee to be set up to study the situation.

The IFTU, which voted only a week ago to continue excluding the CIO and the Soviet unions, is dominated by the AFL officialdom and by leaders of pre-war unions in Europe, with Citrine as president. The AFL, at the meeting last week, said that it would walk out of the IFTU if the CIO or the USSR came in.

This was pointed up by Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin-American Confederation (CTAL) who asked:

"How can we include representatives of an organization — the AFL—whose responsible leaders repeatedly and publicly declared they would walk out if the IFTU takes in other groups?"

Lombardo opposed retention of the IFTU during the lengthy delays provided for in the Citrine plan. "If the IFTU continues it will be at the cost of the new world organization," he said.

"If the latter is set up, it will be at the cost of the IFTU—if we try to maintain both, there will be conflict."

The World Trade Union Conference must organize a brand new labor organization and not seek to utilize the wornout Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, CIO Delegate Sidney Hillman urged in leading off conference discussion on the subject.

In his maiden speech to the conference Hillman pulled no punches in blaming AFL leaders for the situation which he said had rendered the IFTU inadequate, impotent and wornout. Hillman's was the first reference to the AFL by name during the conference, which is in its second week.

"Three years after the coalition of the freedom-loving nations was given organizational form through the establishment of the United Nations," he said, "leaders of the IFTU are still unable to agree among themselves on the creation of an international labor organization similarly broad and inclusive. At this late date they find it necessary to postpone consideration of this question another eight months.

"That is a most unfortunate situation but it is a situation now existing and it exists in no small measure because the representatives of the IFTU's American affiliate — the AFL — stubbornly persist in nursing their narrow factional feuds, petty jealousies and anti-Soviet bias.

ISOLATING THEMSELVES

"This position which is completely isolating the AFL from world affairs doesn't of course represent the interests of the membership of that organization. We of the CIO deeply regret that the AFL leadership has taken this position.

"We regret that they have abstained from this conference but surely neither we nor other delegates here can sit for another eight months in hope that these gentlemen may change their minds or that other IFTU members will finally decide to proceed without them."

Hillman said he was certain the "new international organization of labor will reserve a place in its councils for the AFL and I am not without hope that the AFL leaders will reverse their decisions as they have on so many previous occasions when the times finally prove—even to their own satisfaction—that their position is untenable."

FIVE POINT PROGAM

On behalf of the CIO delegation, Hillman proposed a 5-point program:

"1. Create a new world labor organization subject to ratification at the earliest possible time by national trade union organizations represented at the conference

"2. Designate a conference committee fairly representative of the composition of the conference, in order to act as a continuations committee pending ratification by a sufficient number of national organizations, after which it will become the provisional executive committee of the new world organization.

"3. Empower this committee to take all necessary and desirable steps to implement conference decisions and execute them, arrange and summon a call for a constitutional convention of the new world labor organization, prepare a draft constitution for the new world labor organization and circulate it among organizations invited to the constitutional convention.

"4 Convene at the earliest possible moment such a constitutional convention, inviting such additional trade union organizations as the continuations committee may designate.

"5. Object of the Constitutional convention should be election of permanent officers and transaction of other appropriate business."

WORLD LABOR UNITY THEIR GOAL: Unity against Fascism and unity in peace are the goals set before the World Trade Union Conference in London. Symbolic of the "Big Three" war and peace coalition, leaders of British, Soviet and American unions discuss world labor problems. Left to right: Sec. Walter Citrine, British Trades Union Congress; Chairman Vasili Kuznetsov, Soviet All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey. (OWI radiophoto via Federated Pictures.)

Agree On Postwar Control Of Germany

LONDON (FP)—Complete disarmament of Germany as part of a stern Allied policy toward that nation was urged by British and Soviet leaders at the World Trade Union Conference Feb. 9 in a discussion on the peace settlement.

Giving delegates a lengthy, detailed analysis, Sec. Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress called for the complete defeat, disarmament and demilitarization of Germany. He demanded that the German war leaders be brought to justice for their crimes against the people of Europe and insisted that all stolen property must be restored and reparations made in services, goods and money even though it might involve Allied control of German economy for years and even generations to come.

Citrine's proposals for a stern peace were warmly seconded by Soviet Delegate M. P. Tarasov, who outlined to delegates the most complete postwar plan presented to them thus far.

"The Allies in all liberated countries must concentrate mainly on the eradication of all vestiges of fascism, the rehabilitation, restoration and strengthening of democracy under the leadership of democratic governments elected by the people," Tarasov said.

PLEDGES CIO BACKING

Full agreement with the Citrine proposals was expressed by James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO. Commenting on the program, Carey asserted that "the question is not one of a hard or soft peace but of taking all the necessary measures to guarantee that aggressor nations will not have another opportunity to start aggression." Carey pledged "the force and strength" of the CIO to ensure that "the measures adopted at this conference are obtained."

Who's Who for CIO At London Parley

R. J. Thomas, president of UAW-CIO, world's largest union, a vice-president of CIO, head of the delegation.

James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer.

Joseph Curran, president, Natl. Maritime Union, a vice-president of CIO.

S. H. Dalrymple, president, United Rubber Workers, a vice-president of CIO.

Albert J. Fitzgerald, president, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, a vice-president of CIO.

John Green, Scottish-born president of CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, a vice-president of CIO.

Allan S. Haywood, British-born director of organization and a vice-president of CIO.

Sidney Hillman, president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and chairman of CIO's Political Action Committee.

Reid Robinson, president, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and a vice-president of CIO.

John Abt, Amalgamated general counsel; Michael Ross, Shipbuilding Workers; and Martin C. Kyne, vice-president, Retail & Wholesale Employes, are with the CIO delegation as advisers.

World Neighbors

Crimea Highlights Big Tests Coming On Foreign Policy

"News within the news" this week on world affairs was the sharp line between support and sniping attacks on the Crimea conference of Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill.

For the CIO, President Murray praised the agreement as "one of the greatest forward steps in history toward the goals of democracy, security and peace" and pledged CIO's support to it and to Dumbarton Oaks.

Most Congressmen either praised the agreement, or with a few noisy exceptions, kept quiet. Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.), the GOP's expert on foreign relations, commended it but acted cagy on an invitation to him by FDR to attend the April 25 United Nations meeting in San Francisco.

FEW DISSENTERS

A half dozen or so Congressmen, self-appointed defenders of the Polish "government-in-exile" in London, protested loudly that Poland was being "sold down the river," etc.

Their support came from newspapers owned by such people as Hearst, Roy Howard, the Pattersons and Col. McCormick. The Washington Times-Herald (Patterson) outdid itself with a banner headline admittedly taken from Goebbels, which said: "CRIMEA BIGGEST CRIME—BERLIN."

TESTS COMING UP

The snipers were pretty much taken off guard by the first impact of the news, but they can be expected to develop their principal theme—suspicion among the Big 3—U. S., USSR and Britain—for all it is worth to them.

But no matter how the snipers behave, some pretty basic tests of sincerity on world cooperation are coming up right now. The Bretton Woods agreement for expanded world trade is in Congress for ratification this week. Dumbarton Oaks will come up early in the spring. The April 25 meeting in San Francisco is only a few weeks off.

As Pres. Murray points out in his statement on the Crimea agreement, the CIO has "unanimously endorsed the general war and peace aims which have now been so firmly and unitedly set forth at Yalta."

The World Labor Congress is labor's guarantee that the grand alliance of the United Nations has the support of the working people of the free world.

AFL Men Hail London Parley

New York (FP)—Greetings from 175 officials of AFL unions will be presented to the World Trade Union Congress in London by Sec.-Treas. Courtney Ward of Dist. Council 6, Bro. of Painters, of Cleveland, who left here by plane Feb. 11 to attend the conference as an observer.

Ward, who is also president of the Ohio State Council of Painters, will be the only officially accredited AFL observer at the conference. The national AFL has refused to send either delegates or observers. He released the greetings before leaving in order to demonstrate what he called the wide support for the conference among AFL officials.

'1 Stomach + 1 Purse = 1 Customer'

Jobs for The Workers Mean Work for The Farmers

Workers and farmers prosper together—endure hard times together. When the worker is out of a job, the farmer doesn't sell his products. When the farmer doesn't sell his products, the worker is out of a job.

This simple arithmetic is the answer to the attempt of the newspapers and of pro-fascist forces like Frank E. Gannett, the Pews and the duPonts to drive a wedge between the industrial worker and the farmer.

The arithmetic is simple and it should be better understood. To help this understanding, Porter M. Hedge, editor of a farm newsletter called "Spade," devoted a recent issue to the proposition, as he put it, that "one stomach plus one purse equals one customer."

The facts presented by Spade are also a powerful argument for the wage raises that CIO unions are asking now to meet living costs and to keep purchasing power up for the postwar period. The CIO News reprints excerpts from the Spade article below.

GI JOE'S have a post-war plan. It's simple: Sweethearts, jobs and prosperity.

America can deliver on the sweethearts, but is not so sure of the rest. Most Americans, Pollster Dr. George Gallup says, expect unemployment and depression. That's like looking forward to death and destruction. And it's a sorry answer to yesterday's 11 million kids who are going through the fiery furnace of war the rest of us have escaped.

Spade is published by Porter Hodge, 215 Kellogg Bldg., Washington 4, D. C. This article has been made into a pamphlet, which can be ordered from Spade at 10c a copy, 100 for $5, 1,000 for $40.

Nor does it have to be the answer. The outcome will depend on whether America's quarreling groups of farmers, labor, business, commerce, industry and the profession can build bridges of understanding to each other; whether the national unity not achieved in war can be won after the war against the common foe of unemployment and depression.

Farmers' Interest

One of the most important of these bridges is between farmers and wage earners. Together they make up more than four-fifths of the population. If this bridge can't be built, the Yanks have a sad homecoming ahead of them.

Surveying the farmer side of the gap that propaganda has deepened into a gulf, it is plain that facts are needed for the foundation. The span must be woven out of self-interest.

SPADE has dug through the rubbish of propaganda for facts needed for the bridge. And the facts indicate that the stomach is the approach to this bridge of understanding between farmer and city wage earner.

For a full stomach is a good index of prosperity, especially of farm prosperity. Of every $5 in farm income, $4 comes from sales of food. Most farmers make their living filling stomachs.

Lesson in Arithmetic

Partly full stomachs bring depression. Whatever it takes to keep them full of good, nourishing food is good business for the farmer. Anything that prevents full bellies is bad business.

IT takes more than a stomach to make a customer for the farmer. A purse fat enough to buy a stomachful is required, too.

It's simple arithmetic:

1 stomach plus 0 purse equals 0 customer

1 stomach plus 1 purse equals 1 customer

2 stomachs plus 1 purse equals 1 customer

How large the purse to make a customer deepnds on prices. At present it costs about $200 a year to fill a stomach.

The $200 line is the dividing line between full stomachs and partly empty ones, between farm prosperity and farm depression. Every customer above that line is a good customer. Every one below it is only part of a customer.

To keep on the top side of that line the average city family of 3½ persons should have at least $700 a year for food. That is $13.50 a week for groceries, all bought out of stores. If it seems a lot, try it sometime.

What It Takes in Wages

And to have that much for food, more than three times that amount of total income is required. The family bread winner needs at least $44 a week in wages, or about $2,300 a year.

About half of American wage earners are getting less than any of these wage scales.

None but the top half of these wage earners get enough for the head of the family to provide each member as much as $200 a year for a full stomach.

The low paid workers are about 1,000 times more important to the farmer than the handful of high paid ones he hears most about.

For there are millions of them who are not the customers they ought to be for food. The farmer felt their loss in his markets before the war, and may again after the war.

IN his own self interest, the farmer needs to think in terms of the food and wages his customers get, as well as in terms of his own yields and prices. For in farm business, as in love, the way to the heart is through the stomach.

Here is a stomach-view of the farm market:

At home and abroad it totals 168 million stomachs.

Take 12 matches. Let each one represent 14 million stomachs. Lay them out this way:

City wage earners	* * * * * *
Owners, management and professional class	*
Farmers	* *
Armed services	*
Foreign	* *

This divides the market by stomach count. It is a rough division, but not misleading.

The farmer has, including himself, 12 big customer units. But they are not all full customers. About half the city wage earners get too little to be full customers. Instead of 6 full customer units, they furnish little over 5. And about half the farmers have an income too low to be full stomach customers.

So on the basis of full stomachs, 11 matches rather than 12, really represents the present farm food market.

Soon after the war the farmers' foreign stomach market may be cut in two. If that happens, 10 matches would represent the farm market. And a lot of food prices would go down.

If, in addition, the country should go back to the 40-hour week and straight-time pay, city wages would fall to an average of about $1,600 a year. Millions of stomachs would shrink along with purses. Probably 9 matches would represent the farm market. Depression would hit the farm.

For the farmer can produce for a 12-match market after the war. He can live with an 11-match market, but anything less will hurt him.

All this indicates the farmer needs to keep all his customers and find new ones. Best place to find them is among the low wage groups.

This is the way it looks from the farm side. To maintain anything like present farm income, city wage rates can't average much under $2,300 a year, $44 a week, $1.10 an hour.

A nation that last year produced goods and services for war alone at a rate that would completely rebuild everything in America in three or four years' time can't dam that production back after the war. Sooner or later the production energy and know-how of the nation will wash out the dam, and with it, perhaps, our whole system.

The Only Solution

Full production and full employment, high wages and high farm income, are the only ways out; the only salvation of free enterprise.

To achieve it, business and industry must not permit monopolies and cartels to shackle production again. Profits will come from expansion rather than from restriction, and the top-notch leaders know it.

The small business man, who before the war employed 45 per cent of all who were employed, must have an opportunity to develop.

And the farmer whose business is feeding people, should be most interested in having low income groups get higher pay. It's the 60 million stomachs below the full belly line that threaten his income.

That is why the farmer should be as concerned in Senator Pepper's attempt to have 65 cents an hour set as the legal minimum wage as in crop loans at 90 per cent of parity.

The farmer has a strong self interest in such proposals as that of Senator Murray (D-Mont.) for full employment — an idea originally advanced by James Patton, Farmers' Union president.

Prosperity Budget

Main idea is to set up each year a national budget for full production and employment. In any year that private industry couldn't provide full employment, Government would step in with public investments just to the extent of closing the gap. For the long pull, such a system might prove of more importance to farmers than parity support prices.

You can't create wages by law, but in the uphill climb for higher income the farmer can help put a rock under the wheel to keep from slipping backward. High minimum wages can be set in the national welfare, just as has been done for farm prices.

The war to win the war for the jobs and prosperity GI Joe wants is on now. It can't be won by labor baiting, or by business hating. It will take teamwork among the different groups. This rather than the military war will be the real test of America.

Ask Probe of Vinson Anti-Pay Hike Policy

While the CIO United Steelworkers were this week reported polishing up pay negotiations with the U. S. Steel Corp., the rest of the wage front was in a fluid and explosive stage. Militant delegations from the field were flocking to Washington to see their Congressmen about smashing the Little Steel formula, and two big CIO unions were demanding Congressional probes of employer lobbying tactics and of Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson's operations.

Focus of CIO's attack on the anti-wage-increase bulge is an order from Vinson which prevents the Natl. War Labor Board from granting even fringe wage adjustments (like increased vacation pay) unless the WLB can positively state on authority from the Office of Price Administration that no price increases will result from the pay boosts.

CIO DELEGATES from Michigan as they conferred with their congressmen on the Little Steel Formula. They are, left to right, back row: Barney Hopkins, Mrs. Audrey Jelley, and Miss Dorothy McCurdey, all of the Michigan CIO; Orville L. Hubbard, Mayor of Dearborn; Rep. John Lesinski (D. Mich.); Percy D. Llewelyn, UAW representative; front row; August Scholle, chairman, Mich. CIO; Rep. Frank E. Hook (D. Mich.); and Rep. George Sadowski (D. Mich.)

Vinson's position was sharply attacked by the CIO Packinghouse Workers, which asked a Congressional investigation of his "failure to formulate a comprehensive national wage program," according to Tilford Dudley, Washington legislative representative.

Vinson refused to see a Packinghouse wage delegation this week, although he was reported by a textile industry representative as cozily receptive to conversation about prices and profits—"sympathetic but non-committal," as the industry man put it.

The Packinghouse delegation, led by President Lewis Clark, obtained from Vice-President Truman and several Congressmen promises to confer with Vinson about his attitude.

Meanwhile, Rep. Melvin Price (D., Ill.) charged that Vinson, by his order giving OPA control over even fringe wage increases, apparently wished "to give the OPA veto power over the War Labor Board, without even providing for review by your own office."

Price charged that Vinson's policies are "creating widespread labor unrest, especially in the packing and textile industries."

The Packinghouse union expects to get concessions involving pay for work clothes, for time spent in changing into them and out of them, for tools, and for extra meals needed because of long hours of overtime—all important in the industry.

YEAR'S DELAY

The case has dragged on for over a year, with the delay having a bad effect on the morale of more than 140,000 workers, more than 90 per cent of them employed by the Big Four—Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Wilson.

Meanwhile, the CIO Textile Workers Union this week demanded a probe of political lobbying by textile manufacturers, with Pres. Emil Rieve accusing them of a plot to boost prices but keep wages down (see earlier story, this page).

The union is asking for a 60 cents an hour minimum wage in the notoriously starvation-scale industry, while newspaper reports indicate that the WLB is flirting with the idea of hiking the minimum only a nickel an hour—from 50 to 55 cents.

Rieve disclosed a confidential letter from an industry representative telling of pressure on Economic Stabilizer Vinson and War Mobilizer Byrnes. Rieve said it showed "the textile manufacturers are prepared to sacrifice the entire price control program in the interest of their own profits."

"At a time when the armed services and the War Production Board are calling for all-out cotton production, the major effort of the Southern cotton manufacturers would seem to be toward blocking a wage increase which would attract necessary workers into the cotton mills, and toward increasing profits which have already reached record levels," Rieve charged.

CIO DELEGATIONS

Meanwhile, CIO delegations from Indiana and Michigan, representing CIO unions in major war industries, stormed into Washington to talk with Congressmen and other government officials about the need for smashing the Little Steel formula.

The Michigan delegation brought with it Mayor Orville Hubbard of Dearborn, in support of CIO demands for breaking the formula, which limits wage increases to 15 per cent over those paid in January, 1941.

The delegates, in conferences with their Congressmen, told them that if present hourly pay rates remain frozen, there will be a drastic cut in consumer income when victory over Germany brings layoffs and reductions in work weeks, with loss of overtime pay.

Supporting the demand for revision of the wage formula, Pres. O. A. Knight of the CIO Oil Workers Union urged President Roosevelt to give serious consideration to "immediate revision of wage stabilization regulations which will permit increases commensurate with the approximate 45 per cent incrase in the cost of living."

Textile Industry in Plot To Up Profits, Down Pay

The CIO is directing a two-front attack against the textile industry lobby in Washington, which was caught flat-footed this week in an attempt to grab ever larger war profits and thus, in effect, to sabotage the WPB-OPA program for guaranteeing an adequate supply of durable, low-priced clothing.

Efforts of the industry became known when a "progress" report of William P. Jacobs, former executive director of the Print Cloth group of the Cotton Textile Institute, was made public by Emil Rieve, president of the CIO Textile Workers Union.

For his efforts, Jacobs had been named executive director of the American Cotton Mfg. Assn., a larger industrial group.

This report boasted of the success which was crowning Jacobs' efforts to boost the price of textiles and to keep down wages.

John W. Edelman, national legislative representative of the Textile Workers, called for a Senate investigation of Jacobs' lobbying activities, and renewed the union's request that Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, be summoned to Washington for "an open hearing at which he would have to answer questions."

"It is only too clear that what Jacobs' clients have in mind is to head off wage increases by boosting prices and gouging," Edelman wrote Senators Russell and George, both of Georgia.

Support for the Textile Workers came from the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, which urged its affiliates to wire WPB Chairman Krug and demand that he make good on his promise to see that the nation gets an adequate supply of good, low cost clothing.

On the Air With CIO

CIO's two big weekly national radio shows this week will feature the plight of white collar workers and the need for smashing the Little Steel Formula.

CBS stations will carry the white collar program at 3:45 p. m. EWT Saturday, Feb. 24, and Blue network outlets will carry the wage show at 6:45 p. m. EWT.

The CIO Publicity Dept. again appeals for cooperation from the field in reporting those stations which are or are not carrying the national broadcasts. Send all information to 718 Jackson Pl., N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Brotherhood Week Hailed By Roosevelt

Pointing out that thousands of Americans in the armed forces are giving their lives for the destruction of tyranny, President Roosevelt this week hailed the ideas behind Brotherhood Week, Feb. 18-25, sponsored by the Natl. Conference of Christians and Jews.

"As these men and women of the fighting forces carry on their struggle against tyranny overseas, they dream of the homeland in which equal opportunity for the good life is open to all," FDR said in a special letter.

"It is, therefore, the solemn duty for us who live and work in the U. S. to keep our country free of prejudice and bigotry so that when our fighting men return they may find us living by the freedom for which they are ready to give the full measure of devotion."

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 350 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
C.I.O STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE
Famous Since Broadcasting Began!
FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE
FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

SOLD EVERYWHERE
5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

'A Married Man Must Tak

● Within 72 hours after landing, a seaman registers at the Union hiring hall for his next trip, frequently into dangerous waters.

● "When I'm home," explains Brother James Bursey, "we go out together in the afternoon, whether it is to a movie or to a show."

● A seaman gets two days ashore for every week at sea, but his leave never exceeds thirty days under NMU shipping rules.

● During his stay ashore, James Bursey comes down to the Union Hall to get news. H. E. De Almeida, Bursey and John J. Manders.

● Jim is being interviewed by Polly McWilliams about the possibility of sending Jerry to a nursery schol. This is part of the Union's Personal Service Program, one of the many features that make membership in the NMU so valuable.

● "We want Jerry to grow up to be a strong healthy working fellow, aware of the struggle of all people's for a better life." Jerry helps his father to pack.

● Jim always makes sure that the ship he sails on carries a Ship's Library. He says of it: "The NMU Ship's Library is only one of the marvelous ideas our union has. Because of it, we are able to discuss the world we live in as well as almost anyone."

THIR
agai seaman upon al
sea. T

Br
he wan
but he the mo wants meet.

lucky
I hop

Bu
Manhat have a the san last yea ranean invasion men ge maximu become ganizat titled t married got to,

"You my wif
just st wasn't to sea.'

W m bosun
er. In the bas tween gerous

On t
the shi of — pin for seamen sailing" among portion unmeda vast ma are '90, is: "De becom ships.

"Sure
We, sea basis o
cal und that Un for sea been ac it this democr

BURS
hom
Then h until h job. B wages,

'e the Dangerous Runs'

By HELEN KAY

TY-SEVEN year old James Bursey, able bodied seaman, has shipped out n. Where he's gone is a military secret. Bursey is an old time prewar . He returned to the ships when the CIO Natl. Maritime Union called l able bodied seamen to answer their country's need and go back to the hat was in 1942.

other Bursey is a married man. He has a wife and a boy of four. And ted to stay around with his family for a while. He wanted a shore job—sailed, and he's been sailing now for three years, taking the hottest runs, t dangerous waters, not because he wants to be a hero, but because he o do his job for democracy, and he needs that $5 bonus to make ends

JAMES BURSEY
"Boy, We've Got Some Union!"

'No, I don't have a torpedo pin," says Brother Bursey. "I was just . We spent time picking men out of the water from the next ship. e my good luck sticks with me."

rsey, dark eyed and lively, lives at 165 Suffolk St., tan, with his wife, Ruth, and son, Gerald. They two and a half room apartment. All three share e bedroom. Bursey was home exactly 57 days r. The rest of the time was spent in Mediter- waters, in Africa shuttling for the Marseilles , and just recently on the Murmansk run. Sea- t two days off for every week at sea, with a m 30-day stayover, a Union rule which has now an RMO rule (Recruitment and Manning Or- ion of the Maritime Commission). "I was en- o more days," explained Bursey, "but being a l man, I'll have to ship out again, fast. You've to make ends meet.

see the company allots my base pay of $100 to e for living expenses. She can't live on that. We ruggle along, and there's nothing extra. If it or the fact of the bonuses, I'd have to stop going he Murmansk run, dangerous waters begin when p "hits 9 degrees west longitude, one day out ———." But many a sailor is wearing a torpedo coastwise shipping. And American merchant in order to "deliver the goods and keep them gave 6,000 lives. Authorities say casualties merchant seamen are four times as great pro- ally as in the armed forces. They are indeed lled heroes. The Natl. Maritime Union has the jority of unlicensed personnel organized. There 00 members of the NMU-CIO and their slogan liver the Goods—Keep them Sailing." It has he slogan of all men who man the merchant And they've done it. And they know why, too.

GES in the merchant marine start with $82.50 inimum. An able-bodied seaman gets $100; a $112.50; and a quartermaster $105 on a freight- addition they get between 40% and 100% of e pay, which brings the monthly income to be- $115.50 and $200, with a $5 a day bonus for dan- waters.

, I'm capable of earning more money ashore. men today are truly making a sacrifice on the our skill. I go on ships today because of politi- erstanding," explains Bursey. He is strong for ion program of a $200 monthly guaranteed wage nen, with an eight-hour day, a program that has vanced by the NMU. Brother Bursey expressed way: "I want to support my family in a real atic fashion."

EY was brought up as an orphan in a foster e. He ran away from there to join the marines. e went to sea as a merchant seaman, and stayed married. It was a hard time then to get a shore t even today when he's earning tops in seamen's they can't get on unless he takes the dangerous runs. "My wife always owes money when I come back from a run. And she's a good manager, too. You just can't make a dollar go where it won't. She has to borrow from other war workers in the neighborhood, until I come home. They know we're good for it. She generally runs short about $75 to $80 while I'm away.

"Today in order to make a dollar, you have to go on a Liberty ship which is a slow ship. But with the peace, there will be fast ships, fast trips. Wages will have to meet the new pace. It would be good to go on quick trips, because then I could get home to see my family between runs, but if they want married men to continue to man the ships, wages will have to meet these new changes.

"The majority of the married men are of the opinion either that wages will have to be increased, or they just won't have any choice in the matter, they won't be able to go to sea in peacetime. Even in the midst of war, many times I'm broke before I'm shipped out. This, in spite of wartime bonuses. We even had to borrow from the Union's personal service department. It was only $20, but still we had to borrow, and in addition the Union arranged to have Civilian War Assistance take care of my wife until she got her first allotment check.

"Boy, we've got some union! Besides being a Union for seamen, it is a democracy within a democracy. Our Union is rank and file controlled; we have a rotating hiring system, and are concerned with the welfare of the seamen and the country as a whole. Today we're delivering the goods for the war. Tomorrow we're going to be concerned with delivering it for the peace. FDR said: 'We've learned the lesson, we cannot live alone. We must cooperate with the people of the whole world.' And of course that means world trade, it means ships, and it means decent wages for the men who operate them."

Brother Bursey didn't use up all of his thirty days shore leave. He registered at the NMU hiring hall within 72 hours after landing, and he shipped out ahead of schedule. "I want to help get the war over with," he explained.

"No, my wife doesn't like it. No woman agrees on a truthful basis that her husband should go to sea. But the country is at war; and democracy is at stake; and the NMU is the best fighter for democracy, and I'm an NMU man, and she and I will let nothing stand in the way, you see."

● Bursey assumes his seaman's responsibilities. "I always get elected to something. If there isn't a functioning committee on board, I help get one started. I either serve as a deck delegate (which is similar to a shop steward) or something else," he says. The men take their grievances to the deck delegate. "You go on board, check your papers with the chief mate. Then he tells you to turn to with the bosun, and there you are on your next trip."

● James Bursey considers political action a part of his shoretime responsibilities. He lets Congressmen know what he is thinking about things that are happening here at home. The Union is concerned with a strong postwar merchant marine, sufficient to carry a large part of our waterborne domestic and foreign commerce in peacetime, and to serve as an auxiliary to our Navy in wartime. Bursey will let Congress know about that, and a lot of other things that insure the democratic way of life for his fellow seamen and all of America.

● Now shore leave is up. It's goodbye. "Of course no woman agrees on a truthful basis that her husband should go to sea. But the country is at war; and democracy is at stake, and the NMU is the best fighter for democracy, and I'm an NMU man, and she and I will let nothing stand in the way, you see," explained Bursey. "Don't go, daddy," says Jerry. He knows his father will, though.

—Courtesy St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CIO Hails Big Three Unity

By CIO PRES. PHILIP MURRAY

The agreement achieved by the Big Three powers at the Crimean conference is one of the greatest forward steps in history toward the goals of democracy, security and peace that are common to all liberty-loving humanity.

It spells the speedy doom of the Nazi oppressors by assuring the closest coordination of military strategy to deal crushing blows from every side on Hitler's shrinking fortress, until unconditional surrender is achieved. It provides for stern but just terms of peace designed to prevent for all time the resurgence of German military aggression.

The Crimean agreement reaffirms and strengthens the democratic aims of the United Nations as expressed in the Atlantic Charter, promising liberation, self-determination and self-government to all the oppressed peoples of Europe.

It lays the foundation for lasting peace throughout the world by its decision for early implementation of the plans begun at Dumbarton Oaks for a general international organization to maintain peace and security, and by resolving previous differences in regard to procedure.

Basic to all these magnificent achievements is the indestructible unity forged in battle of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union. The Crimean agreement gives assurance that this unity will be continued through victory for world reconstruction and lasting peace.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, at its last convention, unanimously endorsed the general war and peace aims which have now been so firmly and unitedly set forth at Yalta.

We hail the wise and statesmanlike leadership of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and congratulate him and all other participants in this historic conference on its outcome.

We pledge our wholehearted support to our President for the achievement of the splendid purposes to which he has subscribed, in this agreement, on behalf of the American people.

How to Mobilize Manpower

The CIO has never taken a negative attitude on any issue affecting the progress of our war effort. On the contrary, it has repeatedly taken the lead in demanding measures necessary for the effective mobilization of all our economic and manpower resources.

The CIO opposes the May-Bailey bill, passed by the House, because it believes this measure will harm rather than help.

It supports the bill introduced by Senators Kilgore, Wagner and Ferguson because, as Pres. Philip Murray states, "this bill reinforces the methods and machinery which have proven effective during the war, and proposes means for strengthening them;" and because it is "designed to mobilize the entire civilian manpower and womanpower of the United States immediately, and not merely males between the ages of 18 and 45."

The Kilgore-Wagner-Ferguson bill would grant ample power to the Offices of War Mobilization and Manpower to control employment in both essential and non-essential industries; to make labor utilization surveys; to provide transportation to essential jobs; to safeguard the seniority and other rights of transferred workers; and to utilize the cooperative efforts of management, labor and agriculture.

Urge your Senator to vote for the Kilgore-Wagner-Ferguson bill.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

I WANTED to read about the Big Three in Yalta. But Shirley wanted to read about the Three Big Sillies in her storybook.

So we read the story of the Three Big Sillies—though my mind kept wandering.

The first was a woman who wanted her cow to eat some grass on the roof of her house. Instead of cutting the grass and throwing it down, she insisted on hauling the cow up onto the roof.

Then, to keep it there, the Big Silly tied a rope around the cow's neck, passed it down through the chimney and tied the other end around her waist.

When last heard from, the cow was on the ground again while the lady dangled somewhere in midair.

Somehow I couldn't help thinking of the AFL trying to restrict world labor unity to itself and the British Trades Union Congress, and tugging at the unwilling TUC to join its moss-grown isolation—with the probable result the AFL will be dangling in midair when world labor unites in one body.

★ ★ ★

The second Big Silly was a lad who could think of only one way to put on his pants. That was to hang them from his bureau and then try to get into them by running jumps from his bed.

I started to think what would have happened to the Big Three at Yalta, if each had been wedded to the curious procedures advocated by our Hearst press and had kept yelling to the others: "Jump, you dastards, jump!"

The third Big Silly thought the moon had fallen into a pond, because he saw its reflection in the water—and kept trying to get it out with a rake.

This reminded me of those isolationists in Congress who used to sneer at the Atlantic Charter but who now keep wailing that it has fallen into a muckpond, while they close their eyes to the real article—and criticize all steps toward the achievement of its ideals.

★ ★ ★

And so to bed with my mind in some confusion.

Suddenly I was in Yalta, where I found to my horror that by some obscure conniving the Three Big Sillies had been substituted for Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill.

One of them said he couldn't abide kings or Soviets and would rather go it alone than associate with a lot of dirty so-and-sos.

He said his ideals about the Atlantic Charter and such were so pure it would defile them to try to put them into practice by international agreement with "power politicians."

Furthermore, he didn't want world labor unity if it included the CIO, the Russians, the Latin Americans and other riff-raff. The Intl. Federation of Trade Unions should be revived, he said, because it kept out all such people.

"Why not revive the League of Nations then, in place of Dumbarton Oaks?" someone remarked. "That didn't include the Americans or the Russians, so we could all be alone."

Then the other Big Sillies came back at the first with cracks about dollar diplomacy, etc., and the meeting became a ridiculous brawl with each insisting he had the only correct formula for putting on pants.

★ ★ ★

I woke in a sweat, thinking of the soldiers at the front, the victims of Nazi tyranny, and the desperate need for firm and united world leadership.

Grabbing the morning paper I read all I could about the magnificent agreement of the Big Three to clean up the Nazis in short order and prevent any resurgence of German aggression—to work together for the democratic rebuilding of Europe—and to continue their indestructible unity after the war for lasting peace and prosperity through international organization.

I read too that the World Trade Union Conference, inspired by the Big Three agreement, was making solid progress toward a new and all-inclusive world labor organization.

But, in the same paper, I also saw that isolationists and their ilk in Congress were starting a campaign against the Crimean agreement, with disruptive sniping at our allies and at Roosevelt's leadership; and that AFL leaders were still refusing to associate with the CIO and with Soviet and Latin American labor and trying to block world labor unity.

When Shirley woke I told her: "Laugh at the Big Sillies all you like, but don't ever copy their silliness."

"They stink," she said—and I hadn't the heart to reprove her.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 February 19, 1945 No. 8

Who Said Detroit Has Manpower Shortage?

A survey of workers laid-off in the Detroit area made by the United Auto Workers Union Research Department gives the lie to the claim there is a manpower shortage in that section, where a good portion of the weapons for democracy are produced.

REASONS that women laid off in the Detroit area remain unemployed:—Twenty-five percent had been offered too heavy jobs; 25% couldn't work because their were no facilities such as child care centers; 21% were unable to find any kind of jobs; 14% had been working day shifts before they were laid off and were unable to take afternoon and night shift jobs. The balance was jobless for miscellaneous reasons.

The UAW estimates that last year 100,000 workers were let go by Detroit area plants, and that there are at least 20,000 experienced women war workers unemployed and immediately available for work.

The survey shows wages are the bottleneck in getting workers on critical jobs. One-third of the men laid off were still unemployed, 65 per cent of them saying that the wages were too low to support them and their families.

There must be improvement in working conditions on critical jobs. Eighteen percent of the men and 25 per cent of the women turned down new jobs because the strain on their health would have been too great.

A surplus of women workers is available, 88 per cent of those laid off being unemployed. Many could be reemployed if they were given lighter jobs, if more child care centers were opened, and if counseling and retraining services were available.

The need for wage increases is highlighted by the fact that about 75 per cent of the workers who found new jobs were working at lower pay, with the average decrease in average hourly rates amounting to 17 per cent.

Of laid-off men workers surveyed, 64% did not take new jobs because of low wages, 18% found the strain on their health too great, 9% couldn't find jobs, and 9% couldn't find transportation.

120 Ships in January

During January, 1945, merchant shipyards turned out 120 ships and one large derrick barge, a deadweight tonnage of 1,229,296, the U. S. Maritime Commission reported this week.

BUY WAR BONDS

Seabees Expand

The Navy announced this week that 32,000 more men will be taken into the Seabees. New truck operating and advance supply depot battalions are getting some of the new recruits for the famed construction battalions.

Nine Jewelry And Novelty Firms Go CIO

Some 1200 employes of nine companies in northeastern states gave the CIO Plaything, Jewelry & Novelty Workers an almost two-to-one majority in recent NLRB elections, the union reported this week.

Total votes cast were 713 for PJNW, 435 for other contestants. In only one, at Krementz, Newark, N. J., did the CIO union fail to get a majority.

Elections were won at General Aircraft, Norwalk, Conn.; Makepeace, Attleboro, Mass.; Resistoflex, Newark; Mack Pack, Cranbury, N. J.; Mullite Refractories, Shelton, Conn.; Casper Lowenstein, Norwalk, Conn.; A. B. C. Co., New York; and Rexall Novelty Co., Trenton, N. J.

First Lady Guest At CIO Canteen Party

Labor canteens for servicemen were described this week by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt as part of the whole fight "which must go on to attain a better world for everybody." She was one of the guests at the first birthday celebration of the District of Columbia CIO Council's canteen.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig, Philadelphia, reports: Philip Shaefer & Son, Philadelphia, CIO Fur & Leather Workers 15, against 9.

CIO Reg. Dir. Carey Haigler, Alabama, advises of following election victories: Rheen Mfg. Co's. plant, Birmingham, USA-CIO 494, AFL 242. USA Dir. R. E. Farr was in charge of this campaign. W. Boylston plant, Montgomery, Ala., Textile Workers 378, no union 326. Credit is due to TWUA State Dir. H. S. Williams for this fine accomplishment. This is the first time a CIO union has been established in the City of Montgomery.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter H. Harris, Chicago, reports: Duro Decal Co., Chicago (production and maintenance employes), ILWU-CIO 39, against 7.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., Minnesota, advises: Waters-Conley Co. plant, Rochester, Minn., CIO 167, no union 27.

Bertie Seldon, Publicity Dir., FTA&AW, advises: 13 citrus sheds, Lindsay, Calif. CIO 421, no union 203. (With these elections, CIO now has bargaining rights for one-third of the citrus sheds in the Lindsay-Porterville area. Petitions are being filed on 30 more sheds for the next season). Gerber Products, Fremont, Mich., CIO 333, no union 66. Natl Produce Co., Memphis, Tenn., CIO 41, no union 7. Sardik Food Products Co., Mercedes, Texas, CIO 48, no union 21.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir., Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, advises: Wire Emergency Pipe Line, Division 5, Texas, CIO 93, no union 22.

Geo. Brown, Dir. IWA-CIO Organizing Drive, reports: Goshorn Plow Handle Co., Memphis, Tenn., CIO 21, against 5.

Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers, report: CIO was certified by card check as bargaining agent for the Convoy Novelty Co., Trenton, N. J. Intl. Rep. Morris Malmignati, assisted by Shop Chairlady Ethel Andrews and a Committee of four from the shop have begun contract negotiations.

The signing of a contract at the Watson Co., Attleboro, Mass., terminated several months negotiations for the PJ&NW-CIO. The plant was organized by CIO Rep. John Collins. Boston, Mass. A contract with PJ&NW was signed by the Casper Lowenstein Co., Norwalk, Conn., marking the first signed by PJ&NW in this area, providing many progressive benefits to the members.

With the assistance of CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Sylvester Graham of Montana, the work stoppage at the Eaton Metal Product Co., Billings, has been settled and an agreement reached. Ralph H. Peters, USA Staff Rep., also participated in the settlement.

Ewald Sandner, CIO Reg. Dir., N. J., reports: R & M Engineering Co., Passaic, N. J., UAW-CIO 392, no union 8. Dominick Ammarator, Asst. UAW Reg. Dir., was in charge. Viking Tool Co., Belleville, N. J., Die Casting, MMSW-CIO 121, District No 50 88. Nick Severidge and Irving Dichter were in charge.

More true today than ever before...

"The roadways of the world are worn deep with Studebaker wheel marks"

ON the war fronts from France to Russia, and from Italy to India and the Pacific islands, over 165,000 military vehicles built by Studebaker have been writing new pages of transport history.

Scores upon scores of thousands of heavy-duty Studebaker military trucks have recently been supplemented by steadily increasing quantities of Weasel personnel and cargo carriers, designed by Studebaker engineers and powered by the famous Studebaker Champion engine.

Studebaker is now one of the largest truck manufacturers in the world—and over 55,000 Wright Cyclone engines for the Boeing Flying Fortress have also been built by Studebaker.

In addition to all this war production activity, Studebaker cars and trucks in civilian service continue to impress the world with their remarkable stamina and exceptional operating economy.

Studebaker

PEACETIME BUILDER OF FINE CARS AND TRUCKS

Wartime builder of Wright Cyclone engines for the Boeing Flying Fortress—heavy-duty military trucks—Weasel personnel and cargo carriers

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Dorothy McCurdy and Audrey Jelley, president and secretary-treasurer of the Michigan CIO Auxiliary Council, came to Washington last week with the Michigan CIO delegation to tell Congress how important it is to get the 17-cent wage increase the CIO is asking.

Housewives, they said, are deeply concerned with this question because they have to decide where to cut the family budget to make take-home pay cover family needs.

These women reported that their food costs had doubled since 1941—and they're not eating a bit better.

CLOTHING WORST PROBLEM

Mrs. Curdy used to buy good cotton piece goods at 19c a yard and make all her children's clothes. Now she can't get that stuff, and paid 59c a yard for material for a child's pinafore that shrank till it was too small the first time she washed it. Store dresses at $3 and $4 she can't afford at all.

"That's why these women, and all American housewives, know that government figures showing living costs up only 25 or 30% are all wrong. They think even the CIO's figure of 45½% is low.

And yet you can't get more than a 15% increase over the 1941 wage rates under the Little Steel Formula!

If American workers don't get an increase in wage rates before VE Day they just aren't going to provide the market American industry has got to have to supply 60,000,000 jobs. They'll need lots of things our industries could produce, but they won't have the cash to buy them.

The auxiliary delegates stressed that what is at stake is the whole full employment program which depends in large degree on having a bigger, not a smaller, American market for our goods.

Write your Congressman, asking him to send letters urging Vinson, Byrnes and the President to revise the Little Steel Formula.

Beauticians Join CIO

A drive to organize several thousand Negro beauty operators in the Harlem area of New York City is now under way according to Pres. John Tartamella of the CIO Barbers & Beauty Culturists Union.

At present these operators work under a "booth renting" system which deprives them of State and Federal social security benefits.

The drive is under the direction of Sec.-Treas. P. Charles DiNeri.

Under the booth renting system, Di Neri says, "the operator is able to earn an extra dollar or two by working long hours, but is unprotected insofar as all social benefits are concerned."

Recommended Reading

Five Million Jobs in World Trade: 12 page, illustrated color pamphlet on Bretton Woods. A simple explanation of how the United Nations agreement will help expand peaceful world trade after the war.

CIO Publication No. 117. Price: 100 for $4, 500 for $14. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place, NW. Washington 6, D. C.

* * *

CIO Re-employment Plan: A new dress for President Murray's seven point plan to provide jobs for all after the war, first published and distributed at the CIO Convention in November, 1944. Amply illustrated in two colors, the 29 page pamphlet was prepared by the CIO Dept. of Research and Education.

The pamphlet may be ordered from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place, NW, Washington 6, D. C.; 15c each, 100 for $12, 500 for $48.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

CIO Backs New Manpower Bill

CIO's position on manpower legislation, with full support for the Kilgore-Wagner bill, is outlined in the following paragraphs—excerpts from testimony presented before the Senate Military Affairs Committee for CIO Pres. Philip Murray by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president, United Steelworkers.

The CIO endorses the bill introduced by Senators Kilgore, Wagner and others and urges the Senate Military Affairs Committee to report the bill favorably instead of the May-Bailey bill.

It is our belief that this bill will effectively met the current demand in Congress and the executive agencies for a piece of legislation to mobilize America's manpower for the job ahead.

JAPAN TO DEFEAT

When V-E Day comes, we must concentrate on the defeat of Japan, while we are simultaneously establishing a lasting peace in Europe and maintaining full employment at home.

The Kilgore-Wagner bill reinforces the methods and machinery which have proven effective during the war, and proposes means for strengthening them.

The Kilgore-Wagner bill is designed to mobilize the entire civilian manpower and womanpower of the U. S. immediately, and not merely males between the ages of 18 and 45.

In the Kilgore-Wagner bill the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and the Office of War Manpower are granted ample power:

(1) To control employment in both essential and non-essential industries;

(2) To make labor utilization surveys both in private plants and in War and Navy Department installations;

(3) To provide transportation to essential war jobs;

(4) to safeguard seniority and other previous and accured rights of workers in their former jobs;

(5) To utilize the cooperative efforts of management, labor and agriculture;

(6) To call upon the Advisory Board established by the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944

This bill is a long step in the right direction. Strengthening of manpower mobilization alone cannot provide maximum war output, or maintain our war economy in balance when cutbacks come after V-E Day. For these objectives we shall need a general improvement in the operations of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and its constitutent agencies, including the procurement, production and manpower agencies. But this bill is so drafted as to fit within the framework of these agencies, to assist in their further coordination, and to set an example for further tightening up of the relationships between these various agencies.

To further assist in the necessary steps which must be taken by the Executive after V-E Day, Congress should urge the Executive to convene a conference of industry, labor, agriculture and government to prepare a program to carry us from V-E Day to the defeat of Japan.

The cornerstones of a sound transition program are these:

(1) The calling of a national conference of industry, labor, agriculture and government to prepare a program which will go into effect at once to coordinate all national efforts between V-Day and the defeat of Japan.

(2) Accurate scheduling of war production programs, including the allocation of contracts, the control of materials, and the mobilization of manpower. This requires better coordination of manpower, war production and procurement by the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

(3) The elimination of competition and conflicts between procurement agencies.

(4) The development by the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion of a definite and well-integrated program for orderly resumption of civilian production as war production is cut back. This means an end to the present hush-hush policy regarding reconversion.

(5) Integration of wage and manpower policies. This calls for an early revision of the Little Steel Formula to permit the recruitment of needed workers in critical industries and to prevent the onset of serious deflation on V-E Day.

(6) The strengthening of the system of labor utilization, to require the inspection of all plants in critical industries before the assignment of added workers.

(7) Full use by the War Manpower Commission of labor-management advisory committees in recruitment, labor utilization, etc.

(8) The development of machinery for transferring workers to essential jobs, including the payment of transportation costs, and the protection of seniority rights.

We in the CIO once more pledge our utmost support in making the system of voluntary cooperation in war production work. We are proud of the repeated praise we have received from our Commander-in-Chief and his military and naval chiefs for our production record, and we invite this and all Congressional committees to examine that record.

VOLUNTARY COOPERATION

In addition to the advantages of the Kilgore-Wagner bill, which we have described, it has the added merit of reinforcing the system of voluntary cooperation in war production which has broken all world's records.

By contrast, the May-Bailey bill transfers control over employment of all males 18 to 45 from present established authorities to the Selective Service, and especially the local boards. The Selective Service System is totally unqualified to handle such responsibilities. Indeed, its record on occupational deferments to date proves the unfitness of this agency to deal with responsibilities other than those involving induction into the armed forces and deferments due to family hardships.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole-Greene

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with neutal persons, living or dead.

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS
PRODUCED FOR CIO NEWS BY ORBIT FEATURES, INC.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

With this issue, the CIO Legislative Dept. and The CIO NEWS begin publication of a new series—"Washington Guide"—aimed to help you do a more effective job with Congress in the months ahead.

The Guide will be an information service. It will report on the facts, analyze and discuss issues that are current and coming up in Washington, and will help you to find out what can be done and what needs to be done.

We hope you will find the Guide useful. Please write us with any suggestions, criticisms or other comments that you may have. As President Murray has pointed out, the political and legislative work of the CIO must be maintained at a high level from now on out.

The next Congressional elections are less than two years away. Whether we get a stronger and more progressive Congress then or a weaker one depends on the work we do between now and 1946.

"Washington Guide" is designed to help you do your part in this all-important task.

Fraternally yours,
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman.
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary.

Wallace Fight To House Floor

Decision on Henry Wallace as Secretary of Commerce went to the House floor this week (debate set for Feb. 16), after a GOP move to strip the Commerce Department of additional powers was blocked in the Rules Committee.

This move, pushed by Rep. Jesse Wolcott (R. Mich.) was designed to make the Senate-passed George Bill (S 375) so unacceptable to FDR that that he would be forced to veto it. Following the expected veto, the whole issue of whether Wallace should become Secretary with the Department maintaining RFC lending powers would be reopened.

The George bill was accepted by FDR and Wallace on the basis that it was necessary to get Wallace confirmed. It was a concession to a powerful Senate group whose support had to be won.

A tacit promise was given that acceptance of the George bill would ensure Wallace's confirmation, and probably many of the Senators who voted for it three weeks ago did so on that assurance.

The GOP move to amend the George bill has been blocked in the Rules Committee. Administration forces will fight it on the House floor.

Meantime, more wires and letters to Senators to hurry the confirmation of Wallace are needed. Try to get other groups, especially employers, involved in this campaign. They have just as much at stake in the confirmation as labor, whose stake is jobs and full production.

New Manpower Bill OKed by CIO

(See Pres. Murray's Statement—Page 10)

Most positive sign on the manpower situation is the introduction of a new bill to replace the May-Bailey bill (HR 1752) by Sen. Kilgore (D. W. Va.) and others.

The new bill, which is going into committee this week, calls for accurate determination of manpower needs; ending of waste; setting of manpower ceilings to cut labor hoarding; payment of transportation to workers and dependents moved to new jobs; protection against loss of seniority or wage cuts; and also sets up administration in the War Manpower Commission, with local advisory assistance.

CIO President Murray, in testimony prepared for presentation to the Senate Military Affairs Committee, outlined and endorsed similar provisions to those in the preparatory version of the new bill.

The House-passed version of the May-Bailey bill (HR 1752) is more or less in abeyance in the Senate Military Affairs Committee, while executive hearings have been held on it and are being prepared for the new bill.

Watch the papers for a Senate Military Affairs report on the new bill; urge your Senators to work and vote for it, against HR 1752.

CIO's call for a labor-industry-government meeting to get at the facts of production shortages continues. Write, wire War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, WPB Chairman J. A. Krug, Washington 25, D. C., for action on this call.

Coming Up---Issues To Watch For

BRETTON WOODS: Sens. Wagner (D. NY) and Tobey (R. NH) have put in a bill to ratify the Bretton Woods agreement for expanded world trade. The agreement, signed by 45 United Nations last summer, opens the door for five million U. S. jobs through exports.

Bretton Woods sets up a "bank for Reconstruction and Development" to guarantee loans to countries needing them for industrialization and for rebuilding after the war. It also sets up an "International Monetary Fund" to help keep world currencies stable, prevent cut-throat competition and help foreign customers buy our goods, sell theirs.

CIO and President Roosevelt have called for quick action on Bretton Woods. The American Bankers Assn. and Sen. Taft (R. O.) have opposed it—by the old method of suggesting innocent looking amendments that would wreck the agreement. Any changes made now by Congress would have to be taken back to all 45 nations signing the original, would provoke further changes.

The bill goes to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Sen. Wagner, chairman. Write your Senators urging a quick report with no changes, early action and no amendments.

* * *

PRICE CONTROL: Sen. Wagner (D. NY) has put a bill (S. J. Res 30) into the hopper for renewal of the Price Control Act. Hearings in the Senate Banking and Currency Committee are set tentatively for Feb. 22. The annual struggle over renewal is expected; watch the Guide for further information.

* * *

POLLTAX REPEAL: HR 7, the polltax repeal bill, will be offered in the House early next month by a coalition headed by Rep. George Bender (R. O.) and Vito Marcantonio (ALP NY) and others.

A Discharge Petition will be started then to get the bill on to the House floor, without delay by the polltaxers in the Rules Committee.

Write your Representative to sign the Discharge Petition (watch Guide for number) and get ready to start on your Senators against the threat of a filibuster. HR 7 has passed the House twice, been blocked in the Senate each time.

* * *

TAXES: A new tax bill will start cooking very soon. Watch for early statement of CIO policy, following line of resolution at Chicago convention.

* * *

McCARRAN-SUMMERS: This bill, S 7, is a complicated measure ostensibly aimed to promote "fair administrative procedure" in U. S. government agencies. Actually it would hamstring them completely by imposing all sorts of legalistic restrictions, including court review of almost every action.

Write your Senators and your Representative to oppose.

Your Paycheck---and What to Do About It

CIO delegations from all over the U. S. have been visiting Congress to talk about wages and the Little Steel formula. Congressmen are being asked to write to President Roosevelt, Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson and James F. Byrnes, urging a break in the formula, unfreezing of "fringe" awards.

Give these delegations your support by writing now to FDR, Vinson, Byrnes, WLB Chairman Davis, all at Washington 25, D. C., and to your Congressman on the same subject.

Note: Address all Senators at Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives at House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

With this issue, Keep Your Eye On Congress moves to the Washington Guide page, and from now on will be confined to a quick tabulation of bills in progress through House or Senate.

If occasionally you find that some particular bill you are interested in does not appear, this is simply due to lack of space or to the fact that it is covered elsewhere.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
FEPC (No number yet.)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee permanent U. S. agency.	In House Labor Committee, now working on a combination of several bills.	Urge your Representatives to support combined bill if OK. Watch Guide for further report.
U. S. Aid To Education (S 181)	Sets up $300 million fund for teachers' pay raises, school improvements.	In Senate Education and Labor Committee. CIO and Auxiliaries in support.	Write your Senators to support.
Equal Rights Amendment. (H J Res 1)	Opens wedge against laws protecting men as well as women workers under guise of "equal rights."	Offered by several Representatives.	Write Senators and Representatives to oppose.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 9 February 26, 1945

National Edition

WLB Report Bans 'Little Steel' Change; 'Intolerable,' Says Murray

(See Pages 3 & 8)

★ ★ ★

Steel Pact Features Arbitration Clause, Major Wage Gains

(See Page 2)

WLB Approves Textile, Packing Boosts—Vinson Still A Hurdle

(See Page 2)

★ ★ ★

London Labor Unity Big Hope For Sound Peace

(See Pages 5 & 8)

★ ★ ★

Bad Breaks For Unions On U. S. Airwaves

(See Page 7)

★ ★ ★

Needed—Fair Job Law After Victory

(See Page 4)

Steel Pact Features Arbitration Clause, Major Wage Gains

Creation of a permanent Board of Conciliation and Arbitration—a momentous advance in management-union relations—has been agreed upon by the U. S. Steel Corp. and the CIO United Steelworkers in a new contract completed this week. Wage gains are estimated at $30 million annually.

The contract has been initialed by officials of the five operating subsidiaries of U. S. Steel and the union, headed by Pres. Philip Murray. It will be formally signed after the Natl. War Labor Board passes on the one unresolved point—the termination date and a provision for reopening on a wage issue.

WAGE GAINS

Also included in the new wage contract are the recent directives of the War Labor Board which call for:

1. A four-cent premium for the afternoon shift and a six-cent premium for the night shift. Application of these shift premiums, such as afternoon men working into the night shift and night shift men working into the day shift, as well as inclusion of the premiums in computing overtime, makes it the best premium clause in American industry, in the opinion of the union.

2. One week's vacation for one year's service and two weeks for service beyond five years.

3. Creation of a commission (not to be confused with the Board of Arbitration) to settle wage rate inequalities, with a fund provided which shall average not more than five cents per hour per employe.

4. Six holidays (Thanksgiving Day, New Year's Day, July 4, Labor Day, Christmas and Memorial Day. By local agreement another than Memorial Day may be chosen) with time and one-half for all hours worked.

5. Dismissal or severance pay. This is the first time in the steel industry this basic principle has been included in a contract.

6. Reduction of the number of classifications of mechanical and maintenance employes to three wherever practicable and the adoption for the first time in basic steel of automatic upgrading where men perform the work.

7. Maintenance of membership and check-off.

Most of these provisions involve retroactive pay and while no exact figure is available of the amount of money involved, the recent financial report of the U. S. Steel Corp. provided a fund of $30,000,000 for the year 1944, for this purpose.

The provision for a guaranteed annual wage, asked by the union, is not included in the contract, as the War Labor Board previously had recommended that President Roosevelt set up a commission to study this problem on a national basis.

The Arbitration Board is to consist of three members—one designated by the company, one by the union and a third to be mutually agreed upon by the parties.

End Bridges Case, Murray Urges FDR

CIO President Murray this week asked President Roosevelt to end the persecution of Harry Bridges in the interest of "the splendid national unity we have achieved during this war," to which Bridges' union has contributed heavily.

"During the past few years, particularly the war period, the union of which Mr. Bridges is the president, has dedicated itself to sparing no effort in furthering our war program and the interests of our country. The work of the members of that union and of its officers, including Mr. Bridges, has been highly praised by representatives of the Government and especially of the armed services," Murray wrote.

"There is no question but that the relations between management and labor in the Longshoremen and Warehousemen's industry on the West Coast, which is within the jurisdiction of Mr. Bridges' union, have been maintained on an extremely desirable and cooperative basis through the work of Mr. Bridges and his associate officers.

"It would be unfortunate if during this war period with the imperative need of maintaining national unity, the deportation order against Mr. Bridges should be made effective and carried through.

"Such action would have a very adverse impact upon the morale of the workers of this nation who view this case as but a measure of persecution of a representative of organized labor."

S. Dakota Bill Bans Union Shop

The Christian American Assn. won its first anti-labor battle of 1945 when a bill banning the union shop was made law in South Dakota.

The new law, which has virtually the same wording as anti-union shop bills introduced by CAA supporters in some 20 legislatures, makes it illegal to deny a job to an individual "because of refusal to join a labor union" and bars any employer from signing a union shop contract.

The measure also provides for a constitutional amendment prohibiting the union shop, which will be voted on by the electorate in November, 1946.

Vermont Gets Anti-Labor Bill

The Christian American Assn.'s anti-labor fever has spread to the Vermont legislature, where a bill banning the union shop was introduced last week.

The bill follows the Christian American pattern worked out in other legislatures and calls for fines up to $5,000 and five years in jail for "enforced union membership."

Textile, Packing Pay Hikes Get OK, But Vinson Still A Hurdle

CIO Textile and Packinghouse Workers Unions were awarded "fringe" wage increases this week by the Natl. War Labor Board, but in both instances the awards were subject to the power of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson.

Vinson has ruled that Office of Price Administration reports on whether wage boosts would cause price boosts would be the determining factor in allowing pay increases. Both textile and packing employers have said that wage hikes would cause price rises.

The WLB ordered a 55 cents an hour minimum for about 50,000 workers employed in 25 southern cotton textile companies, 25 New England cotton and rayon companies and six N. Y. and Pennsylvania rayon firms—a 5 cents raise from the present substandard figure of 50 cents. The payment is retroactive to Oct. 1, 1944, unless otherwise agreed by the union and individual companies.

The Board also ordered a five cents increase for all rates above the present 50 cents level to keep differentials between jobs.

Meanwhile, Textile Pres. Emil Rieve criticized the WLB's subservience to Vinson, and called the order meaningless since it still is subject to Vinson's approval.

RESIGNS FORM WLB

Rieve resigned as an alternate member of the WLB. The Textile Union's Executive Board, meeting in New York City, urged the CIO to withdraw from the WLB "unless the WLB's original authority to function as a decision-making body, acting in the interest of equal justice, is re-established."

The Board found that the cotton textile industry pays wages lower than any other basic industry. Average hourly earnings are only 64.6 cents.

In the packing case, which has dragged on for almost two years, the Board granted important "fringe" demands involving pay for work clothes, tools, safety and protective devices, and for time spent in changing ing clothes.

The guaranteed work week was extended from 32 to 36 hours and the union was granted maintenance of membership with the checkoff of union dues.

More than 140,000 workers employed by the five largest companies were involved in the decision—Swift, Armour, Wilson, Cudahy and John Morrell firms.

The Board ordered the packers to set up uniform wage schedules, for the first time in the industry. A demand for a general 10 cents an hour "across the board" increase was denied, without prejudice to a reconsideration of the issue if there is a change in the national wage stabilization policy.

Negotiations for the changes directed by the WLB are to begin at once on those issues not touching wages, and a commission is to be appointed to settle wage rate inequalities and to approve agreements reached.

COMMENT FROM UNION

In commenting on the decision, President Lewis J. Clark of the union said:

"Whether 'relief for the greedy and not for the needy' is to be the controlling policy of the national government and the Big Packers is now the issue.

"The Packers demand for price relief is a brazen insistance upon maintaining their swollen wartime profits. They have made this demand even before this dispute arose on certain items in order to increase these profits.

"The facts are that the Big Four in the year 1944 increased their profits over the year 1940 by 270 per cent, which, in our opinion, should be adequate for their needs. Since 1941, however, packinghouse workers have received no wage incerases.

"As a result of the present order we are requesting the Packers immediately to enter into negotiation. These negotiations will serve as a basis for determining whether the Packers will really bargain in good faith or not."

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 566 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employes

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY

INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS

RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE

Famous Since Broadcasting Began!

FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE

FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.

20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

WLB Report Denies 'Little Steel' Change; Blasted by CIO

Murray Hits Stand Of Public Group And Asks New Policy

The bread and butter needs of American workers were flatly ignored this week by public members of the Natl. War Labor Board in a report by them which said that wages have more than kept pace with rising prices and that no revision of the Little Steel Formula is necessary.

The report was sharply criticized by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and by CIO members of the WLB as revealing a complete absence of understanding of the problems of war production and of those to come with peace. They called for a complete revision of the national wage policy and an upward revision of the Formula.

SITUATION INTOLERABLE

"The situation in which labor now finds itself is simply intolerable," Murray declared. "There will be convened at a very early date an extraordinary session of the CIO Executive Board to tackle this crucial problem. Our conclusions will be presented directly to President Roosevelt."

Murray's denunciation of the "frustrated thinking and inaction which underly the present administration of the Board" was accompanied by the warning that "it is of the utmost importance to our war effort that there be maintained uninterrupted production."

The public members' report, which was submitted to Economic Stabilization Director Vinson, contained some strange figures. It said that from January, 1941, to October, 1944, the cost of living rose 29.4 per cent (CIO reports show it nearer 44 per cent) and the average straight time hourly earnings rose 36.7 per cent.

"CAN'T FIND INEQUITIES"

The report said that average straight time hourly earnings will not decline so long as war production continues at its present pace. "That being so," the public members declared, "the case for permitting resumption of general wage increases now cannot be rested on the ground of any present inequity in the relationship between average wage levels and average price levels."

CIO members on the WLB blasted the public members' report on five main points:

1. It uses earnings which workers have obtained as a result of increased production and individual promotions in figuring wage boosts, instead of taking basic wage rates as the starting point. These basic rates have increased less than 20 per cent as compared with a nearly 30 per cent conservative estimate of the rise in the cost of living.

CUT IN EARNINGS

2. It overlooks the fact that the end of the war in Europe will result in drastic reduction of earnings, with the Office of Price Administration estimating that this figure will come to $17 billion a year. "The national objective of maintaining purchasing power to assure full production and full employment is undermined by the public members who refuse to make provision through a necessary wage adjustment to meet this obviously expected loss in earnings."

3. It emphasizes the fact that the WLB has virtually been stripped of authority to OK wage hikes, with its decisions being subjected to review by the OPA and Economic Stabilizer Vinson.

4. It points up the fact many times during its 105 pages that the procedures adopted by the Board are so complex that the processing of cases is bogged down in administrative routine, with some decisions taking months and even years.

5. It fails to note and take action on an often too well demonstrated fact—that when employers refuse to obey Board directives, it is almost impossible to secure compliance with them.

The CIO members on the WLB—Van A. Bitner, John Brophy, Carl J. Shipley, Neil Brant and Delmond Garst—said in their report:

"We submit that the record demonstrates conclusively that there must be a comprehensive and drastic revision of the policies governing the activities of the National War Labor Board. The national wage stabilization policy must be changed to permit a substantial adjustment of wage rates at the present time.

"The Board must be given clearcut authority to make final decisions on wage matters based upon the equities and needs as demonstrated in the particular cases. Compliance with directive orders must be obtained.

Meanwhile, CIO delegations from the field continued to flock to Washington to present protests to their Congressmen. Latest, this week, was from New York City, with 50 delegates led by Saul Mills, secretary of the N. Y. CIO Council.

PHILIP MURRAY
Leads National Fight for Pay Boost

Full Text Of Murray, CIO WLB Members On Wages

The following statement by CIO Pres. Philip Murray was issued following publication of the report of public members of the Natl. War Labor Board on wage increases.

The report of the public members of the National War Labor Board on the national wage policy completely fails to meet the needs of the nation. It shows that they possess no understanding whatever of the problems of war production now or of the national economy after VE-Day. It simply reflects the frustrated thinking and inaction which underly the present administration of the Board.

Basic Weakness

The CIO labor members of the War Labor Board have in their preliminary statement pointed to the basic weaknesses and fallacies of the public members' report. They have also clearly demonstrated the fact that under present conditions the War Labor Board has not the authority to make final decisions in wage cases but is subject to the arbitrary review of the OPA and Judge Vinson, Director of Economic Stabilization. The situation in which labor now finds itself is simply intolerable.

Now, more than ever, it is of the utmost importance to our war effort that there be maintained uninterrupted production. The CIO and its members are fully conscious of this need and therefore shall observe their no-strike pledge.

In the very interest of furthering the war effort, it is essential that there be a complete revision of our national wage policy to provide for an upward adjustment of the Little Steel formula and to unshackle the War Labor Board from the freezing restrictions imposed upon it through orders and directives of Judge Vinson.

There will be convened at a very early date an extraordinary session of the Executive Board of the CIO to tackle this crucial problem. Our conclusions will be presented directly to President Roosevelt.

The following statement was issued by CIO members on the WLB.

Because of the brief time available to the labor members before the publication of the report of the public members, we have been limited to this preliminary statement. A comprehensive report will be provided in a few days.

We express our most vigorous dissent to the report of the public members. We submit that such report reveals a complete absence of understanding of the economic problems which are now present and will shortly confront the nation.

The report of the public members provides no constructive and forthright national wage policy to assure continued maximum war production and provide for continued full production and full employment during reconversion. Our reasons are as follows:

1. IT IS CONCEDED THAT the cost of living has risen between January, 1941, and October, 1944, a minimum of 30%. Basic wage rates have increased during the same period less than 20%. The principles which underlie the Little Steel formula require that an upward revision of wage rates be made to eliminate the gross inequity which has been created for wage earners.

The public members predicate their recommendation that there be no change in the Little Steel formula upon a new rule which they now create which completely ignores this basic inequity. Earnings which wage earners have obtained as a result of increased production and individual promotions are used by the public members as a reason to avoid the necessary equitable increase in basic wage rates.

2. IT IS ADMITTED BY THE public members that the termination of hostilities in Europe will necessarily result in very drastic reduction in the earnings of wage earners. The OPA has declared that this loss will approximate $17 billion annually.

The national objective of maintaining purchasing power to assure full production and full employment is undermined by the public members who refuse to make provision through a necessary wage adjustment to meet this obviously expected loss in earnings. Their suggestion for legislation to fix wages reflects a complete abdication of administrative responsibility and accepts an approach which cannot reseive support from either industry or labor.

Board Emasculated

3. THE NATIONAL WAR LAbor Board was established by Executive Order in January, 1942, with authority to make final disposition of all disputes which may be submitted to it. This authority was subsequently confirmed by the War Labor Disputes Act.

The present situation, however, reveals a complete emasculation of the power of the Board in wage disputes. Not merely have its decisions been subjected to review by the OPA and Judge Vinson, the Director of Economic Stabilization, but it has been practically prohibited from making effective its decisions affecting wage adjustments until approval therefore is obtained from these agencies.

Wage earners should therefore be advised that their cases which wend their weary way through the machinery of the War Labor Board cannot result in a final decision by the Board on the merits of the particular cases.

4. THE PROCEDURES ADOPTed by the Board are so complex that the processing of cases is bogged down in administrative routines. Dispute cases require many months and even years for such decisions as the Board is permitted or permits itself to make. Decisions that are so long delayed create more disputes than they settle.

5. EVEN WHERE A SPECIFIC decision manages to avoid all of these restrictions and finally emerges from the Board, labor has found it practically impossible to secure compliance where an employer refuses to obey the directive order. The labor members find no vigorous approach on the part of the public members to meet this very serious problem.

We submit that the record demonstrates conclusively that there must be a comprehensive and drastic revision of the policies governing the activities of the National War Labor Board. The national wage stabilization policy must be changed to permit a substantial adjustment of wage rates at the present time. The Board must be given clearcut authority to make final decisions on wage matters based upon the equities and needs as demonstrated in the particular cases. Compliance with directive orders must be obtained.

Under present conditions the CIO members do not see how they can discharge their very deep responsibility to the nation and to labor. We therefore intend to submit this entire situation to the executive officers of our organizations for an expression as to the steps that must be taken to secure these essential and vital changes.

VAN A. BITTNER.
JOHN BROPHY.
CARL J. SHIPLEY.
NEIL BRANT.
DELMOND GARST.

House Group OKs FEPC; Fight Seen

(Second of Two Articles on the Need for a Permanent FEPC)

A 12 to 2 vote by the House Labor Committee this week gave tentative blessing to a bill that is a "must" both internally and internationally for the United States of America. The bill (HR 2232) would set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee to replace the temporary wartime one that is functioning now. HR 2232 would do more than help to guarantee minority groups a fair "break" in employment. It would be this nation's answer to the Axis propagandists who have fed their poison into the minds of millions of residents of Africa, India, China and many other lands—poison which sharply points to job discrimination in America as "proof" that democracy can't be made to work.

HR 2232 is a composite of several bills that were introduced to establish a permanent FEPC. It differs sharply only from one bill that has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Taft, Ohio Republican and reactionary stalwart. Taft's bill would set up a permanent FEPC, but the joker is that it would have no teeth to enforce its policies.

Taft's position has been sharply criticized by Dean William H. Hastie, chairman of the Natl. Legal Committee of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, who said:

"Senator Taft stands self-condemned as a political chameleon — a pre-election friend and a post-election foe of the pending legislation to establish a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee. Worse still, he boldly announces that the pre-election pledges of the Republican Party and its national leaders to support this legislation were the promises of hypocrites, never intended to have real meaning."

Unlike Taft's bill, HR 2232 would not only make the FEPC permanent but would materially strengthen the agency, which is now of the "token" variety.

FEPC would have authority to prevent job discrimination by employers and unions in interstate commerce. Now its powers extend only to war industry.

FEPC would have power to order discrimination halted and to take its orders to the courts for enforcement, as the Natl. Labor Relations Board can do, instead of having only the authority to urge compliance with its recommendations.

FEPC would have the power to order government contracts withheld from violators of the law. Other penalties for willful violations of FEPC's authority would range up to one year in jail or $5,000 fine or both.

FEPC would have subpoena power which it lacks now.

Fears Groundless

Fears of management that passage of HR 2232 would disrupt employer-employe relations are groundless, for management would be left free to set its hiring, firing, training and upgrading practices according to any standard it might adopt, so long as there is no arbitrary discrimination because of race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry.

HR 2232 would set up a full-time five-man commission, instead of the present commission, which has only a full-time chairman and six part-time members who meet once every two weeks. Currently all important policy matters and all cases have to be referred to this fortnightly functioning body.

The temporary FEPC is badly handicapped by a yearly budget of only $500,000. It can afford only 37 field examiners for the entire nation. It has had for a year a backlog of 2,000 cases, and it has all that it can do to take care of the 300 new cases that it gets each month.

By contrast, the NLRB has a yearly budget of about $3½ million and the War Labor Board a budget of $15 million.

UNITY ON THE JOB of white and Negro workers is demonstrated by this pair, employed in an Eastern bomber plant.

Wide Support

HR 2232 has not only the backing of CIO. Groups ranging from the Catholic Interracial Council to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and to the American Jewish Congress support it. Among its many backers are the Methodist Church General Conference, the Presbyterian General Assembly, the Natl. Women's Trade Union League and the YMCA and YWCA.

The urgency of permanent legislation to guarantee justice on the job was put best, perhaps, by the president of the largest union in America, which numbers among its more than a million members almost every creed, race and color in the United States. In recent testimony before the House Labor Committee, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union said:

"The war and the noble cause for which we soldiers on the nation's prdouction lines have been fighting, have opened our eyes to a number of shortcomings in our traditional way of life.

"We are aware now that America can neither speak unashamedly at the peace table nor make sincere promises of freedom and justice to the liberated peoples of Europe, Asia and Africa so long as we, the dominant group here in America, deny even the simplest rudiments of liberty and equality to our more than 5 million Jews, 13 million Negroes, 21 million Catholics, 3 million Spanish-Americans, and 20 million immigrants or first-generation Americans here at home.

"That is the primary reason why we of the labor movement favor the enactment of this legislation now. We want to see our country put its own house in order first; then go forward to assist in straightening out the affairs of others.

"There is a second reason why we think these bills should be reported favorably and passed by Congress. For many years now organized labor in this country has had to devise ways and means of meeting and coping with management's technic of 'divide and conquer.'

"We have seen our local unions weakened and almost wrecked by employer-inspired hate strikes. One racial or religious group is pitted by management against another in an effort to silence justifiable union complaints about low wages, long hours or refusal to bargain collectively.

"I have just returned from a tour of the fighting fronts in France. I have talked with our soldiers there. And I have found that the average American soldier, through his experience, has become more anti-Fascist than our average civilian.

"Thousands of these returning veterans will be numbered among the minority groups this legislation is intended to protect. Will they come home to find the doors of employment closed in their faces for no other reason than that they happened to have been born a Jew or a Negro or a first-generation Pole? The answer rests with Congress!"

Hit Auto Group's Plot to Blacken UAW, Cut Wages

A plot to blacken labor in a drive to beat down postwar wages in the auto industry was charged this week to the Automotive Council for War Production by Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the CIO United Auto Workers Union. The Council, controlled by the General Motors Corp., issued two long, labor-baiting statements which accused workers of slowing up production and attempting to interfere with management control.

Addes, in reply to charges made by George Romney of the Automotive Council, said:

"According to charts released by the Council itself, employment in the auto industry is now about 18 per cent less than it was in the fourth quarter of 1943. This smaller group of workers in the fourth quarter of 1944 turned out about 10 per cent more production. This means an increase in productivity of about 34 per cent per man hour worked in our industry, in one 12-month period."

"PECULIAR POSITION"

Addes said that the Council statement puts the organization "in the very peculiar position of boasting in one breath of the $1,000,000 per hour war production that the auto industry has achieved, and in the next breath blasting the workers who are turning out this flood of weapons as disrupters of the war effort."

UAW representatives pointed out that the Council is controlled by GM, and that GM in turn is largely owned by the anti-labor, anti-FDR duPonts. They pointed to GM's disruptive record of instigating strikes, and quoted from a recent letter written by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas to a UAW local paper. Thomas said:

"The management officials who provoke us the most are the very ones who hope workers will disregard our no-strike pledge and go out on strike. That is exactly why they are provoking us. Is it an accident that the most provocative employer throughout the country is General Motors? Isn't it due to the fact that the General Motors-duPont crowd are taking the lead in an economic and political offensive against labor and against Roosevelt?

"Is there any better way of their getting public opinion aroused against labor than to provoke labor into striking during the war?

"The question is: Shall we let reactionary employers provoke us into committing suicide, or shall we take the more difficult, but in the long run more successful step, of fighting our grievances without striking?"

Names of GM-manufactured cars include: Buick, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Cadillac, La Salle and GM Trucks, according to the UAW-CIO.

AID TO WAR IS ZERO

The UAW charged that the Council has not made a single proposal to meet the manpower and production problems plaguing the auto industry, but instead is centering its attention on two items:

"1. Weakening or destroying collective bargaining in the industry.

"2. Restoring for postwar automobile production the intolerable conditions of speed-up which before the coming of the union made Detroit plants notorious throughout the world.

2-Sided Law Denies Negro Woman Justice

A Henry County, Ala., grand jury last week for the second time refused to indict six white men accused of kidnapping and raping Mrs. Recy Taylor, young Negro woman, on Sept. 3, 1944.

The jury heard the case first on Oct. 9, 1944, but did not indict the men, although one of them was reported to have confessed and to have named the other men.

State Committees for Equal Justice for Mrs. Taylor have been formed in Montgomery, Ala., Michigan, Denver and Baltimore.

CIO Radio Roundup

Scheduled at press time for broadcast next Saturday, March, 3, were two more big CIO radio shows:

Mine, Mill & Smelter program, 3:45 p. m. EWT, CBS outlets.

Little Steel program, 6:45 p. m. EWT, Blue Network stations.

* * *

Both CBS and Blue shows are rating high with listeners, CBS because of dramatic quality and Blue because of an up-to-the-minute reporting job on important world events.

Last Blue broadcast Feb. 17 featured CIO leaders speaking from the London World Trade Union meeting, including R. J. Thomas, James B. Carey, John Green and Joseph Curran.

Thomas also appeared on a March of Time program. He said:

"The biggest triumph of this historic gathering is that it has proved that the working people of the world are able and eager to come together despite different political beliefs to thrash out their difficulties and to find a joint decision in the end. This triumph holds out great promise for the future of peoples everywhere."

* * *

The British Broadcasting Corp., which cooperated in the CIO London-U. S. show, is making available transcriptions of another 15-minute broadcast from London by R. J. Thomas, Soviet union leader Vasil Kuznetzov, and British union leader George Isaacs, on the achievements of the London meeting.

Transcriptions cost $5 each. Write the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N. W., Washington 6, D. C., for details.

* * *

DID YOU KNOW? THAT 31 million American homes have radios. THAT they are more widely used than any other commodity. THAT 83.7 per cent of all urban radio families use their sets an average of five hours, four minutes a day, and that 88.5 per cent of all rural families use their sets five hours, 18 minutes.

New World Labor Unit Set Up In London Meet

By HERBERT A. KLEIN

LONDON—(FP)—Ending its 12-day meeting on a high note of unity and enthusiasm, the World Trade Union Conference adjourned here Feb. 17, unanimously committed "to work together for the creation of a powerful democratic world trade union federation at the earliest practicable date."

This proposal was set before conference delegates by CIO Delegate Sidney Hillman in a report which had been unanimously recommended by a drafting committee. Blueprinting of the new organization was left to a 40-man committee which was scheduled to meet for about a week immediately after the adjournment of the conference.

Duties of the continuations committee will be to:

1. Act as the conference's spokesman until the next conference is convened "not later than the end of 1945."

2. Make such collective representations as necessary to national governments, international agencies and organizations.

3. Act as the conference's representative to insure trade union representation at the coming peace conference and all preparatory conferences.

4. Collate the conference's recommendations and submit them to constituent bodies for ratification and prepare and submit a report to the next conference.

5. Prepare and circulate a draft constitution for the new world trade union federation "which it is the purpose of this conference to establish."

6. Call an emergency conference if it is deemed necessary in light of world events.

7. Issue invitations to the next conference and accept affiliation of such additional union bodies as it or the conference may determine.

This last point leaves the door open for affiliation of the AFL, which has so far refused to participate in the conference. Headquarters of the committee will be in Paris and it will be financed by voluntary contributions only.

Preamble of the report stated "full agreement on the objectives of a speedy and uncompromising victory, enduring peace, eradication of fascism, international collaboration in the economic sphere, full employment with rising standards of living and security for men and women of all nations, and a democratic society assuring political and civil equality and opportunity for all."

GREAT HOPE

"This report holds out great hope not only to labor but to the whole world," Hillman told delegates. "I am happy to say that in a very short time we found a basis for agreement on all these matters troubling labor and the world."

During discussion on the report, Hillman, in answer to a question, said: "We regret the AFL is not here and when they decide to come in we'll make a place for them on the executive committee."

Before the report was unanimously adopted the conference witnessed a number of remarkable demonstrations of the unity permeating these sessions when rival union delegations from some nations, after conferring with each other, agreed on their joint representatives on the continuations committee.

Agreement was necessary because of the conference rule that internal disputes on the authenticity of rival delegations must be resolved by them rather than by the conference itself.

QUICK AGREEMENT

Despite an insinuation by IFTU Sec. Walter Schevenels that disunity existed in the French delegation, the Frenchmen reached quick agreement on their representatives.

They are the resistance leader, Louis Saillant, B. Franchon and A. Gazier of the French Confederation of Workers, to which the vast majority of French unionists belong, while J. Dumas of the French Confederation of Christian Trade Unions was agreed on as an alternate.

Headed by Sec. Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress, the continuations committee consists of three representatives apiece from the U. S., Great Britain, France, USSR and Latin America; one each from Canada, Australia, India, China, Belgium, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslavakia, Spain, Iceland, Ireland, Bulgaria, Italy, Rumania and Finland; two each for the rest of the British Commonwealth, the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions and the Intl. Trade Secretariat, which is affiliated with the IFTU; plus one non-voting consultative member of the pro-Catholic Intl. Confederation of Christian Trade Unions. The U. S. representatives on the committee are Hillman, R. J. Thomas and James B. Carey.

OKAY NEW LABOR GROUP: Ending its 12-day meeting in a spirit of unity, the World Trade Union Conference unanimously committed itself "to work together for the creation of a powerful democratic world trade union federation." Caught during an informal chat are the three presidents of the conference (l to r): Chairman Vassily Kuznetsov of Soviet All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions; Chairman George Isaacs of British Trades Union Congress, and CIO Delegate R. J. Thomas, president of United Auto Workers. (OWI photo via Federated Pictures.)

Pick U. S., Paris For Meetings

London — (FP) — Presence of spokesmen for world labor at the coming international parleys where the future of the world will be shaped was assured by decisions of the continuations committee of the World Trade Union Conference Feb. 20.

The committee set a meeting of its 13-man administrative committee for Washington in April, from where the committee members will undoubtedly proceed to San Francisco in time for the April 25 world security conference of the Allies.

The committee also decided that the next world labor conference would meet in Paris in September to ratify the constitution of the new world labor organization which the committee is now blueprinting.

The committee had been instructed by the conference, which adjourned Feb. 17, to call the next world meeting "not later than the end of 1945"

The continuations committee has smoothly concentrated its main tasks in the hands of the administrative committee, which will tackle the key job of drafting the proposed constitution of the new world labor organization.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Members of the administrative committee are R. J. Thomas and Sidney Hillman of the CIO, Sir Walter Citrine and E. Edwards of the British Trades Union Congress, Vassily Kuznetsov and M. Tarasov of the USSR, Louis Saillant and B. Franchon for France, H. T. Liu of China, Walter Schevenels and J. Oldenbrook of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions and Vicente Lombardo Toledano and another delegate from the Confederation of Latin American Workers.

The progressive viewpoint is well represented on the committee with probably only Citrine, Edwards, Schevenels and Oldenbrook likely to attempt to make the new organization merely an inflated version of the IFTU or to unduly delay starting the actual machinery of international labor unity.

WORLD LABOR CONFERENCE IN ACTION: Moves toward formation of a new world labor organization as proposed by CIO Delegate Sidney Hillman were accelerated by the decisions of the Big Three Crimea conference. Above, Dr. Somerville-Hastings, London County Council chairman, greets delegates from 85 countries representing more than 60 million organized workers. (Federated Pictures.)

World Neighbors

Foreign Policy No More A Closed Book

According to news reports, the U. S. State Department is getting an average of 1,000 letters a day from people interested in the foreign policies of their government. A big part of this mail asks questions on plans for world security—how Dumbar-ton Oaks will work, what plans are shaping up to stop aggression, and the like. One of the most frequently asked questions is how we can prevent a World War III.

The State Department, in turn, is conducting a wide campaign of education designed to answer just such questions. Pamphlet material, summaries, questions and answers, speakers manuals, etc., are being prepared for individuals and organizations that request them.

The campaign is led by a group in the State Dept. around Secretary Stettinius which believes the public must be informed on questions of international policy as the best guarantee that policy will remain progressive.

Asst. Secretary MacLeish, one of the leaders of this group, further believes that the American people know what this war is about and why we are fighting it.

This belief, which he stated this week in his first public speech since his appointment, is a refreshing contrast to the attitude of those gloomy souls who proclaim the alleged ignorance and indifference of the average citizen to his own and his country's stake in world security.

PEOPLE ARE CONCERNED

The fact is that people are concerned over their country's relations with other countries. They want to know more than anything else how we can achieve and maintain a progressive foreign policy that will forever banish aggression and war.

The 1,000-letter-a-day mailbag at the State Dept. is only one indication of this concern. Throughout the country church groups, women's organizations, educational groups, and the like are earnestly studying Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods, the Crimean conference and other world security moves.

Unions have a special obligation to take an even fuller part in the campaign of discussion and education on international affairs.

Workers, their wives and their kids have an unequalled stake in building world security and in preventing another war. They are the original citizens of "one world."

World Trade Seen Key To Jobs

London (FP) — Jobs for all throughout the world and an international monetary system that will assure the expanded foreign trade to provide them were demanded by the World Trade Union Conference in the declaration of its committee on postwar reconstruction and immediate trade union demands.

The committee, headed by CIO Delegate Allan S. Haywood, said: "Governments must accept unreservedly full responsibility for insuring in their countries suitable jobs at adequate pay rates for all able-bodied men and women requiring them." Key point of the declaration was support of a planned economy where necessary.

Pointing out its "acute awareness that in many countries and dependencies control of industry by private monopoly has become a menace to industrial expansion, the democratic way of life and national security," the declaration called on governments "to take action safeguarding the public against monopoly exploitation." This may take the form of legislation "for the control or elimination of monopoly," it said.

To support an expanding foreign trade, the declaration called for an international monetary system, regulation of international trade and tariffs and international regulation of conditions of production and prices of staples entering international trade.

It demanded long term loans for the economic development of colonial territories and backward countries conditional upon observance of internationally agreed upon working conditions.

Servicemen, Veterans Aided

CIO Pressing Fight To Get Ex-GI His Old Job

The New Jersey CIO Council and the CIO War Relief Committee will carry the case of Joseph Grasso, 27-year-old veteran who was refused reinstatement to his old job because of his "flat feet," to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, the committee announced this week.

Judge Guy L. Fake of the U. S. District Court at Newark, N. J., last week refused to order A. J. Crowhurst & Sons to reinstate Grasso to his old job at a Belleville, N. J., tannery, as provided by the Selective Service Act.

Two weeks after receiving a medical discharge from the Army because of flat feet, Grasso asked the Crowhurst firm in October, 1943, for a leave of absence before going back to work.

The tannery worker said he simply wanted the leave to visit friends and relatives. The Crowhurst firm sent him to the company doctor, who reported that the veteran was unfit for the job because of flat feet.

Still within the 40-day period to reapply for his job under the Selective Service Act, Grasso told the firm that if there were going to be any difficulties over a leave of absence he would go back to work at once. (Under an amendment, the period has been extended to 90 days, but the provision is not retroactive.)

Met with another refusal, the veteran then went to his Local of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers, which called the firm demanding reinstatement but was rebuffed.

Judge Fake rejected the firm's argument that Grasso was unable to do the work that he had done before going into the Army, but held that the veteran never made proper application to the company for his job.

Tires Needed On Battlefields

Nine CIO United Rubber Workers have returned from visiting European battlefields as guests of the War Dept. convinced that "the millions of workers here have done an outstanding job" and that the workers will do an "even better job and thus insure a speedy and lasting peace."

The nine men, elected by their locals to take the trip, asserted in a letter to Sec. of War Patterson that they were inspired by the size, efficiency and precision of the overseas operations and the unselfishness of "our military men" in their devotion to duty.

The group also issued a message to American war workers praising the job done by "the men charged with running this war" and the "effectiveness of the salvage and the conservation programs" at the front.

"Our men over there need every tire and tube that can possibly be produced," they added. "The evidences of short supply in some cases are nothing short of tragic. It is our firm resolve to see to it that this threat to the Army procurement program is removed forthwith. This is the least we can do for all these men who are doing so much for each one of us."

Those making the trip were: Howard R. Lloyd, Freeman B. Van Houton, Clarence V. Wheeler, Francis M. Hannley, George R. Bass, William A. Nelson, all of Akron, Ohio; Albert T. Lunceford, Huntington Park, Calif.; John F. Marmon, Detroit, and William D. Richards, Barberton, Ohio.

Japanese-U. S. Troops Praised

Refusal of membership in veterans' organizations to Japanese-Americans and Negroes is opposed by servicemen who have seen these two groups of Americans in action against the enemy, in the opinion of Thomas L. Stokes, Scripps-Howard columnist.

Stokes pointed out in a column last week that one of the 16 Japanese Americans, barred from the honor roll of the American Legion Post at Hood River, Ore., died a hero's death in action against the Nipponese at Leyte.

"What American boys who served with him thought of him is shown by the fact that nearly everybody in the regiment had volunteered to give blood transfusions to try to save his life," Stokes said.

The colunmnist also reprinted a letter from a first lieutenant in the Air Corps to the Disabled American Veterans Post at Hermiston, Ore., protesting the exclusion of Japanese-Americans and Negroes from membersip.

Attached to the 15th Air Force as a B-24 navigator, the officer said that Negro fighter pilots are held in "great esteem" by the bomber crews they cover, and judging by conversations with Fifth Army infantrymen, Japanese-Americans "had evidently carried far more than their share of the battle."

CIO Hires Major To Help Vets, GIs

Major Thomas Stone, veteran of both World Wars, last week was placed in charge of the veterans' and servicemen's division of the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee.

During World War I he served overseas with the 307th Infantry Regiment of the famous 77th Division. An assembly district chairman of the American Labor Party in 1930, Major Stone later did radio work.

In this war he served first as executive officer and later as commanding officer of a Military Police battalion in the New York City area. He is now on inactive service.

Vets' Seniority In UE Proposals

Contract proposals that would extend seniority credit to all veterans of this war for the length of their service in the armed forces since Sept. 1, 1940, have been submitted to General Electric and Westinghouse Electric Cos. by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Julius Emspak, general secretary of the union, said UE is seeking to put the veteran on an equal footing with the war worker.

The period in the armed services would be added to previous time employed at the plant for former employes of the companies. Security credit for the time spent in service would not start for a newly-hired employe until he had successfully completed the trial period.

'Uncanny, Out of This World,' Says GI About Fiery V-1 Rocket Terror

"The thing is uncanny, out of this world, almost unbelieveable even when seen"—that's how V-1, the Axis' terror rocket, is described by Lt. Sidney Wagman, formerly of Philadelphia, and a member of the CIO Teachers Union. Excerpts from a letter he wrote from Belgium to Miss Jeanne Gallant, of The CIO News office, follows:

"I am writing this in my office. At my right hand is my helmet which I reach for each time our flak starts flying. The din is terrific and it seems as if the guns are in the very next tent.

"Much worse are Hitler's V's, 1 and 2. Number 1 worries us because we have all seen its effects and there doesn't seem to be anything we can do about it. The thing is uncanny, out of this world, almost unbelievable even when seen. (One of my clerks has just run out to watch one go by. The rest of us sit there trying to give the impression that it doesn't bother us, but it does, and we all know it does, too.)

"It's a clear night and I can tell without going out that this V-1 will not land near us. If it lands within 100 yards I'll not finish this letter—not just now. But if I were to go out, I would eventually see a huge burst of flame and a large area lit up. The sound, however, continues for some seconds more because, as you know from your physics, light travels much faster than sound. Finally you hear the blast of the bomb.

"If close (I can't say how close), it will awaken the soundest sleeper and sometimes even toss him out of bed to boot. As I said, on clear nights you can see them very clearly—a cigar-like flame hurtling thru the sky. On clear days they can also be seen, but the fire is barely visible. If you see them you can tell pretty well where they will land.

"But oh those cloudy days and nights! You hear them, but you can't see them. Or when you are in bed and hear them. What thoughts then? Worst of all was a windy day when the darn things did loops and dips and changed direction. Wow!

"Not long ago a unit like ours and our closest neighbor got one on the nose. It's been in our papers so I can tell you about it. I'll never forget it and neither will anyone else around here.

"It makes reasonable people forget reason and call for complete destruction of Germany. Bombing a hospital is like wounding everyone. Bombing an orphanage (as they did) is like bombing your family . . .

"Every now and then I give myself a mental boost by watching our colored guards work the Nazi prisoners. To see a dozen supermen working like beavers does me a lot of good. And when I come along and talk to the guard they work harder because they are afraid of officers. And so a Negro guard and a Jewish officer talk while Nazis sweat. Very good. Does it cheer you up?"

Burma-Ledo Road—Tough Test for U. S. Engineers and Union-Built Machines

American men and American machinery made by union men and women on the home front are fighting this war in every out-of-the-way spot on the globe. Among those working farthest from home are the U. S. Army Engineers hacking out the Burma-Ledo Road.

← TRUCKS built by UAW-CIO members highball along the Burma-Ledo Road in the first motor convoy to travel from India to China in over two years. The road runs from Ledo, India, through Burma to Kunming, China. Chinese infantrymen who helped drive the Japanese from the jungles are watching the convoy.

The Burma-Ledo Road is called "Ding Hao Highway." "Ding Hao" means "the best" in Chinese. Not that the road is the best, but to coolies and farmers, the Americans, with their thundering machines, represent everything the Chinese people respect and look to for victory.

"Ding Hao Highway" is open, if a road with 20 per cent grades and hundreds of hairpin turns can be called a "highway." One section to which a road grader recently was assigned balances itself at breathtaking heights, much as a circus tight-rope walker does, sometimes above the clouds with thousand-foot drops first on one side, then the other.

Ten and twelve thousand foot peaks must be eased by grades and curves. Impassable rivers that whip their way between deep gorges must be bridged. And always, hovering Japanese bombers, hunting their prey among slow-moving conveys, must be driven off.

On the peak of Tien Tz Miao, a hundred coolies are busy chewing out pieces of the mountain, making wider the sharpest and highest curve. With Chinese workers, using their "tzen tzu" or spade, are American-made air compressors drilling holes to be exploded by dynamite and "composition C" brought from the United States.

Every pound of equipment still must be shipped from the States. Trucks and trains carry it from the ports of India to plane depots in the northeast where ATC cargo planes fly it to fields in China.

Bad Breaks for Labor On the U. S. Airwaves

THE four major national radio networks hand out everything from recipes for puddings to breath-taking bulletins on history-making events. On a round-the-clock schedule they give birth to hundreds of thousands of words that help shape opinions for 31 million radio-owning families.

Potent forces for good or evil are the radio commentators, those on-the-spot, up-to-the-minute men who take on their shoulders the substantial burden of dispensing and in many cases interpreting the news. Their opinions, the use they make of views of public figures, and the way they "slant" the facts are of vital concern to labor. Accuracy and impartiality are all that labor asks. Does it get them?

BEST test of the public pulse—and of the radio commentators' reaction to it—was the recent expression of democratic disfavor for a man named Dewey. Best target for reactionaries was the CIO Political Action Committee. PAC was variously accused of selling out the workers and of being a menace to capitalism, of using "coercion" to do an effective job, and of fumbling which made it ineffective. PAC did OK—but with little help from radio commentators.

Just what the commentators said was checked for PAC by Miss Leila Sussmann, a communications analyst. She was assisted by a volunteer corps of monitors who hugged their hearthsides from Sept. 17 to Nov. 5, 1944, and carefully noted all items concerning PAC or labor generally which were broadcast over 33 network news or comment programs wtih the largest national audiences. Twenty-three commentators were included in the survey. The results, also published in the current issue of "Common Sense," were astounding.

Major issues of the broadcasts were: PAC; strikes; and the Little Steel Formula—and on every one of them labor took a beating!

"PAC uses coercive tactics; PAC is linked up with the Communists; PAC is doing an effective registration job but is alienating votes; strikes are harming the war effort; upward revision of the Little Steel Formula is dangerous and inflationary." That was the tune hammered home into the minds of millions of listeners.

The survey listed 212 fact or opinion items about labor that were heard on the broadcasts. Of these, 78 per cent were concerned with matters of morality — the right and wrong of labor policies and behavior. For every favorable morality item, there were five unfavorable ones!

"Of the five programs which gave the most attention to labor—Fulton Lewis Jr. on Mutual, Morgan Beatty on NBC, Henry Taylor, Baukhage and Ray Henle on Blue—every one had a heavily unfavorable-to-labor score," the survey showed.

While 21 per cent of all the items were factual in content, the other 79 per cent were evenly divided between expressions of the commentators' own opinions and the opinions of others whom they quoted. Mere presentation of facts, however, can lead to a biased impression, for as Miss Sussmann pointed out, the facts can be "stacked" against anyone.

"Even more particularly, quoted opinion, which is accounted legitimate news, can easily be "stacked" by a commentator without his expressing himself personally," the survey stated. "Morgan Beatty, who rarely expressed his own views, quoted anti-labor as opposed to pro-labor opinion in a ratio of about 12 items to one."

An alternative to mere presentation of facts was suggested—"to allow commentators to express their views freely, but to maintain an even balance among commentators of different veiwpoints—giving them an equal play in terms of time at good listening hours, and having opposing outlooks follow each other closely on the air."

THE survey showed that the networks were very similar in their pattern of attention to labor subjects. Here was the score:

	Blue	CBS	Mutual	NBC	Totals
PAC	30	4	40	12	86
Strikes	11	4	8	7	30
Little Steel For.	9	2	5	7	23
Labor Vote	2	....	11	4	17
Petrillo Incident	3	4	....	5	12
Hotel Statler Brawl	3	....	4	4	11
Other Economic Topics	3	1	3	2	9

Opinion and quoted opinion items that were broadcast outweighed factual content during every week of the pre-election period covered. The box score was:

	Fact	Opinion	Quoted Opinion	Totals
Sept. 17	9	13	14	36
Sept. 24	3	10	24	37
Oct. 1	16	11	18	45
Oct. 8	8	14	13	35
Oct. 15	2	10	4	16
Oct. 22	4	10	....	14
Oct. 29	3	17	9	29
Totals	45	85	82	212

ACCURACY of the survey is shown by notes on the methods used to gather the information. The monitors' instructions were to report all items concerning any labor group, policy or leader, or any government agency dealing with labor, as nearly verbatim as possible. They took notes during the broadcasts and filled in from memory immediately afterward.

The monitors also indicated for every item (1) whether it was fact, opinion or quoted opinion; (2) if the last, who was quoted; and (3) whether it was favorable, unfavorable, neutral or balanced.

The survey shows that if major commentators are not to be accused of a sort of mass neurosis that finds them out of step with the democratic temper of the times, they had better be more careful whom they quote when discussing labor topics.

The News—79% Opinion and 21% Facts

It's mighty easy for an anti-labor radio commentator to "slant" his broadcasts merely by quoting anti-labor sources. Hence, there may be more than minor significance to the fact that on the broadcasts listed in the PAC survey 40 per cent of the items were opinion; 39 per cent were quoted opinion; and 21 per cent were fact. Here's the score sheet:

	Fact	Opinion	Quoted Opinion	Total Opinion
Blue	8	36	24	60
CBS	7	1	10	11
Mutual	12	43	25	68
NBC	18	5	23	28
Totals	45	85	82	167

The survey showed that morality broadcasts, which deal with the right or wrong of labor policies or behavior, were four times as frequent as broadcasts dealing with matters of strength, labor's success or failure in carrying out its policies. (The difference between favorable and unfavorable on CBS is not statistically significant.)

	Blue	CBS	Mutual	NBC	Totals
Favorable	9	2	8	1	20
Unfavorable	21	6	25	19	71
Neutral	2	4	3	3	11
Balanced	4	....	5	3	12
Totals	36	12	41	26	114

Wage Situation Intolerable

The shocking report of the public members of the War Labor Board recommending no change in the Little Steel formula has brought to a head the long developing crisis in our national wage policy.

The report, as CIO Pres. Philip Murray points out, "completely fails to meet the needs of the nation," shows "no understanding of the problems of war production now or of the national economy after VE-Day," and reflects "the frustrated thinking and inaction" of the Board's administration.

Although the public members concede that living costs have risen 30% since January, 1941, (labor surveys show a 45% increase), and although basic wage rates have risen less than 20% since then, the report juggles wage figures, by counting in results of increased production and individual promotions, in an attempt to create the false impression that there is no present inequity between wages and prices.

Furthermore, the public members close their eyes to the great reductions in wage earnings which threaten after VE-Day, and refuse to recommend the necessary wage adjustments to meet the dangers to our national welfare in this obviously expected loss of earnings.

Added to these derelictions of duty on the part of the public members are the arbitrary powers of the OPA and Judge Vinson to hold up wage awards granted by the WLB, the tortuous and time-consuming administrative procedures of the Board, and the difficulties of securing employer compliance with Board orders.

Despite this intolerable situation, the CIO is fully conscious of the importance to victory of maintaining uninterrupted production, and Murray has again emphasized CIO's determination to observe its no-strike pledge.

He insists, however, that the interests of the war effort demand a complete revision of our national wage policy, upward adjustment of the Little Steel formula, and the unshackling of the WLB from the freezing restrictions imposed by Judge Vinson.

This is the case which labor must now present directly to President Roosevelt.

World Labor Unity Wins

There is every reason for satisfaction with the outcome of the London world labor conference. True, it did not immediately establish a new international organization, as urged by the CIO. But the unanimously adopted compromise makes up in unity for what it may lack in speed, and it lays a firm foundation for the new world labor body.

A representative continuing committee has been set up to draft a constitution, and another world conference is to be called in Paris in September, at which final action will be taken to launch the all-inclusive world organization.

Meanwhile the committee is authorized to speak on behalf of world labor and to seek at which the world's future is now being planned.

Decisive steps have thus been taken to unite the labor movements of the world for the first time into one inclusive and truly representative body.

The London conference was a fitting counterpart to the Crimean conference. It was remarkable for the unity revealed on all the basic issues of the war, the peace and postwar reconstruction.

Its immediate results will be more effective united effort by labor in all countries for winning the war and winning the peace. And there is no limit to the long-range benefits which may logically be expected to flow from

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

TALKING of the War Labor Board report on the Little Steel formula, this is positively the last Shirley story—for a while anyhow.

While we were crossing the street recently near our house, Shirley nudged me and pointed, saying: "There's where I fell down."

"You mean you were running across the street today and fell down," I said, disturbed. "You should be more careful. There might have been a car coming."

"There was a car coming," Shirley replied solemnly.

"My goodness," I gasped, becoming alarmed. "What happened? Did the car stop?"

"No," answered Shirley, shaking her head impressively and enjoying the sensation she had created. "It didn't stop."

"But it might have run over you," I said, my heart thumping as I visualized a swerving car and a frightened child.

"It did," she said dramatically. Then, noting the dawn of doubt in her credulous listener, and to cap her story with a fitting climax, she added: "It ran over me and cut off my legs and killed me."

★ ★ ★

The public members of the War Labor Board have spent about a year concocting their story on the Little Steel formula. It's a story that is far more fantastic in its opposition to known facts than the furthest flights of Shirley's innocent imagination.

Under this formula, it may be recalled, a cost of living increase of 15 per cent between Jan. 1, 1941, and April, 1942, was to be offset by allowing wage increases up to 15 per cent but no more—on the supposition that the stabilization program would stabilize prices as well as wages thereafter, thus maintaining the balance between them.

This intent was embodied in the Price Control Act and emphasized by Pres. Roosevelt in September, 1942, when he told Congress that a further increase of 15 per cent in food costs over the level when wage ceilings were imposed "would be equal to imposing a 15 per cent sales tax on all food purchased by wage earners.

"Obviously no one would consider imposing such a tax," Roosevelt added. "If wages should be stabilized and farm prices be permitted to rise at any rate like the present rate, workers would have to bear the major part of the increase. This we cannot ask."

But food prices and other living costs did continue to rise, far beyond the 15 per cent on which the wage freeze was supposed to be based.

To date, living costs have risen about 45 per cent, according to the careful and thorough studies of the labor members of the WLB, which are verified by the experience of every housewife. Even the deliberately minimized figures of the public members' own committee show a rise of about 30 per cent.

★ ★ ★

Confronted with CIO demands for revision of the Little Steel formula, to remedy the obvious injustice of freezing wage rates at 15 per cent while living costs have risen 30-45 per cent, the public members of the WLB have spent a year or more stalling, prevaricating and trying to concoct fantastic alibis.

The ripe and rotten fruit of these misguided efforts is now exposed to public gaze in a 110-page report to Pres. Roosevelt.

Although the public members have repeatedly boasted they have held wages to the limits of the Little Steel formula, and although they subscribe to their own committee's claim of a 29.4 per cent increase in living costs, they conclude that "real hourly wages" (straight-time hourly earnings adjusted to increased living costs) "are slightly higher today than they were in January, 1941."

They unblushingly ask labor and the country to believe that wage rates can be frozen at 15 per cent, (even allowing for substandard and other adjustments, basic wage rates have risen less than 20%) while living costs rise two or three times that much, without "any present inequity in the relationship between average wage levels and average price levels."

★ ★ ★

The WLB public members' report is not only full of double-talk and double-dealing, it also has the hallmarks of a double-cross.

On Oct. 11, 1944, the WLB voted, with the labor members dissenting, that it would "not include in its factual report to the President any recommendations for action one way or the other with regard to the Little Steel formula."

Yet the public members, in their report, declare they "do not recommend a present change in the Little Steel formula as necessary to eliminate any overall inequity in the wartime stabilization program."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

USA District Director Pete Mosele advises: American Brake Shoe Co., Ramapo, Ajax Dic., Hillburn, N. Y., CIO 41, no union 11.

Brother Harry L. Wallis, member of USA-CIO Local 63, on his own time, organized the employes of the Sterling Silica Gel Co., Milwaukee, Wis., into a local union of the Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers. This group had formerly been with the AFL and through the fine efforts of Brother Wallis, affiliated with the CIO.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, reports: General Motors Corp., Buick Motor Division, Melrose Park, Ill., UAW-CIO certified (for hourly paid timekeepers) by a vote of 16 out of 21.

Wm. B. Taylor, Director, Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports: War Emergency Pipe Line Division, CIO 56, against 46.

Regional Director Edward McCrone, Connecticut, reports: Ensign Bickford Co. plant, Simsbury, Conn., CIO Textile Workers 350, no union 84. USA-CIO has been certified through a check of cards by the NLRB at the Manufacturers' Iron Foundry, Bridgeport; 150 people are involved. The SCMWA-CIO has chartered another local union in the Department of Public Welfare, Hartford, Conn. SCMWA Field Rep. Thomas Fitzpatrick did a fine job.

Helen Kingery, Dir. Pub. UOPWA-CIO, reports: Won National John Hancock poll by vote of 3009 for CIO as against 899. Company agreed in advance to sign national modified union shop contract. The UOPWA-CIO also won poll among office workers Todd Shipyard, Hoboken, N. J., by a vote of 156 to 44.

CIO Reg. Dir. A. J. Federoff, Pittsburgh, advises: Dravo Corporation, Neville Island, Pittsburgh, (inspectors and testers) CIO Shipbuilding Workers 62, no union 7. Thompson Paint Co., Oakmont, Pa., CIO Gas, Coke, Chemical Workers 17, no union 0.

President A. J. Esposito, PJ&NWA, reports: American Crucible Co., Shelton, Conn., CIO 43, against 10. Intl. Reps. Edward Ferrie and Alfred Sicignano did excellent work in swinging this election.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO Organizing Drive, advises: Operation in Westminster B. C., certified to CIO involving B. C. Shook, Mohawk Handle No. 1 and Mohawk Handle No. 2, Candial Forests products. U. S. Plywood Corp., Morton, Wash., CIO 19, AFL 12.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, reports: Goshon Mfg. Co., Memphis, IWA-CIO 25, no union 7. IWA Rep. John Hawkins organized this plant.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., Minnesota, advises: St. Paul White Lead and Oil Co., Receiving and Distributing Warehouse, CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes 18, against 1.

Pete Mosele, CIO Reg. Dir., NYC, reports: URW—DSEA won a clean-cut election in New York at two of the John Wannamaker Stores, CIO 838, no union 382. This company is to open a store uptown with approximately 500 employes, which will be a part of this bargaining union and the three stores will have a total of approximately 2,000 employes.

A great victory! Congratulations to Brothers Martin Kyne, John Horan, Mike Cavanaugh, Joe McCarthy, Leonard Geiger, and all others participating in this fine accomplishment.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, advises: American Mining and Research, Upper Darby, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 44, against 6.

Ben Henry, CIO Reg. Dir., Des Moines, Iowa, reports: Amalgamated Clothing Workers won an election at Continental Overall Co. Plant, Knoxville, Iowa. Packinghouse Workers won an election in Iowa Pacific Company's plant, Ottumwa, Iowa.

CIO Reg. Dir. C. H. Gillman, Atlanta, reports: United Butchers Abattoir, Atlanta, CIO Packinghouse Workers, 16, no union 0. CIO Rep. Tom Jones and UPWA Rep. John Henry Hall carried on this work. Atlanta Life Ins. Co., Atlanta, UOPWA-CIO, 5, no union 0. UOPWA Rep. L. E. Carter was in charge. Piedmont Textile Mills, Atlanta, CIO 188, no union 164.

This organizing work was done by TWUA-Reps. W. H. Price, Frank Barker and Clara Kanum. This fine job was accomplished under great difficulties because of the Christian American group who participated with the company in trying to defeat the union.

CIO Office Workers Win Nation-Wide John Hancock Vote

John Hancock, third largest insurance company in the United States went CIO this week in a big national election won 3,009 to 899 by the United Office & Professional Workers. The election was conducted by the American Arbitration Assn.

The company had agreed in advance to sign a new nation-wide contract containing a union security clause if the union's majority was confirmed by the secret ballot election.

The union commended union members of the Metropolitan and Prudential as well as John Hancock for the "bang-up job" they did in contacting the 4,000 Hancock agents from coast to coast by home visiting and by mail.

Agents of all companies in Hudson County, N. J., sent out a letter to their fellow Hancock agents, urging them to vote 100 per cent for the union. "Our union increased our dignity and security on the job, boosted our pay, and given us a real voice on the problems that affect us as agents and Americans."

Company representatives accepted the union's proposal to incorporate a "modified union shop" clause in a new contract if the election was won, at a meeting held last December in New York. It was also agreed that the union's case for a wage increase would be submitted to the WLB and that the company would comply with the Board's directive and make all increases retroactive to January 1, 1945.

The form of "union shop" agreed upon at the December meeting provides that all agents are to join the union in the areas covered, but that any individual agent who may be a "conscientious objector" must so signify in writing. In such cases, an amount equal to initiation fees and monthly dues and assessments will be deducted from the agents pay and contributed to the Red Cross.

5 Million Have Voted In Union Elections

The annual report of the Natl. Labor Relations Board issued this week has some facts and figures of interest to the many CIO unions that have made heavy use of the board's services.

During the past year 1,072,594 wrokers cast valid votes in 4,712 election cases—a top record so far—which brings the total cast since the board's inception nine years ago to 5,220,983.

Only one union was involved in 77 per cent of all elections. Independent unions appeared on the ballots in only 21 per cent of the elections conducted.

CIO and AFL affiliates opposed one another in only 575 elections, or 12 per cent of all the polls. Of these the CIO won 286 and the AFL 244. Thirty-six elections resulted in a no-union vote.

Back pay amounting to almost $2,000,000 was paid to 3,700 workers who had been victims of unlawful practices.

Company-dominated unions were thrown out in 100 cases and collective bargaining negotiations were ordered in 136 cases.

Unfair labor practices and representation cases filed with the board totaled 9,176.

More than half of the cases originated in eight major industries engaged in producing basic war equipment and supplies. These include iron and steel, production of ordnance, machinery, aircraft, chemicals, textiles, food and electrical equipment.

In terms of the number of employes involved, more than 50 per cent were concentrated in only four of these industries. Aircraft alone had 399 election cases, compared with 121 in 1942.

Court litigation for enforcement or review of the board's orders during 1944 was the most successful in the board's history. Five board orders reached the Supreme Court and each one was enforced in full.

The Circuit Courts of Appeals reviewed 88 board orders and enforced 74, or 84 per cent in full. Eight were enforced with modifications and six were set aside.

Election cases filed with the board during the past year represented an increase of 3,000 per cent over the number received in the first year of the board's operation.

Fewer unfair labor practice cases were filed than in any of the seven preceding years. There were still lawbreakers, however, the report points out.

Health Insurance Bill

The N. Y. State CIO has had prepared and introduced for action by the N. Y. State Legislature a comprehensive Health Insurance Bill.

CIO For Missouri River Plan

CIO support for Sen. Murray's (D. Mont.) bill (S 555) to set up a Missouri Valley Authority was pledged at a meeting of a special CIO committee in St. Louis this week.

"Issues of flood control, navigation, electric power, reclamation, conservation, recreation and water supply in the valley of the Missouri River and its tributaries and watershed affect the lives, welfare and happiness of millions of Americans," the committee said in announcing support for the bill.

The committee was set up by CIO Pres. Murray recently and consists of: John Brophy, national CIO, as chairman, and James A. Davis, secretary, Missouri CIO; Frank Pechnik, president, Colorado CIO; H. J. Yount, secretary, Kansas CIO; Mike Lacey, president, Montana CIO; W. A. Urban, secretary, Wyoming CIO; and Orvel T. Champ, secretary, Iowa-Nebraska CIO.

Safety Courses Offered

A course in accident control prepared especially for union representatives is being offered by the U. S. Dept. of Labor in cooperation with the U. S. Office of Education.

Thousands of union members are among the average annual toll of 18,000 killed in industry and among the hundreds of thousands more temporarily incapacitated, says a leaflet appealing for union support for the safety program issued this week.

The courses are offered through recognized engineering colleges with evening classes held in locations convenient to workers and include 64 hours of class and plant visit work. Material used is similar to that used in safety classes for production supervisors and instruction is given by qualified safety men.

The folder which introduces the course to locals and explains how they may take advantage of it is entitled "Is This the Payoff?" Copies may be obtained from the Division of Labor Standards, U. S. Dept. of Labor, Washington 25, D. C.

Labor's Plans World-Wide, Says Murray

Trade unions can no longer think only in terms of better wages and working conditions for their own members if they are to keep up with the modern world, says CIO Pres. Philip Murray in an article "Labor's Plans Are World-Wide," printed in the March issue of Magazine Digest.

"In order to achieve our post-war program of full production, full employment, full consumption—labor standards of one nation must not be allowed to menace the living standards of another," the article states. Post-war plans "must provide raised standards of living for the international common man."

Big & Little Pipe Lines CIO

The Oil Workers Intl. Union completed unionization of the Big and Little Inch pipelines Feb. 19 when it won a Labor Board election on Division 4 in Indiana and Ohio, reports William B. Taylor, natl. director of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

Five hundred thousand barrels of oil are being pumped daily by CIO members on the War Emergency Pipelines running from Baytown, Tex., to Linden, N. J., Taylor said.

The Big Inch is a 24-inch line carrying crude oil from the Texas and Midcontinent fields to the Atlantic Coast while the Little Inch, a 20-inch line, pumps gasoline.

(Advertisement)

Does Labor Buy Books?

By ALLISTON CRAIG

Book publishers in general claim that there is no labor market for non-fiction books. In this writer's estimation, the publishers are nuts! It would be more accurate to say that publishers in general make no competent effort to capitalize on the reading interest of labor. This is realized by the UAW-CIO Department of Education, which is now launching a program that in the coming year should excite the surprised attention of the publishing world. In view of the publishers' backwardness I am taking this means of reaching directly America's greatest organized labor group—the CIO membership.

My new book, "We the Voters," is written for the workers of the nation, especially such as the CIO workers, whose awareness of the value of the vote has just been so splendidly demonstrated. Shunning academic verbage and high-brow pomp, it is brass-tacks consideration of the great economic questions confronting labor that must be answered if economic democracy is ever to become a fact, and that can be settled ultimately only by labor's vote. The book ends with a practical post-war plan that without upsetting the applecart, with increased income for labor, with full regard for the worker's dignity and self-respect, and without taxation of either labor or business, would assure full employment and the simplest and quickest approach to equitable distribution of the national wealth.

To obtain the book (standard size) with no advance payment and at the special Labor Union price of $2.00, merely send your name, address, and local union to the Merryall Press, New Milford, Connecticut, and it will be sent subject to five days' inspection before payment.

Murray Doubts Low-Cost Clothes Plan Will Work

Doubt that the WPB-OPA program to restore low-priced clothing to the market will work effectively was expressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a letter this week to Price Administrator Chester A. Bowles and WPB Chairman J. A. Krug.

A report of the CIO Cost of Living Committee on the program was enclosed in the letter.

"The report," Murray wrote,, "raises serious doubt in my mind that the program you have publicized will in fact assure a significant increase in supplies of low price clothing, or will afford even a minimum guarantee of quality in such low-priced clothes as will appear, or will effectively shut down the black market in cloth and clothing which thus far during the war has been exacting severe tribute from the workers and from the people."

The WPB and the OPA heads explained how they hoped the program would work.

The WPB orders set aside for essential garments about 80 per cent of the cotton fabrics remaining after military orders are filled; about 75 per cent of the remaining woolens and 75 per cent of the remaining rayons.

Manufacturers scheduling production of these garments—all of which must be made to sell below the specified price cut-offs—will obtain high priorities for fabrics. Those making luxury items will receive no priorities.

So much for the production angle, and here the OPA steps into the picture with the Maximum Average Price regulation.

This regulation means that the manufacturer can arrange his price lines as he sees fit as long as he does not make goods to sell at prices averaging above his 1942-43 average.

Whatever the wishes of the manufacturer, the program acts as check on him—for in order to maintain himself in the higher priced markets, he will have to turn out an equivalent amount of the needed low-priced goods.

Bowles said that the regulation will apply not only to merchandise made under WPB allocations, but also to luxury clothing and fabric accessories such as pocketbooks, gloves and hats.

Garments eligible for priorities include children's clothing and adult wear with the exception of men's overcoats.

Woolen and rayon garments for which manufacturers will be granted priority assistance are:

Woolen—Coats for women, misses, teen-ages, children, small boys, toddlers and infants; dresses for women, misses, teen-ages and girls; suits for women and misses, teen-ages, girls, men, students, cadets and junior boys; skirts for misses, teen ages, girls and children; work shirts and pants for men; official uniforms for men and women; overcoats for boys; separate trousers for students, cadets and junior boys; shoes; religious clothing.

Rayon—Dresses for women, girls and children; two-piece suits with lined jackets for women, misses and juniors; skirts for misses, juniors, teen-ages and girls; blouses, skirts and waists of all sizes; dickies, brassieres and bandeaux; one-piece corselets and foundation garments, girdles and corsets, pajamas for women and teen-ages; nightgowns; slips, nurses' uniforms and religious clothing.

Urge Franco Break

Breaking of diplomatic relations with Franco Spain was urged this week by the Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, in newspaper advertisements sponsored by numerous public figures. The ads said:

"Innumerable reports indicate that the eruption of Argentine Fascism was inspired and heavily aided by Madrid, that prominent Nazis are fleeing to Spain and Argentina, there to plot in safety the murder of our next generation as they plotted against this one. Madrid under Franco is the fountainhead of anti-democratic and anti-U. S. propaganda flowing into Latin-America."

Says Church, Labor Aims For Children Are Identical

Aims of the churches and organized labor for children and youth are "in general the same," Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the Labor Dept., recently said in an address at the Jewish Theological Seminary, New York City.

Resolutions adopted by the 1944 CIO Convention in behalf of children were cited by the speaker—one on youth security being quoted in full.

To show the desire of the CIO to cooperate with other community groups she referred to a statement by Robert L. Kinney, director of the Community Service Division of the CIO War Relief Committee, who said:

"On the whole, the policy of the War Relief Committee is to discourage the institution of union-sponsored welfare services where they may duplicate existing effective or potentially effective community-wide services."

"The aims of organized labor for children and youth, with respect to both National and local policies and programs," Miss Lenroot continued, "are in general the same as the aims of the churches."

She declared that both Christian and Jewish religious bodies backed "educational opportunity, elimination of child labor, the establishment of the Federal Children's Bureau, opportunities for children of migrant families, opportunities for all children whatever their race, creed or national origin. . . .

"Consideration of these problems, which involve not only the time which a mother can devote to her children, but the time allowed by fathers for companionship with their sons and daughters, should be a responsibility of both church and labor groups, as well as of public officials and private agencies responsible for community services."

Vets' Kin 'Out in Cold'

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Adequate provisions for dependents of disabled veterans and for survivors of servicemen and veterans is an important part of the CIO Auxiliary program adopted in Chicago last November.

The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries has just completed a study of existing provisions for wives and children of these men and the situation cries out for action.

Disabled veterans under present law are not entitled to any allowances for dependents. If they are rated as permanently totally disabled they receive $115 a month and that is all. No provision whatever is made for their wives and children.

There are two minor exceptions to this general statement which affect less than 2% of disabled veterans. World War II veterans who are taking vocational training and World War I veterans still rated as temporarily totally disabled are entitled to $92 a month plus dependency allowances of $11.50 for a wife and $5.75 for each minor child or dependent parent.

So far about 375,000 World War II veterans have been granted pensions for disability. It is estimated that 50% of all World War II veterans have dependents so half of these disabled men probably have someone dependent on them for suport.

Only about 10% of them are rated as totally disabled. The rest get a fraction of that $115 a month depending on the rating given their disability by the Veterans Administration.

But all of them are handicapped to a considerable extent in getting jobs. Employes don't want to hire disabled veterans. They're afraid of increased liability under workmen's compensation.

The wife of a serviceman who has three children gets $120 a month as a dependency allowance. If her husband comes home totally disabled the family income drops to $115. That's considerably less than half of what the University of California Heller budget figures show is a minimum decent living standard for a family of that size.

The surviving wife and children of a serviceman who has given his life for our country are also forced to live as paupers under present standards. A widow with one child gets $65, with two children $75, and the total the family may receive, however many children there may be, is $100.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (R, Mass.) has introduced a bill to increase these rates by $10—but what's $110 for a widow with several children to feed, clothe, and house. Surely the very least we owe to the families who have suffered this terrible loss in the public interest is a decent American standard of living.

Bills have also been introduced to give dependency allowances to families of disabled veterans. One of them provides $25 for the wife, $15 for the first child and $10 for each additional child—$50 for three dependents. That would not even buy their food for a month at the very minimum cost of 20c per person per meal. All of the bills now pending to remedy this situation are completely inadequate.

Increasing numbers of disabled men will be coming home in the next few months as our troops force their way into Germany. For the morale of our boys who are fighting, as well as for the welfare of their families, we should enact legislation to assure the future of their dependents. At the very least, they should be entitled to the same allowances as those they receive while their men are serving with the armed forces.

L. J. IMBER
COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber,
Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE
METAL LITHOGRAPHED
BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and
Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick
1725-41 W. North Ave. 7815
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole-Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Congress Can Help on Wages

(See Pages 2 & 3)

With the public members of the War Labor Board flatly rejecting any concessions on the Little Steel Formula, the issue on wages is a number one item on the agenda of every CIO member, his wife, and his Congressman.

The issue, of course, is not in Congress in the form of a bill. But it is very much in Congress in the form of a number of things your Congressman can do to help win an increase in wage rates over the formula.

Your Congressman is a pretty powerful individual in the eyes of the men who run U. S. government agencies such as the War Labor Board. When he asks them to do something in the interests of his constituents, they tend to listen.

Your Congressman is also an influence in the party he belongs to. When a sufficient number of Congressmen take the voters' case to the party leaders, they also tend to listen.

Your Congressman's voice is heard in the White House—because he represents you and scores of thousands of people like you.

Thus, even though the wage issue is not up in House or Senate in the form of a bill, it should be put right on top of the calendar of every Congressman and Senator—and be put there by you, the voter.

Ask your Congressman and Senators to do these things:

1. Write to Chairman Wm. H. Davis of the WLB, Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson and War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes. Urge them to disregard the public members' report, lift the freeze on WLB orders (especially Vinson, who has stalled even the awards the WLB has made within the framework of the formula), and end the Little Steel Formula.

2. Ask them to write President Roosevelt to the same effect.

3. Ask them to receive and listen carefully to the CIO delegations now coming in to Washington to talk to Congressmen on the wage issue.

Wallace OK Seen Nearer

With the successful blocking of GOP-inspired attempts to amend the George bill (S 475) in the House, confirmation of Henry Wallace as Secretary of Commerce moves closer to reality in a final Senate vote set for March 1.

The Republican plan was to amend the George bill, which takes the RFC lending powers out of the Commerce Dept., to the point where President Roosevelt would have to veto it, and thus throw the confirmation fight back to where it started from.

Most impressive angle in the blocking of this move was the energy and determination displayed by House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack. The lineup on the Republican side was equally firm, with House Minority Leader Joe Martin cracking the whip to bring out a 100% GOP vote to wreck the George bill and block Wallace. The Rayburn drive was successful. Only 23 Democrats voted against S375 and Wallace.

Wallace's chances now look good. Several Senate Republicans will vote for him, and only a comparative handful of reactionary Democrats will vote against him. The chances will stay good, however, only if the Senators continue to get the letters, wires, resolutions, etc, like those that have been pouring in.

The fight to pass the George bill as it came from the Senate shows that the reactionary-GOP plus reactionary Democrat coalition can be broken if the Democratic leaders work hard enough. They were persuaded to work hard enough in this case because the people back home were for Wallace and let Congress know that they were for him.

Aubrey Williams, nominated by FDR to head the Rural Electrification Administration, moved closer to Senate confirmation with some backhanded help from Sen. Bilbo (D. Mass.). The backhanded help came in the form of general Senate disgust at Bilbo's smear attacks on Williams, and in the extreme anti-Negro hatred he revealed during questioning.

New Manpower Bill in Senate

The Senate manpower measure offered by Sens. Wagner (D. N. Y.), Kilgore (D. W. Va.) and Ferguson (R. Mich.) has been reported out by the Military Affairs Committee with two amendments offered by Sens. Austin (R. Vt.) and Tydings (D. Md.). It will most likely go to a Senate vote this week.

The Austin amendment provides criminal penalties against "any person" violating War Manpower Commission regulations. The CIO is asking its removal on the Senate floor. The Tydings amendment continues deferment of essential farm workers and sets up penalties against them for leaving essential jobs.

The CIO, in testimony presented in President Murray's name by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president, USA-CIO, supported the original Wagner-Kilgore-Ferguson measure as a substitute for the May-Bailey bill.

It tightens up existing manpower and production orders and regulations to the point where they will do the job of ending manpower waste and other production delays.

WIRE your Senators urging them to Support the Wagner-Kilgore-Ferguson measure as originally presented, without the Austin amendment.

Coming Up-- Issues to Watch

PRICE CONTROL: Hearings on renewal of the Price Control Act are now set to begin Feb. 27 in the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, will probably last two weeks. OPA is asking for renewal of the act until Dec., 1946. It runs out June 30, 1945.

CIO will appear before the committee to oppose all crippling amendments, either to the act or in the form of riders and cuts in the appropriation to OPA for price control enforcement.

* * *

BRETTON WOODS: Hearings on the bill (S 540 and HR 2211) to carry out the Bretton Woods agreement for expanded world trade are tentatively set to start in both Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees after price control is disposed of.

The bill has been offered by Sens. Wagner (D. N. Y.) and Tobey (R. N. H.) and by Rep. Brent Spence (D. Ky.). Early passage without changes is being urged. Changes would stall operation of agreement for months, since they would have to go back to conference of 45 United Nations for approval.

("FIVE MILLION JOBS IN WORLD TRADE" is CIO's illustrated, 12-page pamphlet explaining Bretton Woods. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D. C. 100 for $4; 500 for $14.)

* * *

POLLTAX REPEAL: Discharge Petition No. 139 is now circulating in the House to get HR 7, the polltax repeal bill, out of the Rules Committee. 218 Representatives' signatures are needed to get it to debate and a vote. Write your Congressman now to sign DP 139, work and vote for the bill.

* * *

EQUAL RIGHTS: the mis-named "Equal Rights" Amendment, which would repeal existing laws protecting women workers, add nothing to women's rights, is up in the House again for about its 26th annual performance.

Hearings before a House Judiciary sub-Committee headed by Rep. Zebulon Weaver (D. N. C.) are set to start in about two weeks. Write your Congressman to oppose.

Writing to Congressmen

Letters to Congressmen are about the only means most of us have of reaching them while they're in Washington. Delegations and personal talks are the best means, but they're not always possible.

1. Don't use form letters, especially those clipped from newspapers. They get thrown away unread.

2. Learn enough about the issue to show your Congressman that you understand it—and to help him understand it, too. Congressmen are busy men, frequently snowed under with issues.

3. Know the number of the bill, the committee stage it's in, whether or not it's been reported out, etc. This also helps the Congressman as well as helping to get your point across.

4. Ask your Congressman for some definite action, such as a vote for or against, using his influence on committee members, signing a report, supporting or opposing an amendment, etc.

Money Troubles

Money troubles are looming up in both Senate and House to block needed planning and other projects for now and after V-E Day. In the House, Rep. Taber (R. NY) is trying to kill a $13,000,000 fund for an industrial census that will help us to know where and how much unemployment there may be after the war. In the Senate Appropriations Committee there's an attempt to cut out a $150,000,000 fund to enable states to survey and plan postwar projects that will provide many thousands of jobs.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Manpower; Wagner-Kilgore-Ferguson	Substitute for May-Bailey bill; tightens existing production orders; avoids labor draft. Austin amendment adds criminal penalties.	Reported out of Senate Military Affairs Committee.	Wire your Senators to support in place of May-Bailey bill; oppose Austin amendment.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice agency permanent; both bills are bi-partisan and companion measures.	HR 2232 out of House Labor Committee; in Rules Committee.	Warning: Urge opposition to Taft (R. O) FEPC bill (S 459), a phony with no enforcement powers.
McCarran-Sumners (S 7)	Pretends to "regulate" U. S. government agencies; actually would hamstring them by court review, other legal red tape.	Senate Judiciary Committee.	Urge your Senators to oppose.
Bretton Woods (S 540, HR 2211)	Ratifies Bretton Woods agreement to expand world trade; needed for 60 million job program.	Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees; hearings in about two weeks.	Urge support without any changes or amendments.
Hook (HR 1834)	Provides fair rules for Congressional investigating committee procedure; protects witnesses from un-American third-degree.	House Rules Committee.	Urge your Representative to support.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 10 82 March 5, 1945

20 Cents A Meal Isn't Gravy—WLB Please Note!

By PHILIP MURRAY

(CIO President Murray this week, in a hard-hitting speech, told a Philadelphia meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science about the urgent need to revise the Little Steel Formula. Speaking of the current need and of the postwar necessity of boosting wages now, Murray pointed to one typical steel family which spends only 20 cents per person for meals, earmarks 57 percent of its budget for food—and still, in the month of January, had to "go in the hole" $57.60 to get along. The extra money needed came out of savings. Murray warned that "huge wartime savings, unfortunately, are not in the hands of the people who make up the vast majority of the buying public" and hence should not be counted on as a reservoir of postwar purchasing power. Excerpts from his talk, based on the report of WLB public members, follow.)

RETAIL PRICES, it is conceded by the WLB report, have risen by 30 percent since Jan., 1941. The report also concedes that wages—wage rates, wage occupational schedules, basic wage-rate schedules—have risen only 20 percent in this same period ending in October, 1944. Now these basic wage-rates are the means by which workers are paid; they are the "price-list for work done by workers." They constitute the basic wage structure of industry, and are the only sound and tested measurement of what has happened to wages during the war.

PHILIP MURRAY

This was recognized by the WLB in July, 1942 when it promulgated the Little Steel Formula, as the foundation of this formula is the freezing of wage rates to 15 per cent above the Jan., 1941, level. At that time the rise in retail prices was measured at 15 percent. Since then, wage rates have advanced nationally, as just noted, to about 20 percent, but retail prices have risen to 30 percent.

According to the WLB public members' own figures, a 10 per cent disparity exists. It cries out for correction. But it is denied by the sleight-of-hand use of statistics. The report proposes to change the rules in the middle of the stream. It rejects the basis of the Little Steel Formula—wage rates—and proposes to adopt hourly straight-time earnings instead.

What is proposed is one of the greatest injustices I have ever seen emanating from a government agency. It is proposed that straight-time hourly earnings should be used instead of basic wage rates, and since these earnings have risen from 30 to 37 percent, it is claimed that no inequity exists as compared to the 30 percent rise in retail prices since January, 1941.

The unsoundness, the unfairness of this juggling of wage statistics is apparent when it is noted that straight-time earnings include such factors as greater incentive earnings due to greater production, upgrading, merit increases, and shift premiums.

These factors have no bearing in an accurate and fair measurement of wages because they are largely due to the war and have a limited life.

The report concedes that these factors, like greater incentive earnings, will largely disappear "when cut-backs occur," yet it proposes to rely upon

(Continued on Page 12)

London Lowdown

World Parley's Action—The Full Text

(See Page 4)

★ ★ ★

'Substandard'—The Textile Workers Know About It!

(See Pages 6 & 7)

FUNDAMENTAL LABOR UNITY in support of organizations helping to win the war is demonstrated by joint CIO-AFL efforts in behalf of the N. Y. State Red Cross drive. Discussing with Margaret Hammerstein the part that labor will play are, left to right: AFL Pres. Thomas A. Murray, CIO Pres. Louis Hollander and Walter L. Barber, Red Cross chairman.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Danger Signals Fly for V-E Day

CIO delegations visiting Congress on the wage issue have been getting a good reception from both Democrats and Republicans. Both sides are impressed with the need for doing something about wages for the sake of greater production now and for national unity and economic stability after V-E Day.

Meanwhile, reports busily circulating in Washington have GOP Congressional leaders more or less openly threatening "to take the lid off" Congress on V-E Day. The reports come from reliable sources. If they are correct, those leaders are playing with fire.

According to these reports, GOP leaders are planning to make an all-out attack on a series of agencies and measures secured by the FDR Administration as necessary steps in conducting the war. Targets for the raiding party will be such agencies as OPA, laws such as the War Powers Emergency Act, various Executive Orders and the like, with particular emphasis on appropriations to finance them.

It is said that the plans even include a campaign for cuts in Army and Navy appropriations, on the ground that the defeat of Germany will leave us with a much smaller war on our hands.

If these plans should go through, the country would be faced with tremendous difficulties, both in carrying on the full scale war needed to defeat Japan and in keeping the country on a stable economic plane after the final victory.

Washington, of course, is full of reports. This latest crop may or may not be true. The CIO has been working, through the wage delegations, to build a movement for greater national unity now and after V-E Day. The success of this movement will forestall such disruptive plans as the GOP leaders are said to have in mind.

World Security Up to Senate

President Roosevelt's report to Congress and the nation on his meeting with Stalin and Churchill at Yalta in the Crimea puts the issue of future peace and world security squarely up to the Senate—and to us.

"Speaking in all frankness," he said, "the question of whether it (the conference) is fruitful or not lies to a great extent in your hands.

"For unless you here in the halls of the American Congress—with the support of the American people—concur in the general conclusions reached in the place called Yalta and give them your active support, the meeting will not have produced lasting results.

"There can be no middle ground here. We shall have to take the responsibility for world collaboration, or we shall have to bear the responsibility for another world conflict."

The President could not have laid the issues on the line more clearly. The job of carrying out the decision for world security against future war must be clinched by Congress. Congress is elected with our votes and the votes of our friends and neighbors. Are we waiting for anything more?

Wallace Voted In By 56-32

The confirmation vote for Henry A. Wallace as Secretary of Commerce won through the Senate by 56 to 32 late this week, with only five Democrats voting against and 10 Republicans for him.

The vote was thus a fairly straight party line affair. Price of the support of many conservative Democrats was the splitting off of RFC lending powers from the Commerce Dept.

This compromise put Wallace over. With more popular support, and with more progressive strength in the Senate, it could have been avoided.

Behind the Hook-Rankin Brawl

This is not an "inside of the inside" story a la Drew Pearson on the recent House brawl Reps. Hook (D. Mich.) and Rankin (D. Miss.), but it is a brief story on what went before the fisticuffs and how well the Republicans know how to make Democrats like Rankin serve their purposes.

The fight was really started by Rep. Clare Hoffman (R. Mich.), friend of indicted fascists and close ally of everything rotten and reactionary in American life. Hoffman was blasting at the CIO and the PAC in his usual style, singling out the UAW and its legislative representative for special mud-slinging.

Hoffman's complaint was that a UAW delegation to which he had given Joseph Kamp's pamphlet "Join the CIO and Build a Soviet America" had criticized the use of taxpayers' money in spreading it around.

Kamp is the man whose fascist publications were named in a U. S. Grand Jury indictment "as carrying out this conspiracy . . . with officials of the Government of the German Reich and members of the Nazi party."

The pamphlet is a repetition of the usual red-baiting smear line on the CIO and anti-semitic attacks on the PAC, with liberal cribbing from Goebbels.

In his speech, Hoffman not only attacked the CIO but also the President, the war effort, Dumbarton Oaks and everything within reach. He revelled in anti-semitism for at least 15 minutes, unchecked. He attacked the U. S. Army, the Secretary of War and Justice Felix Frankfurter, Henry Wallace and the whole idea of cooperation among the United Nations, both now and after the war.

In brief, Hoffman did a job of putting over the Goebbels propaganda line that could not have been done better by Goebbels himself. The Hook-Rankin scuffle played right into Hoffman's hands, as Rankin knew it would do. It gave newspaper space to Hoffman's attacks on the CIO that they wouldn't have rated just by themselves.

Lately there have been some signs that the Democratic party leadership in the House has decided to enforce a little party discipline on some of the more extreme reactionaries, especially some of the polltaxers. One Democrat, for example, proposed an all-out attack on the CIO in a recent caucus and got slapped down by party leaders.

Maybe the majority leaders will crack down on people like Rankin, whose Hitler line is only paralleled by Hoffman on the Republican side. Both the Democratic party and the nation would benefit by it.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON CONGRESS

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Wagner-Kilgore-Ferguson, (S 36)	Substitute for May-Bailey bill; tightens existing production facilities; avoids labor draft.	Reported out of Senate Military Committee with Austin criminal penalty clause added.	Wire your Senators to support in place of May-Bailey; oppose Austin amendment.
Bretton Woods, (S 540, HR 2211)	Ratifies Bretton Woods agreement to expand world trade; needed for 60 million job program.	Hearings start in House Banking Committee Mar. 7, Rep. Brent Spence (D. Ky.) chairman. Senate hearings within two or three weeks.	Urge your Representative to support without changes.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Companion bills to make Fair Employment practice Committee permanent U. U. Agency.	HR 2232 waiting clearance in House Rules Committee; hearings in Senate Labor subcommittee (Sen. Chavez, D., N.M., chm.) set for Mar. 12.	Urge support; urge opposition to Sen. Taft's (R. O.) bill (S 459) — a phony with no enforcement powers.
Polltax repeal, (HR 7)	Repeals polltax that prevents eight million white and Negro citizens from voting.	Discharge Petition No. 1 now circulating; 218 Representatives' signatures needed to get HR 7 to a vote in House.	Urge your Representative to sign DP 1, work and vote for HR 7.
Missouri Valley project, (S 555)	Flood control, etc. for Missouri River Valley; part of postwar job plan.	Now in Senate Commerce Committee, where majority is hostile. Move on to transfer to Agriculture.	Write your Senators to support.

Coming Up--

BRETTON WOODS: Hearings start in the House Banking and Currency Committee (Rep. Brent Spence, D. Ky., chairman) March 7 on HR 2211, the House bill to ratify the Bretton Woods world trade agreement and pave the way for five million jobs in U. S. exports. Senate Banking Committee, (Sen. Wagner, D., N.Y., chairman), hearing are not set yet.

WRITE Rep. Spence and your own Congressman to support HR 2211 without changes. Any amendment put in by Congress will force the agreement back to conference of 45 United Nations signing it, will provoke new amendments and block entire agreement.

* * *

PRICE CONTROL: Hearings under way in Senate Banking and Currency Committee on renewal of price control act (SJ Res. 30). OPA head Chester Bowles has shown huge profit increases (256% for manufacturing alone) over 1936-39, from 170% to 360% for retailers, is asking renewal to Dec. 1946 without changes. CIO President Murray to testify next week.

* * *

WAR CRIMINALS: Rep. Cecil King (D. Calif.) has a resolution (H Con Res 30) in the House Committee on Foreign Affairs calling for punishment of Nazi and Japanese war criminals, including heads of state (Hitler and Hirohito), government officials, industrialists or plain civilians with no alibis that they were acting "under compulsion" allowed.

At the same time, the House Appropriations Committee has OK'd the modest $25,000 fund for the U. S. share of costs of the War Crimes Commission asked by the State Dept.

CIO policy passed at 1944 convention calls for punishment of fascist war criminals along lines of the King resolution.

* * *

FRANCO SPAIN: Rep. John M. Coffee (D. Wash.) has a resolution (H Res 100) in the House Foreign Affairs Committee calling for a diplomatic and commercial break with fascist Spain, on the grounds of preventing Nazi use of Spain as a hideout and a base for World War III. It also calls for U. S. arms to anti-Franco forces inside Spain.

CIO convention action at Chicago (1944) also called for opposition to Franco Spain.

* * *

WORLD SECURITY: The Dumbarton Oaks agreement for a world security organization will be coming up in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee some time in the late spring. A two-thirds vote is needed to ratify all treaties. Its not too early to begin asking your Senators for a commitment on Dumbarton Oaks as well as Bretton Woods.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

News Roundup

Profits Soar, Pay Up 5c
★ ★ ★
OK Anti-Bias Bill in N. Y.
★ ★ ★
State Legislatures a Threat

The Natl. War Labor Board tossed a potential nickel an hour increase to 4 million workers in substandard pay classifications this week at the same time that the Office of Price Administration was reporting to Congress that price controls have not stopped business from making plenty of profit.

The WLB order ups the "substandard" pay rate from 50 cents an hour to 55 cents. If workers and employers can voluntarily agree on the new level as a minimum pay scale, if WLB regional boards approve of the agreements, and if employers don't demand an increase in prices because of the increase in wages, maybe 4 million more lowly paid workers will get wage increases.

Most of the workers who may be affected by the order—their employers and the WLB willing—are in the textile, lumber, cottonseed oil, turpentine and fertilizer industries, and the service trades.

BIG PROFITS

The profit figures, as reported by OPA Administrator Bowles to the Senate banking and currency committee, showed:

Industrial profits for 1944 at $248 billion before taxes and $100 billion after taxes.

A 256 per cent increase in 1943 profits before taxes over the average from 1936-39, for all manufacturing.

Other increases included: petroleum and allied fields—113 per cent; autos 181 per cent; apparel 214 per cent; electrical machinery 416 per cent; textile mill products 503 per cent; rubber products 612 per cent; food products 191 per cent; hardware stores 360 per cent; furniture stores 170 per cent; chains 250 per cent; and department and specialty stores 1046 per cent.

CIO DELEGATIONS

Meanwhile, CIO delegations from Massachusetts, Vermont and Connecticut poured into Washington to talk to their Congressmen and ask them to plug for an upward revision of the Little Steel formula.

CIO representatives presented testimony in the form of pay vouchers showing that their wages have not kept pace with rising prices, and urged the Congressmen to recommend that Economic Stabilizer Vinson lift the restriction he has imposed on the WLB—that the OPA must report that no price increases will result from any proposed wage increases before the latter are put into effect.

In New York City, the CIO Council called a city-wide shop stewards' conference to deal with the problem created by refusal of the WLB public members to recommend a change in the Steel formula.

★ ★ ★

The anti-union hand of the Christian American Assn. was seen in three more state legislatures this week — Colorado, Minnesota and Texas. All sections of the labor movement have joined in opposition to measures introduced in these states limiting the rights of unions.

In Minnesota, a bill has been introduced in both houses which would outlaw secondary boycotts, empower labor conciliators to initiate prosecution of union members on mere suspicion and make the state bureau of criminal apprehension an enforcement agency despite existing laws which forbid use of the bureau in industrial disputes.

In Colorado, the State Senate approved a bill which proponents hope will take the place of sections of the so-called "labor peace act," which recently were declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court.

The new legislation would outlaw the union shop, would allow employers complete freedom to intimidate workers, would forbid use of union funds for political purposes, and would require the registration of unions.

In Texas, home state of the Christian American crowd, a House committee approved a "right to work" amendment, opposed by labor and supported by the American Veterans of World War II (see other story, this page).

(Next week The CIO NEWS will publish a complete roundup of the progress of anti-labor legislation pending in state legislatures. Watch for it.)

★ ★ ★

A strong bill forbidding discrimination in employment was passed this week by the N. Y. State Assembly, with the Senate expected to OK it shortly. A favorable vote of 109 to 32 was evidence of the strength of labor and other progressive forces backing the legislation. The N. Y. CIO was given credit as the foremost supporter of the bill.

The bill would set up a five-man commission, charged with the duty of wiping out job discrimination on grounds of race, creed, color, religion or national origin among most employers of six or more persons.

The Commission's powers would be like those of the State Labor Relations Board, with orders enforceable in the courts. Punishment for violators of Commission orders would range up to a $500 fine or a year in jail or both.

CIO forces backing the bill were led by State CIO Pres. Louis Hollander.

CIO Executive Board Meeting

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called a special meeting of the CIO Executive Board for March 10, 11 and 12 at the Hotel Commodore, New York City.

High on the agenda will be the CIO's fight to break the Little Steel Formula and reports on the World Labor Congress from CIO delegates.

Phoney 'Vet Leader' Starts Typewriter War on CIO

A vicious attack on the CIO and PAC by LaMar Bailey, national first vice-commander of the American Veterans of World War II (Amvets), this week brought repudiation from Elmo Keel, national commander of the organization, and a counterattack from Charles G. Bolte, chairman of the liberal American Veterans Committee, whose members are likewise ex-servicemen of this war.

In an apparent bid for support from fascist-minded financial interests Bailey issued his statement at Dallas, Texas — home state of the anti-union Christian American Assn.

Calling upon "all American-minded people" to furnish money for a "crusade" against CIO and PAC, Bailey said that veterans would provide the numbers to carry on the fight against labor, according to a United Press dispatch.

Following a veterans' meeting in Louisiana, National Commander Keel of Amvets lashed back at his subordinate officer, saying that the organization is not opposed to labor, and that Bailey was only expressing his personal views.

Even more vigorous denunciation of Bailey came from Chairman Bolte of the American Veterans Committee in New York City, who declared:

"The statement attributed to Amvets Vice-Commander La Mar Bailey is difficult to comprehend. Anybody who took the trouble to look up the facts would know that it is nonsense to say CIO and PAC represent an 'un-American political party threatening the overthrow of the Constitution of the U. S. for which we are fighting.'

"Apparently Amvets doesn't consider millions of CIO members in the armed forces are Americans. Obviously Amvets is determined to get members from those in the armed forces who have been misinformed about labor's magnificent contribution to the war effort and is equally determined to get money from those civilans who see in the returning veterans a useful club with which to smash the labor unions."

Do You Know That: Woody Guthrie, great folk singer, exclusive on Asch records, came from the Dust Bowl and is now a merchant seaman.

And Do You Know That: Asch records feature Mountain Songs, Cowboy Songs, Square Dances (with mandolins, guitars, banjos), Jazz, Boogie Woogie, Blues, popular jazz favorites.

Write for Catalogue to

STINSON TRADING CORP.

27 Union Sq. West, New York 3, N. Y.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PLACE YOUR FAITH IN THE

Famous Since Broadcasting Began!

FADA Radio OF THE FUTURE

FADA RADIO AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how

In producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.

20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

UNION BUYER'S GUIDE

BUTTONS AND BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY

INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches

Also Specializing In

Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick
1725-41 W. North Ave. 7815
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 350 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

For World Labor Unity

Full text of the unanimous "Call to All Peoples" issued February 22 by the World Trade Union Conference in London—a message from representatives of more than 50 million workers in the anti-Axis nations.

(Transmitted by Allied Labor News)

From the World Trade Union Conference, which has concluded its immediate tasks in London, we address this message to the peoples of all lands who are of one mind in their hope and desire that a new world shall arise from the devastation and ruin wrought by the war. The Second World War has involved all nations in the gravest crisis of human history. In their long and terrible struggle against the aggressor powers, the United Nations have fought for freedom and their own way of life.

They have successfully withstood the most dangerous assault ever made upon the foundations of democracy and free citizenship. They have resisted the most determined attempt ever made to lead mankind back into servitude and to impose upon the free nations a political system, an economic order and an ideology which, had they achieved their purposes, would have given domination over all free peoples into the hands of those who have claimed by their armed might to exercise the rule of a self-styled "superior race," or to fulfill a so-called "historic destiny."

Our World Trade Union Conference brought together from the ends of the earth accredited representatives of organized millions who steadfastly opposed this fascit tyranny, and at great cost have broken the fascist aggression.

We came together in our World Conference from many lands. We represented all races, colors and creeds. We spoke to one another in different languages. But we were united upon the objectives which we, as workers, share with all freedom-loving peoples.

To Aid All Peoples

Our deliberations at the World Conference enable us to declare, with emphasis and without reservation, that the Trade Union Movement of the world is resolved to work with all like-minded peoples to achieve a complete and uncompromising victory over the fascist powers that sought to encompass the destruction of freedom and democracy; to establish a stable and enduring peace, and to promote in the economic sphere the international collaboration which will permit the rich resources of the earth to be utilized for the benefit of all its peoples, providing full employment, rising standards of living and social security to the men and women of all nations.

To achieve these ennobling aims and purposes, our World Conference pledged the support of the organized millions we represent to the heroic armed forces of the United Nations in the battles still to be fought to secure full and final victory.

The Soviet blows from the east, reinforced by the Anglo-American blows from the west, and the liberating armies of France, Romania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, must become the decisive and speedy offensive which wrests unconditional surrender from the German state and ends the war against Germany.

In the Far East, final victory over Japan is also assured by the countries at war against her. These countries will prosecute their offensive with the same vigor until unconditional surrender is wrested from her as well.

In furtherance of the inflexible purpose of the United Nations to bring the war against fascism to a triumphant conclusion, we call upon the organized workers represented at our conference to spare no effort to supply the needs of the armed forces, confident that in their loyalty to the principles of freedom and democracy which have sustained them in all forms of war service, they will continue to make every necessary sacrifice to win the final victory which will bring permanent peace.

To speed this day of victory, our World Conference has called for all necessary assistance required to raise and fully equip armed forces in the liberated countries, and particularly France and Italy, so that they too may have the means to participate fully in waging war.

Urge Six Freedoms

Our conference called also upon the peoples of the countries at war with Japan to give maximum assistance in the form of arms and munitions to the heroic Chinese people in furtherance of their struggle against the Japanese invader.

We call for the application of policies in liberated countries and territories which will mobilize the full support of their people in the war effort. These policies must include: a) The immediate establishment of the freedom of speech, press, assembly, religion, political association and the right to organize labor unions; b) the formation of governments which have the support of the people, and, c) the provision of foodstuffs, supplies and raw materials to meet the needs of the people and thus enable the full utilization of the manpower and productive facilities in these areas.

Disarm Germany

Our conference was in unanimous agreement with the declared resolve of the three Allied powers at the Crimea Conference to destroy German militarism and Nazism and to take all necessary measures to bring all war criminals and those guilty of Nazi atrocities to justice and stern punishment; to disarm Germany and disband all her armed forces; to break up for all time the German General Staff; to eliminate or destroy all German military equipment, and to bring under Allied control all German industry that can be used for war purposes.

Our conference likewise affirmed its agreement with the decision of the Crimea Conference to set up machinery to secure full compensation from Germany for the damage it has caused to the Allied countries, with priority to those that have suffered most.

The Trade Union Movements of those nations at war with Japan affirmed their view that the foregoing principles must likewise be applied to Japan and in particular that the Mikado must be held responsible for the acts of Japanese militarism, that the Japanese Empire shall be replaced by a democratic regime and that the Cairo Declaration shall be rigidly applied with regard to the territories which Japan has seized in the course of her campaign of aggression.

Oppose Franco

Our World Conference placed on record its profound conviction that the freedom-loving peoples of the earth should give their support and countenance only to those governments, political parties and national institutions which are pledged to wage war against fascism in all its forms, until it is rooted out of the life of all countries.

Our World Conference declared its view that it is the duty of the governments of the United Nations, whose solidarity in war and peace provides the guarantee that a new system of order and law will be established throughout the world, to deny recognition to states whose political and economic system, as in Franco-Spain and the Argentine, are opposed to the principles for which the United Nations have made such grievous sacrifices and sustained such heavy burdens.

Our World Conference endorsed the Dumbarton Oaks plan for an effective international organization to prevent aggression, maintain security and enforce peace. Only under such a plan can the sovereign rights and self-government of peoples who have seen their democratic institutions ruthlessly uprooted be safeguarded.

Our World Conference wholeheartedly welcomed the declared purpose of the Allied governments to give effect to the principles of the Atlantic Charter and jointly to assist the peoples in every liberated country to create the conditions in which stable and representative government, resting upon the free consent of the people, can come into existence.

Our World Conference, taking account of the economic and social problems that will confront all the nations when the war is won, considered the measures that must be taken to avert a postwar economic crisis which would place the world's peace again in jeopardy.

The conference therefore adopted a constructive program for world cooperation to secure the industrial development of the undeveloped countries, for full utilization of the material resources of every nation with an effective organization of human labor whereby economic production will be carried on at maximum capacity, and full employment and rising standards of living made possible in all lands.

Our World Conference emphasized the special responsibility of governments to all the men and women in the armed forces who have spared neither their strength nor their lives in the struggle to achieve victory. The conference called for the provision of free medical aid and adequate sickness benefits for disabled ex-servicemen and their dependents for the whole period of their disablement, as well as free training to qualify them for industrial re-employment; with life benefits for the permanently disabled which will ensure a normal life for them and their families.

Ask End of Imperialism

Our World Conference likewise considers it necessary to bring to an end the system of colonies, dependencies and subject countries as spheres of economic exploitation, and to facilitate immediately the development of free trade unions in these countries.

Our World Conference was unanimous also in resolving to fight for the establishment and effective implementation in all the countries of the world, including colonial and semi-colonial countries, of a system of labor legislation to protect the worker in all trades and occupations.

Freedom of association, with the fundamental collective rights which the people are entitled to exercise, and the opportunity for the trade unions and workers' organizations to develop freely and effectively participate in the shaping and direction of the economic policies of their respective countries, can be secured only in this way.

For World Unity

Upon the all-important task of promoting the organic unity of the International Trade Union Movement, our World Conference has taken decisive action. It unanimously resolved to create a World Trade Union organization including all the trade unions of free countries on a basis of equality, regardless of race, creed or political faith, excluding none and relegating none to second place.

We are calling into existence as speedily as practical steps can be taken a powerful international organ which unites all, and which can speak with authority in support of our declared objectives.

We established a World Trade Union Conference Committee of 45 members representing all groups of delegates and with headquarters in Paris. This committee will reconvene the World Conference in September, 1945, to adopt a constitution and set up the permanent organization. Meanwhile, it will act as the spokesman of the conference for the implementation of its decisions.

Through it the International Trade Union Movement will make its claim to a share in determining all questions of the peace and postwar settlements and for representation at the peace conferences and all international commissions and agencies concerned with the peace settlement in all its phases, beginning with the San Francisco Conference in April.

To Meet The Issues

Our World Conference made this claim in the conviction that the people of the United Nations have a right to be heard in the making of the peace. Our claim is founded upon the conviction of the Trade Unions especially that they have a constructive contribution to make in the rebuilding of the world.

By a continuation of the close collaboration and decisive action by which the governments and peoples of the United Nations have brought victory within their reach, our World Conference believes the new and onerous responsibilities which the future will bring can be adequately met and all difficulties successfully overcome.

The World Trade Union Conference pays tribute to all those who have fallen in defense of the cause of liberty represented by the struggle against fascism. It renders homage to the glorious armies of the United Nations, to their guerilla fighters, to their resistance movements and to the members of their civilian defense.

Organized labor has made its full contribution both in the field of the armed struggle and in that of production by creating and sustaining the gigantic forces which have already brought fascism to its knees and will tomorrow destroy it completely and forever.

Our historic conference, meeting in the midst of the armed struggle still raging, is itself a demonstration of the unity of the working class and evidence of the moral victory of the United Nations over the evil forces of fascism.

A People's Peace

Organized labor, with so great a part in winning the war, cannot leave to others—however well-intentioned they may be—the sole responsibility of making the peace. The peace will be a good peace, an enduring peace, a peace worthy of the sacrifices by which it has been won, only if it reflects the deep resolve of the free peoples, their interests, their desires and their needs.

We therefore send forth from our World Conference this appeal to all workers of the world, and to all men and women of good will to consecrate to the building of a better world the service and sacrifice they have given to the winning of the war.

London Delegates In Action

BIG THREE: Vasili Kuznetsov, head of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR; George Isaacs, British Trades Union Congress; and R. J. Thomas, head of the CIO delegation, talk things over at the London World Trade Union Conference. All three were co-chairmen of the meeting.

LATIN-AMERICAN good neighbors were led at the world trade union parley by Lombardo Toledano (lighting pipe), head of the Confederation of Latin-American Workers (CTAL), and Alejandro Carillo, of the Mexican CTM delegation.

KEY UNIT at the London meeting was the Standing Order Committee, shown above, whose chairman was Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald (in light suit) of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

GI VISITORS were numerous at the labor meeting. Shown above is Cpl. Rudolph Lapp, CIO State, County & Municipal Workers, chatting with CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood (left), Joseph Curran (behind Haywood) and Sherman H. Dalrymple.

WOMEN workers were represented at the London conference by these delegates from the USSR.

AFRICAN UNIONS, growing slowly in the great continent, were represented by M. A. Tokunboh (left) and T. A. Bankole, delegates from Nigeria.

1 THE COTTON TEXTILE WORKERS live in the two great depressed areas of America. Four out of five of them live and work in the South, the rest live in the "have-seen-better-days" New England manufacturing towns. These workers are not to be found in the big metropolitan centers of these regions, but in the "back country" or in smaller cities which tend to be self-contained communities where the textile mills are the only important industrial enterprise, i.e. "company towns."

SUBSTANDARD: The Story Of T

2 COTTON-TEXTILES GO TO WAR: The cotton goods industry in peacetime employs more persons than either automobiles or steel, which rank second and third. In wartime, cotton textiles is basic, and cotton textile workers are ranked essential along with planebuilders and shipbuilders. Their product—yarn and fabric—is what makes uniforms, bandages, ammunition bags, tire fabric, hospital sheets, tents, camouflage nets, work clothes, and the numerous other essentials of the war and home fronts. But the wages of the cotton textile worker remain substandard, "at the very bottom of the national economy."

The Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, has contracts covering half a million workers. Of these 160,000 are in the cotton textile industry. These include the great bulk of those in the North, where tradition of unionism existed for generations, but only a minor percentage of the Southern workers. The union's big problem of the immediate future is to organize the South. Its long-range program is to place a floor of $2500 annual income under every textile worker's family. That's a goal for all of America!

SOURCE: TWUA Research Department, and Bureau of Labor statistics.

LAST w a wa ton textil
of the T

The i proval of will not b will raise from 50 week for of five ce proposed

When
of the wo problem is the pr increase claring th ard wage erable hig

As a also touch as knit g that is a

The c when the will still publicized

IN peac
first in woof and ton textil
with shi textile wo hourly ea

In an these "ha textile w eraged 5

lower rat
as essent builders.
steel mi workers

In 194
average were $15 weekly e combined still bear
By Decem workers
all manu
In fact, i are earni exact figu

THE T befor series of a Southe mill told

Arth
Highlan makes wife an eggs for and pot hardly per."

While drell-Ale earned $ northern off than his own hogs; oth

HOW three ro
Three and the eek the Natl. War Labor Board proposed a increase for approximately 100,000 cot- e and rayon weaving workers, members xtile Workers Union, CIO.

hcrease, which is conditioned upon ap- the Office of Economic Stabilization and e effective until Fred M. Vinson approves, cotton-rayon workers' minimum wages o 55 cents an hour, or from $20 to $22 a a 40-hour week. A general wage increase nts an hour, plus other benefits, are also by the Board.

the increase actually reaches the pockets rkers, it will merely touch the core of the of the entire cotton-rayon industry, which oblem of substandards. In proposing the the WLB itself recognized this fact, de- at the complete elimination of substand- s in this industry would require a consid- gher wage than the Board was proposing.

matter of fact, the substandard problem nes certain sections of other textiles, such oods, seamless hosiery, and others. But nother story.

ondition of cotton-rayon workers, even y finally benefit by the WLB's proposal, be unenviable and far below the greatly "American standard of living."

etime, the cotton goods industry ranks importance. In wartime, it is the very warp of the war and home fronts. Cot- e workers are considered essential along obuilders and planebuilders. Yet cotton orkers today average $24.82 a week. Their rnings are 59.4c.

excellent pamphlet, pleading the case of lf a million forgotten people," the cotton orkers say: "In December, 1943, we av- 9.4c an hour. Out of 135 manufacturing industries surveyed by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, only three — work- shirts, handkerchiefs, and cotton seed—had es. Remember, these workers were ranked ial, along with shipbuilders and plane- Shipbuilders were getting $1.32 an hour; ls $1.15; meat packing 92c; millinery 87c.

extile

40, when the present war boom began the weekly earnings of cotton textile workers 18. During this same period the average arnings for all manufacturing industries were $25.51. The cotton textile worker is ing the burden of a depressed industry. nber, 1943, the earnings of both these had risen: the textile workers to $24.87; facturing industries together to $44.68. n the south today, cotton textile workers ng only slightly more than in 1920. The ures: 1920—$22.56; 1943—$23.16.

extile Workers Union brought witnesses e the War Labor Board, which had set a regional hearings. Two workers, one from rn mill, another from a New England of their own struggles to make ends meet.

ur Clyde Hill, a drawing hand at the d Cotton Mills in High Point, N. C., $26.60 a week on which he supports a d three children. He does eat bacon and breakfast; sandwiches for lunch, "beans atoes, and sometimes a little meat, but ever, and lettuce and tomatoes for sup-

Warren C. West, an oiler at the Pow- kander mill in Danielson, Conn. who 1273 last year at the mill, testified at the hearings that he was only slightly better the southerner, because he grew most of vegetables and bought and raised two herwise he could never have afforded meat.

NG: The North Carolina Hills live in a m house with a toilet in the backyard. ats, one in each room are in the house, whole family sleeps in one bedroom.

The Connecticut Wests built their own home on land given them by Mr. West's grandmother. He was mason, carpenter, and farmer. All of which abilities he used to supplement his mill wages.

CLOTHING: In both cases, the only clothing they had was on their backs, and bought "second handed." Arthur Hill of North Carolina wept on the witness stand as he described his family's wardrobe. "My wife—she doesn't have any clothing," he said. Last year, he spent $40 on clothes for the family—$7 on himself. His kids have one pair of shoes apiece. He owns one suit. "Got it about two years ago, second-handed off a boy. I bought a second-handed overcoat off that boy, too."

But New England's West was no better off. He has one suit, the one he wore at the hearings. He has a four-year-old winter overcoat and a topcoat somebody gave him five years ago. The only clothes he bought last year were work clothes.

DEBTS: Arthur Hill owes about $90, mostly to relatives.

Warren C. West spent all of $1365 "to keep himself and his family." The $102 deficit between what he spent and his earnings at the mill, he made up by working at odd jobs on his day off.

This is what it means to subsist on substandard wages.

IN the depths of the depression, the Works Progress Administration estimated an emergency subsistance level, on which a family could just get along, "and not in any way an American standard of living," they hastened to explain. This emergency level was designed to meet the barest of essentials during an emergency period. The income for maintaining such an existence for a family was declared to be $33.70 a week. The cotton textile workers are today $9.30 below this emergency level.

On April 29, 1944, a special Senate Subcommittee on Wartime Health and Education reported to the nation that "Some 20,000,000 Americans have not enjoyed rises in incomes commensurate with the most conservative estimate of the cost of living increase."

One of the recommendations of this committee was that: "The War Labor Board cease applying the Little Steel Formula to substandard wages and salaries . . . The Committee suggests the removal of all controls from incomes of $200 or less per month for heads of families . . ."

The committee defined a "substandard family income as anything less than $50 a week."

The cotton textile workers average only half of that a week.

WHEN the Textile Workers Union of America petitioned the War Labor Board to increase the wages of the cotton textile workers, it was proposing the one solution to the manpower deficit in cotton textiles. Cotton textile workers were leaving the sick cotton industry for the more remunerative war industries.

Justice for the cotton textile workers is long overdue. The cotton textile industry is one of the oldest in America. Its sins are also very old. The Union expresses it strongly: "From the standpoint of the workers, it is a demand for a long overdue act of economic justice. From the standpoint of the nation as a whole, it is a proposal to make a start, at least on cleaning up a social and economic slum area which for many years has been a drag and a drain on the whole national economy."

The War Labor Board hasn't even attempted to meet this problem with its five cent increase.

The job of genuine stabilization, and an upward revision of the little steel formula is still a Number One item on labor's agenda. The elimination of substandards is part of that job.

3 THE WORK OF THE cotton textile worker is bewilderingly varied. There are spinners, rovers, slashers, doffers, slubber tenders, weavers, loomfixers, loop cutters, oilers, sweepers, bleachers, dyers, tie-in girls, and myriad other meaningly named jobs.

4 HALF OF THE COTTON textile workers are women. The nationality pattern is as varied as the region in which they work. In New England the French-Canadians are most numerous, filling the bulk of the jobs, with Yankees and Scotch-English holding down the more skilled jobs, by virtue of having gotten in on the ground floor in the last century when cotton was THE industry of New England. However, there are Poles in Massachusetts and Connecticut; Portuguese in New Bedford and Fall River; Italians in Utica, N. Y., and throughout Rhode Island. In the South they are old-line Americans from the hill districts of the Southeast Piedmont.

5 BASICALLY, THE COTTON TEXTILE workers, do two things today as they have for two thousand years. They spin the cotton fibres into thread, and they weave the thread into cloth.

The Act's a Flop!

Wage Raises And Inflation

The chief argument of opponents of revising the Little Steel formula is that the wage increases needed to adjust wage rates to present living costs would have inflationary effects.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray completely disposed of this argument in his recent speech before the American Academy of Political and Social Science in Philadelphia, with a wealth of statistical evidence showing that such wage increases can be paid out of high war profits, without any need for price increases and without even too seriously reducing the profit level.

Further evidence comes from figures presented by OPA Administrator Bowles to the Senate Banking Committee. These show a 256% increase in manufacturing profits in 1943 over the level of 1936-39.

Even after taxes, he said, corporate profits have increased from $4 billion in 1934 and $4.8 billion in 1940 to $9.9 billion in 1943 and $10 billion in 1944.

Even the "fringe" wage increases granted by the War Labor Board to the CIO Textile and Packinghouse Workers are now being held up under the Vinson "freeze" order, on the ground they might cause some price increases.

But why should they in the cotton textiles, where Bowles reports profits have actually increased "more than five times their adjusted peacetime average, and about eleven times the actual 1936-39 average"?

And why should they in meat packing, where a study by Chairman Donald Montgomery of the CIO Cost of Living Committee shows that the ratio of profit to investment is more than six times higher than before the war?

Eight major meat packing firms have increased their profits from an annual average of $22,382,000 in 1935-39 to $153,193,000 in 1944, according to Montgomery, "while the dollar value of sales rose to little more than twice the prewar level." In the same period the price of meat has risen about 18%.

To sum up, we cannot do better than quote Murray's conclusion, based on official government figures:

"Present profit margins—indicative of a wide spread between costs and prices—are fully adequate to absorb all or practically all of a wage increase of the magnitude requested in the various specific CIO cases before the War Labor Board.

"An increase of 20% in the aggregate private non-agricultural wage and salary bill, even if all taken away from profits, would still leave profits before taxes approximately at the level of 1940."

TIME LOST: "In all fairness it should be said that if every man engaged in war work were given 30 seconds a day to blow his nose, more time would be lost to the war effort in one year than has been lost through strikes in any war year."—Late Judge Charles M. Hay of War Manpower Commission.

WHO'S WORTHLESS? Labor-baiting Sen. Bilbo (polltaxer, Miss.) revealed his sense of values in asking funds for a new and fancy House-Senate building, when he said: "If the government is willing to put up houses for worthless slum dwellers, it ought to be willing to loan money to take care of Congress."

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE statistical adventures of the War Labor Board public members are suggestive of the financial career of Barnaby's friend, Mr. O'Malley, in the comic strip.

Mr. O'Malley entered the field of high finance with a fund of three million dollars—in the form of an IOU won in a crap game from an invisible pixy.

The WLB public members are banking on the myth of "high war wages" and disappearing living costs to carry the country through the reconversion period when temporary additions to basic wage rates will be no more.

★ ★ ★

They defend the Little Steel formula, under which wage rates are held to 15% above January, 1941, by claiming at one and the same time that they have successfully enforced it and that "adjusted straight-time hourly earnings" have increased by 36.7%.

If this sounds pixylated, and you wonder how they can both have their cake and eat it—can freeze wages and yet say wages have risen far beyond the freezing point—the public members will explain that their 36.7% figure includes such factors as greater incentive earnings due to greater production, upgrading, merit increases and shift premiums.

For instance, you and your buddy work on a job for which the wage rates are frozen. But your buddy gets upgraded to a job paying 10c more. That's what the WLB public members would call an average increase in adjusted hourly earnings of 5c for you two.

So wages have been frozen and yet you've had an "adjusted" increase of 5c an hour! Isn't it wonderful? Just think what an "adjusted" increase you would have if your buddy were promoted to superintendent!

★ ★ ★

You may find it hard to make ends meet, with the wage rates for your job up only 15%, while living costs have risen 45%.

But don't worry. The WLB public members have a statistical wand to make the wolf disappear from your door—to their satisfaction, if not to yours.

They've dug up some figure-conjurors who say living costs have gone up only 30%, not 45%—all the evidence of your own household budget to the contrary notwithstanding.

So, they say, your "adjusted" earnings have gone up 36.7% (even if your wage rates are frozen at 15% and some other fellow got the "adjustments"), and living costs have gone up only 30%—which makes you able to buy more groceries than you could before, even if you can't!

★ ★ ★

But maybe you're one of those who have gotten most of the "adjustments." Maybe you earn more because you're producing a lot more, because you've been upgraded, because you've been put on a night shift that pays more, and because you're working a lot of overtime.

Of course, tax, bond and other deductions eat deep into your increased earnings. But anyhow you're managing to get by, despite high living costs.

"Ah-hah," say the WLB public members, "you're doing fine, so there's no need for any change in the Little Steel formula, even though cut-backs are just around the corner."

★ ★ ★

What happens to all this superstructure above basic wage rates once cutbacks and reconversion get under way?

The overtime pay on which you may be getting by today is cut off, with reduced working hours as war orders end. The higher paying shift may be discontinued, and if you have been upgraded during the war, you can also find yourself demoted by a reverse trend after the war.

Under these circumstances, you and millions of others will depend solely on the basic wage rates which the WLB public members are now so studiously trying to ignore.

Yet they themselves admit that "a large part of the increase in adjusted straight-time hourly earnings above the increases in wage-rate schedules probably will be eliminated when cutbacks occur and when the labor supply becomes adequate for industrial needs."

The OPA calculates a $17 billion annual loss in wage earnings after V-E Day, for such reasons—a loss that will also affect farmers, professionals, businessmen and all others who depend on the workers' purchasing power.

In face of this danger to our whole economy, the WLB public members recommend no change in the Little Steel formula either to remove present inequities or as a step "toward solution of the problems of reconversion." The public interest demands reversal of this recommendation.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 March 5, 1945 No. 10

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

On February 9, through the OWI London-French Radio Section, London, England, the writer broadcast the following message:

"We are happy to again associate with our French trade unionists through this World Trade Union Conference. I had the pleasure in 1938 of welcoming to the United States the distinguished leader and associate, Brother Jouhaux. I also saw him depart from our shores and return to his beloved France, and the people he serves so well.

"The CIO welcomes the closest kind of cooperation between the French trade unions and our movement. We deem it essential to the restoration of France and its people and to the making of further progress for the workers of both our countries and to the extension of the democratic way of life and preservation of the same throughout the universe.

"The trade union movement is the bulwark of democracy and international peace. The French trade union movement has played a vital role in the past and we expect it to do so in the future."

Election Victories

USA District Director Pete Mosele, New York City, reports: Office workers, Burnham Boiler Corp., Irvington, N. Y., CIO 33, no union 7. Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington, N. Y., CIO 32, no union 1. Both groups are in one unit.

CIO Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone, Connecticut, reports: Charles Parker Co., Meriden, Conn., UERMWA-CIO 350, no union 28. Farrel Birmingham plant, Ansonia and Derby, Conn., USA-CIO 699, no union 353.

Frank Bonacci, CIO Reg. Dir., Utah, advises: American Can Co., Ogden, Utah, USA-CIO 81, no union 3. Castle Peak-Ravin Mining Co., Roosevelt, Utah, CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers 38, no union 4.

Thos. Gallagher, Org. Dir., Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, reports following election victories: Kemp Engineering Co., E. Boston, Mass., CIO won 56% of the votes; Double Protection Awning Co., Miami, Fla., CIO won over no union 89% of the votes; Dravo Corp., Neville Island, Pa., CIO won 90% of the votes over no union.

At Beth-East Boston Yard, E. Boston, Mass., CIO won 88% of the votes. At Todd Corp. plant, New York City, CIO won 94% of the votes over no union. At Todd-Johnson Shipbuilding Co., New Orleans, La., CIO won by 95% over no union, and at General Ship Co., E. Boston, Mass. (always in the past an AFL yard), CIO won over the AFL by 54%.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank J. Bender, Maryland, reports: Chambersburg Engineering Co.'s plant, Chambersburg, Pa., UAW-CIO 242, no union 111. Some two years ago we lost this election and this year, through the fine efforts of CIO Field Rep. Robert J. Brylke, we came through with this fine victory.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Claiborne Veneer Co., Vicksburg, Miss., CIO 33, no union 11; Marsh Logging Co., Eugene, Ore., CIO 22, AFL 1, no union 6.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. A. R. Hardesty, Dallas, Tex., advises: Bewley Mills, Fort Worth, Tex., CIO 100, against 78; Dallas Coffin Co., Dallas, Tex., CIO 56, against 6.

Sub. Reg. Dir. G. Geo. DeNucci, Columbus, Ohio, reports: Moores & Ross (Borden), Columbus, Ohio (drivers), CIO 51, against 39; (plant men) CIO 121, Independent 82. Intl. Reps. George Worrell and Al Carson were in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig, Philadelphia, reports: Ajax Electric Co., Phila., CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers 25, against 7; Stewardstown Furniture Co., Stewardstown, Pa., CIO Furniture Workers 64, against 20.

Joseph M. Walsh, CIO Reg. Dir., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., reports (production and maintenance employes): Luzerne County Gas & Electric Corp., UWOC-CIO 84, Independent 51.

Contracts Signed

CIO's FAECT announced the signing of a collective bargaining agreement between the Marine Draftsmen's Assn. at Cox & Stevens, CIO affiliate, and Cox & Stevens, nationally renowned marine designers and engineers, covering engineers, drafting room technicians and technical employes at this concern.

Contract terms include retroactive pay award, minimum pay adjustments, seniority clauses, sick leave and holidays. One feature of the agreement is a system of automatic progressions to the midpoint of the salary range with maximums to be achieved by increases based on merit. Merit reviews are to take place semi-annually, upgrading and promotion reviews are to take place quarterly.

CIO Reg. Dir. E. B. Pugh, Virginia, reports (orderlies, attendants, maids and janitors): University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville, Va., a state institution, SCMWA-CIO (card cross-check), resulted in recognition of CIO as bargaining agent. This is the first local of state employes which we hope is the forerunner of many other locals of state employes throughout Virginia.

Brother Pugh, CIO Rep. Ted duCuennois and a committee of the local union will meet in negotiations with Dr. C. S. Lentz, hospital administrator, on the proposed contract.

The Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union have concluded a two-year collective contract, embodying all the orders and recommendations of the NWLB with the Greater New York Retail Furriers Assn., it was announced by Joint Council Manager Irving Potash. This agreement with the retailers covers 250 fur manufacturing-retail establishments and provides, among other things, arbitration throughout life of the agreement of discharges alleged to be without just cause, vacation with pay and health insurance.

The Midwest District IFLWU-CIO scored one of its greatest organization victories when they won the election at Chicago Rawhid plant by a vote of 573 as against 249 for no union and 36 for AFL. This campaign was conducted by Reg. Dir. Abe Feinglass and Organizers Frank Mierklewicz and Robert Herbin.

CIO World Rally Set For Mar. 12

CIO's first-hand report to the people on the London World Labor Congress will be given by President Murray and delegates at a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden, New York, March 12.

The meeting will also mark CIO's endorsement of the Crimea conference and other world security plans, it was announced.

CIO speakers, fresh from London, will include R. J. Thomas, who headed the delegation and Sidney Hillman, who presented the CIO plan for a new world labor organization that was accepted by the meeting.

Glass Union Re-elects

Top officials of the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Workers have been re-elected for another term, the union announced this week. These include Pres. Joseph Froesch, Sec.-Treas. Lewis McCracken and 1st Vice-Pres. Leland Beard.

Ralph Reiser, president of the Federation's District 4, was elected 2nd vice-president and director of organizing, an office authorized at the Federation's convention last summer. He has been serving in this capacity since his appointment by the executive board last November.

Five district presidents who serve as members of the international executive board were also up for election. Three were re-elected — Burl Phares of Charleston, W. Va. Dist. 2; Ed McVann, East Sparta, Ohio, Dist. 3; and Herman Leiner, Buffalo, N. Y., Dist. 5.

Ward Case Still Stalled

The courts this week were still marking time on the Montgomery Ward case, following the recent decision of Chicago Federal District Court Judge Philip L. Sullivan that government seizure of Ward property was illegal. The CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes again pointed to CIO President Murray's position, in a previously issued statement, which said:

"The decision by Judge Sullivan recently issued in the Montgomery Ward case is a disturbing factor and, if sustained, leaves an unfilled gap in the peaceful solution of labor disputes in the efforts of organized labor to maintain its present methods of settling labor disputes by peaceful means.

"The effect of this decision is to state to these aggrieved workers that they cannot use their own weapons to adjust their grievances during war time, nor can they expect the government to comply with the obligations which it has assumed.

"This creates an unfortunate situation and permits executives of the Sewell Avery type to take advantage of labor during the period of the war to destroy labor unions and the fundamental principle of true cellective bargaining.

"The CIO supports morally and financially the efforts of the Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes to secure the benefits of collective bargaining to the employes of Montgomery Ward."

No Private War, Mr. Biddle! Let's Make It Public!

The U. S. Supreme Court has taken the Harry Bridges case under consideration, and will probably reach a verdict in a few weeks. Meantime, CIO Pres. Philip Murray has written President Roosevelt urging him to end the 10-year persecution of Bridges in the interests of national unity and the war effort. Murray's letter also urged all CIO members to write to President Roosevelt to add their voices to the plea for ordering the deportation warrant set aside. The excerpts below are from the pamphlet, "Biddle's Private War Against Harry Bridges," published by the Harry Bridges Victory Committee, 23 W. 26th St., New York 10, N. Y. Free on application.

"You Can't Deport Principles," Mr. Biddle!

Twenty-five years ago, an Australian boy named Harry Bridges, came to this country to work and live in freedom. That was in 1920. The next year he took out his first citizenship papers, since he intended to spend the rest of his life in the United States.

In 1928 he applied for his second papers. Through some mix-up in the U. S. District Court of San Francisco, Bridges was told that his first papers expired and he would have to wait two more years before he could apply again.

Two years later, when it was time for him to apply again for his second papers Bridges was not in a position to bear the expenditure involved. But as soon as he was financially able, in 1933, he applied.

Meanwhile Harry Bridges worked hard as a longshoreman on the San Francisco waterfront. No one had anything against him. His record was good. But his pay was very low.

As soon as Harry Bridges began to talk about decent wages, decent working conditions for his men, and the protection against the "kickback," the drive was started to get him deported.

Within a split second after he began to organize the longshoremen, shady characters were ready to swear that Bridges was a "subversive" and dangerous "red," "determined to overthrow the government."

At first it was claimed that Bridges had been a member of the Communist Party. Then, when the Supreme Court ruled in another case that past membership in the Communist Party cannot be held as ground for deportation, the tune was changed to read that Bridges was and is a member of the Communist Party.

When, after weeks of investigation and cross-examination, it was concluded that Bridges neither "is a member nor affiliated with the Communist Party," they passed a special law. Its author, Hobbs, stated that he was glad that it could be the means of getting Bridges.

Early in 1942, a four-man Board of Immigration Appeals of the Department of Justice, after a thorough review of the entire case, came up with this unanimous decision:

"Our study and analysis of the record requires us to find that membership in our affiliation with either the Communist Party or the MWIU has not been established. . . It is our unanimous opinion that the warrant must be cancelled."

Somewhere along the line, Francis Biddle has developed a personal and bitter grudge agains Harry Bridges. He made up his mind to "get" Bridges. Without notice and without giving anyone the opportunity to prepare to argue the case before him, Biddle did what no Attorney General ever did before: He repudiated the unanimous findings of his own Board of Immigration Appeals and ordered Bridges deported.

Five days later a petition was filed for a hearing before Biddle.

Three days later Biddle denied the petition. His mind was made up.

* * *

Philip Murray, President of the CIO, hit the nail right on the head, when he said that the real reason behind the persecution of Bridges is that "he was 'guilty' of the 'crime committed' in 1934 when he organized the longshoremen on the Pacific Coast. A memorandum issued by the Labor Department confirms this conclusion."

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

One of the great weakness of the new OPA-WPB clothing program is its failure to deal with the problem of quality. Of course it has other weaknesses. The new problem aims to restore the price lines of two years ago and the same proportion between low and medium priced clothes and expensive clothes that existed then. But unless there's some control over the quality of the garments made under it, the prices won't mean much.

Fortunately, although there are no quality standards in the program itself, except the kind of cloth to be used in cotton garments made under it, OPA is attempting to deal with the quality problem.

Under the original General Maximum Price Regulation, which froze top prices as of a certain date in 1942, manufacturers were required to keep a record of their various price lines. Those records show the kind of cloth used, the workmanship, color fastness, etc. They are supposed also to have a record of those same factors in the garments they are making today.

OPA has started with men's woven cotton shirts, shorts, and pajamas. They send investigators out to plants to fill in charts for each price line sold in 1942 and each sold now. The charts show the kind of cloth, whether it was sanforized, what kind of stitching was used, etc.

CHECK ON QUALITY

These charts go to experts in the national office who check to see whether the present shirt of a certain price is really the same as one that sold for that same price in March, 1942. Needless to say, they frequently find it is not. They quite often find that a considerably less expensive 1942 garment corresponds to the higher priced 1945 one. Then they require the manufacturer to roll back his price, and they bring a triple damage suit against him for the overcharges on all the sales of those shirts he has made above the 1942 price.

Unfortunately this process is time consuming, takes lots of experts, and isn't always too effective.

In spite of its limitations this attempt to come to grips with the quality problem in the clothing field should have the enthusiastic support of consumers. OPA is expanding the staff working on it. They're moving in on men's rayon shirts, shorts and pajamas and on girls' and women's woolen sweaters.

JACQUELINE BROPHY, secretary and daughter of John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils, is leaving her CIO job to go into training with the Foreign Service of the State Dept. After a two or three-month training period, she expects to be assigned somewhere abroad as a secretarial clerk.

On the Air With CIO

CIO's Saturday radio shows are No. 1 dialing bait for millions of CBS and Blue Network listeners, as letters to the chains indicate. The CBS 3:45 p. m. EWT show has an 85 per cent coverage with 106 local stations affiliated with the chain carrying it, and the 6:45 p. m. EWT Blue program has almost complete coverage of over 130 stations.

★ ★ ★

The CBS show this Saturday (March 10) will feature the Packinghouse, Farm Equipment, and Food, Tobacco & Allied Workers Unions.

The Blue show will tell of the fight to repeal the polltax. Are you listening?

★ ★ ★

A unique musical education program is being broadcast by the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers Teachers Union in New York City.

Carried over FM station WABF under the auspices of the union's Music Teachers' Chapter, the program is designed to help in choosing material which can enrich the study of music.

The program will be broadcast at 7:30 p. m. March 11, 18 and 25.

—Army Air Forces Photo.

IMPROVISING A JEEP for a camera dolly, Major Clark Gable's AAF Combat Camera Crew photographs exteriors of barracks for the film, "Combat America."

Films For Union Showings

Clark Gable Combat Movie

Major Clark Gable's technicolor production, "Combat America" is one of the most popular 16mm war films now available for showing. The 63-minute exciting movie follows the Flying Fortress crews of the 351st Bombardment Group from the end of their training at a Colorado training field to actual combat over Germany.

It tells the story of the crews and gunners, showing how they live, how they fight and how they rest.

Information on how to obtain this film and others for showings before union groups, may be obtained from the Office of War Information, Bureau of Motion Pictures, Washington 25, D. C.

16MM's Popular

Some 23,500,000 Americans have seen 16mm films shown in behalf of the Sixth War Loan drive —an all-time high in 16mm achievement in the United States reports the OWI's Bureau of Motion Pictures. Many of the audiences were drawn from war plants, unions, farm groups, churches, schools and women's organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. America

CIO Pres. Philip Murray makes a brief dramatic appearance along with Pres. Roosevelt, Sec. of the Treas. Henry Morgenthau and other public figures in a new 16mm film called "Mr. and Mrs. America," announces the War Finance Division, U. S. Treasury Dept.

John Sutton, leading man for 20th Century Fox and now in the Navy, supervised the production of the picture together with J. Edward Shugrue, director of the Motion Picture and Special Events Section of the War Finance Division.

United Nations

A catalog of all 16mm and 35-mm. sound films showing the history, customs and habits of the people in the United Nations has been issued by the Free World Assn. of Hollywood, 214 Taft Bldg., Hollywood 28, Calif.

The film list was compiled to acquaint American with the people of the United Nations through movies "as weapons for peace" so that "World War III can never happen." The catalog, which was prepared by a special committee headed by Sol Lesser, motion picture producer, tells where and how unions and other groups can obtain the films.

Arthur Hornblow Jr., is president of the Free World Assn. Other officers include Charles Boyer, Kenneth MacGowan, Walter Wanger and other Hollywood notables.

CIO Education Conference

A conference of Educational Directors of CIO national and international unions will be held at National CIO headquarters March 10-11, announces Kermit Eby, CIO director of education and research.

Subjects on the agenda include discussion of the CIO resolution on education; adult education and extension programs in institutions of higher learning and within the states, and developments in education in the various unions including a discussion of how interest in workers' education can be stimulated.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole-Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

20c A Meal Isn't Gravy! WLB Please Take Note

(Continued from Page 1)

them to preserve the wage freeze of the Little Steel Formula.

The unfairness of this proposal is emphasized by the following two factors. First, because workers have gone out and raised production to win the war, and temporarily earned higher incentive earnings, they are to be penalized in not having their basic wage rates increased. This, surely, is breaking faith with workers who were told in the Little Steel Formula that only their basic wage rates would be considered in determining any inequities as a result of rising prices and cost of living.

Secondly, it is conceded that "when cut-backs occur" the factors contributing to higher straight-time earnings will largely vanish, and all that workers will have left to rely upon for earnings are their basic wage rates. Hours of work also will be cut, further reducing their earning power. But not prices or the cost of living.

From the viewpoint of postwar it is equally necessary to raise wages now. This is emphasized by the maldistribution of the nation's savings. It is commonly believed that postwar prosperity will be built upon the accumulated savings of the American people. But the facts are to the contrary. The Office of Price Administration studies show that for 1942, 66 per cent of the spending units—families and single consumers—received $2,500 or less in annual income, and they have only 11.6 per cent of the total savings. The huge wartime savings, unfortunately, are not in the hands of the people who make up the vast majority of the buying public.

Purchasing Power in Danger

Another development that makes an upward revision of wages necessary is the tremendous technological gains made during the war. These are even recognized by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which recently referred to the "incredibly increased productivity" of American industry during the war. The meaning in the postwar of this greatly increased man-hour output of American industry is that fewer workers will be required to produce war goods, and unless their wages are substantially raised there will not be the purchasing power to employ the displaced workers.

In the United Steelworkers of America we have a rather extensive research department which periodically [illegible] a representative group of steelworkers' housewives, who are picked at random. I want to tell you what these housewives—these really true "economists"—have to say. They live in Braddock, Pa.

The income and expenditures for these families are for the month of January, 1945. The entire survey is still in process of completion, but I have been able to secure the results for a few of the families first interviewed. These give some indication of what the final results of the complete survey will find.

The first housewife gives us the following expert economic testimony. Her husband has worked for the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. for 21 years and now receives 98 cents an hour, and with overtime earned $231.23 in January.

Wages Lag Behind Expenses

She has a 15-year-old daughter and a dependent elderly sister living with her, making a family unit of four persons. Her total expenditures in this month were $236.94. She went in the hole by $5.71 in January. But this does not tell her whole story. Her husband has 10 per cent of his income deducted for bond purchases, so that her cash income was only $208.11, and her out-of-pocket debt in January was $28.83.

The bond purchase, of course, is saving, but during the war her total net accumulated bondholdings have amounted to only $337.50, less than $85 per member of family. There is little, if any, liquid purchasing power in this family's bonds to spend in the postwar.

This housewife has not been extravagant in her expenditures, which amounted to $197.14, less taxes and insurance but not including bond deductions. She owns her own home, but had to spend $24.06 for real estate taxes, house repairs, and household operation. This was 12 per cent of her expenditures. Fuel, electricity and ice took another 10%. Food accounted for 39%, clothing 20%, transportation 5%, medical care 6%, and miscellaneous items the remaining 9%.

Her cash outlay of $40.28 for clothing and $76.60 for food demonstrate the great extent to which the cost of these essentials has risen during the war. Her food expenditures amounted to 22½ cents per meal per person—hardly an excessive expenditure.

Now let us hear from another expert "economist." She tells her own story in the first person.

"I am a young housewife with four children, two in school and two at home. My oldest daughter is twelve, and the youngest is two. My husband works for the Bethlehem Steel Company as a punching machine operator. He is 36 years old and has worked there for fifteen years, ever since we were married.

He makes 91 cents an hour, and worked very hard in January to earn $179.37, but with bond deduction he brought home only $149.37 in cash. We had no tax deductions because our family is so big and my husband's earnings are so low.

'Went in Hole' $57 in January

"I did the best I could, but went in the hole in January by $57.60, as our total expenditures were $206.97. It is some problem keeping two school children in clothes, and food is so high. At the first of the year we had $333.60 in the bank, but at the end of January this fell to $276. I don't know what we are going to do, because at this rate our savings will soon be gone. With the cost of everything so high, I don't see why wages aren't raised.

"Our rent is $36 a month, and this alone took 20% of our expenditures in January. Food is just terrible. I spent $113.21 for food or 57% of the total cost of running my house. This is only twenty cents a meal for each one in the family. My other costs were 3% for utilities, 6% for clothing, 1% for transportation and medical care, and 12% for miscellaneous items.

"I have cut corners all I know how. I don't buy clothes for myself. We can't find any lower-rent house to move to. Things are bad. I'm afraid we will have to quit buying bonds, unless wages are raised. This would break my husband's heart.

"We have $1,068.75 in bonds now, and we want to keep them for our children's education. It would be a shame if we had to use them to buy food and clothes for our children so that they won't be able to get the education that my husband and I missed. We certainly are going to do everything in our power to keep these bonds for the schooling of our children."

Postwar Buying Power Lacking

This economist gives testimony that speaks for itself. From the postwar viewpoint, it is clear that there is no accumulated purchasing power in this family to buy stoves, electric iceboxes, and other consumer durable goods to make the wheels of peacetime industry turn. This family's wartime savings are earmarked for education several years in the future.

From a war viewpoint, it is clear that the Little Steel formula is working a great hardship on this family and calls out for revision.

Action Needed To Halt Collapse

A genuine regard for public policy requires not only a frank statement of the conviction that the situation has changed since the present stabilization policy was adopted. It is necessary in addition to recognize that certain steps must be taken now to prevent a serious postwar collapse. Wage—price relationships have become radically distorted; if they are not corrected the goal of full employment cannot be reached. There is no need to emphasize the serious consequences of prolonged and serious unemployment. Every country in the world recognizes that the decade of the '30's must never be repeated.

To achieve and maintain full employment, it is now generally agreed, a larger share must go to the lower income groups. Otherwise, purchasing power will not be adequate to buy back the products of industry and oversaving will again cripple production.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 11 March 12, 1945

PAY CHECK STUBS like that above showing take-home pay totaling $21.38 — $13.35 less than total earnings—are one of the more graphic reasons for revision of the Little Steel Formula.

Menace to Unions

Tough Sledding For Labor In The State Capitals

The Christian American Assn's. anti-labor drive that swept through nine state legislatures in 1943 is on the march again. From Massachusetts to California, from Michigan to Texas, some elected representatives of the people are bending an ear to the song of those who would "regulate unions in the public interest" and in so doing would virtually send them to their death.

South Dakota has already passed a "right to work" law which outlaws the union shop, and similar legislation has been introduced in nine other states—Arkansas, Arizona, Colorado, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Tennessee, Texas and Vermont.

Laws limiting political activity of unions, requiring the filing of financial statements and the registration of unions and organizers, or restricting the activities of pickets are being considered in 17 states.

That, in brief, is the picture drawn from reports of the CIO Industrial Council Dept., headed by John Brophy, from the Division of Labor Standards of the U. S. Labor Dept., and from Federated Press.

Some idea of the hysteria behind proposed legislation can be gathered from a bill introduced in the Massachusetts Senate, which requires unions which wish to picket to send a minute description of the place to be picketed to the State Board of Arbitration & Conciliation. The law authorizes the Board to determine the proper number of pickets which the union may use and to issue non-transferrable identification badges for them!

Legislation proposed in other states is almost as fantastic and probably just as unconstitutional as the Massachusetts bill would be if it were made a law.

Such laws are "part of a general pattern to attack

(Continued on Page 12)

Have You Ever Seen One?

'Dreams' May Walk But Pay Checks Don't Stretch

Pay checks with weekly take-home totaling $21.38, $24.81, $31.21 and $30.79 just won't stretch to cover the $54 a week budget estimated by an unbiased University of California committee as necessary to provide for a worker's family of four.

Stark facts such as the pay check stub reproduced above and copies of workers' budgets showing the rise in the cost of living between 1941 and 1944 are the evidence CIO wage delegations to Washington are presenting to their Congressmen in asking for revision of the Little Steel formula. Latest delegation, this week, was from Missouri.

Example of the monthly budget which shows better than thousands of words the rise in cost of living is that of C. Turman, member of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, employed by the Emerson Electric Co. in St. Louis. Here it is:

	1941	1944
Rent paid	$22.50	$25.00
Groceries	32.00	60.00
Clothing	22.00	34.00
Medical, Dental	8.00	11.50
Coal	3.00	6.50
	$87.50	$137.00

While pay checks remain the same, the prices of clothing, groceries rent, etc. have gone up. In many places the housing shortage has forced workers to move into higher priced houses in neighborhoods where the living standards are above their means.

With prices rising the worker in wartime has extra taxes, Red Cross, War Chest, War Bonds slashing into his pay check. Even with overtime pay, incentive pay, merit increases, shift premiums, and upgradings, workers pay checks won't stretch to cover their budget, and with VE day most workers will go back to straight hourly rates. And reduction in weekly hours from 48 to 40 will mean a one-third cut in earnings.

CIO delegations have been calling on their Congressmen and presenting these facts to them since January. They have included representatives from CIO unions in New York, Minnesota, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Missouri and Iowa. The last delegation, from New Jersey, will call on Congressmen March 14 and 15.

Another group raising its voice in asking for modification of the Little Steel Formula was the CIO Shop Stewards Conference meeting in New York City last week (see earlier story inside).

Missouri delegates last week called on Vice-President Truman, as well as their Congressmen, requesting that they use their influence to bring about revision of the Little Steel Formula. Truman stated that he felt the "first job" was to win the war and prevent inflation.

Needed Now—V-E Streamline Job!

(See Page 3)

WASHINGTON GUIDE

First Test-- Bretton Woods

First Congressional test of U. S. sincerity on world cooperation for security and peace comes up with hearings in the House Banking and Currency Committee beginning March 9 on the bill (HR 2211) to ratify the Bretton Woods agreement for postwar world trade.

At stake are some five million U. S. jobs in foreign trade made possible by this United Nations agreement to stabilize world currencies, help rebuild war-devastated and undeveloped countries. CIO, together with broad groups of liberals, economists, farm and women's organizations, is backing the bill in its present form.

The Independent Bankers Assn., organization of small town bankers, has defied the Wall St. American Bankers Assn. to support the bill.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, writing to Committee Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.), in charge of the bill, calls it "the best guarantee of an expanded world trade that will afford protection to American businessmen, markets to American farmers and jobs for American workers."

Following the new GOP line on foreign policy, Republican leaders are blowing slow and cautious on the issue while allowing rank and file party men to blow distinctly cold. Thus, men like Rep. Walcott (R., Mich.), who was at Bretton Woods, show a cagey attitude, supporting it "in principle" while admitting there are "objections" to the agreement as finally written. At the same time, GOP big shots like Sen. Wherry (Neb.) file long statements in the Record which sum up by saying something like this: "From the present study, the answer is 'No.'"

Key issue on the bill will be attempts to amend it. Most of these attempts will look innocent, will be wrapped around with technical wordage that nobody is expected or desired to understand. Any amendment will either wreck the agreement or delay it another year or more.

The Bretton Woods agreement was worked out by 44 United Nations, signed by all of them, including the U. S. Any changes put over in Congress will send the whole thing back to all 44 signers to be worked over again. It took a year to get the meeting together last summer, months to work out the final compromise.

Price Control Showdown

(See Page 3)

Pres. Murray's prepared testimony in the House Banking and Currency Committee, given as the Guide went to press (Mar. 9), calls for continuance of price control without crippling amendments and with sufficient appropriations to enforce it.

The need for renewing the act and for strengthening price control, in addition to a basic wage rate increase, is particularly serious now with V-E Day approaching, Murray pointed out.

At the same time, we need a planned and rational approach to reconversion that will include successful price control and adequate take-home pay.

Testifying after Pres. Murray were Eleanor Fowler, Secretary-Treasurer of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, and Annie Stein, volunteer price panel worker and member of the Federal Workers Auxiliaries, as well as Sol Barkin, research director, CIO Textile Workers Union.

Lineups On World Policy

On the basis of past records and a check of current statements, the U. S. Senate today has only 46 members positively committed to supporting unity with the United Nations for postwar world security out of a total of 96.

Treaties require Senate ratification by a two-thirds majority. Assuming all 96 members present and voting on Dumbarton Oaks, San Francisco, and other treaties made with allied countries, we are short by 18 votes of the needed 64.

This gives the CIO and all the millions of people and hundreds of organizations interested in peace and postwar security an extremely hard job for the next few weeks and months. It means that we have to translate 18 doubtful or anti-United Nations votes into positive pro-United Nations votes.

We already have 15 Senators—nine Democrats and six Republicans—who are considered doubtful but whose records and current statements show that they lean to the United Nations side.

We also have eight—two Democrats and six Republicans—who can be classed as doubtful but who lean to the anti-United Nations side.

We have five Republicans with isolationist records whose recent statements indicate at least a professed desire to go along with the U. S. and the United Nations and against the Axis. There's one Democrat whose record is positive but whose current statements are the opposite.

On the anti-United Nations side, with records and current statements so negative that nothing can be hoped from them, we have 14 Republicans, five Democrats and one Progressive.

Of the 46 who are classed as certain supporters of the FDR foreign policy, 39 are Democrats and seven are Republicans.

The totals show that only a small fraction of the 38 Republicans in the House, only seven, are pro-United Nations and only six have leanings that way. The rest are either anti-United Nations or also lean that way.

Close study of the record and a knowledge of the individual Senators' attitudes shows that the pious statements of GOP foreign policy leader Sen. Vandenberg (Mich.) are intended only for public consumption and not meant to have any effect on Republican Senators.

Of all 96 Senators studied, only five Republicans show a possible change of heart, from isolationist to pro-United Nations. Vandenberg is one of those. In other words, Vandenberg's speeches on cooperation with the United Nations, his demands for action quicker than immediate, his profound breast-beatings—all are well understood in GOP circles.

The job of shifting the 15 doubtful but leaning to cooperative Senators to the certain column, plus three others, is strictly up to us as voters and as Americans.

Have you written to your two men yet to ask them where they stand?

Manpower To Conference

With Senate passage of the Wagner-Kilgore amendments to S 36, which are in effect a substitute for the May-Bailey bill, the manpower issue now goes to conference of House and Senate where differences between the House and Senate bills are supposed to be ironed out.

The Senate bill avoids the labor draft features of the May-Bailey bill, does have penalties against employers for illegal use of manpower. Urge your Senators to stand up for S 36 as passed by the Senate, oppose the May-Bailey bill as passed by the House.

Dirty Work By 'Consent'

"Gentleman Sam" Hobbs, the triple-chin threat from Alabama, tried a fast and dirty one in the House this week—and almost got away with it. Had he won, unions would now be faced with a bill (HR 32) slapping a $10,000 fine and 20 years in jail on members and organizers taking part in normal union activities—all under the sacred name of "anti-racketeering."

Freshman Rep. Hugh De Lacy (D., Wash.) was the alert Congressman who spotted Hobb's bill on what is called the "consent calendar," which would have put it past the House by unanimous consent, had De Lacy not objected. The consent calendar is usually used to get private bills through—i. e., bills "for the relief" of some individual or other. Few Congressmen pay attention to what's on it. De Lacy did, and his objection stopped the Hobbs bill.

The bill comes around again on the consent calendar in a week. This time it takes three objections to stop it. De Lacy and Rep. Ray Madden (D., Ind.) are rounding up Congressmen to join them. Write yours and ask him to give a hand.

Williams Vote Set

As the Guide went to press, the vote to confirm or reject Aubrey Williams as Rural Electrification head seemed imminent in the Senate. The same people that fought Wallace are fighting Williams, for the same reasons. If the Senate hasn't acted by the time you read this, send your Senators a wire.

Recess Coming

House Majority Leader McCormack (D. Mass.) said this week he was "hopeful" of a recess from Mar. 24 to Apr. 10. This means the Congressmen and Senators will be going home for an Easter vacation.

The best time to talk to your Congressman is when he's on the home grounds. Watch the Guide for further details on the recess and be ready to talk to your man about the issues on your mind when he gets home.

Quote of the Week

Yasua Yamida, Tokyo radio commentator, cited by Rep. Hugh De Lacey (D. Wash.) in a speech on the Chicago Tribune: "There is no doubt that Robert R. McCormick is an extremely charming character. I think America today needs many more dynamic characters like this Chicago veteran."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick summary of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Bretton Woods, (HR 2211, S 540)	Ratifies Bretton Woods agreement on world trade; lays base for five million US jobs.	Hearings begun in House Banking Committee (Rep. Spence, D. Ky., Chmn.) Mar. 9. CIO to testify.	Write your Representative to support without amendments.
Price control, (SJ Res 30)	Renews price control act.	Hearings begun in Senate Banking Committee, (Sen Wagner, D. N. Y., chmn.) Murray testimony Mar. 9. (see page three).	Write your two Senators to support without amendments that will cripple price control.
Polltax repeal, (HR 7)	Repeals polltax that prevents eight million white and Negro citizens from voting.	Discharge Petition 1 now being signed to get MR 7 out of Rules Committee. 218 signatures needed; about 100 in already.	Urge your Representative to sign DP 1, vote for HR 7.
Manpower; (S 36)	Tightens existing production facilities; has penalties for waste of manpower.	S 36 has passed Senate; May-Bailey has passed House. Now to House-Senate conference.	Urge Senators to stand up for S 36, oppose May-Bailey.

(Note: Address all Senators at Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives at House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Needed Now—Streamlined Economy For V-E Day

V-E Day is getting closer. Problems of price control, wages, production and the whole need for economic stabilization now before V-E Day become more and more acute.

Discussing these critical issues with the Senate Banking and Currency Committee as The CIO NEWS went to press, CIO Pres. Philip Murray elaborated on the prepared text that is given here in full. Watch next week's CIO NEWS for a fuller story on his extempore remarks to the Committee.

"With V-E Day probably only weeks away, we are at a cross roads in economic stabilization. Divided counsels within the Government, and outside of it, are delaying and defeating the preparation of plans to meet the crisis which we shall face on that day.

"We must act at once to stabilize our war economy for the tough job ahead of completing the defeat of Japan, as soon as possible after Germany is knocked out of the war. The success with which we handle partial reconversion after V-E Day will point the way for full-scale reconversion after Japan's defeat.

"All of the forces now working against stabilization and toward higher prices, higher profits, lower take-home pay, and cutbacks and layoffs can and must be reversed.

"1) Price control is a necessary factor not only in the stabilization program but in the program for maintaining maximum production of war and civilian goods during the transition after V-E Day.

"2) Immediate general wage increases, far from threatening inflation, are a necessary first step to prevent deflation after V-E Day.

"3) An efficient national production program for war and for reconversion must include adequate take-home pay and successful price control.

"Recent actions by the Director of Economic Stabilization, Judge Vinson, have completely frozen the War Labor Board, and prevented it from functioning. At the same time the OPA is steadily raising prices and adding to extortionate profits. These unilateral decisions move in exactly the wrong direction.

"New OPA policies within the past year have begun to launch higher prices throughout many industries. This trend must be reversed, and prices strictly held.

"OPA says it is not concerned with profits, but it is steadily adding to profits by raising prices for industries which already are earning many times their pre-war take.

"Plans for pricing products that will come back after V-E Day appear to be largely geared to a guarantee of profits during reconversion. Such a policy can only result in postwar prices too high for workers to pay—the pattern for unemployment and collapse such as we experienced in the 1930's.

"While raising prices regardless of profits, OPA also is committed to raising prices with every increase in wages, regardless of profits that are more than sufficient to pay the wage increases which labor is either demanding or getting.

"Major consideration of the CIO is that our members be fully employed at adequate take-home pay, and to see to it that prices are kept under control so that their families do not lose in price increases what they have secured by collective bargaining.

"But neither wage increases nor price administration can begin to be effective in the absence of an efficient centralized direction of our national war economy under the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion and its constituent agencies.

"CIO respectfully submits to the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees that they must look beyond the single, but important, question of price control to the whole question of how a sound program of economic stabilization for the country can be re-established between now and V-E Day and held firmly thereafter.

"There must be sound rules for operation of price control so that a price policy for reconversion can be formulated and published. Such a price level must be based on continuation of 1942 ceilings for products coming back into civilian production, with costs or losses incident to reconversion absorbed, except in unusual hardship cases, into accumulated reserves out of war profits and the refund provisions of the tax laws.

"There must be immediate general wage increases, and wages must be steadily increased as reconversion proceeds, to insure adequate purchasing power to maintain an expanding economy and an increasing standard of living.

"There must be programs for increasing civilian production after V-E Day, including plans as to how controlled materials can be made available, how and when plants may resume civilian operations, and what measures the Federal government is prepared to take to ease the transition from war to civilian production.

"More information on reconversion than is now available must be furnished to government agencies and to the major interest groups. Failure of Congress to provide a Bureau of Programs in the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion has left us without adequate knowledge of the magnitude of the problem of transition from war to civilian production. A major item in the information required is an accurate statement of proposed cutbacks by procurement agencies after V-E Day.

"The period ahead is bound to present new difficulties because of the effect of cutbacks on spending and employment. The opportunity to effect a rapid shift from present war production levels to a balance between war and civilian operations after V-E Day must be seized at once.

"We have at the most a period of two or three months in which to get public understanding and support for such a transition program.

"If the administration and the interested groups do not rally their forces in this interval, it will be far more difficult thereafter. The first effect of such a failure will be a serious damage to the war production program.

"We endorse the principle of price control, effectively administered, as part of a national stabilization designed to protect the country in war and to aid speedy reconversion to full peacetime employment."

On the Air With CIO

Prices and your pocketbook will be the subject of the next CIO weekly broadcast over the Blue network stations at 6:45 p.m. EWT, Saturday, March 17.

The CIO Oil Workers Union will hold down the stage on the CBS show at 3:45 p.m. the same day. Are you listening?

★ ★ ★

The Feb. 24 Blue show on the Alcan highway was an outstanding success, as measured by letters that keep pouring into the CIO office in Washington, D. C.

"It was the kind of 'departure' that we radio listeners welcome more than you know" . . . "Everyone connected with this program deserves a lot of credit" . . . "To me the program was a sort of milestone in radio. It had everything which makes a good program, wonderful script, superb music (and incidentally, why not give credit where credit is due) good acting . . ."

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Do You Know That: Woody Guthrie, great folk singer, exclusive on Asch records, came from the Dust Bowl and is now a merchant seaman.

ASCH RECORDS STINSON

And Do You Know That: Asch records feature Mountain Songs, Cowboy Songs, Square Dances (with mandolins, guitars, banjos), Jazz, Boogie Woogie, Blues, popular jazz favorites.

Write for Catalogue to

STINSON TRADING CORP.

27 Union Sq. West, New York 3, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.

20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

UNION BUYER'S GUIDE

BUTTONS AND BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING

UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches

Also Specializing in

Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 256 UNION MADE CIO COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1 WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

World Labor Asks 'Advisory' Role At San Franscisco Talks

LONDON (FP)—The World Trade Union Conference is asking for a voice in the United Nations meeting in San Francisco in an advisory role, Pres. Sidney Hillman of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers told reporters in Paris last week, where he was participating in sessions of the labor conference's administrative committee.

World labor's bid for representation at San Francisco was placed before their governments by the leaders of the World Trade Union Conference in London the week before, but "no decisions have yet been received" on the request, according to the London Daily Herald, official organ of the British Labor Party.

The Herald said it is certain that the individual delegations of Great Britain, U.S., Soviet Union, France and China at San Francisco will include representatives of the unions of their respective countries.

The U.S. will probably invite the AFL to attend as well as the CIO, the Herald said, predicting that this move will force a showdown on what it called the AFL leaders' "isolationism."

During his stay in Paris Hillman addressed a meeting of 3,000 union leaders, giving wholehearted praise to the role played by the French delegation at the World Trade Union Conference and promising a helping hand from the CIO to relieve the conditions of the French workers.

HAILS CGT

"The conference recognized the position that the General Confederation of Labor occupies in the life of France and in the international sphere," Hillman said, warmly.

"It was on the basis of merit that France received a place of full equality with England, the Soviet Union and the U.S. on all the leading bodies of the new international organization. It was in recognition of the decisive importance of France and of the French trade unions in the reconstruction of Europe that Paris was selected as the headquarters of the new labor organization."

Says AFL May Come Back to Fold in Paris

London (ALN) — There is a good chance that the attitude of the AFL executive council against participation will be reversed before the next world labor conference is convened in Paris in September, Courtney Ward, president of the Ohio Council of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators (AFL) told Allied Labor News here this week.

Ward, who broke the AFL executive council's boycott of the world labor conference and came here as an official observer for his union, expressed appreciation for the fine reception he received from all delegates, "especially the CIO."

Ward said he is shortly returning to the U.S. to tour AFL unions in order to report on the conference, adding: "I am sure the Federation must eventually affiliate to whatever world organization is set up by the conference."

Anti-Labor Law Killed by Court

A Federal court this week held unconstitutional the provision of a Kansas statute requiring a majority vote to authorize a strike and making it unlawful to refuse to handle, install or use non-union goods. The court outlawed the provision of the statute making it unlawful to cause cessation of work because of a jurisdictional dispute. The court said:

"The right to peaceably strike or to participate in one, to work or to refuse to work and to choose the terms and conditions under which one will work, like the right to make a speech, are fundamental human liberties which a state may not condition or abridge in the absence of grave and immediate danger to the community."

The court upheld the provisions of the statute requiring labor organizations to file annual financial statements as well as constitutions and by-laws and requiring the registration of business agents.

CIO-farm Meets

A genuinely friendly feeling between farm and labor groups has been promoted through get-together meetings sponsored by UAW-CIO Studebaker Local 5 of So. Bend, Ind. The local, which has held 20 such meetings since last September, reports that 35 per cent of the auto workers in the state are farmers.

Unfinished Business...

the men who lie in the rows of Army hospitals . . .
know they have a job ahead
a job of finding the way back to health . . . to strength . . . to security . . .
and all Americans, all CIO men and women, know there is a job ahead for them, too a job of helping to bring all of our fighting men back as quickly as possible a job of backing the Red Cross in its work of backing them . . .
that is why CIO citizens are working, fighting, giving . . . to help clean up . . .
UNFINISHED BUSINESS
The Red Cross helps our men overseas with recreation, blood plasma, surgical dressings, and food for men in enemy prison camps.

Give Now to the RED CROSS
National CIO War Relief Committee

AFL Men Say: Drop Bridges Case

Twenty-one California AFL leaders, Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington and the head of the California Dept. of the Veterans of Foreign Wars have written President Roosevelt asking him to end the 10-year persecution of Harry Bridges.

These people, latest to join a long and distinguished list headed by CIO President Murray, all made their request to FDR to order Biddle's private war against Bridges ended on the grounds of national unity and war production.

The case is now in the Supreme Court. Acquitted twice of identical charges, Bridges was ordered deported by Attorney-General Biddle after passage of a law whose sponsor boasted that it was intended "to get Bridges."

Biddle's order overuled his own Justice Dept's. Board of Appeals, which reviewed the case and found that the evidence against Bridges was confined to a convicted perjurer and an admitted personal enemy.

Europe's Kids Need Clothes!

The Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, backed by 6 million CIO members, will cooperate with other agencies during April to collect 150 million pounds of good clothing for free distribution in war-devastated areas.

Natl. chairman of the campaign—called the United Natl. Clothing Collection—is Henry J. Kaiser, industrialist, serving at the request of President Roosevelt. CIO Pres. Philip Murray has joined the committee on Kaiser's invitation and has called upon all CIO members to give their full support to the undertaking.

Murray in his letter to the national heads of CIO unions declared that although the U.S. government would willingly provide new clothing for the destitute men, women and children of war - ravaged Europe, the needs of the armed forces make it impossible to obtain the material.

The only course open is to gather the serviceable clothing now hanging useless in closets and attics of millions of American homes and rush it to the areas where it is sorely needed.

'Cross' Drive Going Strong

Reports at the end of the first week of the 1945 American Red Cross Campaign show CIO members in industrial centers of the nation responding with a volume of contributions indicating a greater total than they gave last year, according to Leo Perlis, director of the National CIO War Relief Committee.

Increased labor - management cooperation in bringing the campaign into the plants where CIO bargaining contracts are in force is reported from many areas.

CIO's for It!

Bretton Woods—Trade And Jobs

CIO's plea for quick passage of the bill (HR 2211) to ratify the Bretton Woods world trade agreement was sent to Congress this week in a letter by President Murray who also asked for a chance to testify.

CIO is for the bill because Bretton Woods "is the best guarantee of a greatly expanded and stabilized world trade that will afford protection to American businessmen, markets to American farmers, and jobs for American workers," Murray said in his letter to Chairman Brent Spence (D. Ky.) of the House Banking Committee in charge of the bill.

CIO is also for Bretton Woods because it's the first test of "our desire and ability to cooperate with other countries in the prevention of future aggression and the maintenance of a stable peace."

Bretton Woods, Murray pointed out, will halt the international economic piracy that led up to World War II and can lead to a World War III unless Congress ratifies the agreement promptly and without changes.

"We do not in the CIO profess to be experts in the intricacies of international finance," Murray said. "That we leave to the special students who labored on the technical end of the agreement and to the scores of eminent economists and bankers who have endorsed it."

But CIO men and women do understand that world trade means jobs and peace and security, he added, and they also understand that we have to have the kind of United Nations planning that Bretton Woods resulted from to get world trade and security.

Murray pleaded for early Congressional approval of the agreement and for passage of HR 2211 without amendments. Any changes that Congress might make, he appointed out, would have to go back to the 44 United Nations that signed the agreement and thus would delay things for at least a year—by which time it would be too late.

"No document or agreement is perfect, nor is it claimed to be," he said. "Bretton Woods, however does represent a meeting of the interests of 44 United Nations, including the U.S., and does protect and advance the interests of all."

GOP UNMASKS

Republicans in both House and Senate have been busy taking off the polite mask of cooperation with the United Nations that Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) put on for them in his recent speech "renouncing" isolationism.

They've been filling the Congressional Record for days with long and pedantic studies by monetary "experts," most of them on the American Bankers Assn. payroll and the others just working for love, all of which say that Bretton Woods is "novel" and therefore no good.

In between, they have been howling against "haste"—by which they mean action of any kind before the next fifty years. Rep. Wolcott (R. Mich.) is one who particularly cautions against this haste. As a matter of fact, the Bretton Woods agreement was signed last July, almost a year ago.

The out-and-out admirers of fascism like Sen. Taft (R. O.) claim that the U. S. will become a universal Santa Claus by putting its money into the Intl. Bank and the Intl. Fund that the agreement sets up. Actually, the money is not spent but invested in the Bank and the Fund, which are guaranteed by 44 nations.

And then there's the line that says the Bank is OK, yes, but this Fund now, that's something else, its new and dangerous and we ought to stay away from that. That's the American Bankers Assn. line, and it simply means they want to go back to the "good old days" of loans to small countries at 12% interest . . . and call out the marines if the so-and-sos don't pay on the dot.

Job Accidents Cost More Time Than Strikes

What the daily press doesn't mention in its sensational stories about strikes is that during January of this year mandays lost due to both strikes and lockouts were fewer than any previous January since 1932, less than any month in 1944 and almost negligible when compared to time lost due to industrial accidents.

For every one day lost because of work stoppages, the Labor Dept. said over 26 man-days were lost because of job accidents that temporarily or permanently disabled workers.

The figures show that while only 8½ million mandays were lost due to idleness, workdays lost for injuries came to 43½ million. But, the department said, if deaths, permanent disabilities and permanent partial impairments are added "economic time lost rises to nearly 223 mandays" during 1944.

As to idleness due to strikes and lockouts during the first of the year, the department said: "There were fewer stoppages in January, 1945, than in any month during 1944."

SNAFU Promises Made To Veterans

Native Fascist-minded demagogs have assumed new roles as champions of the ex-GIs, making extravagant promises — which they should know will not be kept—to build "veterans' organizations."

Such well-known rabble rousers as Gerald L. K. Smith and Joe McWilliams are clamoring for mustering-out pay for veterans ranging from $1000 to $7800 at government expense, according to an article in the March issue of Reader's Scope magazine.

Such raids on the public treasury have little chance of succeeding, as demagogs should know.

Smith has gone about the business of organizing the veterans into the Nationalist Veterans of World War II in a thorough-going fashion, having hired George Vose, a World War II veteran, to do the spade work.

Smith's appeal to the servicemen is the fourth clause of the America First platform which reads:

"Veterans: American money for American veterans! Stop the foreign looting of our public treasury. $1000 each for mustered-out veterans having served one year, with proportionate sums for those who have served more or less. Extensive program for education, rehabilitation and employment. Stop international boondoggling."

Others who have "plans" for veterans are:

Father Charles E. Coughlin, who up until Nov. 1944, had enrolled more than 400,000 servicemen in his "St. Sebastian Brigade."

McWilliams calls for a flat $7800 bonus for each ex-serviceman and meanwhile "gets all the money he needs from wealthy fascist-minded members of the Chicago Lincoln Park chapter of America First," according to the magazine article.

$10 Million Back Pay Won in WLB Order By GM Workers

Two decisions of the Natl. War Labor Board in cases involving employes of the General Motors Corp. will result in more than 300,000 workers receiving about $10 million in back pay, the CIO United Auto Workers Union reported this week.

The Board raised the third shift premium in about 100 GM plants covered by the master agreement between the corporation and the union from 5 to 7½ per cent, retroactive to Oct. 5, 1943.

Although the Board denied the union's request for a general wage increase, it specified that the denial did not prejudice possible reconsideration of the demands if the WLB changed its pay policies.

The Board ordered a study of the wage bracket system which, according to Walter Reuther, director of the UAW-CIO's GM department, "has created serious current inequities and threatens to undermine completely wage standards in the postwar period."

The Board, in the other decision, involving the Fisher-Memphis Aircraft Division of GM, adjusted out-of-line wage rates and hiring rates, providing 5,000 workers with approximately $4 million in back pay, retroactive to July 28, 1942.

UAW's Thomas Urges Industry Bonus For Vets

In contrast to the phony and unrealistic mustering-out pay proposals of native Fascist-minded leaders, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers Union proposes monthly payments to employe-veterans from the profit-swollen coffers of the auto and plane companies.

Under the plan, in UAW contract-covered shops each veteran would receive each month 20% over and above his weekly earnings—for as many months as he served in the armed forces.

To show where the money would come from the UAW points to the following figures of the Treasury and Commerce Depts. on the profits of all U. S. corporations:

BEFORE TAXES

	Billions of dollars	% of 1936-39 average
36-'39 average	4.5	100
1941	14.5	322
1942	19.9	444
1943	22.8	508

AFTER TAXES

	Billions of dollars	% of 1936-39 average
36-'39 average	3.6	100
1941	7.3	203
1942	8.5	237
1943	8.9	249

The government would contribute by allowing the bonus to be paid out of excess profit, some 80% of which would otherwise be paid in taxes, the UAW states, adding that the profit level of auto and aircraft corporations is considerably higher than these averages.

As an alternate method of paying the bonuses, the UAW suggests that the big corporations might reduce the half million dollar salaries of some of their top executives which were increased 20%, 40%, 60% and more while veterans were getting their $50 a month Army pay.

WLB Personnel Play

Taylor to Davis to Vinson

The hot potato of what to do with "fringe" wage increases when they result in price increases was dumped in the lap of William H. Davis this week as the chairman of the Natl. War Labor Board moved over to his new job as Director of Economic Stabilization.

The policy of disallowing such pay increases if the Office of Price Administration reported they would result in price increases was established by Fred M. Vinson, who moved from the Stabilization post to become the new Federal Loan Administrator.

The shifts, ordered by President Roosevelt, were accompanied by Presidential action moving Dr. George W. Taylor, vice-chairman of the WLB, to the post formerly held by Davis.

Action on the "fringe" wage problem is expected soon from Davis, who actively championed the authority of the WLB to decide on such issues, in opposition to the position held by Vinson.

Meanwhile, the CIO United Auto Workers' Executive Board reaffirmed previous action urging that the CIO consider withdrawing from the WLB and recommending that FDR replace it with a new tri-partite agency whose decisions "would not be subject to the veto power of any other government agency."

Bronx Cheer For Amvets

The Natl. Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires, consisting of 120 trade union American Legion posts, this week joined the storm of protest over the announcement by La Mar Bailey, national first vice-commander of the American Veterans of World War II (Amvets) that his organization was planning to conduct a "crusade" against CIO and PAC.

Maurice A. Frank, publicity director of the conference, declared in an open letter to Bailey that the only "crusade" there is room for is one against fascism and that his proposal "can only tend to divide our forces at a time when our greatest united strength is needed for victory."

The labor legion leader wrote that any crusade "against any segment of the American people, be it CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods, Catholics, Protestants or Jews, black or white, is a repetition of the Hitlerian tactics against which we are today fighting and for the abolition of which our comrades and sons are dying . . .

"All Americans, who are interested in truth and democracy, know that American labor has made the most remarkable record in the history of the world, during this present conflict. These Americans know that the time lost by strikes throughout the war has been less than one-tenth of 1%.

"These same Americans know and have learned that it is just as important that they fight the groups that are fostering race hatred, intolerance and bigotry on the home front as it is important that their sons, brothers, and husbands fight the armed enemy on the battle front."

Pressman Tells N. Y.

Need Public Wage Push

By MILTON KAUFMAN

Modification of the Little Steel formula and the solution of War Labor Board problems will be accomplished by the "united support of the same segments of our national life which united in terms of the national political campaign," Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, told 2,000 shop stewards and local union officials at a New York City all-day conference last week.

Called by the Greater New York CIO Council to consider steps to meet the flat refusal of the WLB to break the formula, the special shop stewards' meeting worked out a program for moving on a broader front to solve labor's problems.

Suggesting that labor's campaign for wage revision has been too narrow, Pressman said the CIO must now turn to a coalition with "all other forces in our national life," just as in the '44 election campaign, "we were after a development of national unity to achieve victory."

Urging that labor had not made a bargain in pledging itself to refrain from striking when it was easy, but forgetting it when it was hard, Pressmen declared that "regardless of provocations, regardless of what may happen, there must be until there is final victory over Hitler and Japan absolutely no strikes in this country."

The New York conference re-affirmed the no-strike statement issued by CIO Pres. Philip Murray after the War Labor Board had made public its unfavorable recommendation on wages.

Jobs No. 1 Job—N. J. CIO

Representatives of 175,000 New Jersey CIO members at a conference at Newark, N. J., last weekend squarely faced the problem of helping returning veterans get jobs. These concrete actions were taken:

1. To set up a veteran's bureau, as recommended by the N. J. CIO Council, and to establish a veteran's welfare committee in each CIO local.

2. To begin immediately negotiations with management to provide seniority for veterans. This would provide additional seniority for time spent in service for a veteran returning to his old job, and would give to a veteran taking a new job seniority equal to the time spent in the armed forces.

Attending the conference were representatives of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Veterans Committee, Army and Navy Union, and Federal and State agencies in addition to delegates from 150 CIO locals.

After hearing a returned veteran tell how he was refused his old job because his discharge papers said he was "30 per cent disabled," the conference named a committee to investigate such statements on discharge papers. Through the CIO the veteran got work at his plant with pay and seniority equivalent to those of his old job.

Participating in the conference, among others, were: N. J. CIO Pres. Irving Abramson; Kermit Eby, CIO director of research and education; Ted Silvey, chairman, CIO Reconversion Committee; and Victor Reuther, assistant director, UAW-CIO War Policy Division.

WLB Speeds Rubber Case

The CIO Rubber Workers Union this week presented pay demands directly to the Natl. War Labor Board instead of to a WLB panel, in line with the board's campaign to speed up the handling of cases.

The union, in testimony before the board, asked that some 60 rubber companies employing 140,000 workers in about 90 plants throughout the country pay a night shift differential of 10 cents an hour, and grant more liberal vacations and paid lunch periods.

Demands for increases above the Little Steel formula (as distinct from the fringe increases mentioned) have been presented in briefs only, since both the union and the industry participated in the public hearings on the formula conducted by the board last October.

The union is asking for a general wage increase of 17 cents an hour if the shift differential is denied, or 12 cents an hour if the shift differential is granted.

The union's request for an industry-wide vacation plan, with one week off for two years' service and two weeks after five years, was opposed by the industry on the ground that it would "complicate bookkeeping."

Trouble for Tony Gets the Gate

By HELEN KINGERY

THIS is the story of Tony—and thousands of American workers who are struggling with problems too big to handle alone. Sometimes it's housing, sometimes child care. Sometimes, as with Tony, the problems are so big that psychiatric help is needed by workers to solve them. Such problems, multiplied by the thousands, create slowdowns, absenteeism and spoilages, as well as troubled people.

This is the story of one community where the workers, through their unions, and the community, through its private welfare agencies, recognized how important it is to America and its war effort to get these problems solved.

Tonic for troubled Tony's among Brooklyn's thousands of war workers is a union-sponsored organization that could well be copied by other cities. This is the story of one man and the help that was given to him.

Now, after a year's pioneering in labor-welfare cooperation, 65,000 workers in nine CIO and one AFL local unions in Brooklyn have their own Workers' Service Bureau, financed by a $10,000 grant from the Greater New York Fund. This month it moves out of a little end-of-the-hall office at UE Local 1225, manned by social workers two nights a week, and sets itself up in its own headquarters with a full-time social worker and staff.

PRIMARILY the Workers' Service Bureau is an information and referral center. Where it can directly solve a worker's problem, it will. But its main job will be to direct the workers to existing community agencies which can provide them with help on family, health, housing, child care and financial problems. Sometimes, too, its job is to see that new services are provided when need.

The use of existing community agencies is one of its key characteristics. As a matter of fact, it started because social service employes organized in the CIO Office & Professional Workers Union were determined to find ways to mobilize their field more directly to meet the needs of the nation's war efforts. After some exploratory conversations, they found a sympathetic response from two Brooklyn locals of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and from the Brooklyn Council of Social Planning. Three Brooklyn Agencies—Bureau of Charities, Jewish Family Welfare Society and Catholic Charities—agreed to man the service. The UE locals agreed to provide space for it and make it known to 1 This is Tony. Like the other people in these pictures, he is not the real Tony, for all people who use the Personal Service Bureau can feel certain their cases are kept strictly confidential. But the real Tony, like this one, was a war worker in a plant making ammunition for the Army. Only the pressures of wartime living became too much for him. This is the story of how he got help—the very best kind of help—and got it through his union.

2 WHAT'S the matter, old man? Tony's shop steward asks him as Tony breaks down at his machine. Things too much for you? Why don't you go over and see what this new Personal Service business can do for you?

3 The pretty social worker, a union member herself, talks to Tony and helps him figure out what's wrong. She tells him what a Brooklyn Family Service Agency could do for him. He decides to go.

4 At the family agency he talks things over, and it becomes clear to him and the social worker that he needs a month's leave from his job. The union arranges it with management. The family agency gives him temporary financial assistance. Tony knows this money will help him get well and do his full share of the nation's work. It doesn't scare him any more than medicine would.

5 Tony balks at first at seeing a psychiatrist. The social worker explains to Tony how a psychiatrist can help. Tony thinks this would help him get well. He decides to go and finds the psychiatrist easy to talk to. After Tony has seen the psychiatrist a few times he begins to feel better and thinks he can handle his problems. The doctor advises a little longer time off from work.

6 Tony needs quiet to get well. The social worker finds a neighborhood center where his little girl can go to play after school. Mingling with other children of her own age, she learns more about the complicated business of adjusting her ego to the level demanded by society. Tony, meanwhile, is building up reserve strength both physically and emotionally in preparation for return to his job at the plant and to work with his CIO union.

the workers. Then eight more Brooklyn locals came in—three more UE locals, CIO's Federal Workers, Transport Workers and Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and a local of AFL's Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers. And the New York City CIO Council, through its Health and Welfare Committee, became coordinator of the project.

Today it has proved its worth many times over.

ONE woman came to Personal Service, for instance, with a race relations problem. Night after night she and her husband came home from their war jobs and found their small daughter in tears. In school she was ridiculed and tormented because she was a Negro. Sometimes she wouldn't go to school at all. Then her mother had to stay home with her, piling up a bad absentee record. Personal Service helped the parents get together with other Negro parents to form a delegation to call on the principal. The principal was informed that the union would back them in their request for the end of discriminatory practices. This led to a discussion with the teachers. The results were satisfactory for everyone — and democracy's stock was boosted in Brooklyn.

Another woman, wife of a union member, came to the Personal Service, hysterical because her husband was going into the Army. She felt she must immediately rush out, place her baby in a nursery and get a job. Personal Service assured her that the union would help her do both. Meanwhile, she should take it easy and make the adjustment more slowly.

THESE are examples. But whatever the problem, the effect is the same: higher morale, higher production, happier workers. And as a by-product, a new understanding on the part of both organized labor and organized welfare of their need to cooperate in providing new types of social services to a nation mobilized to win the war and the peace.

7 Tony begins to get restless for his work as he putters around home. Finally the doctor and Tony decide he is ready to take on the responsibilities of a war worker again.

8 Tony, back at work, is greeted by his pals. Boy, the shop steward tells him, we need you to make our production schedule hum!

(All Pictures—Conrad Eiger, Black Star).

New World A-Coming!

After V-E Day

CIO Pres. Philip Murray made a vigorous demand for immediate action "to stabilize our war economy for the tough job ahead of completing the defeat of Japan" after Germany is knocked out of the war, when he testified before the Senate Banking Committee on the renewal of price control legislation.

He called for a reversal of the present trends against stabilization and toward higher prices, higher profits and lower take-home pay.

Pointing out that adequate take-home pay and successful price control are necessary both for war production and for reconversion, Murray called for increased wages to prevent deflation after V-E Day and to insure adequate purchasing power for an expanding economy.

At the same time, he denounced the OPA tendency to raise prices steadily and add to extortionate profits, demanding a tightening of price controls.

The CIO has always led in the fight for real economic stabilization, as proposed in the President's seven-point program. The greatest damage has been done by the failure to put all the points of this program into effect, and by freezing wage rates while prices and profits have been allowed to rise out of all proportion.

Murray's testimony is a timely warning that still more far-reaching damage may be done unless a properly rounded program of stabilization is made effective for the period after V-E Day.

Un-American No. 1

The New Hart Committee on Un-American Activities has not had far to look for a big juicy sample of Un-Americanism. The first outfit it has been asked to investigate is its own predecessor, the Un-American Dies Committee.

Rep. Franck R. Havenner (D., Calif.) has charged the Dies Committee with a false and un-American smear campaign against himself, and the Hart Committee has promised to investigate.

Labor unions and thousands of other patriotic and progressive Americans, in and out of public life, were similarly slandered and smeared in the Dies Committee's long campaign against the New Deal administration, against labor and against progressive Americanism generally.

The Dies Committee's record places it at the top of the list of un-American activities deserving the new committee's attention.

Big Step Forward

Congratulations to the CIO in New York State on leading the successful fight for passage of a strong law forbidding job discriminations on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

The law establishes a permanent state commission with power to prevent any such discriminations in the hiring, rehiring or upgrading of workers. The commission's orders are enforceable in the courts, with fines or imprisonment provided for violations.

This victory will spur the fight for similar laws in other states, and for establishment of a permanent Federal Fair Employment Practice Commission, with real enforcement powers, by Congress.

The CIO nationally, and in every state, as in its unions, makes the ending of racial, religious and other similar discriminations one of its major objectives.

Conscience Stirring

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has described the long-continued persecution of Harry Bridges as a "burden on the conscience of the American people." He has called on President Roosevelt to drop the deportation proceedings and thus allow the CIO longshoremen's leader to become a citizen.

Judging from the hundreds of requests of a similar nature now being made, not only by labor unions (AFL as well as CIO) but also by leaders and plain citizens in every other walk of life, the American conscience is definitely stirring on this issue.

You and your union can help to swell the public protest and put a final end to this disgraceful anti-union case by writing to President Roosevelt and asking him to instruct Attorney-General Biddle to cancel the Bridges deportation proceedings.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

IF you feel like traveling this spring, don't. Just follow the course of world affairs, with the aid of a map, some picture magazines and your own imagination, and you will be wafted to all sorts of odd spots around the globe.

You will not only see much of today's world, but you will also see the outlines of a new world in the making.

Cairo, Teheran, Bretton Woods, Hot Springs, Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta, London, Chapultepec, San Francisco are no longer just places. They have become landmarks in world history.

★ ★ ★

We can start our trip into the future in the land of the ancient Medes and Persians, whose laws were supposed never to change. Would they be surprised at the changes planned right in their old home town!

There, in the oriental heat of Teheran, the United States, Soviet Union and Great Britain sealed a pact of unbreakable unity, not only for winning this war but also for promoting world peace, freedom and prosperity for generations to come.

This pact is the cornerstone of the world structure that has since been in the building. For these Big Three powers control so much military and economic might that no world concert is even conceivable unless it is based on their continued unity.

★ ★ ★

Now, if you're homesick in strange Iran, let's skip back to some pleasant resorts in the USA.

First a brief stop-off at Hot Springs in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, where the lonesome pines had for company representatives of all the United Nations at the first world food conference.

Then on to Atlantic City, where the United Nations agreed on a program of international relief and rehabilitation, through the UNRRA.

Both these conferences limited their plans to the war and the immediate postwar. But not so the gathering at Bretton Woods, in the mountains of New Hampshire.

There experts of all the United Nations made plans looking far into the future—laying the financial basis for world reconstruction, development of backward countries, and vast expansion of world trade. They agreed on an International Bank to provide necessary credits and a Monetary Fund to stabilize world currencies.

★ ★ ★

Next stop-off is the woodsy estate of Dumbarton Oaks in Washington.

There the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, and later China, carefully planned the structure of a world organization to prevent future wars and to unite the nations in the common interests of all mankind.

And now, since our fireside trip is not subject to limitations of time and space, let's go away to the Crimean seaside resort of Yalta.

There the Big Three strengthened their unity by agreeing on war and peace aims in Europe, filled in some gaps in the Dumbarton Oaks structure and decided on a grand opening and housewarming at San Francisco—at which, incidentally, CIO representatives will be on hand.

★ ★ ★

Taking further advantage of our mastery over time and space, we can manage while in the Crimea also to visit foggy, bomb-blasted London.

There we find the CIO playing a leading part in building a world organization of labor.

Before this conference, labor had no direct representation in the various international gatherings, largely because it was not organized on a world scale. Now it can and will make its voice heard.

For instance, let's look in at the Chapultepec palace in Mexico City. There CIO and other labor representatives were invited to help organize the unity of the countries of North and South America against fascist aggression, for higher living standards and for other common purposes.

★ ★ ★

This travelog will have served its purpose if it illustrates how all the geographical points mentioned—and what they now stand for—fit together as parts of one grand plan for a New Deal for the world.

It may also help to explain why the CIO so enthusiastically supports the leadership of President Roosevelt in realizing this plan, which will mean more jobs and prosperity for Americans through expanding world trade and higher living standards, and which will also promote democratic progress free from the threat of fascism and future wars.

The CIO will fight all sabotage of this plan and its essential parts, as President Murray has shown by his demand that Congress ratify the Bretton Woods agreement without amendments, and as will also be shown in the fight to secure American approval of the world organization planned at Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta and San Francisco.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 March 12, 1945 No. 11

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Wm. B. Taylor, Director, Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports: Plaos-Verdes Refinery, Bakersfield, Calif., CIO 22, against 15.

Paper Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, report that on Sunday, Feb. 24, at a meeting held in Kalamazoo, Mich., several hundred members of the Sutherland Independent Union voted to affiliate with the CIO. Field Rep. Geo. Bunch, Secy-Treas. Harry Sayre, and CIO Reg. Dir. Wm. Mayo were speakers at this meeting and explained CIO's position.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. G. Geo. DeNucci, Columbus, advises, Bettis Box Co., Zanesville, Ohio, CIO 37, against 24. PWOC Field Rep. William Walters was in charge.

Dir. of Org. IWA-CIO, George Brown, reports: Clark and Logsdon Logging Co., Eugene, Oregon, CIO 18, no union 8.

Un. Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, report: Thompson Paint Co., Oakmont, Pa., CIO 17, no union 0. CIO Reg. Dir. A. J. Federoff was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joseph D. Cannon, Kentucky, reports: Sandy Valley Grocery Co. (wholesale), Ashland, Ky., CIO 9, no union 2. The AFL Teamsters previously had this firm under contract. Wm. Edwards, Jr., USA, Arthur Warren, volunteer organizer, CIO, and Pres. Mitchell Slone of the URWDSEA Local, were in CIO's corner.

John J. Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Syracuse, N. Y., reports: Nitke Brothers, Syracuse, N. Y., CIO Shoe Workers 15, against 10. Organizational drive was assisted by Harry Babohin of the USWA.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone, New Haven, Conn., reports: Seymour Mfg. Co., Seymour, Conn., CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers 338, no union 150.

A. J. Pittman, Dir. District 8, United Packinghouse Workers, reports: Armour & Co., canning plant, Fort Worth, Texas, CIO 73, no union 6.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Bender, Maryland, reports: Scheneuit Rubber Co., Baltimore, Md., CIO 162, no union 60. URWA Field Rep. Regis J. New and CIO Field Rep. Robert Brylke were in charge.

R. W. Starnes, acting CIO Reg. Dir., New Orleans, La., reports the following election victories: Freiberg Mahogany Co., Kenner, La., about 250 employes involved; Leo Cafiero Co., Donaldsonville, La., about 35 workers are involved. Both of these drives were headed by URWDSEA Field Rep. William Dorsey assisted by the CIO Regional Office. At Supreme Sugar Refinery, Tallieau, La., where 355 people are in the bargaining unit, the CIO won another election.

Conventions Scarce

Scheduled CIO conventions are scarce these days, what with the difficulties of wartime travel and the uncertainty of when V-E Day will come. At least three CIO affiliates, however, have risked the future.

The Int'l. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union has announced its convention for May 8, in San Francisco.

The Maine CIO Council will meet at Biddeford, some time in May, exact date to be chosen later.

The United Furniture Workers, hopes to convene in Grand Rapids, Mich., June 4.

Labor Seeks Rent Curbs In 53 Cities

A campaign to tighten drastically the control of residential rents has been launched by organized labor in 53 of the largest and most important war production centers in the Nation, as a result of survey in these communities.

Cooperating with rent officials of the OPA, local labor committees in these cities are distributing tens of thousands of questionnaires among members of labor unions to learn whether housing accommodations are registered with the OPA, and whether the rent paid by the tenant is within the OPA maximum.

RAISE 'EM NOW, says newest CIO four-page, two-color leaflet, to help war production and to get set for after Victory in Europe Day. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, Washington 6, D. C. 100 for $1.50; 500 for $5; 1,000 for $8.

Dining Car Workers Get Vacations

Paid vacations for dining car employes, something brand new in the history of these badly exploited workers, is the high spot of a contract with the Southern Railroad signed this week by the CIO United Transport Service Employes. A similar agreement covering red caps was also signed.

The new contract, which covers some 900 dining car employes, is effective as of last Jan. 1, and calls for six days' vacation with pay for employes having up to five years' service, and 12 days for those with more than five years' service.

The vacations with pay question will be taken up at a meeting of the Eastern Carriers Conference Committee scheduled to be held in New York City, March 14. This joint group was set up in 1942 to negotiate national demands for the railroads with the CIO union, and is similar to the railroad groups negotiating with the 14 non-operating brotherhoods.

Pres. Willard S. Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes will head the union committee, and H. A. Enochs of the Pennsylvania Railroad will head the Eastern Carriers Committee.

Leather Workers To Vote

Worker employes in about 42 leather processing and finishing companies in Massachusetts will choose between the CIO and the AFL as their union representative in an election ordered by the Nat'l. Labor Relations Board.

Unions involved are the CIO Int'l. Fur & Leather Workers and the AFL United Leather Workers.

The companies are located in the Peabody-Salem-Danvers, Mass. area. The CIO union had a contract with the companies involved which expired in January 1945.

WLB Ruling Protects Vets

A veteran is entitled to all automatic, length-of-service wage increases upon his return to his old job, the Natl. War Labor ruled this week.

The board issued the ruling unanimously in upholding a directive order of the Sixth Regional WLB in a case involving the Marmon-Harrington Co., Indianapolis, makers of tanks, trucks and bulldozers, and the CIO Auto Workers.

Anti-Bias Bill Gets Final OK in N. Y.

By an overwhelming vote of 49 to 6 the New York senate passed the Ives-Quinn bill setting up the nation's first permanent state Fair Employment Practices Commission to fight job discrimination.

The bill awaits signature by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who immediately hailed its passage as "a historic step" putting the state in the leadership of the entire nation in assuring equality of opportunity for all people regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

Only opposition to the bill came from Republicans, who made a feeble last-minute attempt to refer it to a statewide referendum. As in the assembly, where it passed 109 to 32, Democrats supported the bill in a solid bloc and were joined by the GOP leaders as well as rank-and-file Republicans.

The brilliant fight which assured success of this measure was led by organized labor, the CIO and AFL, which brought together the most influential Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, Negro and civic groups in a broad people's lobby. In the face of this pressure the organized big business groups opposing the bill succeeded in getting only a minority of Republicans to front for them.

Ward Court Test Looms

Possibility that legality of the government's seizure of property owned by Montgomery Ward will be tested in the immediate future by the U. S. Supreme Court was seen this week, following action by the company which joined with the Dept. of Justice in asking for an immediate review of the case. A lower court judge had decided that government seizure was illegal.

Personal Mention

Pvt. Philip H. Van Gelder, natl. sec.-treas. of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, is now stationed somewhere in the Appennines, working in the supply section of the Signal Corps, according to a letter received this week by his union.

★ ★ ★

Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO-PAC, has been chosen by Collier's Magazine as one of the eight judges appointed to select the Senator and the Congressman who best served the country in 1945. Each will be awarded a plaque and an honorium of $10,000.

★ ★ ★

Hosiery Editor

William L. Rafsky has been appointed education and research director and editor of the Hosiery Worker, announces Pres. Alexander McKeown of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Rafsky comes to the union from the Labor Office of the War Production Board. He previously did research and educational work for trade unions, consumer groups and youth organizations in his home town, New York. He is 26 years old, married and is 4-F because of eyesight.

★ ★ ★

Elect Kibre

Jeff Kibre, a representative of the CIO Fishermen & Allied Workers, has been elected secretary-treasurer to fill the unexpired term of Martin Hegeberg, who recently resigned.

Kibre, who is a member of the California CIO Council's executive board, was instrumental in organizing 1800 new members in California last year, reports the Fishermen's official paper.

★ ★ ★

California PAC

David Hedley, who organized the San Francisco CIO Political Action Committee's successful campaign to back Pres. Roosevelt, has been appointed California CIO-PAC secretary. This brings the state PAC staff to three with Legislative Director Claudia Williams assigned to northern California and Legislative Director Harry Brown to the southern part of the state.

Hedley came to California in 1943 from Connecticut, where he was secretary of the Connecticut state Labor's Non - Partisan League from 1939 to 1943.

★ ★ ★

Woman Appointed

Elizabeth Golden, newly appointed director of the Los Angeles business and advertising office of the California CIO Council's official weekly, The Labor Herald, heads a staff of five. She worked in the Los Angeles advertising field for the past eight years.

★ ★ ★

With Ohio CIO

Fred Thomas, Cincinnati newspaper-radio editor and writer, has been appointed CIO public relations director for Ohio, announces Pres. Jack Kroll and Acting Sec.-Treas. George De Nucci of the Ohio CIO Council.

Thomas recently was honorably discharged from the U. S. Marine Corps. Prior to entering the Service, he was editor of WCKY newsroom, Cincinnati, and before that was night editor of the WLW newsroom for eight and a half years.

★ ★ ★

Farm Leader

Murray D. Lincoln, general manager of the Ohio Farm Bureau, has split with four veteran executives of the Bureau over the question of his stand on cooperation with labor, reports the Ohio CIO Council. The executives felt "that agriculture and labor should not mix."

Lincoln, who was supported by the Board of Directors on his pro-Labor views, said the split arose over the question of "which way we should go."

"These rumblings are indicative of a new ferment within agriculture," stated the Ohio CIO Council. "More and more forward-looking farm leaders see the truth in the necessity of closer cooperation between agriculture and labor."

★ ★ ★

Minn. Secretary

Rodney C. Jacobson has been named financial secretary of the Minnesota CIO Council to replace Leonard Lageman, who resigned to enter private business. Jacobson is business representative and financial secretary of Local 1144, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in Minneapolis.

Labor Education News

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

CIO School In South

A one-month CIO school, the second sponsored by Southern CIO regional directors, will open at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn., May 7. Students will be selected on the basis of their interest in unionism regardless of how little regular schooling they have had.

Classes will be held like union or committee meetings. Paul Christopher, Tennessee CIO director, who will be one of the teachers, said the 45 students at the school will spend as many hours during the month's course as would be spent in two years' attendance at regular union meetings.

CIO members in the South desiring to attend the school, should get in touch with their regional directors. Total cost for room, board and tuition is $50.

George Mitchell, Southern regional Political Action Committee director, gives this glowing description of the school:

"High on the Cumberland plateau in Tennessee is a school for the Southern Labor Movement. Union people and their friends have been going there for years to meet, to learn and to think.

"It is a place where industrial workers can live for days or weeks near open meadows, close to the woods, and close to the farming people who have the problems and hopes of the Southern countryside. Highlander keeps open house for workers and farmers. Its staff gives help on every union problem. Its students learn by doing in a modern way the work of modern unions.

"For thousands of men and women who, in their own towns, are leading the growth of the people of the South, Highlander is a bright memory of ideas, books, work and friendship that strengthens them day by day."

Something New In Indiana

A six-day educational conference sponsored last month by Allison Local 933, United Automobile Workers, in cooperation with Purdue University Extension Center in Indianapolis brought forth many ideas for bigger and better workers education classes.

More than a hundred members of the local including stewards, committeemen and officers attended the conference which started with a radio program broadcast over two local stations. Regional Director Arnold Atwood led off the discussion over the air with a talk on the importance of union education to defeat home grown fascism.

Purdue University professors held classes and led discussions on public speaking and parliamentary law and union experts conducted talks on collective bargaining and discrimination. Technicolor sound slide films on grievance procedure and seniority featuring "Pete Hothead" and "Joe Steward" were main attractions in the classes on collective bargaining.

Classes were held from 9 a. m. to 12 noon for night shift workers and from 7 to 10 p. m. for those on the day shift. Plans for an extended series of summer school classes grew out of the conference.

On Editing Labor Papers

A movement aimed at teaching workers how to edit union shop papers is under way in some of the eastern locals of the United Automobile Workers. Chevrolet Local 659, Flint, Mich., has formulated plans for a workshop course in journalism and shop paper editing under the University of Michigan extension service.

Douglas Local 201 in Chicago announces that a course in labor journalism conducted by Arthur Houser, regional UAW educational director, is scheduled to meet every other Tuesday, alternating with shop stewards meetings.

Late in January a conference of local union editors in Pontiac, Lansing, Bay City, Saginaw and Flint, Mich. held a conference and outlined a program including plans for a quarterly contest for shop papers under the guidance of the UAW's Educational Committee. Prizes are to be awarded to winners for the best personal endeavor, news item, feature article, poem, cartoon, picture, or editorial) and the best endeavor of a newspaper as a whole.

* * *

A course in labor journalism given in cooperation with "Minnesota Labor," official weekly of the Minnesota CIO Council, is part of the education program sponsored by the Minneapolis locals of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The program also includes a series of community forums and classes in trade union topics and practices.

Townsend Plans Daily Paper

A plan to start a national daily paper has been approved by the trustees of the Townsend Foundation. The Townsend Plan, says the organization's National Weekly, "though generally thought of as an old-age pension measure, actually is merely a program for stabilizing American business at high levels by maintaining the flow of purchasing power. Its old-age pension provisions are more or less by-products."

Contacting Churches

Practical steps to cooperate with religious groups are being taken by the Kokomo, Ind. CIO Council, reports Marcus E. Deardorff, the council's secretary. Copies of the CIO pamphlet "Labor and Religion have been sent to pastors of all churches in the community," Deardorff says, and replies from interested ministers are being received.

The Rev. L. G. Jacobs of the Main Street Methodist Church of Kokomo wrote Deardorff that he liked the pamphlet's "straightforwardness and suggestions for better understanding and cooperation in the vital problem of fairness and equality of opportunity for all men of whatever race, creed or color."

The Rev. J. W. Fox, minister of the Grace Methodist Church wrote that he appreciated receiving the pamphlet and had read it with great interest. "I greatly appreciate the position of Labor at the present time and will be glad to be of any possible service to you that I can," he said.

CIO Men Talk At Catholic Conference

Two CIO leaders participated in the recently held Natl. Catholic Industrial Conference of the South, at Norfolk, Virginia.

Director of Industrial Councils John Brophy warned the parley that we must plan now to achieve the goal of jobs for all. Pointing out that labor has done a magnificent job producing for war, he said:

"There is no real reason, if the right economic system is organized, why we cannot do as well after the war as we are doing now in producing things needed by all nations."

Sec.-Treas. John Yancey of the CIO Transport Service Employes urged planned production for peace as well as for war, and the stressing of human and material values.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Do you know that beautiful poem of Archibald MacLeish about the young dead soldiers? It ends:

"We leave you our deaths.
Give them their meaning,
Give them an end to the war and a true peace,
Give them a victory that ends the war and a peace afterwards
Give them their meaning.
We were young, they say,
We have died.
Remember us."

That poem expresses one of the themes of War Mothers Week, which the CIO Auxiliaries are celebrating this year the last week in March.

A national broadcast on the CIO Blue Network series on March 24 will open the week. The program will dramatize the great contribution to the war of the women in the union families whose husbands, sons and daughters are in the armed forces. Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, Congresswoman at large from Illinois, and member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, will speak on the responsibility of women in insuring world machinery to guarantee peace.

All over the country special meetings and social affairs are being planned by the auxiliaries to pay tribute to the wives and mothers of our servicemen and women.

In San Francisco special ceremonies will be held at the CIO Canteen, where servicemen and women will join the unions in honoring the wives and mothers who have carried on at home.

In Washington, D. C., the United Federal Workers and their auxiliary are planning a big public meeting. The auxiliary to Shipyard Local No. 1 in Camden, N. J., is planning another big affair, like they had last year to honor the wives and mothers of more than 8,000 Local No. 1 members in uniform.

War Mothers Week is part of the membership drive plan of the National UE Auxiliary. They hope to draw many more wives and mothers of union servicemen into participation in auxiliary activities.

In Cleveland all the auxiliaries are uniting to hold a supper and meeting on April 10. War wives and mothers of the UAW in South Bend, Indiana, will pin gold and blue stars to represent their boys on a big service flag made by Auxiliary 41 during the ceremonies there.

These meetings and social affairs will stress the importance of helping our servicemen and women as they come home, to readjust to civilian life. They will try to bring to the wives and mothers who have stayed at home an understanding of some of the problems our veterans will face.

BUILDING LASTING PEACE

The major emphasis of all the meetings, however, will be on the paramount importance of building a lasting peace. They will appeal to the war wives and mothers above all to make it their business to see that the promise of Dumbarton Oaks and the Crimea Comference becomes a reality.

Congress now has before it the bill to put the Bretton Woods agreement into effect. Passage of that bill is a vital first step towards world peace because the Bretton Woods agreement sets up the international bank and international monetary fund which will guarantee loans and keep currencies stable.

Stable currencies and loans free from political controls will help to remove the causes of war. They will also result in increased world trade which in turn means more jobs and better living for people everywhere.

Hearings on Bretton Woods are going on now in the House Banking and Currency Committee. Let your Congressman know that the women in your community support this agreement as the first step toward building a lasting peace.

The ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Tough Sledding For Labor In The State Legislatures

(Continued from Page 1)

labor unions through regulatory measures and eventually accomplish their destruction," according to CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman.

Further evidence of the fear which with some state legislatures regard the advancement of labor is the fact that six state bodies are considering laws which would limit unions' political activity—California, Colorado, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan and New Mexico.

The picture, fortunately, isn't all bad:

1. Labor defeated a right to work law in Georgia.

2. Five states are considering proposed labor relations laws, similar to the National Labor Relations Act—Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon and Washington.

3. Fourteen states are considering anti-discrimination bills, and New York this week passed one that has plenty of teeth in it. The lineup: California, Colorado (weak bill), Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana (weak), Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico (weak), Ohio, Pennsylvania, Washington (passed House) and Wisconsin.

Most of these bills, if passed, would set up state fair employment practice commissions similar to New York's, with enforcement powers like those of the NLRB.

Anti-union laws of two states—Alabama and Florida—are being tested in the U. S. Supreme Court, with both CIO and AFL confident that they will be found unconstitutional.

What's Best For The People?

Labor's position, as outlined by General CIO Counsel Pressman, is this:

"Labor unions do not take the position that they are completely beyond any control of the law. Organized labor has maintained that for any of its acts or for those of its members or representatives which are in violation of public peace or public order, punishment may be meted out.

"Further, if there are any specific abuses in which labor unions have been engaged, which abuses may be held to be in violation of the public interest, appropriate regulatory measures would be in order where directed against such abuses.

"Even in this connection it should be observed that in some instances public interest may demand that it is more important to retain the continued existence and functioning of labor unions than to enact legislation directed against certain abuses if such legislation would threaten the very existence of labor unions."

What Pressman was talking about is best shown by a state-by-state listing of anti-union bills that have been introduced in state legislatures. It follows:

ARIZONA: Makes unlawful denial of employment because of membership or lack of membership in a labor organization and outlaws union shop and maintenance of membership contracts (right to work law).

ARKANSAS: Right to work bill (passed right to work amendment in 1943). Also: bill that says "freedom of organized labor to bargain collectively and freedom of unorganized labor to bargain individually is declared to be legal in this state." Also: bill that prohibits unions from collecting dues in excess of 2 per cent of wages and forbids collection of dues before a member begins work. Also: bill requiring unions to file financial reports, membership lists and addresses of officials.

CALIFORNIA: Bill that prohibits unions from controlling, directing or preventing political activities or affiliations of members or from assessing members for political contributions. Also: bill authorizing unions to expel or exclude members affiliated with "organizations advocating the overthrow of the government," loosely defining them as "subversive." Also: bill that would make wartime hot cargo and secondary boycott law permanent.

COLORADO: Amendments to "labor peace" act to take the place of parts that were declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court would require union registration and filing of financial statements, forbid use of union funds for political purposes, demand a majority vote on strikes and prohibit unions from collecting any money as a condition for the "privilege of work" (aimed at smashing union shop agreements). The Chamber of Commerce has withdrawn its support for the proposals.

CONNECTICUT: Bill modelled after Wisconsin "labor peace act" would restrict activities of workers and employers, and would require a 75 per cent vote of approval of union shop agreements. Also: bill requiring unions to file information statements, including purposes for expenditures of over $100.

MARYLAND: Right to work amendment. Also: bill providing for registration of unions and organizers, outlawing union political contributions, outlawing picketing by persons other than strikers who were employed by the business picketed, granting employers under union shop agreements authority to hire non-union members if union members violate contract terms, requiring compulsory arbitration of disputes, and providing that strikes must be voted by secret ballots of three fifths of the union membership, with a week's prior notice to the employer before the strike can be called. Strikes in jurisdictional disputes are forbidden and anyone injured by them can sue for damages. Would forbid any union against which a judgment has been awarded from collecting dues until the judgment has been satisfied.

MASSACHUSETTS: Bill restricting picketing (as previously noted). Also: bill forbidding unions to make political contributions. Bill forbidding strikes unless voted by majority of union membership.

MICHIGAN: Bill would ban use of union funds for political action, would outlaw unincorporated unions, would make unions liable to civil suit and make union members who strike in violation of contract or of any law guilty of a felony. Conspiracy to molest or disturb persons in the peaceful pursuit of their occupations would be considered a felony.

MINNESOTA: Bill would outlaw secondary boycotts. Also: bill would give employers right to sue for loss of profits due to jurisdictional disputes.

Bill Outlaws Profane Language

NEBRASKA: Bill would make unlawful interference with the right to work by using profane, abusive or threatening language or by persisting in talking to, photographing against his will, coercing or frightening any person or his family to influence his quitting or refraining from seeking employment. Would outlaw picketing within 30 feet of premises. Outlaws sitdown strikes.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Right to work bill.

NEW MEXICO: Right to work bill. Also: bill that would forbid union political contributions, would require registration of unions and financial statements. Would require all union officials, including pickets and grievance committee members, to be citizens and residents of the state for at least one year (excepts only national or district officials having jurisdiction over an area partly outside the state).

NORTH DAKOTA: Prohibits use of check-off method of collecting dues.

SOUTH DAKOTA: Passed right to work law.

TENNESSEE: Right to work bill. Also: bill making any union with a contract liable to an employer for violations of terms of the agreement by any employe and for any acts of violence or damage by the employe to the employer or his property while the worker is on the boss' premises.

TEXAS: Right to work bill. 1943 law required union registration, listing of organizers, and banned union political contributions.

VERMONT: Right to work bill. Also: bill would make applicable to unions laws applying to corporations, including a 2 per cent tax on net income.

WISCONSIN: Bill requires unions to file $5,000 surety bonds for chartering locals within the state.

Anti-Union Box Score

Here's what state legislatures have cooking in the way of anti-labor legislation. "X's" in the first three columns mean that laws or amendments to state constitutions have been introduced.

	New Right-to Work Laws or Amendments	Laws Limiting Political Activity	Other Restrictive Labor Legislation	1943 Anti-union laws
Alabama				x
Arkansas	x		x	x
Arizona	x
California		x	x
Colorado	x	x	x	x
Connecticut			x
Florida				x
Idaho				x
Kansas				x
Maryland	x	x	x
Massachusetts		x	x
Michigan		x	x	x
Minnesota			x
Nebraska			x
New Hampshire	x
New Mexico	x	x	x
North Dakota			x
South Dakota	(Passed)			x
Tennessee	x
Texas	x			x
Vermont	x
Wisconsin			x

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 12 March 19, 1945

CIO Board Urges

'Victory Visits' To Spur Wage Boost Drive

(See Pages 3, 6 & 9)

★ ★ ★

Two Exclusives

Working Hands Across the Border

(See Page 7)

★ ★ ★

Building Planes And Having Babies Too!

(See Page 5)

UAW-CIO Charges

Some Auto Bosses Seek Labor War

Managements deliberately provoking conflict with labor have been responsible for most of the stoppages in the auto industry, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers Union testified before the Mead Senate Investigating Committee, which last week in Detroit was probing problems of manpower hoarding.

Counter-attacking against the smear campaign started against the union by anti-labor automobile executives, Thomas told the Senate Committee, headed by Sen. James M. Mead (D., N. Y.), that:

> "It is my conviction that the bulk of UAW-CIO strikes have taken place in plants where management policies have sought deliberately to provoke such stoppages.
>
> "I can explain recent actions of the Chrysler and Briggs Corps. only as direct attempts to inspire work stoppages among their employes. No management could have been naive enough to doubt that the wholesale discharge of union committeemen and workers in the manner chosen could have had any effect other than the promotion of industrial strife."

Thomas cited a 16-page, single spaced report listing the union's contributions toward plans for increasing production, and government reports on the increased productivity of workers, as evidence that union members are not laying down on the job.

He pointed out that the time lost through strikes in the Michigan auto industry has declined from a figure of 1.14 percent during 1939-1941 to only .26 percent during 1942-1944.

2-1 UAW Vote For No-Strike Pledge

A 2-1 vote for retention of the CIO Auto Workers Union no-strike pledge was reported this week, with about 300,000 ballots being cast in a union-wide referendum which was ordered by the last UAW-CIO convention.

With official tallies withheld until the vote can be announced by regions, UAW-CIO representatives said that the score roughly was 64 percent for retention of the union's Pearl Harbor pledge and 35 percent against.

RALLY FOR WORLD UNITY: 20,000 cheering people jammed New York's Madison Square Garden last week to hear CIO President Murray and CIO delegates to the London Trade Union Conference report on international labor unity. Right, the impressive stage setting.

CIO Gives Congress Lowdown on Prices

Senators working on price control got an insight into the issues this week from two CIO sources—the man who heads the CIO and three CIO Auxiliary housewives who spend CIO paychecks.

From Philip Murray, the Senators on the Banking and Currency Committee heard testimony placing price control, up before them for renewal, in relation to the need for a strong economy now and after V-E Day. Following Murray, they heard a brief charted lecture from Donald Montgomery, UAW-CIO Consumer Counsel, on profits.

At the end of Murray's testimony, the Senators heard at first hand what it is like to cope with problems of feeding, clothing and generally bringing up a husband and kids on Little Steel Formula wages. Evidently the Senators felt they could learn, because they stayed two hours over the time allotted to CIO that day.

Murray began by reminding the Senators of labor's no-strike pledge at Pearl Harbor time and of the commitment made in return to see that wage earners were going to be able to get by.

"The leaders of labor in the U. S. met with the President and gave to him and to the country a commitment that for the duration of the war organized labor would not engage in strikes to force redress for any wrongs that might be perpetrated against it by employers while the war was going on," he said.

PROMISE TO LABOR

"We sought at that time and secured from the President a commitment that there would be created an agency to adjudicate the disputes of workers in American industry."

This commitment has not been kept, Murray went on, either through the operation of price control or through the War Labor Board. The Board, he said, has been so hedged around with limitations that there is now "very little hope for labor in the U. S. getting a square deal out of the WLB under existing practices."

Neither WLB nor OPA take profits into consideration when setting wages or prices, he explained, pointing out that this has meant unbridled profiteering all down the line, while wages are still held at the Little Steel level.

PLANS NEEDED NOW

War needs now and after V-E Day call for quick action both to raise basic wage rates by junking the formula and to curb the worst excesses of profit-taking, he said.

"All of us who are for a high national income and real stabilization hope that the government will have a program to maintain income at the highest possible level," he said.

"But since the WLB has apparently decided that such things as merit increases, premium pay and the like shall all be added to the basic wage rates and considered part of the basic rate, labor wonders if this policy will be maintained after V-E Day, when such premium increases cease to exist. If this is done, it will be an industrial catastrophe."

At the end of his testimony, Murray made three basic points: 1) Congress in extending price control should insist on a unified policy by government agencies on wages now and after V-E Day; 2) Congress should demand that OPA stop insuring profits; 3) OPA should maintain more effective price control generally.

Following Murray, three CIO Auxiliary women—Eleanor Fowler, CWA secretary-treasurer; Annie Stein, Federal Workers, and Katherine Beecher, UE, came on the stand to tell the housewives' story.

ASK GRADE LABELING

They asked for repeal of Sen. Taft's (R. O.) amendment of last year against grade labeling, which fosters wholesale cheating on canned goods, and for repeal of the Bankhead amendment that has blown textile profits sky-high and kept prices down.

They asked for funds enough to let OPA do a job of cracking down on violators and on the black market, which cheats the working class family out of even the chance to see meat at the butcher's counter.

Finally, they said they hoped "that this year OPA will get a stronger act and a much bigger budget."

We Know Just How You Feel, Senator!

The CIO Auxiliary witness at the price control hearings was holding up a pair of seven-year-old Ann's pants. See, she told the Senators, I washed them once and now they won't fit my five-year-old. That's what quality deterioration means. And at that they're hard to get.

One Senator, slightly on the stout side, was sympathetic. "Yes," he said, "it's awful. Tell me—this is off the record, of course—do you know where I can get a decent pair of men's shorts for myself?"

Says No Need To Up Prices Of Textiles

Testifying at the Senate price control hearings for the CIO Textile Workers, Solomon Barkin, union research director, told the Banking Committee members that huge profits can easily absorb the cost of the wage increase of five cents ordered by the WLB but blocked by Vinson.

"The textile wage decision is a modest effort at correcting substandard conditions of living among the 600,000 cotton rayon workers, and relieving a shortage in textile production which is becoming one of the most serious bottlenecks in our military and civilian economy," he said.

Textile profits, before taxes, were $28,000,000 a year in the 1936-39 period, are currently at the rate of $365,000,000 a year, Barkin said.

Even the WLB award, which was made to help offset critical manpower and production shortages, "will only moderately improve present conditions and leave wages well below a subsistence level," he added.

20,000 Hear CIO World Unity Plans

Twenty thousand CIO members and a fair sprinkling from the AFL—heard Philip Murray, and other CIO leaders just back from the London conferences, tell a N. Y. City rally last week the story of a new world labor unity that has put 50,000,000 workers from 35 countries back of the United Nations and the decisions of Yalta.

They met in New York's huge Madison Square Garden, which was jammed with people in every gallery at the invitation of the New York CIO, headed by Joe Curran, to listen to and applaud the CIO leaders, as well as Soviet Ambassador Andrei Gromyko, Sen. Claude A. Pepper, Rep. Helen Douglas, and representatives of the U.S. Secretary of State and the British Ambassador.

Murray told the meeting that "with no reservations, the new world labor federation has given its support to Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and Yalta. In conformity with the people's wishes, it is now proceeding to help perfect a peace that will satisfy the aspirations of all peoples," he said.

"It must be our resolve to destroy every atom of Nazism and fascism throughout the world," Murray added to the Garden's cheers, "and to inflict such punishment on those who have subjected the world to monstrous cruelties, that everyone will understand no agressor can ever rise again."

UNITY FOR VICTORY and after was one of the major themes of the big CIO rally in N. Y. Top: UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and NMU Pres. Joseph Curran, who chaired the meeting. Pres. Sidney Hillman (l.) of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers chats with Senator Claude Pepper of Florida.

Praises USSR

UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, who was chairman of the CIO delegation to London, had high praise for the other delegates, especially those who had come to London from "countries which only the other day, actually speaking, were countries starving under the knout of Nazi slavery."

Thomas attacked "agencies of reactionary propaganda" which for years "had attempted to build a wall between the Russians and the rest of the world. The Russian workers have been held outside the circle of international labor," he said. "Some say their unions are not democratic; others that their unions are merely instruments of the Russian foreign office," he declared. "I want to testify here and now that we saw no such signs in the conduct of the great Russian delegation in London. The Russians were cooperative in the extreme.

"As far as I am concerned, I shall pay no further heed to the propaganda that says these Russian unions and their leaders are not free agents. They demonstrated at London that they are democratic trade unionists, ready to give and take in the arena of discussion."

Drawing the parallel between the London union conference and the Roosevelt-Stalin-Churchill meeting in the Crimea, Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, also freshly back from the world labor meeting, said:

"The delegates at London fully rcognized the close inter-relation between their conference and the meeting at Yalta. One of their first formal acts was to send telegrams . . . hailing the results achieved at the Crimea, pledging their full support in carrying out the decisions of that conference."

Hillman warned against "powerful and unscrupulous forces that are at work in an effort to sabotage and defeat it. They spread subtle anti-Soviet and anti-British poison, hoping to split us from our allies. They weep crocodile tears over the rights of small nations, while working for the restoration of the rotten pre-war reactionary regimes.

"They pose as perfectionists in their criticism of the Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks proposals. They hope to destroy these two cornerstones of world peace with reservations, just as they dealt a deathblow to the League of Nations a quarter of a century ago."

Open Door for AFL

Murray took time in his speech to repeat his invitation to the leaders of the AFL to join step with the workers of the United Nations in building world labor unity.

"I regret that the leaders of the AFL did not see fit to attend," he said. "We invite the AFL to come back into the councils of world labor. We have no prejudices, but we do have desires not only for international unity but for national unity here as well. We of the CIO are not going to preach or practice disunity in the United States."

CIO to Senate

Fair Job Law a 'Must' For Top War Output and Sound Economy in Peace

Job bars against Negroes, Jews, Catholics and the foreign born are a barrier to full war production and a threat to wages and security after victory, James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, told the Senate Labor Committee in testimony this week on a bill to set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

Citing a score of war production areas where refusal to hire minority group workers has cut into output, Carey said:

"We of the CIO are aware that a depressed minority group is a threat to our individual and national security.

"Only the interests that derive a profit from discrimination are served by the maintenance of a group of workers labelled 'second class.' They make a convenient reservoir of cheap labor, willing or not, because they must eat."

Carey urged passage of the bipartisan FEPC bill (S 101), which has enforcement powers. He opposed the Taft (R. O.) bill (S 459) which would make the FEPC powerless. He again cited war production shortages due to discrimination as an argument for S 101, saying:

"From my observations of the present FEPC (which was set up by FDR's executive order) it has become apparent that its essential weakness is the lack of enforcement powers. It may seem hard to believe that after almost four years of operation of the FEPC, war jobs are still kept vacant by discrimination."

Through the CIO's policy of non-discrimination, and through the operations of the present FEPC, "our experience has demonstrated that men of all colors and creeds will work together," Carey said.

"Having shared this experience, no decent American is willing to condone a reversion to the pre-war patterns of American discrimination."

CIO Takes Wage Drive To FDR and People With 'Victory Visit' Campaign

(Editorial Comment — Page 6; Partial Text — 9)

Plans to take the CIO's program for higher wages not only directly to President Roosevelt but to the people of the United States with a "Victory Visit" campaign were hammered out at the CIO Executive Board meeting last weekend in New York City. The CIO called for a substandard wage minimum of at least 65 cents an hour.

The Natl. War Labor Board was sharply criticized in a resolution reaffirming CIO's no-strike pledge without "quibbling or modification" and mapping an aggressive wage drive, which was adopted by a 45-2 vote. But proposals of the Textile and Auto Workers Unions to withdraw from the WLB were tabled, with only the four representatives of these unions voting against the motion.

CIO's position, as outlined by Pres. Philip Murray, is that "we want to reform the Board, and have no intention of withdrawing from it."

The same over-all resolution that criticized the Board, that urged changes to speed its disposal of cases, and that demanded revision of the Little Steel wage freeze formula, also said:

No-Strike Position

"We reiterate again, in order that there be no misunderstanding, that we fully understand and appreciate that now more than ever it is of the utmost importance to our war effort that there be maintained uninterrupted production.

"The CIO and its members are fully conscious of this need and therefore shall observe our solemn pledge that until we have accomplished a complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge."

To push the drive for wage boosts, the CIO:

1. Appointed a six-man committee (President Murray, R. J. Thomas, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Sherman Dalrymple and Sidney Hillman) to take the pay proposals directly to President Roosevelt in the immediate future.

2. Urged formation by international and local unions of industry-wide and community "Victory Visiting Committees" that will consult industrialists and local government officials on plans for jobs during the reconversion and postwar periods.

"CIO members will not be the only ones who want to know: 'What will happen in our town when the war orders are done?'" said President Murray. "To this end the 'Victory Visitors' will propose that cooperative conferences be called by the municipal officers, attended by all the organized groups and interested individuals in the community.

"These should not be large meetings, but working conferences, at which manufacturers and business executives can be asked: 'What is the schedule for jobs and production in your plant? What wages will you pay to create purchasing power in this community?'"

CIO members were urged to explain the need of high wages to keep consumer purchasing power adequate, of low prices to insure mass buying, of a good tax program to promote national prosperity, and of democratic planning, public construction projects and an expanded social security program.

Wage Meet Asked

In wage proposals to President Roosevelt, the Board urged FDR to call a conference of representatives of industry, labor and government to formulate a new pay policy. The Board warned that:

"The ability of our nation to maintain the fullest utilization of manpower, material and plants in the conversion from war production to new levels of consumer and civilian production require a broadened wage policy which will assure a steadily expanding purchasing power on the part of the great mass of American people."

The CIO called on the President to return to the WLB authority to make adjustments to eliminate wage inequities which hamper the prosecution of the war. Under such authority, the Board would be free to render decisions on the basis of equity involving such issues as group insurance, severance pay, sick leave and unworked holidays, and payment for all time spent by employes under company direction.

"With its original authority thus restored," the CIO said, "the Board would no longer be subjected to the paralyzing veto power usurped by Judge Vinson, former Director of Economic Stabilization, and the OPA."

Hit WLB Delay

The CIO sharply criticized delay in handling WLB cases and also expressed its "complete dissatisfaction with the glaring failure to accomplish effective and just national economic stabilization, the obstinate and short-sighted policies of the WLB, Judge Vinson and Justice Byrnes, and their complete desertion of responsibility to provide appropriate wage policies to meet the present and impending needs of this nation."

In other actions, the CIO:

1. Voted to support the UAW-CIO—and all other unions similarly involved—in its fight to obtain compliance with a WLB directive involving the E. A. Laboratories, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y.

2. Set up a committee on jurisdictional disputes (John Green, Sherman Dalrymple and Frank Rosenblum, respectively of the Shipyard, Rubber and Amalgamated Clothing Workers) with power to make final decisions, subject to review and final action only by CIO conventions.

3. Heard reports of delegates to the London World Trade Union Congress and directed them to continue as a committee which will press for formation of a permanent world trade union body.

4. Set April 12 as the date of the next CIO Executive Board meeting, in Washington.

Mrs. Douglas On CIO's Radio Show

Congresswoman Emily Taft Douglas will be the No. 1 attraction of CIO's Blue Network radio show at 6:45 p. m. EWT Saturday, March 24. "Salute to War Mothers" is the name of the program.

CBS will do another of its dramatic stories, this time on the aircraft industry, on a 3:45 p. m. EWT nationwide broadcast the same day.

The listening's good—are you enjoying it?

★ ★ ★

Criticism of commercialism in radio broadcasting was voiced last week by Paul Porter, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

Porter told a meeting of the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters that "somehow there must be a determination as to whether broadcasting is simply going to operate as an advertising media or whether it will continue to perform an increasing measure of public service functions in addition."

A few days later NBC announced that henceforth commercials will be eliminated in the middle of news broadcasts.

★ ★ ★

Chalk up a neat job of script writing to the credit of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The subject matter of a couple of recent 15-minute scripts is universal enough so that with slight rewriting they could be adapted to other unions —"When He Comes Back" (on veterans) and "Our Union—Your Union."

★ ★ ★

The up-and-coming N. Y. CIO Council has announced plans for the creation of a N. Y. CIO Radio Chorus, with a series of auditions scheduled to start March 31.

PAC OK, Says Senate Probe Group

The CIO Political Action Committee got a clean bill of health from the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee this week, with the Committee praising PAC's "spirit of cooperation" in making information available.

"In contrast to some other organizations," said a Committee report, "the PAC filed regular financial statements with the Clerk of the House of Representatives."

The Republicans spent a little more than $13 million on the election last Fall and the Democrats almost $7½ million.

Among the Republican contributions was $109,000 from 31 members of the duPont family and $96,000 from nine members of the family of the anti-labor shipbuilder, Joseph Pew. Large contributions also were received from members of the Rockefeller, Mellon, Guggenheim and Vanderbilt families.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Do You Know That: Woody Guthrie, great folk singer, exclusive on Asch records, came from the Dust Bowl and is now a merchant seaman.

And Do You Know That: Asch records feature Mountain Songs, Cowboy Songs, Square Dances (with mandolins, guitars, banjos), Jazz, Boogie Woogie, Blues, popular jazz favorites.

Write for Catalogue to

STINSON TRADING CORP.

27 Union Sq. West, New York 3, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

UNION BUYER'S GUIDE

BUTTONS AND BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY

INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING

UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches

Also Specializing in

Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS
BRUnswick 7815

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 388 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

Texas Vote Probe Of Christian Americans

Sen. W. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel took a belly blow from the people of Texas March 13 as the House of Representatives voted 111 to 14 to probe his Christian American Assn. storm trooper outfit now sponsoring right-to-work legislation outlawing the union shop in Texas and in other states throughout the nation.

Also named for investigation in the resolution are Fight for Free Enterprise, Inc., believed to be a subsidiary of Frank E. Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government; the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers; and a pro-company union newspaper, The Negro Labor News, published in Houston by C. W. Rice, who is used by unscrupulous whites to create sentiment for measures like the right-to-work bill among Negroes.

Negro leaders of Texas are opposed to the bill. A chain of Negro newspapers, published by Carter Wesley of Houston, has published front page stories and editorials showing that the measure would bar Negroes from all skilled jobs.

An amendment to the resolution would also authorize the investigating committee to probe the activities of Texas unions fighting the bill. This amendment has been accepted and adopted in the house by a voice vote. Texas labor leaders told this reporter they had no objection to going before the committee and telling "their side of the story" to the people of Texas.

Amvets Split Growing Over Bum Beef with Labor

The split in the ranks of the American Veterans of World War II is growing wider and wider.

Dissension was set off several weeks ago by Le Mar Bailey, national first vice-commander, who declared at Dallas, Texas, that Amvets was planning to conduct a "crusade" against CIO and PAC.

At Waco, Texas, near Dallas, George Donaldson resigned as post adjutant in protest, Federated Press reported.

Another repudiation of Bailey's statement came from Buffalo, N. Y., where William E. Blake, of Amvets' national executive committee, wrote CIO Regional Director Hugh Thompson:

"No officer of Amvets is authorized to take such action without the approval of the national executive committee."

Criticism of the stand taken by Bailey was also expressed by officials of the Global War Veterans.

"We feel it is a mistake for any infant veterans organization to speak for our fighting men overseas on any controversial issue," said Thomas H. Chunn, natl. secretary of GWV.

Point-of-Production Plan Teaches Disabled Vets Jobs

Recovery through work is being used successfully at the Birmingham Hospital in San Fernando Valley, near Los Angeles, where wounded GIs are working in plane factories to help blast Hitler and Hirohito off the earth. The plan has been approved by the CIO Auto Workers and AFL Machinists at the plants, Northrup and Lockheed.

Only patients who volunteer work in the shops and only with the approval of the medical officers. Permitted to work three hours a day, they are paid the union scale of 85 cents hourly.

Even bed patients volunteer. Some of the wounded heroes go to work while they are still confined to wheel chairs, with arms or legs locked in casts and wearing bandages. Production is excellent.

The plan has been in operation six months and only one patient dropped out because he wanted to. There is no absenteeism or racial segregation, the soldier - workers knowing that bullets and bombs struck white, Negro, Protestant, Catholic and Jew without discrimination.

CIO Enlarges Vet Group To Tackle New Problems

The return of thousands of veterans to civilian life has led the CIO to enlarge its veterans' committee to nine members and to call a meeting of the group at CIO headquarters early in April.

Decision to enlarge the committee was reached by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Clinton S. Golden, committee chairman.

In addition to Golden, representing the Steelworkers, and James B. Carey, representing the national CIO, the presidents of the following unions have been asked to name committee members:

Auto Workers, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Shipbuilding Workers, Textile Workers Union, Oil Workers International Union, Newspaper Guild and the Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers. Golden and Carey have been serving on a smaller committee.

The committee is expected to consider ways of putting into effect the resolution on veterans adopted at the 1944 CIO convention. Other matters to be listed on the agenda for consideration are the administration of Veterans Hospitals, the system of furnishing veterans with artificial limbs, and present methods of paying benefits to disabled veterans.

CIO Rubber Goes to War

1. Delegation to France from the CIO Rubber Workers sees one reason why tires are urgently needed—the effect of a land mine. The nine-man delegation that recently toured the European war front included Howard R. Lloyd, Freeman B. Van Houton, Clarence V. Wheeler, Francis M. Hannley, George R. Bass, and William A. Nelson, of Akron, O.; Albert T. Lunceford, Huntington Park, Calif.; John F. Marmon, Detroit, and William D. Richards, Barberton, Ohio.

2. Three delegates, Hannley, Lloyd, and Marmon, visit GI's in a tire repair unit in France. The delegates were much impressed with the effectiveness of the overseas salvage program. War waste is reduced to a minimum, they said.

3. A soldier recapping a tire at an ordnance depot in France is watched by Brig. Gen. Charles Thrasher, Lloyd, Lunceford and Marmon. Delegates have been telling the story of their trip to fellow workers at home who last year made an all-out production pledge, and have kept it by increasing tire output 46 percent since October.

THESE THREE WOMEN war workers appear well satisfied with the facilities at a Federally-financed infant care center at San Diego as they prepare their children for the journey homeward.

A MARINE'S WIFE, Mrs. Florence Bendure, looks on at a San Diego infant care center as her 18-month-old son, Brad, plays with Milton Bourne. Mrs. Bendure is a stenographer at a plane plant.

Building Planes And Having Babies, Too!

"THERE'S simply no way of doing it!" exclaimed Harriet Stanley as she pushed aside the paper on which she had been trying to figure how she would keep her baby and herself on the $80 allotment sent her by her husband—in the Army and overseas.

Figuring as closely as possible, she found that she would need at least $20 more per month. There were the figures:

Rent, $40; food, $40; medical and dental care for herself, $4 (the EMIC program includes medical care for sick babies for a year after birth) cooking and heating, $3.50; washing and housecleaning supplies, $1; postage, $1.50; clothing $6; toilet articles and miscellaneous, $2.25; total, $98.25.

"You can't have kids and hold down a war job!" Thousands of women have accepted that statement as the truth. But hundreds of others in San Diego plane plants are holding down jobs and having babies, too! This is their story.

If only she were able to return to her job in the plane plant where she worked before the baby arrived. But she was up against a blank wall in that direction because there was no infant care center in the community.

Multiply Harriet's problem ten thousand times and you find why more women are not engaged in war work.

FACED with problems similar to Harriet's, San Diego, Calif., women war workers, decided to do something about them. Their unions, the CIO Auto Workers and the AFL Machinists, were eager to help. They joined with the CIO Council, the AFL central body and community groups to persuade the Federal Government to furnish $84,000 a year for infant-care centers.

This was enough not only to provide for the maintenance of two centers, which were being operated with money lent by the Consolidated Vuultee and Rohr Aircraft Corps., but also to set up eight additional centers.

It wasn't easy to get the money, but the women war workers think it was well worth the effort. Now they know that while they are at work, their children will be well provided for by trained personnel who know their business.

NEED for infant child care centers was first established by a special action committee of the Joint War Council on Child Care, a subcommittee of the San Diego War Council.

Members of this committee were Parent-Teacher Assn. leaders, Federal housing workers and war-plant counsellors, who were well aware of the problem. The Navy, the President's Committee on Congested War Production Areas, the local War Manpower Commission and industry—the latter pressed by mounting labor needs—supported the committee.

Surveys were made to show how many women wanted jobs but couldn't take them because they had infants.

As required by the Federal Works Agency at Washington, dispenser of the Lanham Act funds, a sponsor was needed for the project. A Parent-Teacher Assn. took the job.

The Children's Bureau of the Labor Dept. at Washington opposed the project, advocating a foster home program.

Supporters of the infant center program advanced the facts that foster home costs are high—from $45 to $75 a month; that the homes are run by persons somtimes more interested in profits than in their young charges, and that they were inadequate to provide care for a sufficent number of infants. Arguments advanced for infant care centers were: Their location near war plants, the regular pediatric care provided, professionally prescribed feeding formulas for the infants, and the low cost ($6 per 6-day week including 12-hour care, diapers and food).

THE Children's Bureau continued to oppose the project. For many months the two centers, which had already been established, continued to operate with the funds lent by the two aircraft firms.

It was at this point that the unions did a good job. Joining with community organizations, they sent telegrams to Maj. Gen. Philip Fleming, head of the Federal Works Agency, urging approval of the projects.

Confronted by the facts, General Fleming approved allocation of the money from Lanham Act funds.

Hundreds of women can now help build planes—and have babies too.

ONE REASON that mothers have no qualms about leaving their children in the Federally-financed infant care centers at San Diego is that they know the formulas for their babies are expertly prepared by professional nurses such as Mrs. Robert Bernstein.

FATHERS ON LEAVE are pleased with the San Diego infant care centers. "These centers are tops!" says Marine Sgt. C. C. Holliday as he visits his son, Terry, whose mother is also helping the war effort by working a plane plant. (Photos courtesy Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp., San Diego.)

Another Bridge to Victory

A Victory Wage Program

The CIO Executive Board meeting in New York was called to cope with a wage crisis that threatens our wartime economic stability, production and national welfare.

This crisis has been brought about, the Board pointed out, by "the glaring failure to accomplish effective and just national economic stabilization, the obstinate and short-sighted policies of the Natl. War Labor Board, Judge Vinson and Justice Byrnes and their complete desertion of responsibility to provide appropriate wage policies."

Among the worst grievances are:

(1) The continued freeze of wage rates, although the WLB public members concede these rates have risen less than 20 % while living costs have risen at least 30%.

(2) Continued granting of price increases by OPA, without any action to prevent extortionate profiteering.

(3) The freezing even of "fringe" wage increases granted by the WLB.

(4) Failure to provide for purchasing power after V-E Day, when overtime and other such additions to basic wage rates will disappear, with an anticipated annual wage loss of $19,000,000,000.

(5) Refusal of the WLB to eliminate substandard wages.

(6) Delays and complications in WLB procedure, and failure to secure compliance with Board orders from anti-union employers.

Faced with this situation, the CIO Board sharply rejected any steps that might in any way lead to interruption of production or disruption of our war effort.

Following the fighting leadership of President Murray, it reaffirmed "our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge" and to countenance no "quibbling or modification"; and made aggressive plans to carry labor's case to the President and to the nation.

The CIO program adopted calls for:

(1) Immediate action by the President to revise the Little Steel formula and raise basic wage rates.

(2) Raising of substandard wages to at least 65 cents an hour.

(3) A conference of representatives of industry, labor and government to formulate a broadened wage policy.

(4) Authority for the WLB to eliminate the wage bracket system, grant increases on fringe issues and correct other inequalities, without veto by the Stabilization Director and OPA.

(5) Revision of WLB procedure to dispose of cases swiftly, and drastic action to deal with non-compliance.

In adopting this program, the CIO has again demonstrated its patriotism and responsibility as well as its effective leadership for labor's and the country's welfare.

Let's Get Ready Now

"What will happen in our town when the war orders are done?" That's the question which CIO President Murray urges CIO locals to ask of the authorities in every community throughout the nation.

"Victory Visits," he says, should be made on mayors and other officials, urging immediate planning and cooperative conferences to see that there are "enough well-paid and productive jobs to maintain a prosperous community."

Besides such local actions, Murray calls upon national unions to make similar "Victory Visits" to the employers' organizations in their industries, to see that plans are made now to maintain production and employment after V-E Day.

Such democratic community and industry planning will give full scope to the initiative and enterprise of the American peoples, and is an essential part of the national planning necessary to provide full production and jobs for all.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

HOW does a magician fool you, when he brings rabbits out of a hat, makes things vanish and reappear out of thin air, and such?

Without knowing all the tricks, we do know that misdirection of attention is one of the commonest methods used.

If the conjurer catches and holds our attention with some flashy stunt performed by his right hand, we don't notice what his left hand is doing.

By one means or another he misdirects our attention to something that confuses, misleads or distracts us, so we can't observe what is really going on.

The ventriloquist follows the same principle. He talks from his stomach in an assumed voice without moving his lips. But since we locate a voice by looking for a mouth that opens and shuts, our attention is caught by the dummy's moving lips, and they seem to be doing the talking.

The talkies create the same kind of illusion. The talking seems to come directly from the moving lips of the actors on the screen, instead of from the sound apparatus and its loudspeakers.

★ ★ ★

This principle of misdirection, unfortunately, is also used by rogues and cheats for their own sinister purposes.

The pickpocket misdirects your attention to an accomplice who jostles you in a crowd, so you won't notice that he himself is reaching for your billfold the while.

Hitler used the same trick to make suckers of a whole people through his Jew-baiting and his Bolshevik bogey. He has tried to repeat this deception on a world-wide scale—with less success.

And even today in these United States, you can turn on the radio or pick up a paper 'most any time and find anti-labor propagandists using the magicians' device to fool the public as to the true character of the CIO.

★ ★ ★

For instance, a minor outlaw strike occurs, and at once everyone's attention is directed to this incident, thus turning it away from the six million other CIO members loyally observing their no-strike pledge, and away from lawless union-busting bosses who provoke such outbreaks.

Or some blabbermouth demagog makes a red-baiting, labor-baiting speech. This is amplified by anti-labor press and radio, to create a false impression of the CIO and distract attention from the dirty work of the slanderer and his gang.

Or dope-story writers direct exaggerated attention to some minor disagreement within the CIO, trying to inflate it into a major factional split and distract attention from the movement's remarkable and fundamental unity.

★ ★ ★

Again, on wage matters, attention is constantly misdirected to some of the higher war earnings—without noting the long overtime and increased production that make them possible, the many deductions from them, the steeper rise in living costs, or the fact that even a minimum of 55 cents an hour has not yet been allowed for millions of workers.

This trick diverts attention from the need for revising the Little Steel formula; from far greater increases in war profits; and from the frozen basic wage rates that will mean poverty for millions when cutbacks occur and overtime ends, if they're not raised before V-E Day.

★ ★ ★

The real facts from which attention is diverted by such conjurer's tricks were clearly brought out by the recent New York meeting of the CIO Executive Board.

Despite abundant provocation, the CIO did not withdraw from the War Labor Board or abrogate its no-strike pledge.

It set America's war interests first and declared emphatically against any "quibbling or modification" of this pledge.

At the same time, the CIO exposed the present wage injustices and their danger to our national welfare, and planned the most aggressive and effective steps possible to secure redress.

Unity was the keynote—within the CIO, nationally and internationally.

This was shown in united backing for President Murray's progressive policies, and in the agreement on machinery for settling internal jurisdictional differences.

It was also shown in enthusiastic support of the new world labor organization and of the world unity of all freedom-loving peoples planned at Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods, Yalta, and soon to be consummated at San Francisco.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 March 19, 1945 No. 12

Working Hands Across the Border

By C. W. Fowler

DOWN below the Rio Grande, in the ancient Mexican palace of Chapultepec, representatives of the U. S. and all the Latin-American republics except one have just ended a three-week conference that matches in importance to future world security the meetings of the United Nations at Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks.

The meeting was the Inter-American Conference On War and Peace, devoted to western hemisphere plans for political security now and after the war and to plans for bringing industrial growth and economic prosperity to the two continents.

The conferences marked the first time that direct labor representatives have met with diplomats and economic experts of the American nations to work out a program of industrial development, labor progress and social welfare.

Attending for the CIO was David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Steelworkers, and a member of the CIO Committee on Latin-American Affairs. With McDonald were George Meany, secretary of the AFL, Julius Luhrsen, secretary of the Railway Labor Executives Assn., and James G. Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers Union.

THE conference worked out two primary agreements:

1. The "Act of Chapultepec," which is an agreement for collective security against aggression, intended to be presented to the United Nations meeting at San Francisco April 25, and

2. The "Economic Charter," which directly concerns the prosperity of workers, farmers and businessmen in all the American nations—including the U.S.A.

First, the Act of Chapultepec. In essence, this agreement re-states the Western Hemisphere belief that every state "has the right to the respect of its individuality and independence," and that every attack on any state is considered "as an act of aggression against the other states which sign this declaration."

Any such attacks, or threatened attacks, are considered "an interference with the war effort of the United Nations" to be met, by later treaty arrangement, with "use of armed force" if necessary by the signers of the Act.

This is the agreement which will be submitted at the San Francisco meeting of the United Nations next month—which CIO will also attend, in the person of President Murray and CIO executive officers.

Security South of the Border Was the Major Concern of the Recent Conference of Chapultepec. What It Means to Us Is Outlined Here.

Second, the economic agreement. This, according to McDonald, "spells out the economic policies that are needed to bring security and prosperity to all the American countries."

The economic agreement, McDonald told The CIO News, declares that the right to organize and bargain collectively must be recognized, and that "the peoples of the Western Hemisphere must have a real rise in their standard of living, in social welfare and in working conditions."

MUCH of the thinking in the economic agreement parallels that of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee's "Present and Postwar Program," drawn up under the chairmanship of Jacob C. Potofsky last November and endorsed by the CIO convention, McDonald pointed out.

This plan calls for the industrialization of Latin-America, for guarantees of the right to organize, for lifting of health, maternity care, social security standards in all the republics.

"Almost every important item in the CIO plan is either in the economic agreement or in some accompanying document," McDonald said.

"It is a forthright statement. It is important to every American worker, including those in the U. S., not only because it asserts the right to organize but also because it says that only through rising living standards can world peace be secured."

To any who doubt the value of an inter-American economic agreement, or of a security agreement, to us here in the U. S., McDonald pointed out the answer—peace and stable markets mean jobs for us.

"Raising the standard of living of the Latin-American people means raising the standards of living in this country," he said. "A Latin-American worker or farmer who can't even buy enough to eat or clothe his family is not and cannot be a full partner in world security. Decent wages and social security there mean steadier jobs and better living for us here."

McDONALD praised the role played by Fidel Velasquez, general secretary of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, who was also a labor delegate to the conference, and pointed out that the labor delegates were on several of the major committees.

He also praised the leading parts played by U. S. Secretary of State Stettinius, Asst. Secretaries Wm. L. Clayton and Nelson Rockefeller, and Wayne Taylor, acting U. S. Secretary of Commerce.

"The whole spirit of the conference was good," he said. "No idle promises were made. The economic charter is a forthright statement. Our U. S. delegates talked facts—and the realistic men from the other countries liked it."

AT the beginning of this article, it was said that all the Latin-American republics except one were at the Inter-American Conference. That one was Argentina, the pro-Axis dictatorship where labor is suppressed and anti-fascists are put in concentration camps.

The Act of Chapultepec guards against the aggression that pro-Axis forces may be dreaming of in Argentina. The economic agreement lays the basis for real trade unionism, industrial prosperity and social welfare that will bring the real benefits of democracy to all the people of the Western Hemisphere.

U. S. MACHINERY, like that being unloaded in the picture above, left, is used in many plants south of the border. Industries vary from lumbering (middle) to the manufacture of cartridges (right). Typical workmen are at right (reading down) a nitrate worker, a carpenter, and a field hand.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Its Recess Time

As the Washington Guide went to press (Mar. 16), all reports indicate that Congress will recess for two weeks beginning March 24.

During this recess, the Guide will not be published. This doesn't mean that there won't be plenty of work to do with our Congressmen. On the contrary, a recess is the best time to reach them, when they're on the home grounds.

Prepare now to call on your Representative and your two Senators during the recess. Start organizing informal meetings for them, at the union hall, with the Auxiliary, with your neighborhood organizations.

A personal talk with your Congressman is worth a hundred letters. Recess time is the time to talk things over.

Old American Custom

A good old New England custom—the town meeting—got a new lift this week with the poll of New Hampshire towns on whether or not the U. S. should enter a world security organization with the power to enforce peace.

The vote showed 14,000 to 800 for U. S. participation in world organizations such as outlined at Dumbarton Oaks, with the vote unanimous in 103 of the 213 towns so far reporting.

CIO is set to start a nationwide campaign that will follow the lines of the town meeting on the same question—world security. Plans now being readied by Pres. Murray call for intensive study and discussion of peace and security plans worked out at Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, Mexico City, and other United Nations meeting places. The drive is to come to a head with the United Nations meeting set for April 26 in San Francisco.

During the month—which will be designated as "United Nations" month—all CIO locals will be asked to hold meetings on peace and security plans, with discussion of what they mean to the people of the U. S. and particularly to the workers in terms of jobs and security.

CIO locals and all members will be urged to work closely with churches, farm and business and professional groups, and especially with Auxiliaries and other organized women's groups. Already women's organizations throughout the country are doing an energetic job on this educational campaign, and our unions can learn from them.

Discussion of world security plans will be tied in with the London World Trade Union Conference, where trade union leaders representing 50,000,000 workers went on record for a United Nations future.

Main purpose of the campaign will be to make every CIO member, his wife, his friend and neighbor aware of the need for early and wholehearted endorsement of peace plans by the Federal Congress.

As revealed in the Washington Guide for Mar. 12, only 46 Senators are considered certain for United Nations cooperation after the victory. Sixty-four—two-thirds of the Senate—are required to ratify a treaty.

Watch The CIO News, your own union paper, your shop bulletin, and the local papers for further announcement next week.

Prompt Action On 'Woods'

Prompt action on the Bretton Woods world trade agreement now before the House Banking Committee (H.R. 2211) is needed to get ratification before the United Nations conference set for April 25 in San Francisco.

Treasury Secretary Henry J. Morgenthau, Jr., has urged this as proof that "we are not just talking about a better world." Last week, Pres. Murray called for early action to seize this chance "to contribute greatly to our own prosperity, by helping our workers to jobs, our farmers to markets and our businessmen to customers."

Very briefly, Bretton Woods does these things:

1. Keeps foreign exchange stable, thereby allowing our foreign customers to buy more from us and each other, since it prevents violent changes in the value of the money they must use to buy our stuff.

2. Helps rebuild and develop devastated and backward countries by a United Nations guarantee of loans that must be used for sound purposes.

3. Helps prevent the economic aggression that breeds wars by protecting small countries from piratical ones (such as Germany and Japan) that used superior economic strength to rob them of raw materials, giving nothing of value in return.

Have you written your Representative to urge quick passage of HR 2211, without amendment?

Keep Your Guard Up

Though the Senate Judiciary Committee (which handles them) has turned thumbs down on constitutional amendments for the duration on the ground that the men and women overseas should have a say on all changes, the campaign for two of the most vicious proposals in history has not slackened one minute.

These two are the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment and the amendment to limit income taxes on all incomes to 25 per cent per year.

"Equal Rights" is a polite joker that masquerades behind a front of rich women and richer men who want to use it as a club against all laws protecting both women and men from extreme exploitation now forbidden by statue.

The 25 per cent income tax limit is being pushed through state legislatures, 14 of which have already passed resolutions asking Congress to call a constitutional convention to pass it. Thirty-six such resolutions can force a convention. By using the state technique, the Senate's duration freeze can be by-passed.

Back of the 25 per cent limit plan is simply a desire to cut upper bracket taxes and place the burden on the lower levels. Frank E. Gannett's "Committee for Constitutional Government. Inc.," exposed as pro-facist many times, is back of the plan. Rep. Wright Patman (D. Tex.) recently called Gannett's chief agent in the plan. Sam Pettengill, "America's No. 1 Fascist."

Even with the duration freeze on "Equal Rights," and especially because of the back-door technique on the tax grab, it's a good idea to keep reminding your Congressmen that you're against both propositions.

Note: Some states have rejected the resolution. CIO activity in Connecticut caused its rejection in the General Assembly. It's been killed in Wyoming, Montana, New York, South Dakota, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Motions to rescind it are pending in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

What's your state doing?

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick summary of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Prepares way for five million U. S. jobs through expanding world trade; prevents economic aggression.	Hearings on in House Banking Committee (Rep. Brent Spence, D., Ky., chmn.). CIO to testify for.	Write your Representative to support without amendments.
Price Control (SJ Res. 30)	Renews Price Control Act.	Hearings on in Senate Banking Committee (Sen. Wagner, D., N. Y., chmn.). CIO and Auxiliary have testified for.	Write Senators to support without crippling amendments.
Manpower (S 36)	Wagner - Kilgore amendments tighten existing production facilities; avoid labor draft; have penalties for waste of labor. Amendments are to House - passed May-Bailey draft bill.	Wagner - Kilgore amendments passed Senate; May - Bailey bill passed House. Both now go to House-Senate conference, with fight set by some House leaders for House bill, which CIO opposed.	Wire Senators to stand firm on Wagner - Kilgore amendments to S 36, reject May-Bailey.
Polltax Repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to ten million voteless Negro and white Americans.	Discharge Petition 1 now being signed to get HR 7 on House floor for debate and vote; 218 signers needed, about 125 in.	Write Representative to sign DP 1, vote for HR 7.

(Note: Address all Senators at Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives at House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up—Issues to Watch

MISSOURI VALLEY: The Missouri Valley Authority (MVA) plan (S 555) to control floods, stop erosion, provide millions of man-years in jobs, has been shunted from Senate Agriculture to Commerce.

Sen. James A. Murray (D. Mont.), sponsor of S 555, wanted it in Agriculture where it was more likely to get a friendly reception than in Commerce. CIO supports the bill, wants hearings to start in Commerce.

★ ★ ★

65c WAGE FLOOR: A new version of Sen. Pepper's (D. Fla.) resolution of last year for a 65c an hour wage floor will be offered soon in both Senate and House. CIO supported the resolution last year, is supporting it this year. Watch Guide for more information.

★ ★ ★

FEPC: The bi-partisan bill (S 101, HR 2232) for a permanent FEPC is in the Senate Labor Committee for hearings, is waiting for a rule from the House Rules Committee. The phoney Taft (R. O.) FEPC bill (S 459), which has no enforcement powers, is also up. Write Senators and Representatives to support bi-partisan bill as written.

★ ★ ★

INDIAN EXCLUSION: One of the worst spots in U. S. world relations is our immigration ban on Oriental peoples. Last year, with CIO support, the ban on Chinese immigration was lifted to allow 100 in each year. This year we have a chance to lift the ban on immigrants from India, in bill (HR 1534) to allow the same number in annually.

CIO Research Director Kermit Eby testified this week for the bill in hearings before the House Immigration Committee. Write your Representative to support.

Who Got The Dies' Records?

The Dies Committee files containing over 20,000 names of alleged "subversives" are missing from the Capitol—along with Dies and his crew of gum-shoe "investigators."

The files cost the taxpayers more than $20,000. Ex-Rep. Dies, who lost his nerve last primary time in Texas, has been reported working on a book about his un-American activities as committee chairman.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Reg. Dir. James Ritchie, St. Louis, reports: Election at McComb, Ill., USA-CIO 235, against 25. This campaign was directed by CIO Rep. Les Maupin. Westinghouse Plant, St. Louis, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers 72, AFL 53. UE Rep. Logsdon was in charge.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone, Connecticut, advises: Safety Car Co., Handen, Conn., UERMWA-CIO 2331, no union 130.

Walter Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: Brad Foote Gear Works, Inc., Cicero, Ill. (production and maintenance employes), UERMWA-CIO 439, against 273. Mississippi Valley Structural Steel Co., Melrose Park, Ill., UAW-CIO 77; Independent 39, neither 4. Quaker Oats Co. (Paper Mill), Pekin, Ill., CIO 63, against 1. CIO Field Rep. John Hindmarsh was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joe Dernoncourt, Oklahoma City, reports: Producers Cooperative Cotton Oil Mill, CIO Packinghouse Workers 27, against 11. Rep. Buck Whittaker did the organizational work and handled the election.

George Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Evans Products Co., Munroe Lumber Co., and Mills Export Co. were certified in Vancouver, B.. C., recently. American Lumber Co., Suffolk, Va., CIO 35, no union 2; North Wood Timber Co., Baraga, Mich., CIO 27, no union 11. The American Lumber organizing campaign was directed by R. Wray Alt, IWA Spec. Rep., and Rosella Sessoms, IWA Organizer.

SOME SOUTHERN VICTORIES

R. W. Starnes, acting CIO Reg. Dir., New Orleans, reports: Crescent Bed Co., CIO won by a six-to-one majority. The United Steelworkers of America will represent this group. Otis Astoria Mahogany Lumber Co., CIO 66, against 11. This work was carried on by Willie Dorsey, URWDSEA Field Rep., assisted by the CIO Regional office and will be chartered by the URWDSEA.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, reports: Tennessee Paper Stock, CIO 24, no union 9. CIO Rep. Henry White handled this campaign; Model Cabinet Co., CIO Furniture Workers 11, no union 0. UFW Rep. Walter Carson was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. E. B. Pugh, Virginia, Leighton Heel & Counter Corp., Lynchburg, Va., CIO Shoe Workers 24, no union 5. This campaign was directed by Raymond Goff and Cecil C. Nash, Bus. Agents, Shoe Workers.

George Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, reports: General Ribbon Mills, Allentown, Pa., CIO Textile Workers 117, against 6. Lee Rubber & Tire Corp., Conshohocken, Pa., CIO Rubber Workers 422, against 301.

Un. Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers report winning the election at Sterling Silica Jel, Sterling, Ill., CIO 80, no union 10. Harry Wallis, vice-pres., Local 63, USA-CIO, did the major part of the organizing with Chet Walczak, Intl. Rep., UGCCWA, assisting.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports: Lone Star Gas Co., Gainesville, Tex., Compressor Station, CIO 4, against 0. American Vitu Muls Co., Ft. Worth, Tex., employes voted 100% for CIO.

David E. Adelson, Intl. Vice-Pres., FAECT-CIO, reports: Shell Oil Co., Inc., Martinez, Calif. (refinery field office personnel), CIO 15, no union 3.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., A. R. Hardesty, Dallas, Tex., advises: Texas Electric Railway Co., CIO 211, against 19.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Alabama, Armour Fertilizer Plant, Birmingham, CIO Packinghouse Workers 25, against 0. UPWA Rep. Mrs. Ada Lee is to be credited with this victory.

Having just returned from Europe, I want to thank Natl. Representative Adolph Germer and all the staff for the splendid cooperation while I was attending the World Labor Conference where much was accomplished which will redound to the interest of the workers and the labor movements throughout the world.

In the meantime, we must keep up the good work of strengthening our own movement in our own country. Organizing remains the paramount task. I am looking to all directors and organizers to see to it that nothing is left undone to enroll more and more workers into our great movement.

Glass Workers Get Night-Shift Increase

A night-shift differential and more liberal vacation allowances in two dispute cases involving the entire flat glass industry and the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers were granted last week by the Natl. War Labor Board.

The union's demand for a general wage increase of 17c an hour was denied "without prejudice to resumption by the Board of its consideration of the demand for a general wage increase and of the procedure that might be appropriate if there is any change in the national wage stabilization policy."

The board stayed those parts of the order affecting pay of the employes until questions have been resolved regarding procedure for price relief, or production costs in cases involving procurement agencies.

Affected by the decision are 15,000 employes of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. in six cities and the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., in five cities, in addition to 1,500 employes of the so-called "Little Glass" section of the industry, the Independent Fourcault Window & Sheet Glass Mfgrs.

The night shift differential directed by the Board was similar in amount to that directed in the basic steel decision—4c and 6c an hour. The present vacation allowance of one week after one year of service was liberalized to provide for an additional week after five years.

Supreme Court Denies Appeal In Ward Case

The U. S. Supreme Court this week denied the Government's appeal for an early review of the legality of the seizure on Dec. 28 of Montgomery Ward properties in seven cities on the basis that the case has not yet passed through the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeal to the Supreme Court was made by the Dept. of Justice after a District Judge ruled in Chicago on Jan. 6 that seizure of the properties was illegal. The Government also filed an appeal under regular procedure with the Circuit Court of Appeals, to which the case will now go as a result of the Supreme Court's refusal to permit the shortcut.

Pres. Roosevelt ordered seizure of Montgomery-Ward properties last December because Sewell Avery, Ward chairman, had defied the directives of the War Labor Board.

The Army has continued in possession of Ward properties in Chicago, Denver, Jamaica, N. Y., St. Paul, Minn., Portland, Ore., and San Rafael, Calif., pending disposal of appeals.

Abramson to Head Ward Drive

Irving Abramson, president, New Jersey CIO Council, has been appointed national director of the Montgomery-Ward membership drive, Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, said this week.

Wolchok said the drive would seek to raise a $500,000 fund "to bring collective bargaining to Montgomery-Ward employes" to "end the low-wage policy now prevailing as Avery policy."

What the Red Cross Does For Us

CIO members have ample reason to be grateful to the Red Cross, according to the CIO War Relief Committee which this week cited the many services the Red Cross provides.

For the 1½ million CIO members serving in the armed forces there are the Red Cross-operated rest clubs and clubmobiles, the thousands of pints of blood collected each month, the prisoner of war food packages and medicine kits, the Red Cross-handled communications from home, and the thousand of important personal things like arranging emergency furloughs and temporary loans.

And for the 4½ million CIO members at home, the committee pointed out, the Red Cross supplies nurses for overcrowded war-worker areas, gives classes in industrial safety, accident prevention and first aid, and provides relief in natural and industrial disasters.

"Last year he was suspended for smoking in the shop."

S-5 FROM AMMUNITION, UAW-CIO

High Court to Hear Bridges Case Apr. 2

Counsel for Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, this week filed in Supreme Court a brief urging revocation of the deportation order issued against the West Coast labor leader by Attorney General Francis Biddle. Oral argument will be heard April 2.

The "Bridges Case" thus reaches the nations highest court for final determination after more than six years of almost continuous litigation. The case is in the form of a petition for a writ of habeas Corpus; the Supreme Court agreed to hear it after the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals had in a 3 to 2 decision denied Bridges' appeal from a U. S. District Court decision denying the writ.

Bridges was ordered deported by Biddle on the ground that he "has been" a member of and affiliated with the Communist Party and also as an affiliate of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, in turn found to have been an affiliate of the Communist Party. Bridges entered the country legally from Australia in 1920 as an immigrant seaman.

Text of CIO Board Wage Resolution

The following is the main part of the resolution passed last weekend by the CIO Executive Board, reaffirming CIO's no-strike pledge and calling for revisions of the Little Steel Formula.

Labor has made a pledge to the nation that during the war and until final victory over Germany and Japan, there shall be no strikes or stoppages of work. This pledge is based upon labor's understanding of the full and imperative need of continuity of work to assure the maximum production of material for our armed forces. There can be no quibbling with or modification of this pledge.

Unfortunately there are some employers and others who seek to take advantage of our present war situation and endeavor to provoke labor by threatening the existence of unions, the discharge of leading members of the union, cutting of wages, or other divisive means.

Deep Obligation

There is a deep obligation on the part of government, and particularly the National War Labor Board, to prevent any such activity. This duty has not been met by the board with the real firmness and dispatch required to meet an increasingly acute problem.

Now, therefore, be it resolved:

1) We call upon the President of the United States to immediately revise the present Little Steel formula and authorize an upward revision in basic wage rates sufficient to meet the increased cost of living and thereby apply the principle of the Economic Stabilization Act of 1942 which provides for the maintenance of the relationship between wages and prices that prevailed as of September, 1942.

The board should be directed to correct substandard wages by applying a minimum of at least 65 cents for all employes and to effectuate appropriate wage adjustments for those who have become lost citizens in the white collar, government service, and professional fields.

2) The ability of our nation to maintain the fullest utilization of manpower, material and plants in the conversion from war production to new levels of consumer and civilian production require a broadened wage policy which will assure a steadily expanding purchasing power on the part of the great mass of American people. This is an objective that must appeal to all groups.

We therefore call upon the President to convene a conference of representatives of industry, labor and government to formulate a policy that will meet the needs of our nation.

3) We call upon the President to return to the board its authority originally conferred by Executive Order 9250 pursuant to which the board was able to make such adjustments as may be necessary to eliminate inequities and which may be necessary to aid the effective prosecution of the war. This should eliminate the abominable bracket system which has created such severe injustices to American workers and destroyed national wage standards achieved through past collective bargaining. Under such authority the board would be free to render decisions on the basis of the equities involved on such issues as group insurance, severance pay, sick leave and unworked holidays, and payment for all time spent by employes under company direction.

With its original authority thus restored, the board would no longer be subjected to the paralyzing veto power usurped by Judge Vinson, former director of Economic Stabilization, and the OPA.

Swift Disposition

4) The National War Labor Board must revise its procedure to provide for a swift disposition of all cases and the government should undertake, where noncompliance occurs, to make its orders effective either through the seizure of plants where necessary or the imposition of sanctions through the cooperation of various government agencies involved.

5) We reiterate again, in order that there be no misunderstanding, that we fully understand and appreciate that now more than ever it is of the utmost importance to our war effort that there be maintained uninterrupted production. The CIO and its members are fully conscious of this need and therefore shall observe our solemn pledge that until we have accomplished a complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge.

Directors Hear Reports On CIO School, Film Programs

CIO educational programs now in effect and those planned for the future were discussed at a two-day conference held last week-end at National CIO headquarters in Washington under the sponsorship of the Dept. of Education & Research.

The conference was attended by 26 educational directors and representatives of affiliated international unions and State Councils and by officials of various government agencies interested in labor.

Kermit Eby, director of the Dept. of Education & Research, outlined activities of his department and told of the wide circulation and demand for CIO publications not only in the CIO but also among liberal church, school and other groups. "We must attempt to influence those who are marching in our direction," Eby said.

For New Members

Discussing the need of developing people through CIO regional education programs, he stressed the importance of activities aimed at new members. The postwar future of the CIO, he said, "depends upon the assimilation of our new members."

New publications now being prepared or planned for the future, Eby reported, include pamphlets on Sub-Standard Wages, a "Primer for Peace," shop steward training, white collar workers, farm and labor cooperation, and others.

Report of a survey on workers' education in the United States and Canada to be made under a grant from the CIO United Steelworkers of America was given by George T. Guernsey, who will make the survey. It will include a study of the educational activities of CIO international and local union programs, and the extension programs in labor education being conducted by various universities and state colleges.

In discussing the use of films by labor groups, Guernsey described the trade union film circuit of the Natl. Film Board of Canada and expressed the hope that CIO unions might adopt the technique of discussion trailers used by the Canadian unions, and put the money to develop some trailers for the CIO in this country.

UAW Films

The CIO Auto Workers Union is the only CIO affiliate that is now making extensive use of films, Guernsey said. Last month some 350,000 UAW members saw films shown by the union.

Later one of the UAW slide films, "Saga of 666," an educational comic cartoon illustrating the handling of grievances, was shown to the conference.

Examples of the discussion trailer were also presented to the conference. One following the showing the film, "Welcome Soldier," presented a group discussing employment problems that will arise when veterans return. It made the point that the interests of servicemen and civilians are the same, and that jobs must be provided for both.

In a discussion of current educational programs of CIO unions, Leo Huberman, Natl. Maritime Union education director, told about the NMU Leadership Training School, which was started with money won in a libel suit against Walter Winchell. Students for the school are chosen by ship crews, and are paid $40 for the week they are in training. The course lasts five and one-half days. So far 12 courses have been given, Huberman said.

Joseph Kowalski, educational consultant, Michigan CIO Council, described five camps run last summer, at which classes in collective bargaining, postwar problems, educational leadership and other subjects were held for a week. Lee Bronson, UAW Educ. Dept., told of UAW week-end institutes run in cooperation with several universities.

UAW EDUCATION Department's film Division, described at Natl. CIO Education Conference in Washington, ships out 100,000 feet of film a week for local union education programs. Films distributed by the UAW are seen by 375,000 monthly. Shown here are Judy Mirek and Oliver Legrone, of the UAW Film Division.

Larry Rogin, educational director, CIO Textile Workers, described his union's steward training institutes, and Connie Anderson, education director, Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers, told of some educational institutes held in North Carolina and other places.

Dollie Lowther, educational director, Laundry Workers Union, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, described a program for educating new union members attended by 300 out of 700 members who had just joined the union.

A lively discussion took place on the advisability of unions using the Training Within Industry program sponsored by the War Manpower Commission, with Clinton Golden, assistant to the president of the CIO Steelworkers and WMC vice-chairman, favoring it and Jack Lever of the War Production Board opposing it. Elwood Peoples, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, told of the training classes for shop stewards his union had conducted under the program.

CIO Backs Labor Book Club

The CIO Executive Board at its meeting last week in New York recommended that the CIO Educational Department "investigate the establishment of a national Labor Book-of-the-Month Club." The Board also praised the work of the UAW-CIO in developing a Book Club for its members and urged organized labor to support it.

"There has long been a need for a book club for labor union people which would provide good books at prices they can afford to pay and also provide a place where labor authors can find a ready publisher," the Board's resolution stated.

Scuttling Child Care Plans Is Aim of Reactionaries

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Once again we face a crisis in the care of children of working mothers. The House of Representatives has voted to appropriate all but $3,000,000 of the $500,000,000 which has been authorized by Congress for the program of war public works and war public services under the Lanham Act.

Under that Act, as it now stands, only a total of $80,000,000 may be spent for services—including child care, extended school programs, recreation for war workers and their children, etc. Over $77,000,000 of that has already been spent and it will cost more than the remainder to continue present projects to June 30.

The House Appropriations Committee recommended that the ceiling on what could be spent for services be increased to $85,000,000. That would enable Federal Works, which administers the act, to grant funds to continue all present projects to June 30 and to approve some $3,500,000 worth of urgent new projects which are now pending.

TABER OPPOSES BILL

Representative John Taber, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, stopped that by making a point of order when the bill came up. Raising the ceiling on funds for services is legislation on an appropriation bill and Taber is agin' it.

Now it's up to the Senate Appropriations Committee. Be sure to ask your Senator to tell the committee how important it is to get that ceiling on what can be spent for services up to $85,000,000. Tell him how much this means in your community.

We have to start now to work for a new Lanham Act, since all of the $500,000,000 Congress previously authorized has been spent for community war needs, Congress must authorize more funds. The first step is up to the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, of which Congressman Fritz Lanham, of Texas, is chairman.

That committee must draw up and submit a new bill to authorize more money for community war needs, which must be passed by the House and Senate before the Appropriations Committee can vote to appropriate any more money.

LANHAM SYMPATHETIC

The committee has discussed next year's needs with the Federal Works Agency and plans to submit a new bill. Lanham is sympathetic.

There's plenty of opposition from the arch reactionaries, who say the federal government is spending too much money now. The states have surpluses—let the states take care of their own children, they add.

Start now to arm our Congressmen and Senators with facts and figures. Each of them should know how many projects are in his districts and states, how many children are cared for, what the need is for increased care and what the program means to the working mothers who use it.

THEY'RE STILL OBTAINABLE
Copies of the CIO News 8-Page NO-STRIKE SUPPLEMENT
For details write
The CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NAT'L CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Deflation and Wage Cuts Are Threat—Not Inflation

President Roosevelt this week was urged to revise the Little Steel Formula upward, with a warning that failure to raise wages would contribute to dangers of deflation with accompanying wage cuts and loss of employment.

The report was submitted to FDR by the CIO members of the Natl. War Labor Board — R. J. Thomas, Van A. Bittner, John Brophy, Carl J. Shipley, Neil Brant and Delmond Garst. It urged him to reject a recent report by WLB public members which advised against revision of the wage formula.

Highlights of the CIO members' report follow:

The Public Members of the WLB concede that wage rates have risen at the most 20 percent, and that the cost of living has risen at least 30 percent. An inequity of ten percent has developed between wages and prices. The conclusion is inescapable that at least a ten percent increase in wage rates should be made retroactive to the date since the inequity developed.

But instead of adjusting wages, the Public Members of the WLB recommend an adjustment in wage statistics.

Returning veterans will not be hired or rehired at levels of "average straight-time earnings by occupational groups". or "average straight-time hourly earnings adjusted for inter-industry shifts". Their earnings will be directly measured by schedules of basic wage rates.

With reduced production needs and loosening labor markets, opportunities for promotion or even for increased incentive earnings will be rare.

The standards which our government has taken an obligation to protect are not only those of workers who have come into expanding industry since 1941. They are the standards also of those millions of workers who are now in uniform. Failure to meet this obligation will rank as a national disaster.

The Public Members recognized this in 1942 when the Little Steel Formula was formulated. They again recognize it in their current report.

Already reports from a wide section of war plants indicate that demotions and downgradings are underway. This trend will sweep through industry after VE-Day If earnings tended to rise with the quality and quantity of work—while labor shortages forced management into equitable wage policies—impending labor surpluses will immediately force reversal of that process.

Inflation has been gaping at us throughout the war, but the grave fears which have been entertained have not been realized. Substantial price rises, yes, particularly in "cost of living" items; but serious inflation, no. And now, when deflationary forces are already at work, when war procurement has begun to slide off and overall employment has dropped off by a million, it is economic nonsense to act as though inflation were a genuine menace. It is deflation we need to guard against.

Moreover, when we look ahead, the prospect is one of deflationary pressure. Any risk of inflation arising from an increase in wage rates, "appears to be more than offset by the possibility of decreased earnings in the approaching period of reconversion and the increase in supply of civilian goods."

OPA points out that even if present levels of employment are maintained, a return to the 1939 level of average weekly hours would reduce the manufacturing wage bill by $8.2 billions annually and a shift back to the 1939 pattern of manufacturing employment would result in an additional decline of $8.6 billions.

The effect of downgrading, not estimated by OPA though recognized as important, might well result in a still further drop of $2 billion.

Isn't it palpably absurd to shiver over the prospects of inflation when we face a decline in manufacturing payrolls alone of close to $20 billions? Granting of Labor's full demand in manufacturing industries would provide an offset to this sum of only $5.5 billion.

To achieve and maintain full employment, it is now generally agreed, a larger share (of income) must go to the lower income groups. Otherwise, purchasing power will not be adequate to buy back the products of industry and oversaving will again cripple production.

On the basis of considerations such as these, some agreement is developing that increases in wage rates must be made at some future time. What is less commonly recognized is that, for practical reasons, some increases must be made at once.

Increases of the magnitude necessary simply cannot be made all at once and in particular they cannot be made when deflationary forces begin to get the upper hand. Government policy to raise wage rates no matter how well intentioned cannot be effective in the face of growing unemployment.

Increases are needed now to prevent the triumph of deflationary forces. If we don't have them now we cannot prevent deflation, depression and unemployment. If we do get them now, it will be possible later to get the additional increases necessary to achieve full employment.

Would immediate increases be inflationary? On the cost side we believe that OPA figures are conclusive: present profit margins — indicative of a wide spread between costs and prices — are fully adequate to absorb all or practically all of a wage increase of the magnitude requested in the various specific CIO cases before the WLB.

An increase of 20% in the aggregate private non-agricultural wage and salary bill, even if all taken away from profits, would still leave profits before taxes approximately at the level of 1940.

This Kind of Tax Saves Jobs and Homes

YOU don't have to "bone up" on economics to know that when you can't pay property taxes the government will seize your home and sell it to the highest bidder.

Just about as simple—when you put some of the complicated terms into everyday English—is the explanation of a new kind of tax that will help to save not only homes but millions of jobs. CIO's supporting it, of course.

The new tax was proposed by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, testifying last week before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It's called a "capital gains" tax. Briefly, this is how it works:

Mr. B. buys a house (or farm or stocks) at $5,000 and sits tight while prices keep going up, up and up. When prospective buyers have become frantic enough, Mr. B. decides to cash in his chips. Maybe he gets $10,000 for his house. He makes a tidy little $5,000 profit. But—and this is what makes Mr. Eccles sore—Mr. B. pays taxes on this profit amounting to a maximum of only 25 per cent.

Mr. Eccles is proposing a new tax—90 per cent instead of 25 per cent. It would apply to the sale of capital assets (like houses and land and stocks) acquired during a period starting as of last January 1 and ending when Congress has decided that the dangers of wartime property inflation have subsided—perhaps two or three years after victory.

Under this tax, Mr. B. would pay up to 90 per cent maximum on his profits if he sold property acquired during this period within two years after acquiring it. If Mr. B. sold the property within three years, his tax would be a maximum of 80 per cent, with 10 per cent reductions to follow each year until the present 25 per cent maximum tax is reached.

MR. ECCLES says this new tax is not only fair but mighty necessary. His reasoning goes like this:

Prices of homes, farms, stocks, etc., have skyrocketed, and they're still going up. If this trend is unchecked, it will undermine the price and wage stabilization program.

For instance, the man who buys Mr. B.'s property at $10,000 may be a speculator. He can pay $10,000 for it, hold it a year or two, and maybe find someone else who'll pay $11,000. If the market goes high enough, the latest purchaser may find someone else who'll pay $12,000.

Each of these purchasers has found that he can make money on a rising market. And in the process, each of them is helping to drive property prices still higher.

WHAT this means to servicemen is best told by Mr. Eccles. He says:

"It would make a mirage of the hopes of millions of war veterans who are counting on being able to obtain a home, or a farm, or to get started in business when they return from the front. Congress has encouraged this hope in the so-called GI Bill of Rights, and by providing dismissal pay and otherwise.

"Those on the home front have an inescapable obligation to take whatever steps may be necessary to protect the values of homes, farms and other necessities so that they will not be hopelessly out of reach of the veteran's purse."

Mr. Eccles' tax would help the veterans by preventing the bidding up of homes, land and stock values.

"It is the only way," he says, "to keep the prices of these assets from being bid higher and higher until the bubble bursts.

"Nothing would be a greater deterrent to postwar reconversion than such an inflationary rise in prices, which would inevitably be followed by a deflationary collapse. Hence nothing would do more to wreck postwar programs for full employment and economic stability on which a lasting peace depends."

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 13 March 26, 1945

FDR Orders Annual Wage Plan Study

(See Page 12)

★ ★ ★

United Nations Month

For Quick Victory And A Sure Peace

(See Other Stories—Page 5)

It's "United Nations Month" for all CIO members, Pres. Philip Murray announced this week in a message to all CIO affiliates and to the CIO press.

Purpose of the month is to encourage study and discussion by CIO members, together with their friends and neighbors, on Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta, the London World Labor Conference, and other international issues leading up to the San Francisco meeting April 25—which CIO leaders are attending.

During the month, Murray has asked CIO internationals, locals, councils and auxiliaries to hold meetings devoted to foreign policy, to have shop stewards and other officers promote discussion, and to have all CIO publications carry articles on the subject in each issue.

Particular emphasis is put on the Bretton Woods world trade agreement, which is now before Congress for ratification. Pres. Murray has urged all CIO members to write their Congressmen asking them to vote for the ratification bill (HR 2211) without amendments.

Locals should cooperate with each other, and especially with women's groups, churches, civic organizations and the like in arranging joint meetings in every community.

STATE DEPT. BROADCASTS

Murray also called attention to the State Dept. broadcasts on foreign policy, given at 7 p. m. EWT Saturdays over the NBC network.

Meantime, CIO Legislative and Publicity Depts. and CIO-PAC are working with CIO affiliates to arrange radio programs in communities where CIO has membership. Another project is to send the CIO delegates to the London conference on a tour of the country, speaking on the conference and related subjects.

Basic aim of "United Nations Month," Murray said, is to "pave the way for the legislative and political campaign to ensure Congressional ratification of the decisions worked out at San Francisco."

Exclusive

What Joe War Worker Wants After Victory

(See Pages 6 & 7)

Encirclement at Frisco

Give EMIC Aid to Wives Of All GIs, Vets—Murray

Extension of the Emergency Maternity and Infant Care (EMIC) program to include wives of enlisted servicemen in the upper three grades, servicemen's widows, servicemen's wives failing to apply before their husbands are discharged, and infants of veterans for a year was urged by CIO Pres. Philip Murray today. His recommendations were in a letter to Rep. Butler Hare (D., S. C.), chairman of the subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, which will consider renewal of the EMIC program.

The program now provides care for servicemen's wives in the four lowest grades—from the beginning of pregnancy until six weeks after childbirth, and for medical care for sick babies for a year.

Murray wrote that the CIO also "would like to see the wives of veterans able to take advantage of this assistance for the first two years after the return of their husbands."

Bosses' Brain-child Tries To Rob Vets of Job Rights

Attempts of the anti-labor Lorain County (Ohio) Industrial Council to rob veterans of their rights under two acts of Congress was exposed this week by the Lorain Labor Herald, official newspaper of the Lorain County CIO Council.

Brainchild of the industrial council, the plan created a private employment agency for veterans at Elyria, Ohio, which has begun functioning. According to the labor paper, the agency:

1. Requires all applicants to sign waivers of benefits under section 8 (b) of the Selective Service Act releasing employers for any responsibility under the act. Section 8 (b) states that veterans shall be entitled to their old jobs.

2. Interferes with the veteran's right to draw unemployment compensation. The Lorain Leader said that it has been informed that the agency is "attempting to coerce the applicant to take whatever job is offered, regardless of wages and working conditions, under the threat of getting his unemployment compensation cancelled."

To combat these activities, the paper calls for organization of every worker in Elyria and for channeling all postwar hiring through the U. S. Employment Service.

Ex-GIs Can't Bump Workers Holding Greater Seniority

Lee Pressman, general counsel of the United Steelworkers and the CIO, this week hailed "the far-reaching importance" of the decision of Prof. Herman A. Gray, arbitrator designated to adjudicate a dispute over seniority between the Steelworkers and the Timken Roller Bearing Co. under their contract.

Gray ruled that under the contract and the Selective Service Act a veteran is entitled to credit for accumulated seniority during his period in the armed forces, but that no employe whose seniority is greater than the total seniority of the veteran shall be displaced by the veteran.

"The decision of the arbitrator, which is of far-reaching importance," Pressman said, "specifically rejects the unrealistic interpretation of General Hershey, Administrator of the Selective Service and Training Act, who in a memorandum, has supplied a contrary interpretation."

The memorandum is No. 190-A, which would give to all veterans claims on jobs superior to all other civilians, irrespective of their seniority.

Professor Gray stated that General Hershey "is given no duty to administer the re-employment provisions of the act (Selective Service Law), no authority to enforce them, no power to issue any ruling interpreting their meaning or any other order directing compliance.

"The memorandum (of General Hershey), therefore, is no more than a statement of the views of the National Headquarters of the Selective Service System. It is not a mandate addressed either to employers or to any other section of the public concerned with or affected by the re-employment provisions of the act."

Murray Greets Observance Of War Workers' Week

CIO Pres. Philip Murray greeted CIO war mothers and wives who are participating in the CIO Women's Auxiliaries' observance of War Mothers Week this week, stating: "The opportunity for all Americans today to create a better world is not one which excludes women."

"The real struggle for the fruits of victory," Murray said, "will begin when the military campaigns are concluded. I express profound sympathy for those who are widowed and orphaned by the war, but more important than any expression of sympathy is our devotion and application to the ideals for which those who died gave their lives."

The celebration began Saturday night when Congresswoman Emily Taft Douglas of Illinois spoke over the CIO Blue Network program on the importance to women of effective machinery for international peace.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will speak Friday, March 30, at the National Archives Auditorium, Washington, D. C., on a program sponsored by the Auxiliary of the CIO United Federal Workers Union. Other speakers will be Col. Olveta Culp Hobby, WAC head, and Mary McCleod Bethune, famous Negro women's leader.

Mrs. Faye Stephenson, Cleveland, president of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, announced as the theme of the week the part women must play in securing passage of legislation to build and enforce a permanent peace.

HONORED: Pfc. Martin A. Watkins receiving a $500 war bond, won in an essay contest, from Rear Admiral Ellery W. Stone, while Col. C. M. Parkins looks on. Watkins, stationed in Italy, helped organize the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers. He sent the CIO $10 to aid the building of "a more perfect democracy at home."

Anti-Labor Bill Passes Minnesota Senate

The anti-labor Christian American Assn. made the news this week in two widely separated states—Minnesota and Texas.

In Minnesota, a bill backed by the organization passed the Senate, 36 to 11, with 20 senators not voting. The bill outlaws the secondary boycott, limits picketing, places unionists in the category of criminals, and invites restraining orders and court injunctions on mere suspicion in almost every conceivable labor-employer dispute.

Labor violently opposed the bill and predicted that if it is passed by the House and signed by the governor it will be a death warrant for the Republican Administration.

Meanwhile, at Austin, Texas, the State Legislature heard Rep. Ennis Favors, who introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the Christian Americans, testify to having overheard a conversation in which two unidentified men "freely discussed the ample money which the Christian Americans and the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers had set aside" to pass anti-labor legislation.

Republican Backs Bridges

Nationally known Republican leader Bartley C. Crum and Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of California William M. Malone, this week wrote President Roosevelt, asking dismissal of the deportation order against Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union.

The King County Democratic Club of Seattle, the oldest and largest political club in Washington State, also added its voice to the many asking for executive action on the case.

CIO Backs Mexican Pact

Full support for the Mexican water treaty, now before Congress, was expresed by the California CIO this week, according to an announcement by Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Latin - American Affairs Committee.

The proposed treaty allocates 1,500,000 acre-feet of water from U.S. rivers to Mexico, Potofsky said. Of the eight states affected, the only opposition has come from California interests.

"At this moment, when everything is being done to integrate the decisions of the Mexico Conference with the structure that will emerge from the World Security Conference at San Francisco, affirmative action on the treaty is of the utmost importance," Potofsky said.

CIO Radio Roundup

"Must broadcasts for those interested in international affairs, particularly in view of the approaching San Francisco United Nations' meeting, are the Saturday shows put on by the U. S. State Dept. over NBC at 7 p. m. EWT.

The next program will feature "America's Good Neighbors."

CIO shows this Saturday (March 31) will include a broadcast on United Nations Month at 6:45 p. m. EWT over the Blue Network and a roundup of CIO industrial activities to wind up the CBS "Job for Tomorrow" series, at 8:45 p. m. EWT.

At NLRB Trial

Weir Stooge Tried to Buy Testimony

The long-awaited trial of Weirton Steel Co. on NLRB charges of contempt of court for continuing to recognize an outlawed company union opened this week in Pittsburgh as several former Weirton employes took the stand to testify that they had been fired for belonging to the CIO United Steelworkers, and that company agents had attempted to buy off their testimony.

This is the latest court action in the long fight to break open Ernest T. Weir's powerful empire of anti-unionism. The NLRB case will try to prove that the company is illegally recognizing the Weirton Independent Union, which was formally declared company-dominated by the NLRB and outlawed by a court order in 1943.

FIRED FOR JOINING CIO

Testifying before Special Master Drayton Heard, appointed by the third circuit court of appeals, Robert C. Yoho of Weirton, W. Va., told how he was fired on Feb. 10, 1944, after working for the company for 18 years. When he first joined the United Steelworkers in April, 1941, he said he wore his CIO button in the plant and was told by a supervisor to throw it away.

He put it in his pocket, he said, but he was cut from six and seven days a week to five. Later he was asked by the assistant mill manager, Charles Eddy, if he belonged to the CIO. When he said no, the manager said it was a good thing or it would cost him his job.

Several months later he was called to the manager's office and told to resign from the CIO or be fired. Yoho said he resigned and that the resignation was written for him by a steward of the Weirton Independent Union. Later he was fired.

Dropping a bombshell into the proceedings, John Cencarik, former employe, said he was dismissed by the company for CIO membership. He testified that Harold C. Bangert, Weirton Steel safety director, offered him all his lost wages and a good job if he would alter his testimony in the current trial.

CIO Warns

Must Plan Now For V-E and After

In a letter to all CIO international presidents, released Monday, March 26, in Washington, CIO President Philip Murray proposed local and national action by labor, industry and government "to maintain and increase present high levels of employment as we move from war to peace, and as those in the armed formes return to civilian life."

The CIO proposal that Murray sent was also presented to the Advisory Board of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, headed by James F. Byrnes. Excerpts from the Murray outline follow:

We must act at once to stabilize our war economy for the tough job ahead of completing the defeat of Japan, as soon as possible after Germany is knocked out of the war. The success with which we handle the partial reconversion in the months after V-E Day will demonstrate the ways and means for the full-scale reconversion after Japan's defeat.

1. We must get together immediately to do what is needed for "Jobs for All" in war and in peace.

2. We must agree to bring together the necessary information on which to base a program.

3. We need an orderly reconversion plan to go into effect on V-E Day.

4. We must agree on a general wage increase before V-E Day.

5. We need an agreement on reconversion price policy after V-E Day.

Full employment and full production are going to require great ingenuity by the leaders of industry, labor, agriculture and government. It needs also widespread understanding by members of those groups throughout the country.

They need, for example, to understand that this program calls for 50% more peacetime production than ever before in this country. It means an enormous increase in the quantities of goods and services going to every individual American family. We can only distribute this abundance of goods and services by raising money incomes and keeping prices from rising (or by lowering prices as productivity increases).

The annual wage for the steel industry, for instance, requires that labor and management in that industry study the uses of their product and discuss with the industrial consumers of iron and steel ways and means for stabilizing their demands.

In order to enlist Americans everywhere behind such a program, I propose that we start in every American community a series of community-wide committees (representing a cross-section of the community, including the surrounding rural areas) to ask these three simple basic questions:

1. What goods and services do we need?
2. What do we want?
3. What local capacities do we have for supplying our own needs and wants and what capacities do we have for exchanging goods and services with others at home and abroad?

Republican Congressman Blasts Steel Formula

An attack on the blanket wage freeze applied under the Little Steel Formula was made this week by Rep. Albert Engel, Michigan Republican, as he introduced a bill in the House calling for return of income tax exemptions to a 1940 basis.

The tax bill would give a married person, head of a family and living with a spouse, an exemption of $2,000, and would give a single or married person, not head of a family and not living with a spouse, an exemption of $800. Credit for each dependent would remain at $500.

Engel declared that "lowering of individual and family tax exemptions, increasing the tax rate, increased living costs and the freezing of wages of the lower income group have lowered living standards of that group far below 1939 standards."

Attacking the "cost of living" figures published by the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, Engel said that "unless the Dept. of Labor can give us cost of living figures based upon the right of every American to a decent living including decent food, decent housing and decent clothing, it had better discontinue publishing information along this line entirely."

"The fact of the matter," Engel said, "is that the worker often finds this information used in determining his wage scale, forcing his living standard to a subsistence basis with just enough food to keep him and his family alive, with slum housing and enough clothing to keep the bodies of his family and himself covered."

Warning that sound peacetime prosperity must be based on increased purchasing power for the low income group, Engel said:

"Paying an individual or the head of a family enough money, whether in wages or other income, to support himself and family in common decency is not and can never be inflationary. Money spent for the necessities of life to keep body and soul together will never bring about inflation."

Labor Has Vital Role To Play in Peace---Murray

CIO Pres. Philip Murray outlined some of the things labor expects from the peace and the contributions it hopes to make to the peace, in a speech this week before the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University.

Recalling that "the organized workers of America understood the crisis which their country faced before most of their political leaders were aware of it," Murray said that this social awareness of the labor is "a real asset in these troubled times. It is the foundation on which we can build an enduring peace."

Fulfillment of the sentiments expressed in the Atlantic Charter which labor supports, Murray declared, "is dependent upon our ability to do two things—to organize the world as a responsible political unit and to bring jobs and prosperity to workers everywhere."

We must never forget, he warned "that Hitler's initial influence grew in direct proportion to the number of unemployed in Germany, and reaction came into complete power in Japan only when the balance of trade was unfavorable and when restless men roamed the streets."

"Experience, then," he said, "has demonstrated that responsibility of maintaining peace largely rests in the ability of nations to insure their workers useful and regular employment at remunerative wages consistent with available productive resources. I am told that those who asked the German soldiers why they followed Hitler, received the reply, 'He gave us jobs.'

"It is because of our realization that peace in the world is dependent upon a stabilized economy in America that we in the CIO have dedicated ourselves to an economic program which will insure 60 million jobs and to an upward adjustment of the wage levels of American workers to a point where they can purchase the goods and services which our economy is capable of producing."

The nations whose workers have the greatest income, Murray said, "are always the best customers. And because we know that, we support a similar policy for the workers of every nation."

This is why the CIO has given full support to the proposals of the Bretton Woods conference, Murray explained. "The fund incorporated in the proposals and the International Bank for the provision of credits," he pointed out, "should do much toward promoting trade among nations, putting war-devastated nations on their feet and averting a new wave of economic warfare at the conclusion of military hostilities."

Causes of war are primarily economic in character, Murray said, pointing out that "the prosperous nation with high levels of living for its people is a peaceful nation."

Labor and Co-ops

The value of consumer cooperation to organized workers is discussed by James Myers in his 48-page pamphlet, "Labor and Co-ops," published by the Cooperative League of U. S. A.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Do You Know That: Woody Guthrie, great folk singer, exclusive on Asch records, came from the Dust Bowl and is now a merchant seaman.

ASCH RECORDS STINSON

And Do You Know That: Asch records feature Mountain Songs, Cowboy Songs, Square Dances (with mandolins, guitars, banjos), Jazz, Boogie Woogie, Blues, popular jazz favorites.

Write for Catalogue to

STINSON TRADING CORP.

27 Union Sq. West, New York 3, N. Y.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

UNION BUYER'S GUIDE

BUTTONS AND BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches

Also Specializing in

Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 556 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

Annual Wage Guarantee

It is particularly fitting that CIO Pres. Philip Murray should be one of the committee of four named to study the question of the guaranteed annual wage as a matter of national policy.

For as President of the CIO, Murray has long been the leading advocate of guaranteed annual wages for American workers, and as President of the United Steelworkers of America he presented the first big union case for this demand before the Natl. War Labor Board.

The present study authorized by President Roosevelt is the direct outcome of the Steelworkers' case, since in refusing to accede to this particular demand the WLB at the same time recommended that a national study be made of the guaranteed annual wage as "one of the main aspirations of American workers."

Labor's need for steady purchasing power the year around is "closely connected with the problems of reconversion and the transition from a war economy to a peace economy," as President Roosevelt has pointed out.

Both industry and agriculture have been given guarantees of income for the immediate postwar period, through carry-back and other tax refund provisions and through farm price guarantees. But American industrial workers have no similar guarantees of steady jobs and wages.

Full production and jobs for all depend upon increasing and maintaining the purchasing power of the country's working population to provide a steady and rising demand for goods.

A guaranteed annual wage is therefore not only a measure of justice and security for working people and their families, but will also mean more prosperity for farmers, businessmen, professionals and all other groups in the community. It is needed with particular urgency for the difficult period of adjustment immediately ahead.

Let us hope that the present study will lead to a speedy national endorsement of the principle of the guaranteed annual wage and government encouragement for its incorporation in collective bargaining agreements.

CIO's United Nations Month

In response to the call of President Murray to make April United Nations Month, the CIO is going all-out to mobilize its membership behind the plans of the United Nations for world organization, peace and prosperity.

The CIO endorsed these plans unanimously at its last convention. What is needed now is the widest discussion, study and understanding of our foreign policy, so that when the United Nations meet at San Francisco labor will have done its part to organize intelligent and united support for one of the greatest undertakings ever conceived by mankind.

Immediately essential to the success of the San Francisco conference is Congressional ratification of the Bretton Woods agreement.

This agreement is the best plan that could be devised and agreed upon by experts representing all the United Nations for economic reconstruction and the expansion of world trade—through an International Bank to provide credits for the rebuilding and development of war-torn and backward countries and a Monetary Fund to stabilize currencies.

For American labor, it is estimated the Bretton Woods agreement will mean five million jobs from increased world trade.

Opponents of this agreement mostly say the general idea is fine but propose amendments that would render it ineffective and make it practically impossible to get the consent of all the other nations for their incorporation in a new agreement.

Urge your Congressmen to vote for the Bretton Woods agreement without delay and without amendments.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

JOE JERK did not believe in unions. "Me first" was his motto. "Workers will never stick together," he used to say. "I can do better on my own. Why be a sucker and pay dues?"

But the workers in Joe's plant did stick together and built a union. So he changed his tune a little.

"The union is run by the Jews — Catholics — Protestants — Negroes — foreigners — reds — southerners — northerners..." he would say, changing the words according to who was listening. "Don't let those guys pull the wool over your eyes."

Before the union got a contract, Joe Jerk sneered at its demands. "Asking for the moon," he called them.

But when a good contract was worked out, he roared like a stuck pig. He objected to this, that and the other clause. He said the union ought to strike until it got twice as much as it had asked.

★ ★ ★

Ted Twerp did not believe in the union of the United Nations. "America First" was his motto, he said. "The nations will never work together. We should go out for all we can get, on our own. Why should Uncle Sam be a sucker and give handouts to the rest of the world?"

But even Ted had finally to recognize that the United Nations had built up quite a fighting alliance. So he changed his tune a little.

"The British are using us to pull their chestnuts out of the fire," he would say to some; and to others, "The Russian Reds are playing us for suckers. You watch, our allies will pull out and leave us holding the bag."

When the Big Three pledged at Teheran to continue their unity after the war for world peace and prosperity, Ted was all sneers. "The United Nations will be at each other's throats as soon as the war's over," he said. "They'll never agree on anything. World unity is Utopian twaddle."

But when the Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and Yalta agreements followed, with their substantial and united steps toward world organization, Twerp roared with indignation that they fell far short of his idea of an out-of-this-world Utopia.

He demanded that the United States refuse to play ball, unless all sorts of changes unacceptable to the other nations were made.

Every good unionist rejects and combats the scabby ideas of Joe Jerk, knowing they can lead only to disunity, disruption and disorganization from which all will suffer.

So it is not surprising that CIO members should also be wise to the Ted Twerps who are playing a similiar role in regard to world organization.

Nor is it surprising that the CIO, through the "United Nations Month" proclaimed by President Murray, should be taking the lead in campaigning for the world union planned at Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta and San Francisco.

For these plans project into world affairs the same kind of union principles as have built the CIO into a mighty force for better labor conditions, for unity regardless of race, religion or nationality, and for the welfare of the whole community.

★ ★ ★

The new world labor organization started at London carries to its logical conclusion the desire of all organized working people to strengthen and expand their unity —first by bringing all the workers into a local union, then by uniting their locals in the union for their industry, then through a strong national labor movement, and finally through an all-inclusive world labor body.

But the process does not stop there. For once labor starts to think in world terms, it realizes vividly how much all countries have to gain by organizing to defend their freedom, to raise their living standards and to prevent future wars.

The Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks agreements are based on the same kind of give-and-take and mutual tolerance as are essential in union organization, and on the realization that the need for solidarity overrides all minor differences.

The tactics of the disrupter are similar in either case—to undermine confidence in trusted leaders, to promote differences among groups or nations, to sneer at unity as Utopian or demand the impossible, and to quibble or seek to amend endlessly each time agreement is reached.

CIO's United Nations campaign should therefore be a natural for unionists who have learned how to overcome division and achieve unity in their own union affairs.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 March 26, 1945 No. 13

Blueprint for Peace

By C. W. FOWLER

EVERY man and woman in America has a deep and personal stake in world peace and security after this war is won. The stake is our future, our jobs, our welfare, the welfare of our children and of the men and women who will come back to us from the war.

Our sons and brothers fighting in every part of the world look to us to do our part in making sure that aggression and war never come again to torture humanity. Just as they expect us to give them the weapons to destroy the Nazis and the Japanese war lords, so they expect us to do everything we can to help make a peace that will stick after this war is over.

First Of A Series

In countless town meetings, shops, homes, corner stores, churches, clubs and unions all over the country, people are talking and thinking about peace plans. Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods, Yalta, San Francisco are in everybody's thoughts.

CIO President Philip Murray has asked all CIO members to make the next few weeks "United Nations Month," with discussion in every local, council and auxiliary and with our friends and neighbors on peace plans now for the common future.

To help this discussion, The CIO NEWS is beginning a series of articles on plans for peace and world organization, of which this is the first.

Why War Came

In the absence of workable world organization after World War I, the years from 1918 to 1939 saw a succession of wars, some declared, most undeclared. Dozens of acts of fascist aggression in those 25 years led up to the attack in Europe and at Pearl Harbor.

This was possible because there was no organized attempt to stop the Nazis, the Japanese or even the Italian fascists before World War II, because there were no United Nations to make the attempt.

The appeasement forces in Europe and over here were stronger than the democratic forces, and the fascists were permitted to pave the way for World War II in Ethiopia, in Manchuria, in Spain, in Czechoslovakia, and at Munich.

Now the United Nations are a fact, and together they are destroying Hitler Germany and fascist Japan, and what is more, they intend to stay together after the job is done to see that it does not have to be done again.

Plan Peace Now

So now it is possible to plan for peace, with the U. S., the Soviet Union and Britain as the main cornerstones of world organization, and the other United Nations as its component parts.

The experience of the past 25 years has shown that we must have world organization to keep the peace. Arms alone are not enough. A world policy of practical, workable cooperation to prevent aggression and to wipe out its breeding grounds is an absolute necessity.

The groundwork for world organization is now being laid. Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks are two of the principal bases for us to build upon. Our job now is to understand them, to help in perfecting them, and above all, to impress upon our Congress the need for carrying out our country's share in making them work.

"But Hermann, you dumkopf—if that Dumbarton Oaks plan goes through, there won't be any World War III!"

BRETTON WOODS is, very briefly, a United Nations agreement to promote world trade by keeping monetary systems stable among the nations and by reconstructing and developing war-devastated and backward nations.

Before this war, one of the main methods of waging economic war was through currency manipulation. By driving down their own currencies, individual countries sought an illusory trade advantage over the others, so that they could sell more goods.

Strong aggressor nations, such as Germany and Japan, used systems of "blocked accounts" to wring raw materials for war out of smaller and weaker countries without paying them in return, or with "payment" in worthless goods.

The International Fund proposed at Bretton Woods will be used to keep foreign exchange stable, so that goods can be bought and sold among the countries of the world at steady prices.

The International Bank will be used to guarantee loans to devastated or backward countries for productive purposes only. This will help to create new markets and new jobs in the U. S. and throughout the world.

The CIO is for the Bretton Woods agreement. President Murray has backed it because it "is the best guarantee of a greatly expanded world trade that will afford protection to American businessmen, markets to American farmers and jobs to American workers."

Back Bretton Woods

Bretton Woods is now before Congress in House bill HR 2211. Write, wire your Congressman to support the bill without changes or reservations. Amendments proposed now by Congress will throw the whole thing back to another United Nations meeting that would take months to prepare, thus delaying and frustrating the entire agreement.

THE DUMBARTON Oaks proposals are the basic plan for world organization to keep and enforce the peace afte the war is won. They were worked out by representatives of the U. S., the U. S. S. R., Britain and China at a meeting in the summer of 1944 in a house called Dumbarton Oaks in Washington, D. C.

The plan is still an outline, which will be filled in at the San Francisco United Nations conference which begins April 25. As part of his message to CIO members setting "United Nations Month," President Murray has asked for particular study of Dumbarton Oaks. CIO leaders will be at San Francisco, and they want and need the full weight of an informed rank-and-file opinion behind them when they get there.

Four Main Bodies

The proposals call for four main bodies to be set up by the United Nations: 1) The Security Council; 2) The General Assembly; 3) The Economic and Social Council and 4) The International Court of Justice.

1. The Security Council will have the task of keeping peace by watching for signs of aggression, by recommending peaceful settlement of disputes among nations and by using military force against an aggressor.

The Security Council will have five permanent members, the U. S., the U. S. S. R., Britain, China and France. Six other nations will have seats, each of their representatives serving two years. They will be selected by the General Assembly.

2. The General Assembly will have members from all the United Nations. It will vote on questions of international cooperation, except those being dealt with by the Security Council, be responsible for finances, promote cooperation in political, economic and social fields. Votes on major questions shall be by two-thirds majority, by simple majority on others.

3. The Economic and Social Council will work under the General Assembly to "promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms."

4. The International Court of Justice will have its regulations worked out at the April 25 meeting in San Francisco, or shortly thereafter. All members of the United Nations that ratify the Dumbarton Oaks propsals will belong to the Court.

Next week, we will discuss Dumbarton Oaks in more detail, later going into other United Nations conferences and plans for peace and security.

CIO United Nations Month

The next few weeks leading up to the United Nations meeting in San Francisco, April 25, will be "United Nations" month for all CIO members, at the request of CIO President Philip Murray. To start the month, he has written the following statement especially for the labor press.

I am calling upon all international and national unions and industrial union councils to make the month of April United Nations Month within the CIO, and urge that all CIO organizations large and small and all CIO members devote that month to study and discussion of the basic principles of our foreign policy.

American labor, because it has always been in the forefront in the fight against Fascism, has a great responsibility to see that the fight stays won, to educate itself on the basic principles of our foreign policy and then to join with other patriotic citizens to impress upon Congress the will of the American people.

As the armies of the United Nations move swiftly forward to crush Fascism, the governments of those nations are making plans to establish a world organization to maintain a just and lasting peace. At the same time world labor unity is being given concrete form by the formation of a new international labor organization.

The month of April will see the representatives of the United Nations meeting at San Francisco to hammer out the final form of a world security organization. After that it will be up to Congress, particularly the Senate, to ratify the San Francisco decisions, and it will be up to the American people to insist that they do so.

In the meantime Congress will be deciding whether this country will take the first step toward international cooperation in economic matters by its vote in ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreements and again the American people must insist that the agreements be ratified.

For these reasons, all CIO members must be fully informed as to the issues at stake and alert to developments in Congress. All departments of the CIO as well as your international union stand ready to assist you with material for meetings and suggestions for speakers.

'They Look

1 TOM BURNS WORKS at the Sperry Gyroscope Co. in New York, and is a member of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. He is a radial drill press operator. Sperry's makes everything from bomb sights to servile machines, "machines on which you press a button and everything happens," Burns explains. These are now used to assemble war parts, but later will be adapted for civilian use. Burns has been at Sperry's three and a half years, and he was absent just three days. He is a union shop steward and a member of his local's executive board. Between his war work and his union work, he gets little time for himself.

■

2 "THERE'S NOTHING THAT more inhibits a man than living in an apartment, with neighbors upstairs and downstairs, especially when you're raising kids," says Burns (right), beside his five-year-old daughter, Marilyn. "You should be in a place where you can make as much noise and the kids can make as much noise as they want to. These prefabricated houses they're telling about look good to me." And on education, Burns thinks that every worker should be able to send his kids through college. He'd like more leisure to do a little reading — biographies and technical books—and to get to know his family better.

3 VIVIAN SHARPE IS a member of the CIO Office & Professional Workers. She does publicity for Bookfind Corp. in New York. She complains of low white collar pay. "It's hard to make ends meet now with living costs so high," she says. She looks with hope to CIO's program of uniting all the millions of white collar workers in the battle to raise their pay.

4

The CIO NEWS this week electrical worker, an office steel worker, a transport auto worker, and a shipyar what they looked for from This article is their answer.

By HELEN KAY

THE American workingman has confidence in Take Tom Burns, a Sperry Gyroscope wor

He says: "Who doesn't remember the de hunt for a job, any job, at any pay? That's we're aiming to forget, to wipe out."

Take James Daniels, 43-year-old Bethlehem in Baltimore. He says: "I lived on 45 cents a da two children. I wouldn't want that experience a

Take John Klauzenberg, a steelworker at th plant in Baltimore. He tells how he was jobless 1933. "No sweet memories, those years. Under can one forget them. In fact, that's what makes to build my union. It's a simple reason, we through the agony of the depression again!"

Bernard Murray, a New York transport during the depression, but he worked a seven- vacations, no sick leave, no paid holidays. "The nomic Bill of Rights? I don't think the things wi because they're written down, and we wish fo his work in the union, he hopes to get a steady decent home for his family, and medical care.

k to a Prosperous Future'

BERNARD MURRAY WORKS for the New York transportation system, is a member of the CIO Transport Workers Union. He has a wife and two ldren. He'll be 17 years on the job this May, and has been with the union ce 1937 when the Third Avenue Railway won its first contract. Murray nks of the union as his guide to a more prosperous future. The union is his nce to understand and be a part of bigger things, and to participate in full stream of American life. "We're going to go forward each year for ter contracts and better working conditions," he says. Murray remembers en he worked seven days a week. His hope for tomorrow is a 30-hour week.

5 JAMES DANIELS WORKS for the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards in Baltimore and is a member of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers. He is married, has two children; his oldest son is in the Army. He is a material handler, and keeps track of all material coming into the yard, from the lowliest nut and bolt. The union first put up a fight to get Negroes into the yard, then for their right to skilled jobs, and now is battling for a fair break on yardwide seniority. Daniels feels confident that the union will win him the right to stay on the job, and looks forward to a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee that will legalize that right.

asked an worker, a worker, an d worker, the future.

his future.
er in New York.
ression—the mad part of America

Shipyard worker y with a wife and ain."

e Sparrows Point during 1932 and no circumstances me so determined ever want to go orker, had a job ay week with no President's Eco- ll come about just them." Through guaranteed job, a Murray feels very strongly about old age security. He wants the pension and security benefits to begin at 60.

IT IS so that there won't be a depression that the CIO has formulated its program of re-employment for peace. Peacetime production must expand to replace wartime production. It can be done, says the CIO. A shorter work week with present take home pay will raise the economic standard of the individual worker. That is why the CIO supports a program of 60,000,000 jobs.

Tom Burns expresses it this way. He wants a better education for his kid. His personal ambitions, outside of security on the job, which comes first, are "to do a little reading (when I get more leisure) and to really get acquainted with my family, not to mention taking a vacation with them. My union's convention was the closest I came to a vacation." He wants a prefabricated house that he can call his own.

Bernard Murray wants more time for recreation. He wants to be able to take his family to the beach in the summer, and he wants more money for education. "I want to send my kids through high school. If you are able to put them through college—it is the best thing for a kid." And on homes, Murray says: "You've got to pay rent—and the right kind of home would be your own, of course." He'd like to live in the suburbs.

John Klauzenberg, steelworker, has five children. "I didn't have much of an opportunity for education," he says. "I got out of school after the eighth grade. I want a better education for my children, as I would have liked. By having a better education, they are more content at their jobs, they help build a stronger nation and a better one."

James Daniels, Baltimore shipyard worker, also quit school after the eighth grade. His son is getting an education in the Army. Daniels hopes to be able to send his daughters to higher schools. "For Negroes it is not only the wish for a better education," he explained, "it is also the wish for better opportunities once they get the education. Many Negroes find that once education is finished, that is all the distance they can go. A permanent FEPC will stop that." Daniels just bought his own home, a 75-year-old house, for $500. His wife wants a new government house after the war. She went out "hustling for Roosevelt" as a member of PAC.

Emmett Forsythe is 32, has three children, works at the Ford Rouge plant. "Let's have a 30-hour work week so that ten million workers, now in the armed services, may find immediate employment," he says. "We want no more of 1932. We want peace and security for our families. We want our wages to remain adequately high and to increase as our productive capacity increases. For my children, I want to have a decent home, for I believe every American is entitled to one. Labor today is strong, but tomorrow it must be stronger."

6 EMMETT FORSYTHE (left) works at the Ford Motor Co., is a member of the CIO Auto Workers Union. He hopes America "will lead the way in a postwar program that will benefit not only our own people, but the many peoples throughout the world." JOHN KLAUZENBERG works at Sparrows Point steel plant in Baltimore, and is a member of the United Steelworkers of America. "The depression (to him) was no sweet memory . . . that's why I'm a union man, to wipe out that memory . . . never again!"

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Easter Recess

The Congressional recess predicted in last week's Guide will be an informal one, with Congress taking off three or four days at a time. Most of the Congressmen will go home, some for as much as two weeks.

For the convenience of our readers, the Guide is listing the principal issues that should be discussed with the Congressmen on the home grounds. Check to see if your man is at home, call on him, invite him to a meeting to talk things over.

If he's not home, continue to write to him.

Main Issues To Talk Over

BRETTON WOODS: The bill to ratify the Bretton Woods World trade agreement is still in the House Banking and Currency Committee (Rep. Brent Spence, D., Ky., chairman). Hearings are expected to take another two or three weeks.

Anti-Bretton Woods strategy is to stall and quibble over tricky amendments that will force it back to another United Nations conference, thus delaying and blocking it.

Ask your Congressman to work for early and favorable action, to reject all amendments.

PRICE CONTROL: The bill to renew the Price Control Act (SJ. Res. 30) is in the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (Sen. Robt. F. Wagner, D., N. Y., chairman).

CIO wants renewal with repeal of several amendments, including the Bankhead amendment that keeps textile prices up; the Taft rider that forbids grade labeling, opens up broad avenues for cheating consumers; the Taber amendment that forbids use of U. S. standards in pricing.

CIO also wants stronger enforcement by OPA, an end to insuring of profits; plus adequate funds for enforcement.

POLLTAX REPEAL: Discharge petition No. 1, needed to bring the repeal bill (HR 7) out of the Rules Committee, is still short of the 218 Congressional signatures necessary.

Many Republican Congressmen who signed the Discharge Petition last year, when there was an election coming up, are being slow about it this time. Some Democrats who shouldn't hesitate are also being a little slow, due mostly to inertia.

Ask your Congressman if he has signed DP 1, if he hasn't, urge him to do so now.

FEPC: The bi-partisan bill (S 101, HR 2232) to make the Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. Government agency is still stalled (Mar. 22) in the House Rules Committee.

A Discharge Petition will probably be needed to get it to the House floor. Warning: The phoney Taft (R., O.) bill (S 459), which has no enforcement powers, is also up. Ask your Congressman to support the bi-partisan bill, to sign the Discharge Petition if necessary, to reject the Taft fake.

SIXTY-FIVE-CENT WAGE FLOOR: The resolution to put a 65-cent-an-hour floor under wages has been reintroduced into the Senate (S Con Res 11) by Sens. Pepper (D., Fla.), LaFollette (P., Wis.), and Johnston (D., S. C.), and in the House by Rep. Holifield (D., Calif.), as HR 11172.

CIO supported this last year as a means to correct substandard living conditions affecting millions of workers who get around 50 cents an hour or less.

Ask your Senators and Representative to work for early hearings, passage of this resolution.

Coming Up-- Issues to Watch

"EQUAL RIGHTS: This perennial phoney is having hearings this week in a House Judiciary subcommittee headed by Rep. Zebulon Weaver (D., N. C.). CIO and CIO Auxiliaries have submitted briefs against it, pointing out it would wreck not only laws protecting women workers but also endanger social security, other protective laws.

Even though the Senate Judiciary Committee has announced a duration freeze on constitutional changes, the House has not. Keep your Congressman posted on how you feel on this one.

WAR CRIMINALS: CIO prepared testimony this week supporting H Con Res 30, by Rep. King (D., Calif.), which calls for punishment of all war criminals, cuts across legalisms that might protect "heads of state," people "acting under orders," etc.

The bill will have hearings in the House Foreign Affairs Committee soon. CIO policy at 1944 convention calls for strict punishment of all war criminals, high and low.

AID TO GI's: The Emergency Maternity and Infant Care program (EMIC) which helps GIs' wives and kids through pregnancy and the first year of life, needs amending.

This week Pres. Murray told Congress how the present EMIC can be improved to cover wives and kids of men killed, who lose out if they don't apply before the father's death; how it should be extended to cover veterans' wives after discharge; how it should be extended beyond the lowest four enlisted grades.

EMIC is before the Labor-Federal subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. Butler Hare (D., S. C.), chairman. Write to Rep. Hare and your own Congressman to help improve this high-value morale aid.

SENIORITY: Hearings on HR 2255 (by Rep. DeLacy, D., Wash.) which extends seniority rights to U. S. Navy civilian workers will start soon in the House Naval Affairs Committee (Rep. Vinson, D., Ga., chairman).

CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers are for the bill, and for a companion measure in the Senate (S 594) introduced by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.).

MISSOURI VALLEY: The Missouri Valley Authority plan (S 555) to control floods, stop erosion, provide scores of thousands of jobs, is still stalled in the Senate.

CIO supports the bill as part of Pres. Murray's re-employment plan, along with other regional development projects. Write your Senators to urge hearings in Senate Commerce Committee.

Correction

Last week's Guide, in reporting attempts to cut income taxes to 25 per cent of income, thus protecting the rich and opening the way to sales taxes, listed New York as one of the States that defeated the proposal.

This was correct when written, but this week the N. Y. State Senate reversed itself by passing the resolution, which calls for a Federal convention to amend the U. S. Constitution. The Guide was wrong in saying that 36 state resolutions are required. The correct number is 32.

Tips On Testimony

Here are some tips on presenting your case to Congressional Committees:

"Never be content merely to oppose a bill—always have a constructive proposal for a sound solution of the problem.

"Know your subject. Before you appear at a hearing, acquaint yourself thoroughly with every aspect of the bill or proposal under discussion.

"Avoid demagoguery before a committee. It is resented. Get directly to the facts. Get your story told to the committee itself."

The source? A booklet put out by the Natl. Assoc. of Manufacturers called "Know Your Congressman." And the NAM, it need hardly be said, knows its lobbying.

Writing to Congressmen

A while back we listed four simple rules to follow in writing your Congressman. Here are three more that should also be kept in mind:

1. Be courteous when writing or when talking to your Congressman. A Congressman is a public servant, and as such entitled to respect. Ask or urge him to do things rather than demanding them.

2. Be brief. One issue at a time is a good rule, except when you're writing a roundup letter on your organization's policy on a number of issues.

3. Praise your Congressman when he deserves it. Congressmen are human beings. They like a pat on the back when it's coming to them. Your criticism will register better when its tempered with approval on occasions that call for it.

In general, follow the policy of trying to help your Congressman do his job, rather than ordering him around.

Illinois Program

The Legislative Committee of the Illinois CIO Council has put out its 1945 program in an attractive, well designed two-color pamphlet with a picture on every page. It's a model of the way a legislative program can be presented. Write to the Illinois IUC, RM. 1332. 205 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago 6, for a copy.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress will most likely be in recess by the time you read this. For convenience, the Guide reprints last week's quick tabulation of bills now up for action.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Prepares way for five million U. S. jobs through expanding world trade; prevents economic aggression.	Hearings on in House Banking Committee (Rep. Brent Spence, D., Ky., chmn.).	Write your Representative to support without amendments.
Price Control (SJ Res. 30)	Renews Price Control Act.	Hearings on in Senate Banking Committee (Sen. Wagner, D., N. Y., chmn.). CIO and Auxiliary have testified for.	Write Senators to support, with repeal of Bankhead, Taft & Taber riders.
Manpower (S 36)	Wagner - Kilgore amendments tighten existing production facilities; avoid labor draft; have penalties for waste of labor. Amendments are to House-passed May-Bailey draft bill.	Wagner - Kilgore amendments passed Senate; May-Bailey bill passed House. Both now go to House-Senate conference, with fight set by some House leaders for House bill, which CIO opposed.	Wire Senators to stand firm on Wagner-Kilgore amendments to S 36, reject May-Bailey, other labor draft measures.
Polltax Repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to ten million voteless Negro and white Americans.	Discharge Petition 1 now being signed to get HR 7 on House floor for debate and vote; 218 signers needed, about 150 in.	Write Representative to sign DP 1, vote for HR 7.

(Note: Address all Senators at Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives at House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Ralph W. Tillotson, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Erie, Pa., reports: Struthers-Wells, Titusville, Pa., CIO United Steelworkers of America overwhelmingly defeated the AFL in the following three craft elections: CIO 462, AFL (machinists) 127; CIO 105, AFL (blacksmiths) 10; CIO 79, AFL (electricians) 13. The drive was handled capably by USA Rep. John C. Graney.

George Craig, Reg. Dir. Philadelphia, reports: Summerville Tubing Co., Norristown, Pa., UAW-CIO 50%, Independent 45%, no union 5%. Rep. Melvin Bishop was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joe Dernoncourt, Oklahoma, reports: Oklahoma City Rendering Works, CIO Packinghouse Workers 10, against 5. Rep. Buck Whittaker handled the organization work of this group. Douglas Aircraft Corp., UAW-CIO 9,371, no union 3,656. UAW-CIO got 71½% of the total votes cast. Rep. William Hunter was in charge of the drive. Congratulations to all participating!

Pres. S. H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers, advises: Richardson Rubber Co., Indianapolis, Ind., CIO 358, Employees Union, Inc., 94, no union 15.

Leonard Levy, Exec. V. P., URW&DSEA, Chicago, advises: Century Biscuit Co., Indianapolis, CIO 64, against 30.

George Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Horner Flooring Mill, Dollar Bay, Mich., CIO 52, no union 1. Horner Wood Products Co., Dollar Bay, Mich., employes voted 100% for CIO. Rep. Henry Strauch was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler, Kansas City, reports: Fritz Overall Co., Atchison, Kansas, CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers 33, no union 14. Reps. Bernadine McClean and Sam Kolkey are to be credited with this victory.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., reports: Fischer Lime, Memphis, CIO 54, no union 18. Rep. Henry White and MIUC Rep. Riley Williams were in charge. General Wiping Cloth Co., Memphis, 14 employes recognized CIO as the collective bargaining agent. CIO Rep. Henry White was in charge.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, Ga., reports: American Optical Co., Atlanta, CIO 24, no union 23. Star Provision, Atlanta, CIO 10, no union 8.

Walter Smethurst, Dir., Paper Workers Organizing Committee, advises: Rep. Carl Monaco reports the winning of an election at Hollis Press, Inc., New York. Rep. Burt Mason reports winning election at Container Division of Interational Paper Co., Chicago, by a vote of 107 for CIO to 18 against.

R. W. Starnes, Acting CIO Reg. Dir., New Orleans, reports: South Coast Sugar Refinery, Mathews, La., CIO won the election by a vote of three to one, involving 265 employes in the bargaining unit.

Joseph O'Connor, UGCWA Field Rep. reports: Hercules Powder Co., Parchment Plant, Kalamazoo, Mich., CIO 78.27%, against 21.73%. Congratulations to all participating.

NOTE: In a recent issue of the CIO NEWS, we reported the winning of an election at the Chambersburg Engineering Company's plant, Chambersburg, Pa., by a vote of 242 for UAW-CIO, to 111 for no union. Credit is due UAW Reps. Paul Silver and Linwood Smith, both of whom took a real active part in this campaign, for their splendid efforts.

The writer addressed a PAC Victory Meeting in Baltimore on Friday, March 16, giving a report of the World Trade Union Conference, which was received with much interest. I also addressed this week a conference of local representatives of the Die Casters in Washington, D. C., who are vitally interested in the course mapped out by Pres. Murray on international cooperation.

ACW Joins N. Y. Council

Affiliation of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' locals to the Greater New York CIO Council was announced jointly this week by ACW Vice-Pres. Murray Weinstein and CIO Council Pres. Joseph Curran.

A statement issued by the N. Y. Council said the decision of the ACW locals to join the Council "makes it possible for the New York CIO to become the largest and most potent single force in our city for the promotion of the people's and labor's interests."

Weinstein called the affiliation a step which "will further strengthen the joint efforts of all of the CIO organizations in New York City both in the economic and political fields."

"I regard this step as an important contribution to the unity of the forces of labor and progress in our city which is so essential if we are to make our maximum contribution toward the progressive solution of the difficult problems of winning the war and winning the peace," he said.

Nineteen New York ACW locals representing more than 30,000 workers have already voted on affiliation and elected delegates to the council. The balance of the locals will take formal action at membership and executive board meetings.

Auto Union Seeks to Hold Convention

Request for authorization to convene the tenth annual convention of the CIO United Auto Workers in Grand Rapids, Mich., on Sept. 10, was filed this week with the Secretary of the War Committee on Conventions, announces UAW Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes.

The UAW's constitution calls for the convening of the convention on the second Monday in September. Addes estimated that some 2,500 delegates, officers and representatives only would attend, with the attendance of hundreds of members and others who usually attend conventions eliminated.

New URW Office

The CIO Rubber Workers Union announces the moving of International headquarters to a new home in the Buckeye Building, High and Mill Sts., Akron, Ohio.

Big Douglas Plant In Oklahoma Goes CIO

A second try at winning union recognition at the big Douglas Aircraft plant in Oklahoma City brought an overwhelming victory for the CIO United Auto Workers, the union reported this week. The vote was 9,371 for the UAW to 3,656 for "no union."

The UAW is particularly elated over the victory as it shows the big strides made in organizing the plant during the past year. At an earlier election held by the Natl. Labor Relations Board in April, 1944, the UAW carried 38 per cent of the votes cast to 13 per cent for the AFL, with the "no union" vote winning out.

Later the UAW petitioned the NLRB for a new election, on the basis of signed membership cards showing the increased number of workers who had joined the union, and the board agreed to conduct it.

UE Wins Premium Pay

A request of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers for check-off of dues and higher premium pay for third shift workers in five plants of General Motors Corp. has been granted by the Natl. War Labor Board, with industry members dissenting.

The CIO union represents some 31,000 workers in five of the Corporation's plants — Frigidaire and Delco Products, both of Dayton, Ohio; Packard Electric, Warren, Ohio; Eastern Aircraft, Bloomfield, N. J., and Delco Appliance, Rochester, N. Y.

The WLB rejected the union's demands for a 17c hourly wage increase and for a monthly cost-of-living bonus on the basis that they were "contrary to existing wage stabilization policy." The four labor members, including the two CIO representatives, Van A. Bittner and Carl J. Shipley, dissented.

The premium pay ordered by the WLB calls for a 7½ per cent differential for work on the third shift, retroactive to Oct. 5, 1943, expiration date of the prior agreement, and directed the parties to negotiate a definition of the second and third shift to be included in their agreement.

Killed on Luzon

Lt. Robert Mosele, oldest of the three sons of Pete Mosele, CIO regional director in New York, was killed in action on Luzon, February 7, according to information received this week by the family. Lieutenant Mosele was serving in the Infantry.

Ruling on Absences

Absences resulting from shutdowns in a plant for which the employe is not responsible should be considered time worked in determining vacation eligibility, states the War Labor Board.

The board's ruling was made in upholding a decision of the regional board in Cleveland in a dispute involving 500 workers at the Park Drop Forge Co., represented by the CIO Auto Workers.

New ACW Insurance Plan Covers 100,000

A comprehensive system of health, accident, life and hospitalization insurance covering some 100,000 workers in the cotton garment and allied industries has been set up under collective union-employer agreements announces the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Gen. Secy.-Treas. Jocob S. Potofsky and Exec. Vice-Pres. Frank Rosenblum of the Amalgamated stated that employers in 35 states will contribute 2 per cent of their weekly pay rolls to the Amalgamated Cotton Garment & Allied Industries Insurance Fund which will be managed by a joint industry union board of trustees.

Employer contributions are expected to yield $2,000,000 annually to the fund. Payment of benefits will be through the Amalgamated Health & Insurance Co., already set up in the clothing industry and previously covering 150,000 workers.

Payments by employers into the fund will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1945, with the date when benefit payment will begin to be announced later. In the meantime adequate reserves will be built up.

Singer Signs First Contract

For the first time in its 72-year history, the Singer sewing machine concern has signed a union contract with Local 401, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Elizabeth, N. J. Some 6,000 workers are involved.

The contract provides maintenance of membership, dues check-off, arbitration and grievance procedure, group insurance and provisions for safety, health, trial periods, discharge methods, shift schedules and payments to union stewards for time spent in settling disputes.

Also included is a no-strike, no-lockout pledge.

A New Figure for Betsy

By EVE MERRIAM

OH, once there was a girl named Betsy Doodle.

Though she wasn't as pretty as the All-American Cover Cutie, any day in the week Betsy could fill her quota of wolf-howls. No, there was nothing the matter with Betsy's face. As for her figure—well, that was a little on the backward side . . .

But her brain: oh my.

That figured out to zero.

Betsy's brain was strictly the hole in the doughnut, the vacuum in cleaner, the Nothin' in I Got Plenty Of.

Still, it didn't seem to matter very much. Betsy could always comb her hair in a long bob so nobody could see what was missing inside her head.

Until one Sunday afternoon in December.

Betsy and her friends were listening to the radio. And suddenly there wasn't a musical program on: there was a war on.

Right away all of Betsy's friends said, "What can I do to help? And they found out. Her boy friends went into uniform, and her girl friends went into assembly line slacks.

But not Betsy.

Oh, she wondered about what she could do. And she thought she had the answer.

"What can I do to help win the war?" she asked herself. And she smiled happily. "I know," she said, "I can sit on my duration and look pretty."

So Betsy sat.

Only she didn't look pretty.

She began to get fat.

Very fat.

Then she really started to worry. "Oh dear, the boys will come back after the war, and they won't want to take me out anymore. I'd better do some setting-up exercises!"

So she touched her toes ten times every morning and night. But she kept on getting fatter.

ONE day she waddled past a factory and saw a lot of people inside doing setting-up exercises. Only they weren't doing exercises: they were helping to build tanks and guns and planes.

So Betsy went inside and got a war job.

And Betsy got nice and slim And prettier than ever. Because she liked her job.

The foreman would bring her a neat blueprint, and Betsy would file a piece of metal to fit the part on the blueprint that was meant for her. And all around the other people were working to fill up the rest of the blueprint.

Soon a great shining aeroplane was ready to go singing up into the clouds.

The motors hummed a deep strong bass, and the silver wings took the alto part. And high up in the engine was a tiny clear melody that belonged to Betsy herself, for she had helped to make it. She was part of that giant tune that went soaring up into the free sky.

"Oh, I like my job," Betsy sang, "Oh, I do like having a job!"

And then she stopped singing.

"When the war is over," she thought, "there won't be any more planes to make, and I'll have to go back to sitting on my postwar duration. And I'll get fatter and fatter. I don't want to do that—I want to keep my nice new figure!"

So she got sadder and sadder. And thinner and thinner at the prospect of getting fatter and fatter.

Betsy got bony. Positively scarecrow.

And tears fell on the blueprint for the next plane.

"Oh dear," she sniffled as she wiped the tears off the chart, "why can't this blueprint be for a kind of postwar plan? For the kind of postwar plan that would need the kind of people like me?" And she cried harder and harder. And so she had to rub harder and harder to wipe the tears off the blueprint paper.

And that's how she saw the writing on the other side.

"A Postwar Plan," it read, "For Betsy." There were three little words printed on it: three great big words. "Sixty Million Jobs."

"Sixty million jobs in the postwar world," Betsy beamed, "why that would be wonderful. That would mean jobs for everybody who wanted one—including me!"

Then she sighed. "It's too wonderful. It must a dream. A postwar plastic pipe-dream. Because after the war we won't have to build tanks and guns and planes —so there can't be 60 million jobs with one of them for Betsy."

So she got sadder again and thinner again as she thought of how she'd have to sit on her postwar duration and get fatter and fatter. "I wouldn't mind so much if I didn't have my nice new figure now. Oh dear, and my brain will have to go back to being the hole in the doughnut, the vacuum in cleaner, the Nothin' in I Got Plenty Of. Nuts," she said to herself, "doughnuts!"

Then "Why not?", her brain began to get busy. "Why not doughnuts and vacuum cleaners and plenty of—Plenty! Instead of tanks and guns and planes we can make a lot of other things! Houses and highways and schools and shoes and electric toasters. Books and bathtubs and lipsticks and radios and stockings. Iceboxes and cars and lamps and sewing machines and tractors and bobbypins. Millions of things!

"Sixty million things we can make—for 60 million jobs. And with 60 million paychecks people will be able to buy those 60 million things. And I can help keep on making them! I can keep my job and my nice new figure!

"I won't have to sit on my postwar duration and get fatter and fatter. I won't have to worry and get thinner and thinner. I can even have a nicer figure than ever before. One sixty-millionth: that's the postwar figure for me!"

Copyright 1945—CIO NEWS

By ELEANOR FOWLER

This year is a test of our sincerity in world cooperation in many ways. First, of course, comes the big test of whether the American people really mean it when they say they are for an international organization to keep the peace, both on the economic and on the political front.

That test began with the introduction of the bills to ratify the Bretton Woods agreements for an international bank and an international fund to stimulate trade, build world prosperity and help to eliminate the economic causes of war.

Then will come the campaign for ratification of the world security agreement which will be completed at San Francisco. That will be the biggest test of our international mindedness.

International agreements in themselves, however, won't guarantee peace. Friendly relations between the peoples of the world, international confidence and good will are essential to make agreements work.

Americans have two immediate opportunities to help build that international friendship by sharing their food and clothing with their allies. So far we in this country have suffered very little in this war. Our homes have not been bombed, our possessions have not been destroyed.

Conditions in the lands of our allies and in the liberated nations cry out to us for help. The United National Clothing Drive, which will continue throughout April, will give us an opportunity to share our clothes with other peoples in desperate need. The very least we can do is to go through every closet and drawer and give to the drive every wearable garment which we do not need ourselves.

An even bigger undertaking which we must face is to give these people food. Millions of people in Europe today are slowly starving.

It has been announced that we are cutting food shipments to England from over 200,000,000 lbs. in the first quarter of this year to 25,000,000 in the second. This is going to mean a further cut in British rations and they are already eating far less than we.

Today a British housewife is limited to about 24 cents worth of meat per person per week—just about enough for one meal. Children are starving in Greece, in Yugoslavia, in Italy, in France, Belgium and Holland.

If we wanted to we could change our diets enough to feed those children and still have fully adequate nutrition for ourselves and our children.

The women of this country ought to voice their feelings on this. They ought to let the President and their Senators know that they are willing to make sacrifices to save lives.

Labor Education

Students Learn About TWU

A group of students from five high schools in Germantown visited the CIO Transport Workers' Union Leadership Training School in Phialdelphia recently to learn about the CIO and the TWU programs and aims at first-hand from discussions with union officials. William Moody, Local 234 education and publicity director, told them about the Training School.

The TWU School gives practical courses in unionism on such subjects as settlement of grievances, the TWU constitution, how the CIO came about, difference between a CIO industrial union and an AFL craft union—all aimed at teaching the students how to become intelligent union members and leaders.

Some 50 members are now attending the classes, half on Tuesday and half on Thursday night. Plans are now underway to add another night.

★ ★ ★

Classes for shop stewards are announced as part of the educational activities of Dist. 1, CIO Packinghouse Workers in Chicago. The educational committee, headed by Kenneth Mertes, plans to advertise the classes by leaflets distributed through the stockyards.

★ ★ ★

Series For Music Lovers

A series of eight music lecture-recitals with the unique feature of audience participation in the discussion have been announced by the Career Service School of the N.Y. District, State, County & Municipal Workers.

The course, which will feature soloists, recordings, and group singing by the Brooklyn Peoples' Chorus, is designed to "develop an understanding of music as entertainment and as it reflects society from ancient times to 'Boogie Woogie'," announces Steve Ross, the school's chairman. Further information may be obtained from Career School, 13 Astor Place, N.Y.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO-NEWS

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

The story characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Guaranteed Annual Pay Study Is Ordered by FDR

A study of guaranteed annual wage plans that may have a potent effect on the security of American workers has been ordered by President Roosevelt, on recommendation of the Natl. War Labor Board.

FDR said that "the inquiry recommended by the WLB is closely connected with the problems of reconversion and the transition from a war economy to a peace economy."

He appointed the advisory board of James F. Byrnes' office of war mobilization to conduct the study, and the chairman of the board, O. Max Gardner, Washington attorney and former governor of North Carolina, announced appointment of a sub-committee to collect reports that have been made on the subject.

Named on the sub-committee were CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Pres. Eric Johnston of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Albert Goss, master of the Natl. Grange, and Regional Director Anna Rosenberg of the N. Y. manpower commission.

FDR acted after the WLB had unanimously recommended the study, and had informed him that the information on annual wage plans is decidedly on the sketchy side.

"Some of the existing plans are reported to be successful, with benefits resulting to the employers as well as to the workers through the greater regularization of production and employment," the WLB said.

"Each plan has differed from every other, and most of the plans have been initiated by the employers themselves. No comprehensive and authoritative study has been made of the nature and coverage of the plans now in existence, or of their actual effects on employment, production and profits, or of the reasons why other plans have gone out of existence.

"The question is one which demands investigation. A guaranteed annual wage is one of the main aspirations of American workers. The search for it is a part of the search for continuity of employment which is perhaps the most vital economic and social objective of our times.

"The War Labor Board cannot be indifferent to the human problems created by this search. For in the field of industrial disputes these problems are with us now, and the Board is required by law to dispose of them fairly and equitably. They are reflected in demands for annual guarantees in a number of pending cases before the Board; and the fear of unemployment which has led to these demands is contributing also to the pressure for a change in the national wage stabilization policy.

"Charged with responsibility both for wage stabilization and for the settlement of industrial disputes, the War Labor Board cannot shut its eyes to these developments. The Board is convinced that it would be derelict in its duty if it were simply to dismiss the demands of the unions without proposing a single step forward."

MEANWHILE the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics issued a report revealing that an analysis of contracts covering eight million workers showed that only 42,500 of them are protected by annual wage provisions.

The Bureau reported that 30,000 of these workers are employed in the consumers goods, service and distributive industries where the agreements were negotiated with concerns employing relatively small numbers of workers.

"Although there are a few outstanding examples in manufacturing companies of considerable size, the total number of employes in manufacturing industries who are covered by agreements providing guaranteed employment is very small—about 12,500," the Bureau said.

The 12,500 are covered by 132 agreements with 142 companies, part of 6,500 contracts that were analyzed and that cover over six million workers.

"Eighty-eight of these companies, employing about 5,850 workers, guarantee a full year's employment or wages; the remaining 54 companies, employing about 6,500 workers, provide guarantees of less than one year," the Bureau said.

Report from Georgia

GIs Learn Score on Fascism

BY FRED ROSS

The citizen-soldier knows the nature of Fascism, knows that its first objective is to crush unions and that in a democracy unions protect workers' rights and get them better wages.

A sampling of trainees at Camp Wheeler, Ga., made by The CIO NEWS during an Army-conducted tour this week, shows that a group in their seventh week of training had learned the nature of fascism well in an orientation course discussion conducted two weeks earlier.

The result is more surprising in view of the anti-union bias of the daily news roundup read to them and later posted on the company bulletin boards.

Eight GIs questioned ranged in age from 17 to 23 and came from varied backgrounds. As was to be expected, the answers also varied in form of expression and in intensity of feeling, but showed that the constantly improving orientation course, which now includes an hour's discussion on fascism, is equipping the GIs mentally to meet the enemy.

The men were asked one of the questions used by the discussion leader.

"Why are the German industrialists strongly supporting the fascist party in Germany?" was the question. Most of them also were asked whether they believed in, and would join, democratically-run unions.

Eighteen-year-old Kenneth McGill of St. Johnsbury, Va., who had been a member of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at the New England Shipbuilding Co. at Portsmouth, Me., said that his local was democratically-operated.

He added that at meetings he had attended the local president had censured members for failure to bring up grievances, which they had been discussing among themselves.

"Hitler," McGill said, "promised industrialists good profits and low wages through the abolition of labor unions" and made good on his promises.

John A. Tomas, Columbus, Ohio, like McGill a private, said the industrialists backed Hitler because he told them that under his rule "people would work for nothing."

Thomas, married and a father, added that although he had not joined in helping organize the workers into a CIO union at Ranco, Inc., in Columbus, Ohio, where he worked, he had no scruples against unions and would be willing to join one on his return to civilian life.

Pvt. Arthur Gentile, Brooklyn, N. Y., said that he was planning on returning after the war to New York City College where he was studying to be a teacher of biology. His emphatic answer showed that he understood the nature of fascsim, and that he would be willing to join a teachers' union.

Others who gave similar answers were Pvt. Arthur Dropkin, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Pvt. Rudolph Castelli, Teaneck, N. J., gasoline station attendant; and Acting Sgt. Irving Conover, Hanover, N. J.

Pvt. John Seible, Annapolis, Md., had belonged to a union at the Navy Yard there where he worked as a laborer. He said that he was opposed to bad practices in unions—such as payment of high initiation fees in order to get a job—but that he was 100% for unions democratically run.

Maj. Gen. Harry Hazlett—in charge of 19 Replacement Training Centers—at a press conference at Camp Wheeler stressed the importance of the discussion method in teaching the youthful trainees the nature of fascism.

"The principal reason is that they will do a good job as soldiers a little later on," General Hazlett said, adding that the German and the Japanese soldiers are thoroughly indoctrinated before they go into their armies.

At Camp Wheeler there are 18 periods in the orientation course, which includes a film on "The Negro Soldier."

In each regiment there is an orientation building, where the trainees may go for reading and recreation. There are maps showing the progress of the war as well as literature.

A daily news round-up prepared by the press relations officer is read to each platoon during the noonday break.

Radio station WMAZ, Macon, Ga., furnishes the information which goes into the bulletin. The information has the same anti-union bias as is displayed in the daily press.

For example, the bulletin for March 2, which was based on news furnished the radio station by the Associated Press, stated that 25,000 employes at Chrysler and Briggs plants in Detroit had ignored the pleas of the national officers of the CIO Auto Workers to return to work. The story stated that the strikes followed the discharge of groups of employes, but did not indicate in any way that the discharges were part of a move by the manufacturers to break the union, as Pres. R. J. Thomas, of the Auto Workers, said.

LATEST POSITIONS of the armies are shown to soldiers at the Infantry Replacement Training Center at Camp Wheeler, Ga., by an orientation officer who has just finished reading the daily news report. (Army Signal Corps Photo.)

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8. No. 14 — April 2, 1945

Pass The Ammunition—Here's How To Do It!

(See Page 12)

★ ★ ★

How The Peace Plan Works

(See Page 7)

★ ★ ★

Homes For Tomorrow

(Pages 2 & 3)

★ ★ ★

Your Guide To Washington

(See Page 8)

Labor, Management Agree

It's Industrial Peace For the Postwar Period!

(See Complete Story—Pages 5 & 6)

Labor and management got together this week to sign a charter for postwar industrial peace which recognizes the right of labor to organize, the right of management to direct private enterprise, and the need for both groups to work together for top production, full employment and high wages.

Groups represented at an historic meeting at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D. C., included the CIO, AFL and the C. of C. Speaking respectively for these organizations were Presidents Philip Murray, William Green and Eric Johnston.

High points of the agreement, which they will take back to their organizations for ratification, include:

1. Maintenance of private enterprise as foundation for an expanding economy.
2. The right of management to direct enterprise.
3. The right of labor to organize and bargain collectively.
4. An understanding that foreign trade is needed to stimulate the domestic economy.

The postwar peace pact was hailed by CIO Pres. Murray, who said:

"The plan is conceived to help America. Although this is an understanding between the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the AFL and the CIO, it nevertheless constitutes a proposal which, through the medium of this meeting, is being submitted to the people of the United States for their approval.

"We want the people to think about it; we want the people to talk about it; and we naturally invite the people to join with us in the attainment of the aspirations set forth in this declaration."

FOR HOMES AND JOBS

BEFORE

AFTER

THERE are two ways to look at postwar housing. The CIO Housing Committee is aware of both. CIO sees the viewpoint of millions of Americans who need better houses in which to make their homes—as well as the viewpoint that such a program will create millions of jobs.

The CIO Housing Committee proposes a homebuilding program for America of 1,750,000 homes each year for the next ten years. This is a component part of the CIO's overall program for 60 million jobs in an economy of plenty.

SHELTER is next to food in importance to the individual. The monthly rental absorbs at least one-fifth of all the worker earns. Socially, shelter means environment. Bad housing means slums. Slums mean crime, disease, increased costs to communities. A decent home to live in is very personal, but it is also a community responsibility. For the homes make the neighborhood, the neighborhood makes the community, the community is the great social organism of a way of life.

America's housing has for too long been on the substandard side. As R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO's Housing Committee, declared before a Senate committee at the beginning of this year: "During the war period, we have come more and more to realize that the living environment of large masses of people has become increasingly bad. The need for better houses and better living environment is such as to present a tremendous potential market demand."

According to the 1940 census, there were 37 million dwellings in the U. S. Of these about eight million were on farms, twenty-two million in cities and towns of 2,500 or more, and seven million in villages.

Some 10,000,000 of the dwellings not on farms were substandard in the sense that they were in need of major repairs, were without running water, lacked a private toilet or bath. About 6,600,000 of the farm dwellings were also substandard. Altogether, more than a third of all the housing in the United States was substandard.

THE National Housing Agency estimates conservatively the need for 16,100,000 units for the next ten years. The CIO Housing Committee looks on this as a minimum figure, and declares that the construction industry will have to provide jobs for two million more workers in the postwar than it did in 1940 in order to achieve this. The minimum job budget should be around six and a half million construction workers—for the new community, schools, roads, etc. About two and one quarter million workers, or roughly one-third, must be engaged specifically in the homebuilding industry, on homes for Americans.

Can the job of attaining this minimum be done, when in 1940 the construction industry produced only 600,000 homes?

Some of the story can be told through wartime housing, where the man-hours required to build a typical war house were only 1,400, compared to 1,800 on-site man-hours required to build the average prewar type five-room house.

Or perhaps you too were intrigued by the story

1. (TOP) CIO's PROGRAM calls for expanded slum clearance with new housing built on the borders of the city. This will mean a real face-lifting job for big cities, where the slums are in the city's heart, and where there is now a constant draining off of populations to the suburbs. The CIO says the cities must organize and direct this migration to the suburbs or they will lose out in taxes and land values. The happy family in these before and after pictures is that of Mr. Gregory Trungadi of Bridgeport, Conn. His slum home made way for a model multiple dwelling unit.

2. (BELOW) THE VETERAN'S BUREAU says 3 million returning servicemen will want new homes for their families. Wartime housing attempted to meet some of this program. The soldier, leading his child on skates, resided in the Newton D. Baker Village in Columbus, Ga., a slum clearance project used for wartime permanent housing. The child in the next picture is also from a wartime permanent housing project in Corpus Christi, Tex. For homes, for jobs, and for an improved environment for America's families—that is the substance of CIO's program. Most workers want single homes; group housing is cheaper.

appearing in a leading picture magazine last week, showing the setting up of a prefabricated home in exactly 34 minutes.

The 34-minute house may not be the answer, but the day they began to build housing units under a shed, they began to search for an answer. The CIO Housing Committee thinks it can be done.

ALREADY on the market are dustless round houses, assembled units, plastics, substitute materials. The prefabricated house is still a shack, and not recommended as adequate permanent housing for American workers. But the home-building industry must gear itself for peace, as the rest of America's industry did for war. New techniques must be sought out. The CIO's Housing Committee proposes that the home building industry, to achieve its rightful place in America's magnificent productive capacity, must adopt more efficient organization of operations, must study greater utilization of men, machines, and material.

One suggested efficiency is that the homebuilding industry end seasonal operations; plan for year-round operations. This would make possible a guaranteed annual wage in the home building industry such as the CIO is attempting to secure for all mass production workers. Also suggested is the more efficient use of prefabrication, better engineering techniques, and more efficient purchasing of materials. Such action can be attained by greater cooperation of labor, management and government.

IN 1942, 35% of American families had incomes of less than $1,500 a year. This group represents the most acute area of our national housing problem. In peacetime only 4% of this group got FHA loans. Another 15% of our American families had incomes of from $1,500 to $2,000. Thus, half of our families in America during war years had annual incomes of less than $2,000. Housing will have to meet their needs. Many of these are living in hand-me-down homes. Decent new living conditions cannot be provided for a large part of this group at a profit to private enterprise. They will have to be housed in publicly subsidized new living quarters. An adequate program of publicly subsidized housing is another part of the CIO's postwar housing objective.

NLRB Rule Opens Unions to Foremen; Reilly Is Against It

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The Natl. Labor Relations Board this week made an important contribution to the principles and practices of collective bargaining when it held that foremen are employes for purposs of the Natl. Labor Relations Act and are entitled to full bargaining rights. The decision, involving the Packard Motor Co., was the work of Chairman Mills and Board Member Houston. Board Member Reilly dissented. In deciding that "all general foremen, assistant foremen and special assignment men employed by the company" constitute a unit for purposes of collective bargaining, the Board has removed a serious obstacle to settlement of industrial disputes.

The direct importance of this decision for CIO unions arises from the fact that it grants statutory protection to groups of foremen who are without power to hire and fire, who have been traditionally acceptable to membership in CIO unions. The decision removes any doubt that such individuals are employes within the meaning of the National Labor Relations Act and entitled to full bargaining rights.

SIGNIFICANT POINTS

The history of this issue before the board illustrates the important role of the act in freeing industrial relations of strikes. Initially, in a case known as the Maryland Drydock case, the board (Chairman Millis dissenting) had decided that foremen were not entitled to bargaining rights under the act. Thereafter two things happened which are quite significant:

1. Employers began to smash unions of foremen and to discharge individual foremen who began to organize. Even Board Member Reilly, who was responsible for the original Maryland Drydock decision, was forced to accept the view that the discharge of a foreman for organizing a union was a violation of the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the board unanimously so held. This forced the board into a contradiction. It held on the one hand that foremen were not protected with respect to bargaining and that employers were not required to recognize their unions, but that they were protected from discharge when they organized such unions.

2. The Maryland Drydock case produced a series of strikes. From July 1, 1943, through November, 1944, there were 20 strikes of supervisory employes; 131,000 employes were involved, and 669,156 man-days were lost as a result. Over 96 per cent of the man-days lost occurred in strikes for recognition. The basic industries of the nation were affected; shipbuilding, steel, aluminum, brass, automobile, coal mining, airplane products, railroad cars and public utilities. Thus, the Congressioinal prediction that strikes would occur if employes were denied the right to collective bargaining was borne out with startling accuracy.

The board's present reversal of the Maryland Drydock decision removes a serious obstacle to uninterrupted war production. Moreover, it reflects the fact that in the basic mass-production industries collective bargaining has reached the same maturity which it has attained in foreign countries where foremen have been granted bargaining rights for many years.

AGAINST ISOLATING FOREMEN

The union involved in the Packard case is an unaffiliated union of foremen. At the hearing on the Packard case the CIO took the view that the board should not issue a rule which would prevent a foremen's union from affiliating with the CIO. If the board compelled foremen's unions to organize autonomously, the CIO argued, the board would create a new and separate labor federation which might then affiliate in bulk to one of the two existing large labor bodies. This artificial result, the CIO felt, would be dangerous to stable labor relations. It is much more desirable to permit foremen's organizations to develop freely and not to place a permanent quarantine upon their affiliation with a parent body which admits production workers.

The board refused to accept the contention of the companies that if foremen were granted bargaining rights they must be structurally isolated from production workers. Chairman Millis expressly stated that he would place no obstacle in the path of affiliation of foremen's groups with non-supervisory employe organizations, and Board Member Houston stated that he regarded the question as an open one.

The dissent of Board Member Reilly comes as no surprise. At its convention in November, 1944, the CIO in a resolution expressed the view that Mr. Reilly was "undermining the protection afforded labor by the Natl. Labor Relations Act." Mr. Reilly's dissent amply vindicates that view. It reveals what all fair-minded men have known for a long time—that Mr. Reilly has no use for the act or for labor organizations and has, indeed, used the act as a camouflage for an attack upon labor unions.

THE DISTURBING MR. REILLY

In discussing Mr. Reilly's dissent we pass by his startling view that collective bargaining is the right of only the more needy elements of the population and that the Natl. Relations Act was passed to preserve management from employe aggression.

There are two things which are particularly disturbing in Mr. Reilly's dissent: First, the view that unions which achieve bargaining status under the act will strike; that strikes arise not from a denial of bargaining rights but from a granting of them by the board. Second, his bold demand for legislation to punish "recalcitrant unions."

Mr. Reilly's views with respect to the effect of the act upon industrial relations are directly opposed to the facts and to the premises of Congress in passing the act. His request for legislation seeks to revive issues which Congress has disposed of time and time again.

Mr. Reilly believes collective bargaining leads to strikes. Congress disagrees with Mr. Reilly. Mr. Reilly believes in amending the act in a way which Congress has consistently refused to do. Many experts in industrial relations are wondering why Mr. Reilly does not resign from the board and continue his anti-labor activities in the open instead of using the act as a means of forwarding ideas which are hostile to its effective enforcement.

CIO News Digest

Bosses Attack Wage-Hour Law

Danger that 1¼ million workers may be stripped of Wage-Hour Law protection was seen this week as the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Wage-Hour Division held hearings in New York City involving food handling and processing workers.

Spokesmen for industry and big farm groups claimed wholesale exemptions during the hearing, just concluded. Representatives of the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers and the AFL testified that a proposed definition of workers to be covered by the law would create economic dislocation and inequities, would give unfair competitive advantage to some major plants purely because of their location, and would exempt too many workers from protection of the law.

Making Hay In Washington

Labor unity pays off! Proof this week was passage by the Washington State Legislature of 21 labor-endorsed bills to wind up the best session on record so far as unions are concerned. Representatives of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods showed exemplary unity in working through a joint labor lobby.

Among measures approved were:

An industrial insurance bill broadening coverage.

An unemployment compensation and pension measure, part of an integrated war and postwar social security program that is said to be the best state legislation in the nation.

Wage and hour protection and other gains for state and municipal workers.

A $50 million postwar economic development program.

A child care program, progressive education legislation and a survey of health facilities.

Modification of election laws to aid labor's participation in political affairs.

Ask FEPC In Pennsylvania

CIO and AFL have united in Pennsylvania to urge passage of a Fair Employment Practice Bill that would set up a five-man FEPC with authority to enforce laws to end racial discrimination in employment.

In a letter to Pennsylvania's Republican Governor Martin, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said that discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color or national origin must be lifted "above the realm of partisan politics."

Vermont Dumps Anti-Labor Bills

Labor scored two victories this week in Vermont.

1. A bill requiring unions to register and to pay taxes, like corporations, was withdrawn from the state legislature.

2. The senate in a 15-13 vote defeated a bill, passed by the house, which would have imposed punishment ranging up to $5,000 fine and from one to five years in jail for anyone using "coercion" to force a person to join any organization.

For Guaranteed Annual Wage

"A guaranteed annual wage would be one of the greatest things for people who have to work for a living."

This was the opinion expressed this week by William S. Newell, president of the United Seamen's Service and head of the Bath Iron Works, of Bath, Me., before the Natl. Council of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, in New York City.

"Sooner or later," Newell asserted, "the principle of a guaranteed annual wage will be worked out. With it comes a sense of security; you know where you are at. A guaranteed wage will come if people think about it, and keep working toward it."

CIO to Meet With Vet Groups

The CIO's enlarged Veterans' Committee will meet jointly April 3 and 4 with representatives of three veterans' organizations, and will participate in the American Legion employment conference April 5 and 6. Both meetings will be held in Washington.

Representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, National Conference of Labor Union Legionnaires of the American Legion, and of the American Veterans Committee will attend the committee meeting.

Clinton S. Golden, committee chairman, said that spokesmen for other veterans' groups will have the opportunity to be present at subsequent meetings.

3 Important CIO Meetings

CIO has three meetings coming up in the next 10 days in which it will talk over plans and take action on major domestic and United Nations matters.

April 5 the CIO-PAC meets here in Washington on President Murray's call. This is the first meeting of the full committee since the Chicago convention.

April 10 the administration committee of the London World Labor Conference meets in Washington to work on the draft constitution of the world labor federation.

April 12 the CIO Executive Board meets in Washington to discuss United Nations and CIO issues, also on President Murray's call.

CIO Radio Roundup

CIO's United Nations Month will get a big play on CIO's weekly Blue Network broadcasts. Here's the lineup for the 6:45 p. m. EWT Saturday show:

April 7—Bretton Woods.

April 14—Report on the Washington meeting of the administrative council of the newly formed world labor body.

April 21 and 28—Reports on the San Francisco United Nations Conference.

★ ★ ★

Secretary of State Stettinius will make a nationwide broadcast over Mutual at 9:30 p. m. EWT Wednesday, April 4, on "Our Foreign Economic Policy."

The State Dept's. regular 7 p. m. EWT Saturday show over NBC will feature "It's Your State Dept." Are you listening?

★ ★ ★

On the pan with labor in Los Angeles is radio station KFI, owned by wealthy auto dealer Earl C. Anthony. KFI's new policy is to ban any news commentators outside its own stable. Off the air as a result are friendly-to-labor Sam Baltar, Peter De Lima and Alvin Wiler, according to Federal Press.

Any sponsor wishing to put on a news program must now choose from a lineup that includes such national commentators as Rupert Hughes and H. V. Kaltenborn, not known as terribly progressive.

CIO and AFL in Los Angeles have asked the Federal Communications Commission to investigate the situation.

Labor, Management Agree

It's Industrial Peace For the Postwar Period!

OK POSTWAR PEACE PACT: "You'd better ask Mr. Green that one," says President Eric Johnston (center) of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce to a questioner at the press conference which announced the historic agreement between the C. of C., the CIO and AFL. Right, CIO Pres. Philip Murray; left, AFL Pres. William Green.

It's industrial peace for the postwar period—take it from the CIO, AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Leaders of the three big organizations got together this week to initial a "new charter for labor and management" which recognizes the right of labor to organize, the right of management to direct operations of industry, and the imperative necessity of both groups working together for top production, full employment and high wages.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, AFL Pres. William Green and Pres. Eric Johnston of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce spoke for their organizations at a press conference that packed more than 200 newsmen into the C. of C. hall in Washington, D. C.

High points of the agreement, which will be taken back to the three organizations for ratification, include:

1. Maintenance of private enterprise as foundation for an expanding economy.

2. Recognition of the "inherent right and responsibility" of management to direct industrial operations.

3. Recognition of the "fundamental rights of labor to organize and to engage in collective bargaining."

4. Understanding that foreign trade will stimulate an expanding economy at home, with assistance urged for devastated or undeveloped nations to encourage the rebuilding and development of sound economic systems.

Appreciation for assistance of Johnston and of shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser in arriving at agreement was expressed by President Murray in remarks to newsmen.

"All of us," said Murray, "recognize the need for internal unity and understanding to attain the laudable objectives set forth in this code of principles.

"The plan is conceived to help America. Although this is an understanding between the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the AFL and the CIO, it nevertheless constitutes a proposal which, through the medium of this meeting, is being submitted to the people of the United States for their approval.

"We want the people to think about it; we want the people to talk about it, and we naturally invite the people to join with us in the attainment of the aspirations set forth in this declaration."

Comments also came from Johnston and Green. Said the former:

"We feel that there are two roads that we can travel after this war. One will lead to a high degree of industrial peace; the other will lead to industrial chaos.

"One will mean high levels of employment, high levels of wages, high levels of production, the ability to service our national debt—in other words, prosperity.

"The other road will lead to lowered employment, lowered wages, lowered standard of living, inability to service our national debt, and, of course, bankruptcy eventually.

"We recognize that this is not a perfect instrument, by any means. We know that improvements can and must be made on it as we go along. It is not a static thing. It must be a dynamic thing. But it is a beginning, at least, to solving some of our problems between management and labor in the postwar world."

Green said that the AFL subscribes "wholeheartedly" to the code of principles and that through their acceptance "the area of controversy within the field of human relations in industry has been reduced and the field of agreement and understanding has been increased."

Questions about whether the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers would become a party to the pact were met by Johnston, who said that the NAM had participated in one preliminary meeting and had been invited to two others but had not attended. Johnston said that he hoped the NAM would participate.

Named on a committee to implement the agreement — with other members still to be selected—were:

For labor: President Murray, R. J. Thomas and Sidney Hillman of CIO, and President Green, George Meany and Robert Watt of AFL.

For management: President Johnston; Otto Seyferth, president, W. Michigan Steel Foundry Co.; E. J. Thomas, president, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.; Paul Hoffman, president, Studebaker Corp., and David Zellerbach, president, Crown-Zellerbach Paper Corp.

Text of Labor-Management Pact

"We in management and labor firmly believe that the end of this war will bring the unfolding of a new era based upon a vastly expanding economy and unlimited opportunities for every American.

"This peacetime goal can only be attained through the united effort of all our people. Today, we are united in national defense. Tomorrow, we must be united equally in the national interest.

"Management-labor unity, so effective in lifting war production to unprecedented heights, must be continued in the postwar. To this end, we dedicate our join efforts for a practical partnership within the framework of this code of principles:

"1. Increased prosperity for all involves the highest degree of production and employment at wages assuring a steadily advancing standard of living. Improved productive efficiency and technological advancement must, therefore, be constantly encouraged.

"2. The rights of private property and free choice of action, under a system of private competitive capitalism, must continue to be the foundation of our nation's peaceful and prosperous expanding economy. Free competition and free men are the strength of our free society.

"3. The inherent right and responsibility of management to direct the operations of an enterprise shall be recognized and preserved. So that enterprise may develop and expand and earn a reasonable profit, management must be free as well from unnecessary governmental interference or burdensome restrictions.

"4. The fundamental rights of labor to organize and to engage in collective bargaining with management shall be recognized and preserved, free from legislative enactments which would interfere with or discourage these objectives. Through the acceptance of collective bargaining agreements, differences between management and labor can be disposed of between the parties through peaceful means, thereby discouraging avoidable strife through strikes and lockouts.

"5. The independence and dignity of the individual and the enjoyment of his democratic rights are inherent in our free American society. Our purpose is to cooperate in building an economic system for the nation which will protect the individual against the hazards of unemployment, old-age and physical impairments, beyond his control.

"6. An expanding economy at home will be stimulated by a vastly increased foreign trade. Arrangements must therefore be perfected to afford the devastated or undeveloped nations reasonable assistance to encourage the rebuilding and development of sound economic systems. International trade cannot expand through subsidized competition among the nations for diminishing markets but can be achieved only through expanding world markets and the elimination of any arbitrary and unreasonable practices.

"7. An enduring peace must be secured. This calls for the establishment of an international security organization, with full participation by all the United Nations, capable of preventing aggression and assuring lasting peace.

"We in management and labor agree that our primary duty is to win complete victory over Nazism and Japanese militarism. We also agree that we have a common joint duty, in cooperation with other elements of our national life and with government, to prepare and work for a prosperous and sustained peace.

"In this spirit we agree to create a national committee, composed of representatives of business and labor organizations.

"This committee will seek to promote an understanding and sympathetic acceptance of this code of principles and will propose such national policies as will advance the best interests of our nation."

SECRETARY-TREASURERS BUYERS' GUIDE

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
(Celluloid or Litho-Metal)
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps
Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases
Bill Folds
All Articles Bear the Union Label
231 SO. WELLS ST. CHICAGO
Phone: Webster 4104 ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 386 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1 WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

Planning For Prosperity

The new charter for labor-management cooperation jointly announced by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Pres. Eric Johnston of the Chamber of Commerce, and AFL Pres. William Green, represents encouraging progress toward some of the main goals set by the last CIO convention.

At this convention the CIO unanimously declared: "If industry will respect the rights of organized labor, will bargain with the unions in good faith, and will recognize that postwar prosperity must be built upon increasing purchasing power and increased production, our unions will help to preserve industrial peace and will cooperate to the limit to increase the production of goods and services upon which our common prosperity depends."

A substantial section of American industry, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has now expressed its wholehearted agreement with such sentiments.

The charter points out, as did the CIO convention, that our postwar prosperity depends upon "the highest degree of production and employment at wages assuring a steadily advancing standard of living." It also pledges the industrialists concerned to recognize and preserve labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

So Murray could speak with assurance on behalf of the CIO in heartily endorsing the statements in the charter encouraging "improved productive efficiency and technological advancement;" and calling for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes through collective bargaining to "discourage avoidable strife through strikes and lockouts."

For this represents exactly the quid pro quo of labor-management cooperation set forth in the above quoted CIO resolution.

But the charter goes much further in expressing the agreement of progressive employers with CIO's goal of an expanding economy through continuing national unity.

It recognizes the rights of private property, free enterprise and free competition under our existing capitalist system, the claims of capital for a reasonable profit, and the right of management to be free from "unnecessary governmental interference or burdensome restrictions."

But the charter also declares against legislation that would interfere with labor's rights and calls for cooperation to build "an economic system . . . which will protect the individual against the hazards of unemployment, old age and physical impairments, beyond his control."

It agrees emphatically with CIO's position that vastly increased foreign trade, assistance for devastated or undeveloped nations, and an international security organization are necessary for an expanding domestic economy as well as for world peace and prosperity.

Certainly there are many other important points in CIO's postwar program that are not included in the agreement.

It is also true that by no means all of American industry is represented, and that if important interests stand aloof or adopt a hostile position, they may wreck the whole program.

But such a wide area of agreement has been discovered with such a large and representative group of industrialists that there are good grounds for the greatest encouragement.

The joint national committee will work to expand the area of agreement, to devise machinery to effectuate the charter's purposes and to draw into participation all of industry and labor as well as other groups.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

AT the very moment when organized labor and business were announcing to a Washington press conference their new charter of postwar cooperation, two cooks were knifing each other to death in a hotel kitchen a few blocks away.

Doubtless there was plenty of provocation. Probably one cook was more to blame than the other. A hot day and a hotter kitchen helped to make tempers short.

Who can tell all the reasons for this murderous duel with carving knives? Fears, grudges, jealousies may have played their part. Maybe some long-smoldering sense of injustice suddenly burst into flaming passion.

But whatever the rights or wrongs, whatever the reasons, excuses or explanations, one thing is certain—both men lay dead at the conclusion.

Everyone lost and nobody gained. The two cooks lost their lives. Their bereaved families lost their breadwinners. Society lost two useful citizens.

★ ★ ★

This war has united the American people as never before. But after victory, what? Will employers and labor, for instance, feel free to go after each other with carving knives? It could be.

American employers, as after the last war, might launch a union-busting, wage-cutting open-shop drive and attempt to force through many anti-labor laws.

Labor too might look for a chance to "get even." It might strike constantly at the least provocation, lay down on the job, and embitter conflict by challenging management's prerogatives.

Certainly labor has grievances enough. Certainly it has refrained, for patriotic reasons, from striking against conditions that often seemed unbearable. Certainly anti-union bosses have taken advantage of its no-strike pledge. Certainly there are grave injustices that cry aloud for redress.

So if labor wants to grab a carving knife and go after the employers after the war, it will not lack for reasons and justifications.

Many employers, similarly, claim they have suffered at labor's hands during the war and itch to get even. They can think up more reasons than we could supply for a carving-knife assault on labor.

★ ★ ★

But, as in the case of the two cooks, it matters little how right or wrong each side may be in its contentions if their conflict can only result in the destruction of both and a dead loss to society.

Thoughtful leaders of labor and industry like Philip Murray, William Green, Eric Johnston and Henry Kaiser, are convinced that a general outbreak of social conflict after this war can only harm both capital and labor and result in industrial chaos, depression and other catastrophes.

They have therefore devised the new charter of postwar labor-management cooperation as a means of averting such dangers and devising peaceful means for the solution of differences.

★ ★ ★

But this is only the negative side. On its positive side the agreement holds great promise for an expanding economy with increased prosperity for all.

The forward-looking industrialists involved have agreed with labor that our wartime unity must be extended into the postwar period, just as the United Nations are pledged to continue their international unity.

They have agreed that our postwar prosperity depends upon the highest degree of production and employment at wages assuring a steadily advancing standard of living; and upon the recognition and protection of labor's collective bargaining rights as well as management's rights.

This is a far cry from the attitude of so many employers after the last war, who considered curtailed production, layoffs, wage-cutting and union-busting as necessary and inevitable.

★ ★ ★

Cynics may say that the new charter is "just words" and that such fair promises have often been made and broken in the past.

Certainly the proof of the pudding will be in the eating, and the charter will be just another scrap of paper if industry and labor generally fail to make good on their commitments.

But, despite some violations, it cannot fairly be said that the wartime pledges of labor and industry have been "just words." They led to the national unity and cooperation that made possible our miraculous record of victory production.

The crisis which confronts America after this war is as serious and all-embracing in its way as the war itself. It lends a solemnity and significance to the new charter which might be lacking in similar expressions of good-will in less critical times.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 April 2, 1945 No. 14

How Peace Plans Work

By C. W. FOWLER

April is "United Nations Month." At the request of CIO President Murray, all CIO members are using the month for discussion and study of plans for peace and world security after the war against Germany and Japan is won.

Together with their friends and neighbors, CIO members are holding meetings to talk over and rally support for Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, the London World Labor Conference, the coming meeting of the United Nations in San Francisco.

Here's What You Can Do to Help

You can help make a world of peace and security after this war if you start now. Here is the outline of what you can do during the "United Nations Month" set by President Murray for April:

1. See that President Murray's message to all labor papers is carried in full (text in CIO News of March 26).

2. Have your local union, your council and your auxiliary hold at least one meeting during the month on Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, the London World Labor Conference.

3. Join with your friends and neighbors, especially with church groups, business clubs, women's organizations, other unions in public meetings on the same subjects.

4. As a first step with Congress write to your Congressman and your two Senators asking them to vote for the Bretton Woods agreement without amendments.

Need Understanding To Help Build Peace

This is the second of a series of articles in The CIO NEWS designed to help in this drive for the widest possible understanding and support of United Nations' agreements and plans for a new world without aggression and war.

In the first article, we discussed the Bretton Woods world trade agreement and presented a brief outline of the proposals made at the Dumbarton Oaks conference last summer. This article presents a more detailed discussion of Dumbarton Oaks.

Dumbarton Oaks sets up four main bodies in the "United Nations Organization": 1) the Security Council; 2) the General Assembly; 3) the Economic and Social Council, and 4) the International Court of Justice.

What's new about Dumbarton Oaks? How does it differ from the old League of Nations that failed to stop aggression in the years after World War I? How will it work?

Let's start with the Security Council. It will have five standing members: the U. S., the Soviet Union, Britain, France, China, plus six other members chosen from all the United Nations for a term of two years each.

Quick Action To Settle Disputes

The Security Council has the primary and continuous job of acting quickly to settle disputes that might lead to war. It has the job of calling on countries to submit their disputes by peaceful means. It has the job of deciding when a dispute is a real threat to peace, and the job of taking all necessary steps to prevent such a threat from becoming war.

Finally, if aggression should break out, the Security Council has the job of using every means provided by the United Nations Organization to stop the fighting. These means include economic and diplomatic sanctions and the use of military force as the last resort.

In other words, the Security Council can call on land, air and naval forces of the United Nations to stop aggression and war if all other means fail.

To help in carrying out these tasks of keeping and enforcing peace, the Security Council will have a Military Staff Committee attached to it and on continuous call. Members of the Council will provide the land, air and naval forces for it and the staff to work with.

This is one difference between the Dumbarton Oaks plan and the old League of Nations. Under the League setup, members could use force against an aggressor only after war had broken out. Today, the Security Council can take steps as soon as aggression and war are threatened by a dispute. First steps are an appeal to use peaceful means of settlement; then economic and diplomatic pressure; finally armed force.

The five big powers—U. S., U. S. S. R., Britain, France, China—will be the core of the Security Council because they are now bearing the main burden of the war against the Axis, and because they are and will be the best equipped to prevent or stop another war of aggression. These powers are not only the strongest, they are also the most opposed to aggression, each of them having suffered heavily from aggression at the hands of the Axis in this war.

The old League had no such aids to peace as the new Organization will have. It had no military staff attached to it. It had no armed forces continuously available to it for suppression of war. It had no power to use force before war broke out.

The General Assembly, as the name applies, is the unit of the Organization to which all member nations will belong. If the Security Council can be roughly compared to an Executive Board of a union, the General Assembly could be compared to the union convention, meeting annually and in special sessions and laying down general policy.

How the United Nations Will Vote

The General Assembly gives each member one vote, requiring a two-thirds majority on major questions and a simple majority on others. It also has the primary job of keeping the peace, with this difference—it will not take action on issues being dealt with by the Security Council, though it can freely discuss them at all times.

This leaves the General Assembly free to act as a world forum in which all member nations, on a basis of equality, can get together to improve their friendly relations, to build up mutual prosperity and well-being, working through various commissions and sub-units to "promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms."

The General Assembly also elects the six members of the Security Council other than the five big powers. It admits new members and expels members when necessary, or suspends them on the recommendation of the Security Council when they threaten the peace.

The commissions and sub-units through which the General Assembly will work to promote world prosperity and well being are headed by an Economic and Social Council. This Council will have the job of seing that all the economic and social units now proposed or to be set up work together under the direction of the Assembly.

One such unit already planned is the world trade and economic development agency set up by the Bretton Woods agreement—the Monetary Fund and the Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Another is the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization, which will work on planning food and forestry production, distribution and use. Still another is the Intl. Labor Organization already operating.

Thus the General Assembly has well-defined functions that give it the job of creating the conditions in which world peace and security can be expected to flourish.

In the old League, the assembly and the council both had similar general powers. Under the Dumbarton Oaks plan, the Security Council has the continuous and immediate job of enforcing peace, plus the means to enforce it, and the Assembly has the broader job of creating and sustaining the atmosphere of peace, plus policy-making powers.

To Set Up Intl. Court of Justice

The International Court of Justice will deal with and give decisions on matters referred to it by member nations. It will also give legal advice to the Security Council when needed. The specific powers and the jurisdiction of the court have not yet been worked out; they will be filled in either before or at the San Francisco meeting.

All members will belong to it. Unlike the old Permanent Court of International Justice, which was not a part of the League, the new Court will be a part of the United Nations Organization.

The old League of Nations failed to do the job it was supposed to do. It did not stop aggression in China, Abyssinia, or Spain. It was powerless before the Nazi aggression planned and permitted at Munich. What are the chances that the new world organization outlined at Dumbarton Oaks, to be chartered at San Francisco, may succeed where the League of Nations failed?

The four strongest of the United Nations—the U.S., the U.S.S.R., Britain and China—are not waiting until the end of the war to start building for peace. Dumbarton Oaks was drawn up last summer, will be completed this month. In World War I, the Allies waited until 1919 before setting up the old League.

Will Have Power To Prevent War

The old League lacked the power to enforce peace. The new Organization will have the power to keep peace before war threatens and the armed strength to enforce it if war breaks out.

The fact that the new world organization is up for public discussion now means that the common people all over the free world can make their voices heard as they were not heard in 1919.

Overshadowing all this is the fact that 50,000,000 workers from 35 nations are united in the world labor federation whose base was laid at the London trade union conference of February. As the conference said in the "Call To All Peoples" issued at the end of the meeting:

"Organized labor, with so great a part in winning the war, cannot leave to others—however well-intentioned they may be—the sole responsibility of making the peace.

"The peace will be a good peace, an enduring peace, a peace worthy of the sacrifices by which it has been won, only if it reflects the deep resolve of the free peoples, their interests, their desires and their needs."

THE ORGANIZATION PROPOSED AT DUMBARTON OAKS

UNITED NATIONS delegates at the San Francisco conference April 25 will study the Dumbarton Oaks plan for peace and world security charted above, will fill in the details. Center of the plan is the Security Council, consisting of five big powers—U. S., Soviet Union, Britain, France, China. All members of the proposed United Nations Organization will belong to the General Assembly. (Chart copyright by Foreign Policy Assn., via Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON GUIDE

GOP Plans Revealed

Three weeks ago the Washington Guide was the first to reveal plans of Republican leaders in Congress to "take the lid off" on V-E Day. These plans included an all-out drive against such war measures as OPA, the President's Emergency War Powers Act, appropriations for war activities, and the like.

A week later the Guide was the first to reveal that only 46 Senators can be classed as certain on collaboration with the United Nations after the war. Twenty Senators are considered definitely opposed, or whom 14 are Republicans, five Democrats and one Progressive.

Now the GOP has publicly underlined both warnings in official statements.

One: Herbert Brownell, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, has announced plans to win the nine Senate and 28 House seats needed for a clear Republican majority in the '46 elections. The campaign is starting now, with $750,000 earmarked for the rest of this year, at least $1,000,000 for the next.

GOP leader in the House is Rep. Joe Martin (Mass.). Martin's discipline over House party men is strict. If he says "take the lid off," it will come off—if there's a GOP majority to do the job.

Two: the test of GOP sincerity on world cooperation will come with the vote on Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and others to follow. Sixty-four Senate votes are needed to endorse the Oaks, only 46 are classed as certain.

Nine new GOP Senators, unless they're solidly pledged to cooperation, could stop international cooperation dead in its tracks.

Will these new Senators—supposing they're elected—be pledged to cooperation with the United Nations?

The only answer we have to that question so far is in the last sentence of a newspaper story on Brownell's plans for the GOP.

It went this way.

"He said no position had been taken on such matters as the San Francisco conference, Bretton Woods conference, or tariff."

★ ★ ★

Food Price Highjacking

Congress for the past three weeks has been filled with talk of probes into the food situation, particularly on the meat shortage.

Perhaps the probers will look into the fact that there are now about 80,000,000 cattle on the ranges—far above the normal amount.

Perhaps the probers will make the connection between the meat packers' and the cattle raisers' demands for price increases and the fact that the Price Control Act and the OPA that enforces it are up for renewal at the same time.

Perhaps the probers will note the cheerful admission of Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.) GOP whip and one of those demanding price "relief" that he is in the business of fattening range cattle himself.

★ ★ ★

Coming Up-- Issues to Watch

FOREIGN POLICY: in addition to the Bretton Woods agreement, now before the Congress, and Dumbarton Oaks, which will come up after the San Francisco meeting of the United Nations fills it in April 25, the Congress has or will soon have to deal with other issues of importance to our foreign relations.

1. United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization: this is a purely consultative body whose job is to study world food needs and resources; pool facts, conduct research on nutrition, food production, forestry and fisheries, etc.

Its constitution, which does not bind us or any country to any special agricultural policies, has been submitted by FDR to Congress for approval.

★ ★ ★

2. Reciprocal Trade Agreements: under an act passed first 10 years ago, the U. S. has helped reduce barriers to world trade by offering to reduce its own tariffs in return for reductions abroad.

FDR is asking Congress to renew the act, give power to cut U. S. tariffs still further. Watch for CIO statements.

★ ★ ★

3. Mexican Water Treaty: this issue has been in the Senate for weeks; may be voted on by the time you read this.

Briefly, it allows Mexico the use of water from U. S. rivers; has the support of the California CIO and the CIO Latin-American Committee.

★ ★ ★

WAR CRIMINALS: though not a treaty, this issue has an important bearing on foreign relations. Swift and certain punishment of Axis war criminals, from Hitler and Hirohito down to the last hangman, is one way of discouraging future wars.

Every citizen of a Nazi or Japanese terror-ridden country is watching the big powers to see what they will do with war criminals. So is every Nazi, every collaborator, every quisling.

CIO supports the King resolution (H Con Res 30) now before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The resolution calls for punishment regardless of pleas of "acting under orders," or being "heads of states," etc.

WRITE your Representative to work and vote for the King resolution (H Con Res 30).

★ ★ ★

FRANCO SPAIN: Congress has a resolution (H Res 100) by Rep. Coffee (D., Wash.) calling for a U. S. break with fascist Franco Spain. Purpose is to prevent Nazis from using Spain as a hideout and a base for World War III, which they're preparing now.

H Res 100 is in the House Foreign Relations Committee. CIO convention action in 1944 called for opposition to Franco Spain.

★ ★ ★

JIM CROW TRAVEL: Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) has a bill (HR 1925) outlawing discrimination in interstate travel—which means most trains, buses, planes, steamers and their terminals. It's waiting hearings in the Interstate Commerce Committee, Rep. Clarence Lea (D., Calif.) chairman.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control (SJ Res 30)	Renews Price Control Act, enforcement agency.	Reported out of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (Sen. Wagner, D. N. Y., Chmn.). May reach floor before House Committee hearings.	Write Senators and Representative to renew, with repeal of Bankhead, Taft and Taber riders that now hamper price control and enforcement.
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Promotes world trade; prevents economic aggression; means jobs for U. S. workers, markets for industry and farms.	Hearings going on in House Banking and Currency Committee; next to Senate Banking and Currency.	Write your Representative to support without amendments, which would throw entire agreement open again, take months to be passed on by other nations.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency with enforcement powers.	HR 2232 is still stalled in House Rules Committee; filibuster shaping up in Senate against S 101.	Wire Rules Committee Chairman Sabath (D. Ill.) for rule to get HR 2232 on House floor; write your two Senators to oppose threatened filibuster.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to millions in polltax states.	Discharge Petition No. 1 being circulated to get HR 7 out of House Rules Committee; 218 signers needed, 173 in.	Write your Representative to sign DP 1 if he hasn't done so; vote for HR 7 on floor.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Manpower Muddle

As the Washington Guide went to press (March 31), the manpower situation was still SNAFU, with a final Senate vote set for April 2.

By a narrow vote of 167 to 160, the House passed a conference report bill that gives broad powers to War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes.

He can freeze labor on the job; order it to new jobs; impose severe criminal penalties for refusal; can fine employers for illegal use of manpower.

The conference report, if passed by the Senate, defeats the Wagner-Kilgore bill which passed the Senate as a substitute for the House passed May-Bailey bill. The Wagner-Kilgore bill had CIO support as the best means of tightening up existing manpower and production facilities and helping increase war output.

CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan, commenting on the forced labor aspects of the conference report on the manpower bill, said:

"Today on the eve of the defeat of the Nazi dictatorship, the conference report proposes that the House and Senate confer on one man, the director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, an outrageously sweeping grant of power. Nowhere is the use of this power properly safeguarded.

"The CIO urges every member of the Senate to vote down the conference report.

"The emphasis throughout this bill is upon freezing the individual worker to the job. Throughout the debates in the House and Senate, the emphasis was upon the need for recruiting to war jobs a limited number of people characterized as 'slackers.'

"This bill strikes at the more than 50 million Americans who have loyally supported the war effort, and especially at the millions who are now in war jobs.

"On these patriotic citizens the full penalties of the law are directed. There is no proper appeal system and no adequate recourse to the courts. The administrator is judge and jury, and as the bill now reads he is capable of finding the individual employer or worker guilty and subject to a year in jail or $10,000 fine."

★ ★ ★

GOP Fights School Kids

The annual appropriation for the school lunch program that gives millions of American kids at least one good meal a day, whether or not they can pay for it, squeaked through GOP opposition in the House this week by one vote, 89 to 88.

The program costs $50,000,000. It feeds about five million children, helps war production by taking a load off working mothers' worries. It makes for stronger and better citizens in the upcoming generation.

Yet GOP Congressmen not only voted against the program, but spoke and fought on the floor to end it.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter H. Harris, Chicago, reports: Forest City Bit & Tool Co., Rockford, Ill. (production & maintenance employes), UAW-CIO received 29 out of 41 votes cast. W. Shanhouse Sons, Inc., Rockford, Ill., Amalgamated Clothing Workers 127, AFL 23. American Car & Foundry Co., Chicago, UAW-CIO 502, AFL 55, neither 7.

Jos. Walsh, CIO Reg. Dir., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., advises: Plains Throwing Co. plant, Wilkes-Barre, CIO Textile Workers 89, against 41. TWUA Vice-President James Kelly was in charge of this campaign.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir. for the Carolinas, reports: Cone Mills, Greensboro, N. C., CIO Textile Workers 608, no union 212. Organizer Upchurch was in charge, working out of the Charlotte office.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports that the following operations in British Columbia have been certified: Booth Logging Co., Topaz Harbor Logging Co., and O'Brien Logging Co.

Pres. A. H. Esposito, PJ&NWA, reports: Plymold Corp., Lawrence, Mass., CIO 206, against 56. This firm had previously been under contract but when the agreement expired, the firm insisted on another election. Intl. Rep. John Galluccio was in charge, ably assisted by Local Pres. Sam Piazza, Vice-Pres. John Menery and Chief Shop Steward Fred Privittera. Another election is reported won by this International at American Crucible Co., won by the CIO by a vote of 43 to 10. Intl. Reps. Ed Ferrie and Alfred Sicignano were in charge.

CIO Packinghouse Workers report: Hill Packing plant, Topeka, Kansas, CIO 38, AFL 6, no union 15. UPWA Field Rep. Leslie Orear, assisted by Laurence Barber and Frank Fisher, handled the election.

Wm. Mayo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., South Bend, Ind., reports: Elkhart Stationery Co., Elkhart, Ind., CIO Paper Workers 13, no union 4. Field Rep. John H. Suttle conducted this campaign.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., Minn., reports: Link Belt Co., Minneapolis, UERMWA-CIO 13, no union 0.

United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes announce an overwhelming victory at the John Wanamaker store in New York, by a vote of 836 to 382. Veteran organizers John J. Horan and Michael Cavanagh conducted the organizing campaign, assisted by an enthusiastic group of Wanamaker employes. This is one of the most important laurels to be added to the roster of URWDSEA-organized department stores. Congratulations to all participating!

Welch Grape Juice, Lawton, Mich., voted for URWDSEA-CIO six to one.

The Paper Workers Organizing Committee and directors met in Cleveland, Ohio, on Tuesday, March 27, 1945. The splendid progress already made and the opportunities ahead for the organization to streamline itself and bring many members into the fold were reported. Already the union has shown a healthy growth, and plans were laid to have a meeting of all the field staff later to effectuate an educational program. Steps were taken to intensify all organizational campaigns in the industry.

Work with Farmers

The CIO and the farmers are getting together out in Elkhart County, Ind. A rural-urban council was set up last week, with Clement A. Nitka, county CIO president, and George Neff, chairman of the county Farm Bureau, serving as co-chairmen.

Nitka and Neff said the council was formed for educational purposes by individuals who realized that labor and agricultural workers should discuss common legislative problems.

Around the U. S. with CIO

Alcoa Night Shift Pay Boosted

The Aluminum Co. of America (Alcoa) was directed by the War Labor Board this week to pay shift differentials of four and six cents an hour for second and third shift workers in 20 plants where the CIO Steelworkers Union is the collective bargaining representative. Previously Alcoa paid differentials of three and five cents. The union had asked for 10 and 15 cents.

The union's request that the 50,000 employes involved be granted a 15c hourly general wage increase as a cost of living adjustment was denied "as contrary to the existing wage stabilization policy."

As in other cases where demands for increases above the Little Steel formula have been made, the Board stated that the denial is without prejudice to reconsideration of the demand if the national wage stabilization policy is changed.

Also denied was the USA-CIO's request for a guarantee of no less than 40-hours' pay for every week in the year, which the Board stated was outside its authority. Labor members dissented. The Board recommended, however, that the study of guaranteed annual wages to be undertaken by the President's Committee, include the aluminum industry.

The WLB directed the company to check off union dues up to $1.50 a month, and initiation fees of $3. Industry members dissented.

A union request for a joint Natl. Wage Scale Committee empowered to bring about uniform wage structures in the aluminum industry was denied, with labor members dissenting.

Benefits Won For Harvester Workers

A War Labor Board decision ordering 5 and 10-cent wage increases for certain groups of workers in eight plants of the Intl. Harvester Co. and other benefits was hailed as a major victory by Gerald Fielde, director of the United Farm Equipment Workers' Harvester Council.

The directive order in the Consolidated Harvester case also ordered negotiations to eliminate inequities between wage rates of men and women; payment of the plant minimum to women after two weeks' employment, in addition to 5 and 10-cent increases for tool and die, maintenance and experimental employes, and negotiation of a guaranteed rate for piece workers not less than 30 per cent below the highest occupational earning rate. All wage awards are retroactive to June 18, 1943.

3,000 Hawaii Sugar Workers Vote for CIO

A 95 per cent victory was won by the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in elections held on 14 sugar plantations on the Island of Hawaii by the Natl. Labor Relations Board. The vote was 3,025 for the ILWU to 6 for the AFL and 139 for no union.

The bargaining unit comprises 3,664 mill, maintenance and transportation workers, store clerks and camp service employes. About a third are Japanese-Americans.

The election was held after the NLRB decided in January that all sugar plantation workers not involved in actual field work or in the transportation of sugar cane to its original transit point en route to the mills are to be classified as "non-agricultural" workers.

Prior to the NLRB ruling, certain plantation owners refused to recognize the ILWU as a bargaining agent, claiming that their workers were agricultural and exempt from provisions of the Wagner Act.

Wages on the sugar plantations are extremely low, $2 a day being considered a good wage, and rates of less than 20 cents an hour being not uncommon. The NLRB decision is regarded as significant not only in respect to Hawaii, but also in Puerto Rico, Louisiana and other industrialized areas.

UE Wins Pay Increase In Chicago

A general wage increase of 9 cents an hour is provided in an agreement signed between the Stewart-Warner Corp., Chicago, and the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and approved by the Natl. War Labor Board, reports Ernest De Maio, UE Dist. president.

The hiring rate was also raised to 64c an hour with an automatic progression to 75c within 90 days. In order to correct inter-plant and intra-plant inequities, an amount equal to an average plant-wide increase of 4 cents an hour was agreed upon, De Maio said.

Terms of the agreement were ratified at a membership meeting of Local 1154 which represents Stewart-Warner employes.

TWU Wins Big Airways Poll At Miami

Maintenance employes of Pan-American Airways at Miami, biggest base of the biggest commercial airline, piled up an overwhelming vote for the CIO Transport Workers Union in a three-cornered election held by the Nat'l. Mediation Board.

The TWU's Transport Division beat the AFL Machinists by 4-1 and the independent association by 5-1, obtaining a clear-cut majority over the combined opposition.

Results of the election as announced by the Nat'l. Mediation Board, labor relations agency in the transportation industry, were 784 for the TWU, 191 for the AFL, 162 for the independent and 1 for no union. There were 1,532 eligible employes, 1138 of whom voted.

Employes in the fleet department of Pan-American at Miami have been represented by the TWU for nearly a year as the result of an earlier election among cleaners and other service employes.

Prospect of another TWU victory in the airlines is forecast with the announcement by the Mediation Board in Washington that sufficient authorization cards from maintenance employes of the second largest airline, American Airlines, have been filed with the Board.

For Citrus Workers

Petitions for two elections in California's citrus packing houses involving more than 5,000 workers have been filed with the Natl. Labor Relations Board by the Citrus Workers Union. Request for elections follows a three-weeks intensive organizing drive.

W. L. Douglas Shoes
W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.
IN WASHINGTON
905 PENN. AVENUE N. W.
(Opposite Department of Justice Building)
Stores in Principal Cities - Good Dealers Everywhere

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

What Prepaid Medical Care Would Mean to Us

By ALLISON WHITNEY

(First in a series on Health in America)

When your neighbor, Mrs. Mary Smith, gets pneumonia or a carbuncle on her neck, what does she usually do?

She visits a doctor or calls one to her home. But not until the last minute when she's too sick to go without medical attention any longer. She chooses her doctor (in these war times he may be too busy to serve her) and she pays him directly for his service.

If she had stomach trouble or a hurt back, she would have X-ray or laboratory fees, too. If so, she'll have to pay spot cash for them—and plenty—when her physician sends her outside his office for them. He can't give this service because he can't afford all that expensive equipment and trained operators. She may have hospital expenses, too, unless she carries hospital insurance. Her sickness bills might run from $5 to $500, depending upon how sick she is.

So when Mrs. Smith gets back home, she'll have to scrimp to get those bills paid. She'll do some worrying, too, as she mulls over what the family can do without in order to prune the budget.

This is a picture of Mrs. Smith's relation to medical care today if she's not in a good health insurance plan. She's had no regular physical check-ups nor preventive care. Because she couldn't afford it, she hasn't visited a doctor until she developed an illness serious enough to frighten her.

WHAT PLAN WOULD DO

Now, let's suppose we had a national system of health insurance like the provisions of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill that would cover almost every man, woman and child in America. Under such a system, would Mrs. Mary Smith get a better break? Or would "federal medicine" put her on an assembly line of patients that would move her along until she stands before a strange doctor to whom she's been assigned and to whom she'll be just Number 402,565?

Here is what would really happen. Judge for yourself.

Under such a national prepaid system, Mary Smith would have chosen the doctor she wanted and would have seen him before the cold became pneumonia or the carbuncle called for lengthy surgical attention. She could have diagnostic check-ups at regular intervals at a health center or clinic-hospital. She would make as many visits as both she and the doctor thought necessary, not just those she had money enough to pay for. So would her husband, if he were sick—and her children—and all the neighbors.

She would choose her own doctor at the health center, too, if she could fit her calls to his schedule and if he wanted her as a patient (just as in private practice). There would be no guess work about him being an excellent, well-trained doctor, for he would have supervision exactly as private-practice doctors on good hospital staffs have today. Moreover, he would be associated with specialists in various fields and both she and the doctor would have the advantage of consultation, of pooled experience and equipment—such as X-rays and laboratory findings.

She would receive what doctors call "comprehensive service," which includes everything needed for finding out what the disease is and for treating it, including hospital care.

And when Mrs. Smith emerges from her bout with the pneumonia bugs or with the carbuncle, she will not face months of worry about payment. It will all have been taken care of ahead of time by a small sum deducted regularly from her pay check (or that of her husband, if her work is in the home) plus a matching sum from her employer.

If they're all unemployed and the family is indigent or physically handicapped, tax money will cover the premiums. The insurance principle that she and Bill learned when they first bought fire and life insurance is just as applicable in the health field.

This is what will happen to all the Mary and Bill Smiths of the nation and to their children if a compulsory national health insurance bill is passed by Congress. But why compulsory? Wouldn't a voluntary system do just as well?

(Next in the series: Why Isn't Voluntary Health Insurance Sufficient?

Labor Education

Midwest Conference

First regional conference of a series sponsored by the Nat'l. CIO Dept. of Education & Research will be held in Chicago, May 10-20, Director Kermit Eby announced this week. Educational representatives of CIO unions in the Mid-West will attend. The number of these outside of Chicago will be kept down to 50 to comply with government regulations on wartime travel.

The conference will discuss practical education programs aimed to help organize and educate CIO members; steward and officer training courses, use of films and radio; training for collective bargaining, and the activities of summer schools and institutes. Reports on the educational work of CIO international and state and city councils in the Mid-West will also be given.

Clinton Golden, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, will be the main speaker at a dinner Saturday evening. Some dramatic skits by The Chicago Stage for Action group will be given.

Union Studies Peace Plan

In preparation for the San Francisco conference of the United Nations opening April 25, Dist. 38, United Steelworkers has sent each local a copy of the Dumbarton Oaks proposal for a permanent peace organization, reports the California CIO Council's weekly paper, The Labor Herald.

Dist. Director James G. Thimmes asked that time be allowed on the agenda of meetings ror study of the question. Material sent to the public relations and publicity chairman of each local includes questions and answers explaining the Dumbarton Oaks proposals as issued by the Secretary of State.

New School In Northwest

A new labor school has been opened at Gonzaga University, Spokane, Wash., the first of its kind in the Northwest, reports John M. Glenn, CIO field representative. The course will run for ten weeks, three nights a week. Classes are being taught by the regular University staff and include such subjects as industrial problems, history of labor, labor law, public speaking and basic English.

The school which was established through the efforts of the newly established Spokane County CIO Council, has 35 registered students from both the CIO and the AFL.

N. Y. Teachers Conference

Some 2,000 teachers, supervisors, parents and public officials are expected to attend the ninth annual educational conference of the CIO Teachers Union in New York which will be held at the Hotel Commodore, April 21. Theme of the conference will be "Education for a World Family of Democratic Nations."

School Lunch Plan Wins In House By One Vote

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Continuation of the school lunch program won in the House by one vote last week. The vote was 88 to 89 against an amendment offered by Congressman Tabor (R., N. Y.) to cut all money for federal aid to school lunches out of the Agriculture Appropriations Bill.

I wish every father and mother in the United States could have heard the debate on school lunches on the floor of the House and the discussion last week in the House Agriculture Committee on the Flannagan bill for a permanent school lunch program. The arguments of the opponents of school lunches were almost unbelievable—and yet they evidently carry a lot of weight.

Andersen (R., of Minn.), for instance, told the House Agriculture Committee that he had been brought up on meat, potatoes and gravy and was quite healthy, that he heard that people in some parts of the world ate only rice and he didn't think it was the business of the federal government to change food habits.

Clevenger (R., of Ohio) was afraid that school lunches would weaken the stamina of human parents. Animals feed their young, he reminded us, and he wants animal instincts strong enough in human beings so they will want to feed their young.

HEARTLESS ARGUMENT

The most completely heartless argument was advanced by Gross (R., of Penna.) "Now is the time to discontinue this program," he argued. "We are in a far better position to discontinue it now than at a later time when unemployment stares us in the face, as it is bound to."

How so many Congressmen could have the nerve to vote against the school lunch provisions of the agriculture bill is really very hard to understand. They had just agreed to appropriate $300,000,000 for the soil conservation program.

Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Cal.) exposed the argument that wages are so high that all families can afford fine meals for their children when she pointed out that for 1943, 21,600,000 people had only an average of $860 after taxes to live on, and 67,000,000 had an average of $2,000. At the 21 cents a meal allowed in the Heller budget the food alone for a family of four would cost more than $900 a year.

The fact of the matter is that millions of children are seriously undernourished today.

Expansion of the school lunch program would help a great deal to correct this situation. For most children this would mean the difference between robust health, full vigor and mental alertness and the rundown, often sick, dull state in which they now live. At the same time it would train them in proper eating habits, get them used to eating nutritious meals and through them influence their families.

This year about four million children have received school lunches through federal assistance. We need to continue and expand that program. Let your Senators and Congressman know that you want to see the school lunch program made permanent and expanded to assure every American child of a hot noon meal, free, if his family can't afford to pay.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Pass The Ammunition ★ ★ ★ Here's the Way To Do It

By FRED d'AVILA

"U. S. Tanks Rip Nazi Lines."
"2 U. S. Armies 40 Miles from Hessian Capital."
"Jet Planes Blast Tokyo."

THIS is the story behind those headlines.

It's a story of tanks and planes and ammunition and bridges, of radio and radar equipment, of fuel lines and condenser tubes, of a lot of big and little items that—taken together—mean the difference between defeat and victory.

It's a story of hard-handed men and women who've sweated out 12-hour shifts and seven-day weeks to help "pass the ammunition" to the guys across the ponds who need it.

It's a story of the most encouraging example of labor-management cooperation that official Washington has heard to date—and the Army and Navy are mighty proud of it.

THE story starts like this:

Last February a group of brass hats and industrialists put their heads together and discovered that one out of every six planes scheduled for production in 1945 would not be manufactured, and a lot of floating bridges would not be produced, unless the output of aluminum was drastically increased.

Last January the big shots found that brass-strip production must be stepped up from 240,000,000 pounds a month to 350,000,000 pounds, and brass-rod production from 94,000,000 pounds to 114,000,000 pounds a month—beyond the capacity of the nation's brass mills!

So what? So this:

Reports this month to the War production Board showed that production of aluminum sheet will exceed by 48,000,000 pounds earlier estimates for the first quarter of 1945!

Brass production last January was 306,000,000 pounds of strip (largest since May, 1943), and 101,000,000 pounds of rod (highest in the history of the industry)! The February production rate for strip was equivalent to 331,000,000 pounds a month for a 31-day month, and rod production was equivalent to 110,000,000 pounds a month!

THE brass story comes first. It started last January, when a "pass the ammunition" program advocated some time back by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers was actually put into effect in some of the nation's largest brass mills in Connecticut.

Biggest bogey to tackle was the manpower shortage with 3,200 more workers badly needed. The "pass the ammunition" program did just that—and threw the bogey for a 10-yard loss.

The unions (AFL as well as CIO), the companies, and the War Production Board's Office of Labor Advisory Committees cooperated in circulating statements for workers to sign saying that they would try to recruit additional help for essential industries and would—if they could—work overtime themselves to help "pass the ammunition."

Reports to the Brass Mill Labor Advisory Committee of the WPB tell the story:

"Although the workers were told that they might be put on harder jobs than their regular jobs, the response was overwhelming.

"If a worker who volunteered did not report for the overtime work, another was supplied. At first, however, there were more volunteers than hours because of a lack of castings, but this condition is being remedied as more castings become available.

"February production exceeded January output by 6 per cent (at one plant). . . . During the week of February 25, the extra hours volunteered totaled 34,000 according to union records, but actually 38,000 overtime hours were worked according to company records . . . this was the equivalent of having 833 extra men work a 48-hour week."

TWELVE-HOUR shifts—sure! The job had to be done. And plenty of headaches in making the program work . . . like transportation difficulties . . . and scheduling "bugs" . . . and turnover due to low wages . . . and inadequate feeding facilities for a lot of hard working men and women.

The unions and the bosses and the government had to arrange for nursery facilities, for the elimination of accident hazards, for better labor relations, and even for a garage mechanic to fix a worker's car so that he wouldn't have to leave his vital war job.

Workers at one plant reported that they were disturbed because they observed nickel silver spoons and other flatware being put into the furnaces at times, and could not help wondering whether the company was preparing for postwar civilian production. Their morale was obviously lowered. The situation was cleared up when it was revealed that the work was being done for the Navy, which needed nickel silver for eating implements in the tropics.

Altogether the program's so good that a highly placed government official said that he knows of no greater factor in raising production than the type of cooperatioin exemplified in the "pass the ammunition" plan.

THE story in aluminum is just as good, and, like the story in brass, involves the development of increasingly friendly relations between employers and the unions.

A program, involving chiefly the CIO United Steelworkers was suggested to and approved by the WPB's Aluminum Labor Advisory Committee. It called for:

1. A seven-day week to reduce the manpower need.

2. Simplifying and speeding hiring procedure.

3. Better transportation.

4. An improved training and upgrading policy.

5. Payment of wage rates as prescribed for jobs done.

6. Increased labor-management cooperation in stimulating production and necessary overtime work.

The results, as previously noted, were terrific. But besides a huge increase in production, the labor-management - government cooperation also did this at one big plant:

1. A union drive for new workers brought in some 800 applicants who either had been unemployed or were in unessential industry.

2. A union drive provided homes for soldiers who were temporarily furloughed for civilian work.

3. Additional buses licked the transportation problem.

4. As a result of recruitment of additional civilian workers and extra overtime worked, the number of soldiers helping has been reduced from 1,200 to only 500, and it is believed that these will no longer be necessary within two months.

5. And as a result of all these activities, union and management are in the process of resolving wage upgrading difficulties that have been a plague to them both.

Best test of this cooperation is that it works, not only from the standpoint of labor and management, but from the point of view of the guys who fly the planes. Speaking for them were Brigadier General Hopkins of the Army Air Corps and Commander Duane of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics. According to a WPB report, they said:

"Brigadier General Hopkins expressed his great appreciation for the cooperation of labor, and Commander Duane declared it was 'a thrilling experience to see this cooperation between labor, management and the company.'"

A LARGE part of the credit for cooperation must go to WPB's Office for Manpower Requirements and Office for Labor Production, headed respectively by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the CIO Steelworkers, and Joseph D. Keenan of the AFL, and to David Lasser, director of the WPB's Office of Labor Advisory Committees.

On the WPB's Aluminum Labor Advisory Committee are: Ted Silvey, representing CIO; Nicholas Zonarich, Ben Fischer, Arthur Menozzi, Anthony Mele, M. C. Weston, George Scheppelmen and James B. Gent of the CIO Steelworkers; Virgil Akeson of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Kenneth Cole and George Salmon of the CIO Auto Workers, and several AFL representatives.

On the WPB's Brass Mill Labor Advisory Committee are: Silvey, John J. Mankowski, John Porcu, Robert L. Walkinshaw and Akeson, of Mine, Mill; John Farrell, John Tardee and Cole, of UAW-CIO, and several AFL men.

Their work, with representatives of management and government, proves that a highly individualistic America can unite to sail by the same compass on the shortest possible trip to victory over fascism.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 15 82 April 9, 1945

FIRST STOP—BERLIN: So rapid has been the Allied advance that troops hop rides to keep up with the action. U. S. 9th Army troops are jammed aboard tank destroyers like commuters on a rush hour train.

1-Man CIO 'Army' Knocks Nazis for Loss

A "one-man Army" named Stephen R. Gregg, who is a member of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for risking his life in a gallant assault with a light machinegun to drive off a superior force of Nazis and enable a U.S. aid man to remove wounded American troops.

Gregg, a second lieutenant from Bayonne, N. J., where he was a member of the union's Local 16, rescued seven of his wounded comrades and enabled his platoon to seize an important hill near Montelinar, France.

Hand-to-Hand Struggle

The action took place last August 27, when Gregg was a Technical Sergeant with a weapons platoon composed of light machineguns and 60-mm mortars.

When seven of his men were wounded by German hand grenades and no one could get through to them because of the three enemy machinegun positions, Gregg courageously advanced with a light machinegun at his hip, kept firing at the Germans until an aid man could treat and remove all the wounded. Then, his ammunition exhausted, he had a hand-to-hand struggle with four Germans who closed in on him, took a German automatic pistol from one of the enemy, and successfully escaped back to his machinegun position. By his intense fire and aggressive action, this heroic Infantryman so disorganized the enemy that they retreated from the hill.

Three Other Awards

The following morning, the Germans re-attacked the position behind tanks, and captured his mortar gun and position while he was repairing communication wires. Learning that the Germans were using his mortars against his company, he crawled alone to the position, threw a hand grenade which hit three of the Germans manning his gun, and then captured the other two. Shortly after, he had the mortars back in action.

Lieutenant Gregg, a former arc welder at the Federal Shipbuilding Co. of Kearney, New Jersey, also holds the Silver Star for courageous action in Italy, the Combat Infantryman Badge and the Purple Heart.

Besides belonging to the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, he is the brother of two CIO members and the son of one. His father, Adam Gregg, is a member of UE-CIO Local 439, employed at the Int'l. Nickel Co., Bayonne. His brother Joseph, an employe of Babcock & Wilcox Co., belongs to the same local. Another brother, Edward, now a Corporal with the Third Army in Germany, is a member of the UAW-CIO formerly employed at the General Motors Corp., Linden, New Jersey.

FREEDOM ROADS: Nazi superhighways (right) offer swift passage to Yank armored divisions while (left) other U. S. troops free Russian soldiers who were German prisoners of war.

FAILING FUEHRER: Significant comment on Nazi manpower is this photo radioed from Sweden, showing the most hated man in the world shaking hands with one of his 12-year-old "soldiers."

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Stalling on Bretton Woods

Delays on the bill to ratify the Bretton Woods world trade agreement now in the House Banking and Currency Committee will probably put the final House vote over until May 1.

Following the House vote, the Senate will have to act. Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings may start soon after the current recess.

Senate hearings will take several weeks, and it is unlikely that we'll have a vote on the 5,000,000-jobs bill before summer.

Meantime, opponents of the bill are using this delay to pile up ammunition against it. Chief opposition comes from the big banks, who want to hang on to their juicy foreign loan racket.

GOP Congressmen on the committee are playing the American Bankers Assn. game. So is the Associated Press, which has been putting out defeatist stories saying that the bill is sure to be killed or amended out of existence.

The CIO, the Independent Bankers Assn., churches, women's groups, farmers and businessmen are for the Bretton Woods agreement and the bill.

Write to your Congressman, urge him to support HR 2211 and S-540 without amendments, to work for an early and favorable report and vote.

Note: Get your copy of "5,000,000 Jobs in World Trade," CIO's simple pamphlet explaining Bretton Woods. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, Washington 6, D. C. 100 for $4.00.

Manpower Bill Killed

By a vote of 46 to 29, the Senate killed the labor draft bill this week in rejecting the conference committee report that came out of the House-Senate meetings.

The conference report drew sharp opposition from CIO on the ground that it would have given drastic powers to one man to freeze labor, draft it, punish workers for failure to comply.

The Senate action officially sends the issue back for another conference. Actually the issue is pretty dead now, but Senate leaders will try to get the House to accept the previous bill (S. 36) passed by the Senate, omitting the labor-freeze provisions.

A Must for Peace Study

CIO this week is bringing out a new pamphlet that will be a must for anybody who wants to know what Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and other peace plans are all about.

Its title is "Everybody's Business" and it's a handbook explaining in simple terms, with pictures, just how Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks work and what we have to do to see that Congress does its part.

Order now from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl NW Washington 6, D. C. Order early because paper is short and we can print only a limited number of copies. Price on application to CIO.

Waddya Read?

For further mud to be thrown at the United Nations, see your favorite newspaper during the San Francisco conference—especially if it happens to be owned by Roy Howard, Hearst, Patterson or McCormick.

Currently they've been busy trying to wreck the San Francisco United Nations meeting by harping on the voting issue.

This is nothing compared to what they plan to do while the conference is actually on.

According to their plans, tipped by friendly newspapermen who've heard them discussed, these papers will treat the conference fairly objectively for about the first 10 days or two weeks. Then they will take the lid off.

The conference will be branded a failure. FDR will be accused of selling out to the Soviet and to Britain. The Soviets will be accused of murdering and then eating small nations. Britain will be accused of picking Uncle Sam's pockets.

Congress Food Probers Busy

Food probers are busy in both Senate and House. Real origin of food shortage, as revealed by Don Montgomery of the CIO Cost of Living Committee, is in the scarcity policies of the War Food Administration, which has held down maximum production to protect high prices.

U. S. Agriculture Dept. Crop goals, in 1944 for example, were 10 per cent below those of 1943. However, it's not too late to urge the Department and the WFA to raise its sights for this year's planting.

CIO is not joining in the current outcry that England and other United Nations are getting too much of U. S.-produced food. The facts don't bear out the charge. War devastated Europe and Asia are in literal danger of mass starvation.

That also means no danger of a food surplus here after V-E Day, which the food profiteers here worry about, and which they persuade innocent farmers to worry about.

Incidentally, the flurry about the meat "famine" can be expected to die down now. The packers will be given more subsidies, prices will be held down.

Fan Mail

It's always good to get letters from our readers, especially when they give us a pat on the back like this one does. Editors also like critical letters, both to help them do a better job and to prove that they have readers.

Here's a note from Wm. W. Stafford, a member of Local 203 of the CIO Federal Workers, who lives in Washington:

"Your new full page Washington Guide feature in The CIO NEWS is swell. It's good to point up the main things, yet give brief reference to several other items. By all means keep it up.

"A non-union friend of mine to whom I gave a CIO NEWS subscription praised the Washington Guide page. This will build you up."

Yes, Brother Stafford, it builds us up. Anybody who wants to build us up some more, or tear us down, is welcome.

Quote of the Week

"Further, it should be made clear to our people that in entering an international organization we are doing so not because of charity or because we love the British, the French, the Chinese or the Russians.

"If there is a reason for doing it, it is because it is for our own national self-interest. We have more to lose from chaos and more to gain from the pursuits of peace than any other people." Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D. Ark., in his first Senate speech.

Coming Up-- Issues to Watch

MISSOURI VALLEY: hearings are set for April 16 in the Senate Commerce Committee. This bill (S-555) will set up a Missouri Valley Authority, like TVA, to build dams, control floods, stop erosion, bring new industries and millions of manhours of jobs to nine Missouri Valley states.

* * *

FEDERAL PAY: CIO's United Federal Workers are supporting S-807 sponsored by Sen. Downey (D. Cal.) to give U. S. government employes a 15 per cent pay raise, time and a half for overtime and a 10 per cent night differential.

This will bring Federal workers' pay into line with established CIO practice. Federal workers haven't even had the Little Steel Formula, inadequate as it is, applied to them.

About 1,500,000 workers are involved. Passage of the bill will be a big help to all white collar workers, organized or not.

S-807 is in the Senate Civil Service Committee, with hearings set for April 16. Write your Senators to support.

* * *

PRICE CONTROL: the price control renewal bill (S-J Res 30) is coming out of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

The report is expected to give a new interpretation of the Bankhead amendment that will cut down its inflationary features. It is hoped that the report will disapprove the Taber amendment that now prevents use of government grades in pricing canned goods.

A tough campaign in the House Banking and Currency, where the bill goes next, is expected. Write your Senators and Representative to support CIO position on Bankhead, Taber and Taft amendments.

FEPC: a bad stall has developed on the bi-partisan bill in the House Rules Committee. Watch for a drive to get it past the blockade, write your Representatives to work for an early report.

* * *

SHIP SALE: CIO is supporting HR 1425, a bill to put a floor on prices of merchant marine ships to be sold after the war.

The bill protects the U. S. merchant marine and the taxpayer, and makes it possible to give our allies a fair deal.

Its up before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, Rep. Schuyler O. Bland (D. Va.), chairman. All CIO marine unions are affected.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control (SJ Res 30)	Renews Price Control Act, enforcement agency.	Reported out of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (Sen. Wagner, D., N. Y., Chmn.) May reach floor before House Committee hearings.	Write Senators and Representatives to renew, with repeal of Bankhead, Taft and Taber riders that now hamper price control and enforcement.
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Promotes world trade; prevents economic aggression; means jobs for U. S. workers, markets for industry and farms.	Bogged down by GOP in House Banking and Currency Committee; unfavorable report threatened.	Urge your Representative to support without amendments, which would throw entire agreement open again, take months to be passed on by other nations.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency with enforcement powers.	HR 2232 is still stalled in House Rules Committee; filibuster shaping up in Senate against S 101.	Wire Rules Committee Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) for rule to get HR 2232 on House floor; write your two Senators to oppose threatened filibuster.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to millions in polltax states.	Discharge Petition No. 1 being circulated to get HR 7 out of House Rules Committee; 218 signers needed, 173 in.	Ask your Representative to sign DP 1 if he hasn't done so; vote for HR 7 on floor.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Foes of Peace Exploit Delay and Voting Fuss

IN THE first two articles, we looked into the mechanics of the two basic peace plans—Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks. We saw how they were planned at United Nations meetings and how their sponsors expect they will work.

One of them, the Bretton Woods world trade agreement, is already before Congress, with bills for ratification in the House and Senate. The other, Dumbarton Oaks, will be presented to the Senate for ratification after it has been completed at the United Nations meeting in San Francisco, April 25.

Third of A Series

What are the chances for ratification of these two basic peace plans? Will the U. S., acting through Congress, join with other nations to create peace and Security? Or will we refuse to work with the rest of the world—isolated and powerless to prevent World War III?

Congress is the key. The 96 Senators who will pass on Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco have the answer. Under our constitution, two-thirds of them have to vote aye before a treaty is approved and before the signature of the U. S. on a treaty becomes effective. Assuming full attendance, that means 64 Senators have to vote yes before Dumbarton Oaks can become a reality. Bretton Woods, as a trade agreement and not a treaty, requires only a simple majority of both House and Senate.

THE OPPOSITION to both Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks is already hard at work, has been for some time. It has two main wings, each with the same objective. One is the out-in-the-open opposition to the U. S. taking part in any kind of postwar United Nations arrangements. This is represented by such isolationists and pro-fascists as Hearst, McCormick, Patterson, G. L. K. Smith, et al.

The other is more subtle. It says yes, we're all for cooperation, but let's not rush into anything, let's change a few points here and there even though they have been agreed on by everybody else and let's go into this thing with plenty of reservations so we can back out later if we want to.

This is the school led by Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) chief of the GOP masterminds on foreign policy. It is also reflected in th "yes but" school of editorial writers and the columnists who specialize in viewing with alarm.

The opposition to Bretton Woods comes mainly from the American Bankers Association, who profess to see great dangers in the International Fund that will be used to keep world currencies and world buying power stable.

The core of their opposition is a simple one. They want to go back to the "good old days" when international finance was the exclusive property of the big banks. They want to go back to the "good old days" of unrestricted private loans at high interest rates that helped bring on the world collapse of the 20's and 30's and World War II.

ON THE PRO side of Bretton Woods are the CIO, FDR, the Independent Bankers Assn. (small banks), church and women's groups, liberal groups, organized farmers (Natl. Farmers Union, Farm Bureau) and others.

The opposition to Dumbarton Oaks has been vocal.. In recent weeks, it has been more than vocal—it's been almost hysterical on the question of voting in the General Assembly of the United Nations Organization that Dumbarton Oaks sets up.

According to the original announcement, each member country was to have one vote. Then the newspapers discovered that two republics of the Soviet Union would each like a vote, which made three votes for the USSR. The startling discovery was also made that the British Commonwealth consists of six countries, each with a vote. To equalize all this, it was said that the U. S. would ask for three votes for itself.

Immediately the pack was in full cry. Senator Vandenberg, it was reported, went to see Secretary of State Stettinius and talked steadily for two hours, came storming out still sputtering. Serious suggestions were made that the San Francisco meeting would have to be put off. "Secret diplomacy" was taken out of the closet, the moths brushed off and the ancient slogan hung up on 96 point headlines.

The Senator could have saved his breath and the newspapers their rationed paper. As Stettinius explained in answer to a barrage of righteously indignant questions from the newspaper correspondents:

"The basis of the San Francisco conference remains the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. It is for the conference to decide whether any proposal affecting voting in the General Assembly of the proposed United Nations Organization impairs the principle of sovereign equality.

"In other words, the San Francisco conference will doubtless vote on many proposals for the detailed setting up of the United Nations Organization, and there is no way of knowing what the proposals will be.

"The final organization will be passed on by the United Nations in accordance with their customary procedures, and it is hoped and believed that the result will be so clear that this great effort to eliminate future wars will receive practically unanimous approval."

With this gentle rebuke, the Secretary of State asked the newspapers to stop digging the grave of the United Nations Organization before it was organized. He might have added some other even sharper points, but being a diplomat he didn't.

TO BEGIN with, the whole concept of a "balance" of votes one way or the other is a serious misunderstanding of the United Nations setup. So is the concept of "equality" of all nations, great and small.

Great decisions of war or peace are not solved by majority votes. When the U. S. entered this war with a formal declaration, only one Representative in Congress—a pacifist—voted nay. The attack on Pearl Harbor made war a fact, not a subject of debate.

If a new aggression threatens the peace of the United Nations and of the world after this war, that too will be a fact, not a matter to be decided by a show of hands or a rollcall.

The United Nations Organization will deal with it as a fact. In the Security Council proposed at Dumbarton Oaks, the United Nations have the means of preventing the aggression from becoming war by diplomatic, economic and other means. Finally, they have the authority to stop the war by force, and the arms and forces to stop it with.

Votes are not the issue. The issue is whether or not we are to have a United Nations Organization that can stick together after the war and function to keep the peace and promote world well being.

No more is "equality" the issue. The United Nations are not equal in size, population or power. Three of them—the U. S., the U. S. S. R. and Britain—have born the great burden of defeating the Axis. Together with France and China and six nations from the general organization, they will make up the Security Council which will have the main job of keeping and enforcing peace. The fact that the United Nations are not equal in any absolute sense is already recognized.

THE MORE historical editorial writers and the more dismal of the columnists approached the voting question as they would approach a municipal election in some machine-controlled city.

Not all of them went overboard, however. Peter Edson, whose column on the subject in the Scripps-Howard press should be called to Roy Howard's attention, had this to say:

"In all this squabbling about who gets how many votes and who gets invited to the San Francisco conference, it is all too easy to lose sight of the one important objective. That objective is to set up an organization that will end wars.

"To moan that the Dumbarton Oaks proposals are foredoomed to failure is to admit that Nazi propaganda is right and to fall for the Hitler-Goebbels line that peace-loving nations can never be united. Why be such suckers?"

This is the way the workers, the farmers, the housewives, the businessmen of America will look at it.

YOUR PART IN U.S. FOREIGN POLICY

NOW, when international relations for the postwar period are being discussed and decided, it is necessary to know and use every means to make opinions count. This chart, from the booklet, After Victory, in the Headline Series published by Foreign Policy Assn., outlines ways of making them count. (Copyright Foreign Policy Assn. via Federated Pictures.)

To Learn the Score on Peace Plans

There's plenty of reading matter to help you understand and explain the Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks peace and security plans.

The Dept. of Research and Education of the CIO has put out a list, which you can get by writing to 718 Jackson Pl., N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

The State Dept. has a good kit of material on Dumbarton Oaks and a list of upcoming radio programs on the subject. Write to the State Dept., Washington 25, D. C.

The CIO's national radio programs on the Blue Network, Saturdays at 6:45 p. m. EWT, are on Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, the London World Labor conference and San Francisco for the duration of CIO's United Nations month. Listen in.

The CIO Publicity Dept. has a pamphlet on Bretton Woods, called "5,000,000 Jobs In World Trade." Price, 100 for $4, 500 for $14.

This series of three CIO NEWS articles is being made into a pamphlet with the title "Everybody's Business." Ready next week. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Saboteurs of World Unity

Editorial support for world cooperation in the American daily press tobogganed to as low as 37 per cent at the end of March, according to the Twohey Analysis of Newspaper Opinion, as compared with an earlier range of from 52 per cent to 75 per cent. Twenty-six per cent of the comment was unfavorable to world cooperation, and 37 per cent non-committal or mixed.

The bearish attitude of most of the press toward world organization was a reflection of all the hullaballoo about voting arrangements at San Francisco, and the accompanying anti-administration and anti-Soviet campaign.

But it was not confined to this by any means. At the same time press support for the Bretton Woods agreement dropped as low as 43 per cent, with another 43 per cent actively opposing and 14 per cent non-committal.

There was also a pronounced press campaign against the Soviet Union on many other issues, with 57 per cent of the press adopting a suspicious or unfriendly attitude, only 28 per cent trying to promote friendlier relations with our Soviet allies, and 15 per cent mixed or non-committal.

While the unity of the United Nations is proving itself in battle so magnificently, and while the American and all other peoples are looking so hopefully to see this unity carried forward for world peace and prosperity, most of the millionaire press can think of nothing better apparently than to exaggerate and promote division and to cast sneering doubts on all efforts at world unity.

Its present attitude is a sharp warning to the American people against all saboteurs of world cooperation.

The claims of the millionaire press to reflect public opinion have been exploded time and again, by election results and in many other ways.

Every fair test will show that the vast majority of the American people are enthusiastic for United Nations unity for victory, peace and postwar progress, and are not disposed to let this unity be disrupted by either Goebbels or Hearst.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE CIO has allegedly been "wrecked," "torn with dissension" and "headed for the rocks" so often in the course of its lusty growth, that current press jitters over the "collapse" of UNCIO make us feel "this is where we came in."

(Yes, bud, UNCIO is another alphabetical New Deal agency—only this time it's a New Deal for the whole blamed world. It stands for the United Nations Conference for International Organization to meet in San Francisco.)

It may also be noted that the United Nations have been so "split" by Goebbels' propaganda that they're fighting in opposite directions—the Americans, British and French eastward, and the Soviet army westward!

★ ★ ★

The current series of synthetic San Francisco earthquakes are caused by the mental rumblings and eruptions of the Nervous Nellies and Jittery Jims who "view with alarm" in so many editorials and columns.

According to them, the victorious unity of the United Nations is to be disrupted, and humanity's hopes of world organization for peace and prosperity destroyed or long deferred, because of some differences over voting procedure and representation.

Acres of newsprint and barrels of printer's ink have been used for alarmist speculation over the choice of one man rather than another to head the Soviet delegation; over conflicting claims for Polish representation; over proposed voting rights for the Ukranian and Byelorussian Soviet Republics; and over the relative representation of great and small powers.

★ ★ ★

Only one letter in CIO and UNCIO stands for the same word. That's O for Organization.

Any good union member could teach the press pundits the simple ABC's of organization.

In the first place, there would hardly be any need for organization if all concerned were exactly of the same mind and would just naturally act in unison.

But since folks are folks, and darned opinionated, unions have worked out long tested democratic procedures for getting them to work together. And there's no reason why UNCIO can't do the same.

★ ★ ★

There's hardly a union that hasn't had its arguments over voting procedures, representation at conventions, challenged credentials, etc. And that goes for the Democratic and Republican parties too.

In fact, differences of opinion normally arise on a wide variety of subjects in the best-regulated of organizations.

But what work would there be for credentials committees, constitution committees and conventions without such problems to adjust?

★ ★ ★

AS FOR complaints of small locals that large locals have too much representation, and vice versa, that's one of the hardiest annuals. Like other problems confronting the UNCIO it's quite common-or-garden to the experienced unionist.

To dire predictions of splits and collapse because of sundry differences, the CIO has always answered, "Nuts," and gone on building new strength and unity with each adjustment.

★ ★ ★

One of the best omens for the success of UNCIO is the London world labor conference.

There were challenged credentials there (including Poland, incidentally), and sharp differences on representation, voting procedure and other subjects.

But because the delegates understood organization, and because they were convinced world labor unity was all-important, they were able to resolve these differences and arrive at unanimous conclusions.

★ ★ ★

One reason for the overplayed dope stories about UNCIO differences is that clashes are considered newsworthy, while harmony isn't.

But there are also more sinister reasons. With or without guidance from Goebbels, quite a few papers and politicians have carried on a consistent campaign to disrupt the unity of the United Nations—and particularly to divide the Big Three with anti-British and anti-Soviet propaganda. Having failed to wreck the war, they are now working overtime to wreck the peace.

One of the main jobs of CIO's United Nations Month is to expose these split-mongers and wreckers, and to give them that classic American answer, "Nuts."

Veterans And Labor

The newly enlarged CIO Veterans Committee, headed by Clinton S. Golden, is launching an active campaign to promote the common interests of veterans and labor, after extended meetings with representatives of the various veterans' organzations.

With a million and a half of its own members in the armed forces, the CIO does not recognize any artificial separation between veterans and labor. It is joining with forward-looking veterans' leaders to forestall all attempts to play off one group against the other, to the disadvantage of both.

The area of agreement and common interest is so large that minor differences shrink into insignificance.

The CIO's program for jobs for all, with decent wages and working conditions, is of first importance to all returning servicemen; and the CIO will throw its full weight behind every measure needed to assure the best treatment for our fighting men that a grateful nation can provide.

All international and local unions can cooperate with the CIO Veterans' Committee by establishing active committees of their own to promote this all-important campaign.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 April 9, 1945 No. 15

CIO, Vets' Groups Join To Push Job Program

The CIO joined forces this week with old and new veterans' organizations to help assure jobs for returning servicemen.

The recently enlarged CIO Veterans Committee, headed by Clinton S. Golden and including CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, met at Natl. CIO headquarters in Washington, D. C., to speed formation of more national and local union veterans' committees by supplying recommendations and information to CIO affiliates.

The committee also met with representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the National Conference of Labor Legionnaires of the American Legion and the American Veterans committee.

Cooperating with the VFW, the CIO committee expressed willingness to move back from Sept. 1, 1940, to May 1 of the same year the effective beginning date for computation of seniority to veterans without statutory employment rights.

Under an agreement made last July by the CIO, VFW and AFL, veterans returning to their old jobs and veterans taking new jobs are credited with seniority month by month according to the time they served their country.

Carl J. Schoeninger, former national VFW commander and now chairman of the labor relations committee, and Omar B. Ketchum, legislative representative, attended the meeting on behalf of the VFW and offered the suggestion that implied seniority credit be made usable in obtaining employment as well as retaining employment, except that the credit be not permitted to "bump" a man on a job or a man on a layoff of less than 90 days.

The agreement, which the suggestion of the VFW would modify, is a tri-partite affair and all recommendations for altering it are subject to the approval of all three parties.

Approval of the CIO's position on veterans' seniority was voiced at the meeting of the CIO Veterans Committee by George Danfield, Maurice A. Frank and Henry Geisz, national secretary, national publicity director and vice-president in charge of the New York area respectively of the National Conference of Labor Legionnaires, and by Charles G. Bolte, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee.

BULLETIN—Memorandum 190-A, which would lessen job opportunities for veterans despite its super-seniority feature, has no status as a law. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, says so himself. Asked point-blank at the American Legion employment conference by Joseph Velosky, director of the CIO Auto Workers Veterans' Bureau, whether the much-disputed memorandum had any status as a law, General Hershey responded with a resounding "NO!"

Meanwhile, the CIO committee hailed the decision of Prof. Herman A. Gray, of the New York University Law School, arbitrator designated to resolve a dispute between the CIO United Steelworkers and the Timken Roller Bearing Co., under their contract.

Professor Gary ruled:

1. A returning veteran is entitled to have his seniority accumulated during the period he serves in the armed forces.

2. No employe can be displaced to make room for the returned veteran if, after crediting the veteran with the seniority so accumulated, such employe still has the greater seniority.

This ruling is contrary to the interpretation placed on the act by General Hershey, administrator of the Selective Service Act, through Local Board Memorandum 10-A, Chairman Golden pointed out.

Golden quoted with approval Professor Gray's statement that General Hershey "'is given no duty to administer the re-employment provisions of the Selective Service Act, no authority to enforce them, no power to issue any ruling interpreting their meaning or any order directing compliance"

Christian American Bills Killed

Anti-labor legislation sponsored by the Christian American Assn. in Kansas and Colorado was defeated this week.

In Kansas, the Christian American right-to-work amendment, which would have outlawed the union shop, and a bill which would have prevented unions from charging more than $1 initiation fees and $1 monthly dues, were both killed in a legislative committee.

A similar fate was dealt out to Colorado's "labor peace" act amendments which were primarily aimed against union shop agreements and which would have forbidden use of union funds for political purposes.

Comment on Byrnes Reconversion Report

By ROBERT K. LAMB
Secretary, CIO Legislative Committee

Probably the most important thing about the Second Quarterly Report of April 1, 1945, of Justice James F. Byrnes as Director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, was the fact of his resignation almost immediately afterward. Judge Fred M. Vinson, his successor, has announced that he will carry out the Byrnes policies. The report is too extensive for newspaper reprinting and even the official summary is too long for quotation here.

Highlights of the report are:

Production output in critical items increased 11 per cent in January over December, and 9 per cent in February over January. These continuing production increases were accomplished while labor supply declined. During the last three years the civilian labor force dropped by 1,800,000, despite the addition of 4,400,000 women workers. In 1944 about 45 per cent of U. S. total productive output was for war.

The report declares "it is clear that we do not have a comprehensive, efficient manpower system" and calls for additional manpower legislation, saying "controls are necessary not only for war production but also for production of essential civilian goods, and later to facilitate reconversion." This statement was used last week in the Senate to defeat the Conference Report of the compulsory manpower bill.

For labor, the highlight on wages was Byrne's announcement of a special study to determine possible adjustments in the framework of stabilization policies "to determine those industries in which hourly wage rates have increased substantially less than the cost of living and hence any sharp decline in hours worked per week would lower the standard of living."

If labor's studies on cost of living are accepted, this could provide substantial increases in hourly wage rates; however, the report continues:

"Other than in such instances, we must wait until we know how much of our war productivity has been carried over into peacetime production before wage rates can be increased. Take-home pay in peace equal to take-home pay now being received must have as a foundation a volume of production and consumption of civilian goods equal to our present production and consumption."

The chief shortcoming of the report is its failure to provide a strong affirmative Administration program for maintenance of war production and simultaneous expansion of civilian production after V-E Day. President Murray, through the Advisory Board to Judge Vinson, is urging development of such a comprehensive program.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

SECRETARY-TREASURERS BUYERS' GUIDE

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
(Celluloid or Litho-Metal)
Convention Badges
•
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps
Emblems
•
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases
Bill Folds
•
All Articles Bear the Union Label
231 SO. WELLS ST. CHICAGO
Phone: Webster 4104 ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 350 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

EXCITEMENT AND TENSENESS of battle is shown on the escort carrier U.S.S. Kitkun Bay, which helped hold off a superior Japanese force while the Americans landed at Leyte. August Maniscalco, CIO Longshoreman in the Navy, was in this battle.

DRAMATIC ACTION such as this occurred during the battle which took place while American landing at Leyte during the Second Battle of the Philippine Sea. Here a carr The accompanying story of a CIO Longshoreman turned sailor, describes the sinking of

CIO Blood Helps Write Vi

By FRED ROSS

THE record of America's fighting forces is a running account of personal bravery in heat of battle displayed by men and women who may come from your town and belong to your union.

This is the story of three brave men and one courageous woman —all of them members of the CIO—but it might also be told of your brother, husband, son or daughter, or of many of the million and a half CIO members who are fighting with the U. S. armed forces throughout the world.

LET'S start with August Maniscalco of San Francisco, a member of Local 16, CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. Maniscalco turned cook for the Navy—except that when the fighting started he helped to man a 5-inch gun on the U.S.S. Gambier Bay.

The Gambier Bay was one of six baby flattops which, with three destroyers and three destroyer escorts, slugged it out with a powerful Japanese task force of four battleships, seven cruisers and nine destroyers early on an October morning—and made possible the landing of the Americans at Leyte.

"Most of our fleet was battling two other Japanese task forces, and the Nips thought they'd have a field day at Leyte, shooting up our transports and sinking our supply ships," said Maniscalco, who was selected by the Navy to tell his story to U. S. war workers.

"Early in the game, we knew we were out of our class, but our few ships were all that stood in the way as the enemy came steaming toward Leyte Gulf," Maniscalco continued. "So it was up to us to hold up the Nip battlewagons and other big ships until help arrived."

Maniscalco said there wasn't a sailor abroad the Gambier Bay who thought there was a chance that he'd ever come through. All they knew was that they'd make the Japanese pay—and pay plenty—in time, at least.

The first two hours were the worst. Maniscalco helped man one of the 5-inch guns, the heaviest on the carrier, which were miles short of the range of the Nips' 14 and 16-inch guns finding their mark on the Gambier Bay. Until the Japanese got closer, all the Gambier Bay could do was to run and try to duck the gunfire.

Very early in the fight, the Gambier Bay took a hit in its forward engine room that put it out of commission. Later, another hit in the engine room aft left the carrier dead in the water, a sitting duck for enemy gunners.

But the flattop carried on. When the Japanese ships came within range, the Gambier Bay scored hits on a battleship and cruiser, some of them probably from the 5-incher which Maniscalco continued to help fire.

Hours crawled by. The Gambier Bay continued to absorb a lot of punishment; all in all, 29 14 and 16-inch shells struck it.

Finally the order came to abandon ship. Maniscalco, before going over the side, dashed below to find his buddy, a boy who came from the same town, who trained with him and went on liberty with him.

But the buddy was dead—part of his face torn away, his body riddled with shrapnel and plastered against a bulkhead.

An enemy cruiser continued to pound shells into the Gambier Bay. Shrapnel struck Maniscalco in the leg, tore off his clothes and hurled him to the deck. Crawling through the dead and wounded, he made his way over the side.

He seemed to be in the water for eternity, clinging to a life raft. The Japanese continued to kill the survivors, their shells ripping into the rafts. Some of the wounded on Maniscalco's raft, weakened by the loss of blood, were unable to withstand the buffeting sea and dropped into the water. Despite their suffering, there were tears in the eyes of the survivors of the Gambier Bay as it sank.

The raft was drifting toward the enemy-held island of Samar, and was only—after 45 hours—a few miles off the coast when a U. S. patrol craft picked up Maniscalco and his mates.

THE lady of this piece has a rather different story — but one of such courage that it brought her a Bronze Star, a decoration awarded to only 27 other WACs.

She's Pfc. Harriet Anderson, a blue-eyed blonde, from Toledo, Ohio, where she was a member of the CIO United Auto Workers at the Champion Spark Plug plant. At Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, she is known as "Andy."

An attack of scarlet fever from which Andy is recovering had nothing to do with the 350-truck convoy which she led from England to Rheims last September, carrying badly needed supplies of food and gasoline to American soldiers battling the Nazis in the Luxembourg area.

Andy was chosen for the job because two years at military posts in the U. S. and England had taught her to drive practically every type of Army vehicle —and she was agreeably surprised to find that most of the trucks in France and England were made by fellow union members.

the Seventh Fleet group guarded the ier is rent by an explosion before sinking.
the carrier U.S.S. Gambier Bay.

ctory!

The convoy traveled by day and at night the girl drivers slept on the ground. For most of the trip, the convoy moved in the open countryside. There was almost a continuous downpour, but the trucks and the crew functioned perfectly.

Approaching Caen in Normandy, which was held by the British, the girls saw the smoke and heard the roar of battle as Nazi shells crashed into the town.

Andy gripped the steering wheel more firmly and kept pressing on the gas. Shells whistled overhead as the convoy passed through the town, some of them finding their mark in adjoining streets.

Andy and her detail kept their eyes on the road, and their feet on accelerators because they knew that American boys were depending on them for food and gasoline. They also knew that it would take only one piece of shrapnel crashing through a gasoline drum to blow up most of them and their cargo.

"At Rheims," Andy said, "we were greeted by Brig. Gen. Thrasher who told me I'd done a fine job and that the Army was proud of me, and little did I think that I'd get a Bronze Star, too."

UNTIL a few days ago, Pfc. George Dallasen, a member of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at Speer Carbon plant at St. Mary's, Penna., was also a patient at Walter Reed, recovering from a severe shrapnel wound of the head.

Although he told his story in a quiet, self-effacing manner, his recital of the facts told the important part his infantry outfit of the Second Division played in the invasion of Normandy.

Storming ashore from an LCI on the murky morning of June 8—D plus 2 day — the infantrymen, equipped with Browning automatic rifles, were met by a hail of snipers' bullets. Several of the Americans fell. Some were killed.

For two hours the fight raged, but to Dallasen, dug in on the beach, it seemed like eternity. The Nazis were hard to hit, because they did not frequently expose themselves.

Other GIs at the Germans' rear also went to work on them. Never could Dallasen remember having heard more noise in his life, as the firing continued from both sides.

One by one the German rifles were silenced as bullets made in the U.S.A. tore through Nazi bodies. But this was just a taste of things to come.

SIX days after landing — June 14 — was a day Dallasen will long remember. They were crawling through a forest when seemingly from all directions enemy machineguns opened fire. Many Americans rolled over for the last time, a number of them from Dallasen's home town, Kersey, near St. Mary's.

Time stood still, while the battle raged in the gloom of the forest and while the Americans, creeping silently in Indian fashion, tossed hand grenades into the nests of Germans, eliminating them one by one.

Seven days later the Browning rifle unit was on a hill overlooking St. Lo, expecting a counterattack. The Germans were blasting at them with artillery.

"Zing—that was it," Dallasen said, "I was hit on the back of head by a piece of shrapnel."

He was taken first to an evacuation hospital in France, and then was flown to another hospital in England, and then was taken to Walter Reed.

"They took a piece out of my leg and grafted it on my head. I'm feeling swell now," he told The CIO NEWS.

ITALY was the background of the story of Pvt. Joseph C. Kimble, another patient at Walter Reed, who before he became a GI was a member of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers employed at Kearney Shipyards in New Jersey.

Landing with an infantry company of the 85th Division at Naples, Kimble and his comrades had to be constantly on the alert for Nazi planes.

Fighting the Germans north of the city, he was struck in the right shoulder by mortar shrapnel last July. Kimble dismissed the wound as "not serious. Anyway, I was back in action in three weeks." Two of his friends were killed by the murderous fire.

Assigned to a mortar section in the high Apennines, where even in September it was bitter cold, Kimble and his companions moved into a small settlement under fire from a tank in a nearby valley.

Setting up their mortars, Kimble's section directed their fire at the tank. They were elated by the increasing accuracy of their firing as great clouds of earth rose high in the air nearer and nearer the Nazi tank.

Their elation did not last long because the Nazi gunner had their range, and he, too. was steadily improving his aim.

Another danger faced them. A few more rounds and their ammunition would be exhausted. Facing this double problem, Kimble, three of his companions and a first aid man dashed for cover at the rear of a nearby dwelling to await ammunition from a company that was moving up.

Just as they were congratulating themselves that they had eluded the Nazi fire, a shell crashed into a corner of the house. All of them fell wounded by shrapnel.

There was a deep long gash in Kimble's leg. It seemed like hours before the medics arrived, although he learned later that they all received attention within a few minutes after they were struck.

The first aid men gave him a shot in the arm to ease the pain, putting a tourniquet on his leg above the wound to stop the bleeding.

Over rutted mountain roads an ambulance started to take Kimble to an Army hospital in Florence. As the vehicle bounced over the untended roads, Kimble writhed in agony and seemingly Florence was at the other end of the earth. The ride lasted 14 harrowing hours.

He was moved later to Walter Reed, where his leg remained in a brace a month and a half.

MANISCALCO, Andy, Dallasen and Kimble wouldn't consider themselves heroes.

"There's a job to be done—let's do it well and quickly," was the way these four CIO members would put it.

PVT. JOSEPH C. KIMBLE
Swapped Shell for Shell With Nazi Tank

PFC. GEORGE DALLASEN
Pinned Down by Snipers For What Seemed Like Eternity

PFC. HARRIET ANDERSON
Plucky UAW-CIO Member Awarded Bronze Star

COOK AUGUST MANISCALCO
The U. S. Navy Could Use a Lot More Like Him

You Never Can Tell Where You'll Land in the Papers!

Well, you never can tell where you'll land in the papers!

CIO's public relations activities landed smack dab on page one of the Wall St. Journal last week under a top head with a two-column article following, and this week Time Magazine gave the story first place in its Press Dept.

Time-wise explanation for the phenomena was this:

"One of the last places on earth where the CIO expects praise is in Wall St. But last week the Wall St. Journal turned handsprings in ungrudging admiration of The CIO NEWS (circ. 450,000 weekly) one of the biggest U. S. labor papers.

"Understandably, the admiration had a professional rather than an ideological basis," said Time.

Hot stuff so far as the Journal was concerned was The CIO NEWS' full page comic, "Adventures of Jim Barry," the humor and pinups in The CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition, CIO pamphlets, the network radio programs, movies made and in the making, and the CIO plan for a national book-a-month club.

Outlining the many activities of the CIO's Publicity Dept. and its Dept. of Education & Research, the Journal described the CIO as a "wizard of public relations."

"By smart tactics," the Journal said, "the CIO argues its case from every vantage point in America. One secret of its success is skill in talking the language of each chosen audience."

U. S. High Court Takes Bridges Case

In a high, colonnaded hall, eight men leaned forward from their big padded chairs one day this week and heard about a case that goes to the heart of every American's freedom.

The men were the eight Supreme Court judges sitting on the Bridges case, one having disqualified himself because he was Attorney-General during one of the numerous Bridges trials. The attorneys arguing for Bridges were Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, and Richard Gladstein, of San Francisco.

In the language of the law, the CIO brief told the Court that the 10-year prosecution of Bridges, and this final effort to deport him, "offends due process of law," and the anti-alien statute of 1940 under which he was convicted "as construed and applied offends the Bill of Rights" of the U. S. Constitution.

The 1940 law, which makes an alien's membership at any time in an organization holding "forbidden beliefs" grounds for deportation, is an "ex-post-facto" law—that is, it makes a crime out of an act that was not a crime at the time it was said to have been performed.

In other words, as Rep. Sam Hobbs (D. Ala.) boasted at the time, the law was passed to "get" Bridges when all other means had failed. Further proof of this aim was revealed in Hobbs' attempt the same year to pass a bill which simply said: "Notwithstanding ony other provision of law" the Attorney-General is ordered to deport Bridges.

But Congress can't pass such laws, Pressman pointed out, because the Bill of Rights protects aliens as well as citizens. Further, if such laws are held legal, not only the rights of millions of aliens are in danger but also the rights of American citizens. Attacks on the liberties of one group never stop with that one group. They move on to others.

Then, too, there's the guarantee in the constitution against "double jeopardy"—that is, against putting a man on trial twice for the same crime, after he has been acquitted once before. This guarantee has been violated by Attorney General Biddle's actions against Bridges.

Bridges has been tried twice, both times for the same "crime," and on the same evidence. In 1938, Dean Landis of Harvard acquitted him. In 1940, Judge Sears found him guilty. A few weeks later, the Appeals Board of the U.S. Justice Dept. reversed Sears. Four days later, Biddle reversed his own Appeals Board.

But, says Biddle in his case presented by Solicitor Charles Fahy, this is not technically a criminal case, and therefore the Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution don't apply.

Fahy, who wore a claw-hammer coat for the hearing, spoke in a very low voice. Your reporter, who was somewhat astounded at this doctrine, thought he hadn't heard right—but he had. Apparently, in the light of this theory, you have to be a criminal before the Constitution protects you.

Fahy had another strange point in his oral argument. He freely admitted that Biddle's case was based on hearsay evidence. No one has directly connected Bridges with the Communist Party. Asked by Justice Rutledge if he knew of other cases based solely on hearsay evidence, Fahy replied, still in his low voice: "I can't say."

The case will be close, attornies say. Bridges has to get five of the eight justices on his side, which is harder than getting five of nine. The verdict will probably be handed down some time early in June.

Low Wages Don't Pay, Says Outlook

Low wages for white collar workers cost the U. S. tremendous losses annually, the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO, said in Section 2 of its current issue released this week.

Two hundred and twenty thousand teachers have left teaching jobs alone between Pearl Harbor and June, 1944, the Outlook points out, citing the 1944 average teaching salary at $1,550 as "simply not enough for the people who teach our boys and girls the fundamentals of democratic living."

After discussing the difficulties of the average white collar worker on low wages and lacking security on the job, the Outlook cites CIO white collar organization to demonstrate the need for union protection. Only 13 per cent of the nation's white collar workers work under union agreements, the Outlook says, compared to 60 per cent of industrial workers.

Postwar Jobs-Peace Pact Hailed by Press, Labor and Industry

CIO Pres. Philip Murray's office has been deluged with telephone calls, wires and letters hailing the charter signed last week by the CIO, AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce to help guarantee full employment and industrial peace in the postwar period. The press, and leaders of industry, labor and government joined in approval.

Comment from F. D. R. was:

"The close cooperation between labor and management during the war has made possible our great and unexcelled achievements in war production. That close cooperation must be continued to make possible the full employment of labor and capital under our system of free competitive enterprise when hostilities cease."

Vice-President Truman cheered the charter as "a heartening document." George W. Taylor, chairman of the Natl. War Labor Board, said that "this outstanding advance of democratic principles in the industrial field inspires confidence in the future well-being of the entire nation."

Among leaders of finance and industry who hailed the peace pact were shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser, Pres. Charles E. Wilson of General Electric, and Chairman Winthrop Aldrich of the Chase Natl. Bank.

Kaiser called the plan "very heartening and encouraging to the nation at a time when unity is sometimes in question."

Wilson called on management and labor to make every effort to translate the charter into action and predicted that if labor and management observe it in dealing with each other "many of the doubts and suspicions that have plagued their relations in the past will disappear."

Aldrich praised the voluntary aspects of the agreement and said it was a "great step forward."

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall said, in a letter to CIO Pres. Murray, that "such a meeting of minds is a great step forward and augurs well for a happy and early solution of many of our postwar problems."

PRESS COMMENT

Press comment included:

New York Herald-Tribune: "The charter lacks one important signature—that of President Ira Mosher, of the NAM . . . His comment . . . 'What the people of America want to know is what is going to be done about making them (principles of the charter) work . . .' is a feeble reason for his refusal to join the framers."

New York Times: "What is most important about this announcement is that it is made at all. There are few other countries in the world today in which such an announcement would be possible."

Washington Evening Star: "There is hope and there is significance in the fact that top-notch representatives of industry and labor can sit down together and draw up a cooperative program to which they are willing to subscribe their names."

Philadelphia Inquirer: "The spirit shown by those who are entitled to speak for the most influential elements of labor and industry augurs well for the success of their undertaking."

CIO praise came from Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Pres. Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Pres. Grant Oakes, Farm Equipment Workers; Pres. O. A. Knight, Oil Workers; Pres. Harry Bridges, Longshoremen & Warehousemen; Pres. Morris Muster, Furniture Workers; the Policy Committee of the Federal Workers; Pres. Joseph Curran and Sec. Saul Mills of the N. Y. City CIO Council, and Pres. Abram Flaxer, State, County & Municipal Workers, who urged that the Conference of Mayors call a meeting to sign a similar charter for public employes.

Praise came, too, in joint statements made by leaders of labor and industry in San Francisco, Portland, Oreg., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

CIO President Philip Murray has called upon all of us to observe April as United Nations Month. He has asked every unit of the CIO to have meetings on our foreign policy and every member to study and discuss it.

This is a program which presents a special challenge to women. As Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Auxiliaries, says in a United Nations Month message to all auxiliaries:

"Women are traditionally leaders in trying to build peace in the world. That means that we have a big responsibility today.

"Beginning April 25 representatives of all the United Nations will meet in San Francisco to draw up the international agreement to establish machinery for a permanent peace.

"After World War I the nations of the world set up a League of Nations. The United States Senate refused to take part. The league failed.

MUSTN'T HAPPEN AGAIN

"We cannot let that happen again. This year it is up to us to see that every woman we can reach understands how important a United Nations organization is to us and raise her voice to demand that the United States play its full part. We ask each CIO auxiliary to start on that job in April.

"There are several ways in which CIO women can work on this program. The activities of the United Federal Workers auxiliary in Washington, D. C., is a good illustration of one of one of them.

"The membership here is divided into neighborhood groups which meet in six or seven areas of the city. Each one of those groups is having a discussion of Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks. Most of them have asked the League of Women Voters to provide a discussion leader. The girls have found it easy to bring their neighbors to those meetings."

There's quite a bit of good simple literature we can distribute in our neighborhoods. The League of Women Voters, 726 Jackson Place, Washington 6, D. C., has issued some excellent one-page flyers on both Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks which sell for 75 cents a 100 and would be effective for door-to-door distribution.

"Some Do's and Don'ts" on Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks, issued by the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, Mayflower Hotel, Washington 6, D. C., would be good for the same purpose.

Best of all, are our own CIO pamphlets. The one on Bretton Woods, "5,000,000 Jobs in World Trade," is out. The Dumbarton Oaks one will appear shortly.

Women had just got the vote at the end of the last war when the question of American participation in an international organization for peace came up. They did not know how to use their strength effectively, but have learned a lot since then.

Women were 60% of the voters last November and they elected a man who is determined to see a lasting peace after this war.

Now we must help them to use their political strength to make sure that two-thirds of our Senators (that's what it takes to ratify a treaty), vote for our participation in the United Nations organization which will keep the peace.

UAW Auxiliaries Aid Cancer Fund Drive

The CIO Auto Workers Women's Auxiliaries are preparing to launch a drive this month to assist the American Cancer Society in the solicitation of funds to carry on the society's work, announces Catherine Gelles, secretary-treasurer of the International Women's Auxiliaries.

Funds are needed for research, education and treatment of cancer. It has been pointed out that 30 to 50 per cent of the lives which cancer claims could be saved by early diagnosis and treatment. A campaign of education to induce people to go to their doctor for examination immediately the first symptom of cancer appears, is an important part of the program outlined in the cancer drive and one of the things for which the funds are badly needed.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

UAW-CIO Regional Director Paul Miley reports: Acme Aluminum Alloy, Inc., Dayton, Ohio, CIO 359, AFL 170. The AFL had been the bargaining agents for many years. Intl. Rep. George Wilkins of the Aircraft Staff conducted the drive, assisted by Intl. Rep. Ernest Waits. At Boyer Aircraft Plant, Cleveland, Ohio, 76% of the employes voted for the UAW-CIO. This drive was conducted by Intl. Rep. Stanley Kwiat, who was assisted by Clinton Bell, Bus. Rep. for Local 217.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, reports: Automatic Transportation Co. Div. of the Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., Chicago, (production and maintenance employes), UAW-CIO 330, Federal Labor Union AFL 188, neither 16.

Bertie Selden, Pub. Dir. Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers, advises of the following election victories: Libbey Fruit Co., Phoenix, Ariz., CIO 42, no union 11; D'Arrigo Brohters, Eloy, Cal. CIO 41, no union 8; General Cigar Co., New Brunswick, N. J., CIO 107, no union 33.

CIO Reg. Dir. James Ritchie St. Louis, reports that the UERMWA-CIO was certified as the sole collective bargaining agency of 60 production and maintenance employes of the Northwestern Products Co. Also, sometime ago they were recognized as the bargaining agency for some 150 workers of the Paper Converters Co. The Regional Office conducted the preliminary work of organization at both of these plants and then turned them over to Representative Logsdon of the UERMWA.

The Transport Workers Union's Transport Division beat the AFL Machinists by 4-1 and the Independent association by 5-1, obtaining a clear-out majority over the combined opposition among the maintenance employees of Pan-American Airways at Miami, biggest base of the biggest commercial airline. Results of the election were 784 for the TWU-CIO, 191 for AFL, 162 for the Independent and 1 for no union.

CIO Asst. Reg. Dir. Herbert T. McCreedy, Detroit, advises that after a four-year struggle CIO finally won an important decision over the Mount Clemens Pottery Co. The Court of Appeals recently upheld an NLRB decision that the company had engaged in unfair labor practices, sustained the Board's cease and desist order; and with slight modification employees were reinstated with back pay.

A. M. Strandberg, pres., and E. K. Kluender, chairman, Bargaining Committee, Stockhandlers Local 160 of the UPWA Minn., advises that they have just signed their second contract with the officers of the Stockyards Company. They term it the "best contract of any stockyards in the country." CIO Rep. Roy Franklin of Minneapolis, is due credit for this fine accomplishment. The company has complimented the CIO on its fine representative. Best wishes for continued success to the officers and members of Local 160!

Wm. B. Taylor, Director, Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports an election won at Cities Service, Maumelle Ordnance Plant, Little Rock, Ark., CIO 560, against 115.

On Sunday, April 8, a conference of the Railroad Workers Field Representatives and staff, is being held in Pittsburgh to lay plans for an intensified drive among the shop crafts on the PRR. The campaign is rolling along at good speed and the Board will soon set a date for an election. Let's all redouble our efforts in this drive and pitch in to make this drive another CIO victory!

US Appeals Montgomery Ward Case

Latest development in the Government's case against Montgomery Ward for defiance of the War Labor Board took place this week with the filing of an appeal in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals by the Department of Justice against a Federal District Court decision holding that President Roosevelt's order to seize the company's properties was illegal.

Admiral Hails Longshoremen For 'Job Well Done'; Bridges Is Nominated for Fifth Term

By MORRIS WATSON

The Sixth Biennial Convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, at San Francisco, held in conjunction with a Pacific Coast longshore wage conference, closed here April 2 after giving unanimous endorsement to the CIO, AFL and C of C charter for postwar industrial peace.

Meeting in the auditorium of the CIO Building, bedecked with the flags of the United Nations and looked over by heroic sized pictures of the Big Three ot Teheran and CIO Pres. Philip Murray and PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, the delegates to the four-day session unanimously renominated Harry Bridges for a fifth term as president, reaffirmed the no-strike pledge by standnig vote, approved the ILWU Security Preamble for postwar contracts, and joined in the CIO call to make April United Nations Month.

Every action concerning policy was taken by unanimous vote. Complete confidence and support was voted for Murray and Hillman and the same action was accorded the CIO delegates to the World Labor Conference.

Distinguished speakers included Maj. Gen. Clarence Kells, commandant of the San Francisco Port of Embarkation and Rear Admiral C. H. Wright, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, and Paul Robeson, honorary member of the ILWU, who also sang.

Admiral Wright thanked the union for "a job that has been well done, is being well done and is going to continue to be well done." Gen. Kells was equally high in his praise. Using a large map of the world he dramatized a story of logistics and the union's part in the science of supply.

First Vice-Pres. J. R. Robertson and Sec.-Treas. Louis Goldblatt were unanimously renominated, and like Bridges, will go on a referendum ballot without opposition. Second Vice-Pres. Rosco Craycraft, disqualified because he was not a delegate to the convention, will be succeeded either by Michael Johnson of San Francisco Shipclerks Local 34, or Matt Meehan of Portland Longshore Local 8. Both will be on the ballot.

The convention also took the following actions:

Streamlined the ILMU constitution to bring it up-to-date with world advances.

Approved the Intl. Exec. Board as the ILWU Political Action Committee and approved political action as the chief means of progress for labor.

Endorsed and pledged its energies and resources for the President's program for 60 million jobs.

Pledged intensification of the fight to end the persecution of Pres. Bridges.

Endorsed and called for a unified fight to bring about Congressional approval of Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks before the San Francisco United Nations meeting.

Adopted Pres. Roosevelt's second bill of economic rights as official policy of the union.

Endorsed and adopted a uniform policy for accepting returning veterans into the ranks of the union without payment of initiation and with security rights accorded from the date of entrance in the armed forces or Merchant Marine.

Two Big Independents Join CIO R.R. Unions

Two independent non-operating railroad unions with a total membership of some 10,000 have joined the CIO United Railroad Workers of America, A. B. Martin, the union's national director, announced this week at his headquarters in Altoona, Pa.

The unions are the Assn. of Maintenance of Way & Miscellaneous Employes, Inc., of the Santa Fe Railroad, and the American Federation of Railroad Workers car shop department, of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, subsidiary of the N. Y. Central.

The Santa Fe union's headquarters are in Topeka, Kansas, and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie organization, in Cleveland. Both unions are system-wide.

Originally the Santa Fe association belonged to the AFL but later withdrew and became independent. Although it has not had any connection with the Santa Fe union for several years, the AFL Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, has petitioned the Natl. Mediation Board, labor agency for the railroads, for an election. Date for the election has not yet been set.

Meanwhile the CIO Railroad Workers has nearly all the members of the Santa Fe union signed up. The union covers workers connected with Santa Fe icing plants from San Francisco to Chicago.

The other union, the Federation of Railroad Workers, has jurisdiction over workers on three small railroads in addition to the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie—Aliquippa Southern, subsidiary of Jones & McLaughlin Steel; Donora Southern, subsidiary of American Steel & Wire, and Youngstown Southern, independent road.

Some weeks ago the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Carmen tried to get control of the P. & E. Federation and petitioned for a Mediation Board election. The Board checked the workers' membership cards and dismissed the petition when it was found that the AFL union did not have enough members to qualify for an election.

State, County Union Sets Up Teachers Division

Establishment of a National Teachers Division within the State, County & Municipal Workers has been announced by Abram Flaxer, the CIO union's president. The Division will have a two-fold task, he said—to organize teachers into the CIO and to further the national CIO program on education.

"The Division was set up to answer the urgent and increasingly recognized need for teachers to join with the rest of organized labor to further both their own interests and the interests of our educational system in general," a union statement said.

"In recent months many requests have come to SCMWA from teachers throughout the country, urging the CIO to start intensive organization within their areas. These requests, coming from the South, the West Coast and the Middle West, have resulted in speeding up the establishment of the new division."

Teachers locals affiliated with the SCMWA have already been chartered in New York, Pennslyvania, New Jersey, West Virginia and Michigan. Other locals comprising various employes under Boards of Education include teachers as well as maintenance and clerical workers.

In launching the organizing drive, Pres. Flaxer asked for the cooperation and support of State and local CIO Councils as well as other SCMWA locals.

John Rackliffe has been named executive secretary of the Division.

Security Fund Proposed for GM Workers

A proposal that the CIO United Auto Workers open negotiations with General Motors for the creation of a Social Security Dept. to be financed by the corporation was made last week by UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. Walter Reuther director of the union's GM Dept.

The plan which he presented to some 200 representatives of 295,000 GM members of the UAW, calls for a contribution from the employers equal to three per cent of the weekly wages of workers in each plant under contract with the union to be paid into a Social Security Fund administered by the union.

The fund would be used to provide hospital and medical care and death benefits to union members in good standing. Accumulation of reserves would be used to build UAW hospitals, rest homes and recreational centers for union members.

NMU Re-elects F. C. Smith

Ferdinand C. Smith, nationally prominent Negro leader who resigned last November as secretary of the Natl. Maritime Union, has been re-elected to that office, the union announced this week.

Results of the special bi-election were endorsed at a membership meeting Thursday evening, following a report by the Honest Ballot Assn. which supervised the counting.

Four candidates ran for the office. Neal Hanley, a natl. director of the union, who had been serving as secretary pro tem, was runner-up in the balloting.

Unionism After Work

Goddard College Workshop

Unions are invited to send representatives to the Workshop Conference on the Resources and Problems of New England to be held at Goddard College, Plainfield, Vt., July 5-Aug. 16. Pres. Royce S. Pitkin of Goddard expresses the hope that at least a hundred unionists will be able to take part in the conference.

The Workshop, which is planned so that a person may attend a week, two weeks or the full six weeks if possible, will study the nature and direction of the change which has taken place in the life of New England "as a result of industrial development, war dislocation, concentrations of people and wealth, and mixtures of races and cultures."

Consultants from important areas of work and a staff chosen to give continuity and meaning to the subjects under discussion will direct the study. Francis Carmichael, CIO regional director in Boston, is helping in the plans for the Workshop.

Further information may be obtained by writing to George Beecher, director of the Workshop, Goddard College, Plainfield, Vermont.

Del. CIO Contacts High School

CIO union education committees concerned with getting material which give an understanding of labor and the CIO's program into the public schools may be interested in a report from Ben Stahl, chairman of the Delaware Joint Labor Committee on Education.

As a result of contacts made by the Committee with the Chairman of Social Studies in the duPont high school in Wilmington, copies of the bibliography, "Book Shelf" compiled by the Natl. CIO Dept. of Education & Research, and other printed material on organized labor, were given to school librarians and teachers whose work deals with labor problems and history.

The material was made available to students, and a list of what the teachers found was helpful to the students was made and sent to Stahl. The Social Studies Chairman wrote that she was planning to give the same material to a teacher in the Wilmington High School to use with a class there to get the pupils' reaction.

N. Y. Housing Conference Apr. 14

A conference on postwar housing and community planning has been called by the Greater New York CIO Council for Saturday, Apr. 14, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt, New York City.

Main speakers include Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, Philip M. Klutznick, Commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority, Louis W. Bennett, director of the Veterans' Service Center, and William Nicholas, secretary of the Natl. CIO Housing Committee.

They will address the luncheon session and the panels on Neighborhood Development and Tenants' Rights.

Delegates will attend from CIO unions, the American Labor Party, the Citizens' Housing Council, the Lawyers' Guild and tenants' and consumers' organizations. A program will be drawn up aimed at launching surveys in New York communities; obtaining labor representation on municipal planning agencies and mobilizing support for legislative measures that will make for effective planning.

CIO Chorus Being Formed

Formation of a CIO Chorus in New York City is now under way, announces the Greater New York CIO Council. The first such cultural project to be undertaken by the N. Y. Council, the Chorus will offer an opportunity for CIO members and their families to participate in this city-wide singing group. Special scholarships will be given to those in the chorus with the greatest voice possibilities.

It is planned to make the chorus available for large union and civic events and also to train smaller units to service small union meetings.

Simon Rady, choral director for "Pins and Needles," for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Canteen Chorus and for a New York Port of Embarkation, will direct the CIO Chorus.

A number of professionals have volunteered to work with the chorus, and the committee for the final auditions includes Mark Warnow of the Lucky Strike Hit Parade; Duke Ellington; Mimi Benzell, young Metropolitan Opera star; Kurt Weill, composer and arranger for "Lady in the Dark" and the new show, "Firebrand"; and Benay Ventura, of radio and revue fame.

CIO Radio Roundup

High spot on the next CIO radio show will be the World Trade Union Congress Administrative Committee meeting, with CIO Pres. Philip Murray welcoming delegates to Washington in preparation for the big San Francisco parley April 25.

You'll hear it on the Blue Network (which incidentally will change its name to the American Broadcasting Co. on June 15) at 6:45 p. m. EWT Saturday, April 14.

* * *

Scheduled for April 12 at 7:45 p. m. EWT is a broadcast by CIO over the Mutual Network on the Missouri Valley Authority, big flood control and power project that it is hoped, will rival the TVA. A dramatic show is planned, with John Brophy, chairman of CIO's MVA committee, pointing up the moral at the end.

Films For Union Showings

United Nations Month

Release this month of a new 16mm sound film, "The Peace Builders," showing memorable meetings and actions of the Allied leaders from the Atlantic Charter meeting up to the forthcoming United Nations Conference at San Francisco, is announced by Brandon Films, Inc. The motion picture was produced by the Nat'l. Film Board of Canada.

"The Peace Builders" summarizes the proceedings and proposals worked out by Allied leaders at Ottawa, Cairo, Teheran, Moscow, Hot Springs, Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and the Crimea.

Copies of the film will be available for rental at $1.50 a day or for outright sale at $17.50 a copy. Unions desiring to show the film in celebration of CIO United Nations Month may write for further information to: Brandon Films, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y.

★ ★ ★

"The Enemy Strikes," a War Dept. movie produced by Army Pictorial Service, has been released to theaters nationally by the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry.

The 10-minute film brings to the screen the "Battle of the Bulge" and features some of the most dramatic German film footage to come out of the war. It may be obtained for showings at union meetings by writing Motion Picture Branch, Industrial Service Division, Room 1315, 1501 Broadway, New York 18, N. Y.

★ ★ ★

The motion picture record of the U. S. Coast Guard's task in moving thousands of troops to the battle zones is shown in a 16mm film, "Story of A Transport," now being distributed by the Treas. Dept. as a feature of the Seventh War Loan drive.

Filmed by Coast Guard photographers, the two-reel film records the colorful career of the transport Wakefield, formerly the luxury liner Manhattan. Highlighting the film are scenes of the Wakefield being bombed at Singapore, burning in the Atlantic and then, refitted, crammed with troops bound for European battlefields.

"REGISTER BLISS, Miss LaTour, misty-eyed bliss! Your happiness is complete. No more endless nights on the swingshift, no more stinting . . . Monsieur Beauchamps has just called you his little CABBAGE!"

CIO Barbers Form Mutual Shop, Inc.

More than 600 barbers in Kings and Queens counties, New York, belong to the Mutual Barber Shops, Inc., a collectively owned enterprise started by Local 2, CIO Barbers & Beauty Culturists Union, Brooklyn. Mutual Shops functions along cooperative lines, but since the New York State laws covering cooperatives exclude barbers the concern had to organize as a mutual.

The Mutual is financed by members of Local 2 who pay a yearly assessment of $12. In addition $1 is deducted monthly from their regular dues which means that $24 a year is directly assigned to the Mutual.

The union acts as its agent in collecting and transferring funds. For this money, the Mutual issues shares of stock to the members of Local, to the amount of $12 a share.

The Mutual aims to create jobs, provide steady employment and pay higher wages and commissions than other shops pay. Members employed by Mutual Barber Shops work 48 hours in a five-day week; receive an annual paid vacation of one week and are covered by $250 life insurance.

John Tartamella, general president of the Barbers Union, says that he hopes the plan started by Local 2 "will be followed by the barbers and beauty culturists of the nation."

Golden to Judge Peace Contest

Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, has been appointed one of the judges in the National Peace Treaty Contest in New York which will award $10,000 in War Bond prizes for the best practical peace treaties at the end of the war.

A total of 100 prizes will be awarded for the best treaties of 1,000 words or less. The contest closes April 15.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

CIO Is Host to World Trade Unionists; to Plan for 'Frisco'

The CIO is host this week to one of the most important international gatherings preparing for the San Francisco United Nations Conference, and indeed looking far beyond it.

Scheduled to assemble in the board room at CIO headquarters in Washington on April 10 are top labor leaders from Great Britain, the Soviet Union, France, China and Latin American and other countries.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray will preside as chairman over this meeting of the 13-member administrative committee of the World Labor Conference, of which Sidney Hillman is the other CIO member, with R. J. Thomas as alternate. The rest of the CIO delegation to the London conference will be in attendance, and CIO Executive Board members meeting in Washington April 12 will also have an opportunity to hear from the visiting labor chiefs.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO delegation to the World Labor Conference, is charged with arrangements for this first follow-up meeting and has been working with Murray to secure adequate American labor representation at the San Francisco conference.

In between telephone calls to and from the State Dept. and other Washington authorities, he took time to tell The CIO News about world labor's plans and hopes, and to point up the significance of its growing participation in international affairs.

"The three main purposes of the Administrative Committee meeting," Carey said, "are to plan for the presentation of world labor's views at the San Francisco conference; to take up other international labor matters preparatory to the Paris conference in September, at which the new World Trade Union Federation will be formally launched; and to approve the constitution drafted for the federation, prior to its submission to all the individual national labor movements."

PHILIP MURRAY
Presides Over International Labor Meeting at Washington

Carey pointed out that the Administrative Committee is formally a sub-committee of the larger Continuing Committee established in London. It is an interim committee vested by the London conference with full authority to speak in the name of world labor at the San Francisco meeting and other international gatherings.

In addition, labor in the various United Nations is seeking representation in an advisory and consultative capacity to each national delegation to San Francisco. British labor, as a matter of fact, is directly represented by four members of the United Kingdom delegation.

President Murray and Carey have been seeking advisory status for American labor at San Francisco, along with industry and agriculture, following the pattern already established by the State Dept. at the Chapultepec conference in Mexico City. While the negotiations were not completed at the time of writing, it is reasonably anticipated that this recognition will be forthcoming, according to Carey.

"It is fine for the heads of states to get together," he said, "but the general principles they lay down will be barren of results unless there is a firm basis of popular support for and participation in the instrumentalities which have the day-to-day tasks to perform.

"The labor movement was the first group to recognize the need for getting together in a world conference on an all-inclusive basis. And, incidentally, the CIO can take pride in the fact that Philip Murray was the pioneer and has been the most active promoter of this idea.

"Without the new World Trade Union Federation, labor would be in the position of merely ratifying decisions arrived at by the representatives of government, or opposing their approval.

"What labor seeks is some means to express its views in advance and to participate while decisions are being arrived at—and not to be relegated to a position of minor influence in respect to purely labor questions, as most narrowly defined."

Carey declared that one of his major impressions of the London labor conference was the breadth of the agenda. "It did not confine itself to pure-and-simple trade union questions," he said, "but took up the most far-reaching issues of war and peace before the nations of the world, rising to a full sense of labor's vital interests and responsibilities in community, national and international affairs."

REPORT FROM LONDON to the American people was made via the British Broadcasting Co. and the Blue Network by CIO leaders during the recently concluded World Trade Union Conference. Left to right: CIO Vice-Presidents Joseph Curran, John Green and R. J. Thomas and CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey. They'll meet with delegates from abroad this week in Washington.

Another thing that impressed Carey was the ability of the workers' representatives from all countries to compose differences that often seemed acute, and to arrive at unanimous conclusions.

"I am sure that with sufficient goodwill and assurance of popular support, the United Nations can do as much at San Francisco," he said, "and that labor can help enormously to bring about the unity which should be our first consideration."

Emphasizing the great contribution labor can make, Carey expressed his opinion that "the purely political machinery for dealing with war aggressors is not nearly as important as the machinery to remove the causes of war.

"The chief trouble in Congress may well be with agreements like Bretton Woods that affect economic interests, and American labor will have to use all its influence to see that selfish minorities do not block understandings that are urgently necessary in the general interests of all the people."

Besides Murray and Hillman, the members of the world labor administrative committee expected in Washington include: Sir Walter Citrine and Ebby Edwards, United Kingdom; V. Kuznetsov and M. P. Tarasov, USSR; Louis Saillant and B. Franchon, France; Lombardo Toledano and Angel Cofino, Latin American countries and CTAL; H. T. Liu, China; W. Schevenels, Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, and J. H. Oldenbrook, Intl. Trade Secretariats.

Hot News from Fighting Fronts with a Union Angle

Hot news from the European battlefronts, with a union angle, is dished up by Federated Press' Herbert A. Klein, the only union news agency correspondent attached to the armed forces. Herewith, some of his recent dispatches.

MANNHEIM, Germany—U. S. unionists should approve the important basic protections contained in the official Handbook for Military Government in Gemany, a guide for officers who move in on the heels of combat troops to set up the administration for conquered cities, towns and villages.

One of the first guarantees is that "workers will be given the right to form democratic trade unions and other forms of free economic association." This directive is added: "In view of the years of Nazi indoctrination of workers and suppression of freedom of action and thought, it will be necessary to exercise close supervision over the development of trade unions and collective bargaining to assure that they will not be used for the selection of Nazi officials as laborers enabling the continuation of Nazi organizations under new names."

The administrative officers are also instructed to issue proclamations immediately dissolving all Nazi organizations including the fraudulent Labor Front, the organization which all German workers were forced to join under the leadership of one of Adolf Hitler's closest henchmen, the drunkard, Dr. Robert Ley.

Like brave new music in the hate-ridden Nazi land is a clause abolishing all discrimination based on race, creed or color.

ROTTEN CORE OF FASCISM

The rotten core of German fascism is rapidly falling apart, leaving a smell worse than that of the hundreds of dead horses scattered through the surrounding hills, slain while the retreating Nazis were trying to use them to pull their equipment away. In its death throes, German fascism looks even more horrible than the twisted corpses of the Nazi soldiers I saw lying along the east bank of the Rhine, no longer wondering "What would the Fuehrer say to that." They had found out.

* * *

Heidelberg, Germany — Heidelberg and dueling fit together like peaches and cream, liver and onions, coffee and doughnuts.

There was plenty of dueling along Hitler's superhighway connecting captured Mannheim with Heidelberg—only it was real dueling between Nazi tiger tanks withdrawing toward Heidelberg and American self-propelled artillery riding Detroit-built tank chassis, depending for range information on the indispensable Piper Cub spotter planes weaving overhead.

It was there I encountered a fellow member of the CIO Newspaper Guild doing a bang-up Army job—Lt. Jacob Harris, prewar Associated Press news photographer in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, now with the oldest Signal Corps photo unit overseas.

HERBERT KLEIN

Amidst whanging artillery fire, Harris went into action with his Graphic, grabbing as many pictures as possible of the boys in the Yank armored column tangling with the formidable Tigers before proceeding deeper into Germany.

CLEANED OUT SNIPERS

Meanwhile, within Friedrichsfeld just below us, firing proceeded as the Yanks bearing "grease gun" automatic rifles sought to clean out stubborn sniper nests. By the time we returned to Mannheim from a point just outside Heidelberg, scores of German prisoners of war were being marched off with their hands over their heads.

They glumly surveyed the endless line of American armored vehicles and trucks stretching back to Mannheim and beyond over the pontoon bridges straddling the Neckar and Rhine rivers.

Early in his dictatorship, Hitler launched a highly ballyhooed construction program of two-lane superhighways known as the Reich's Autobahnen. Ostensibly the program was to make work for the unemployed and facilitate auto travel for the masses, but actually the roads were used for Hitler's military machines speeding across German boundary lines on the ruthless path of conquest.

* * *

Mannheim, Germany—While the 71st infantry regiment completed occupation of this important southern German city, I was reminded forcibly of a slogan emblazoned on U. S. billboards: Free Labor Will Win.

For it's the spirit behind that slogan which is triumphing over the servile Germans and their formerly invincible state, now crumbling under epic blows as the 7th Army and other Allied forces plunge eastward bent less on territorial gain than on destroying the armed strength of the enemy.

Free labor is winning—both home front labor whose products are pouring in an endless steel flood across the Rhine and beyond, and the workers in uniform, which is what most GIs are. They're hard workers day and night, they're heroes too, but first and foremost, they're uniformed civilians anxious to get this over with as soon as possible and get home again.

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 16 82 April 16, 1945

National Edition

Franklin D. Roosevelt

1882-1945

LABOR has lost a friend.

From the very first in 1932, he was the people's champion. His program meant food and jobs. He faced the greatest economic crisis of our country. Then he faced a troubled world. And Roosevelt's name became a symbol of hope, of freedom to the peoples of the world.

The people of the world have lost a friend. But his program for a victorious peace for "ourselves and our children's children" lives on.

His good wife said to his sons: "He did his job to the end, as he would want you to do." That is a pledge we take.

The Champion Passes, But His Work Goes On

No other American has meant so much to so many as President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

It was his greatness to sense the innermost feelings of ordinary folks, to share their hatred of oppression and misery, and to become the living, fighting expression of their hopes and aspirations.

So he won the personal devotion of millions of Americans who never knew him personally.

He was "The Champ" to them, not only because of his election victories, but more because he was the people's champion.

To the working people, in particular, Roosevelt was "their man," just as he was "that man" to the selfish and reactionary who sought to bar the path of social progress.

The record of his New Deal has been written in greater health, happiness, security and opportunity for the less privileged majority.

It gave the labor movement its chance to grow to its present strength, and included countless measures to advance the economic welfare and democratic rights of the common people.

But Roosevelt became the people's champion in an even broader sense, when the dark clouds of fascist aggression appeared on the horizon. His was among the first voices to warn of their danger to America. He became the builder of national unity for winning the war—the champion of the whole American people.

Roosevelt's greatness also went beyond national limits. Just as he built national unity, he also built the unity of the United Nations.

Along with Churchill and Stalin, he was the outstanding leader of the great coalition of all the freedom-loving peoples. With them he devised its victorious strategy.

As a world leader, Roosevelt looked far ahead. He had the vision and statesmanship to work for the continuing unity of the United Nations after the war, to bring lasting peace and growing prosperity to the world.

He died on the eve of the most far-reaching triumph of his triumphant career, the San Francisco conference to establish a united world organization.

So Roosevelt's death is felt as a deep personal tragedy not only by the working and common people whose cause he championed, but by all Americans; and not only by all Americans, but also by countless millions of people in all countries.

But it seems wrong to speak of Roosevelt in the past tense. For while the man has died, as all men must, his name will live through the ages; and what his name stands for is as alive and growing as it ever was.

In fact, Roosevelt's great work has just begun. It will be carried on by President Harry S. Truman and his administration, by the Congress and armed forces of the United States, by our representatives at San Francisco, and by the United Nations.

But most of all, Roosevelt's work must and will be carried on by the people of the United States, by ourselves and our neighbors, and by folks like us in every country of the world.

The CIO, proud of its long and active support of Roosevelt's ideals and policies, will be in the forefront of those who honor this great champion by carrying on his work.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

ONCE upon a time there was a bird called the dodo. He was rather plump and clumsy and—well, a bit lazy mentally.

But the dodo did have definite ideas on one subject. He believed a dodo should always behave like a dodo—a pure and simple dodo—and never venture out of his element.

So, while the dodo waddled like a duck, he considered it most undodo-like to swim like a duck.

Another maxim of the dodo was that dodo wings were meant to flap but not to fly with.

Each generation of dodoes was taught that the good dodo should stick to his waddle—and that to try to swim or fly would be to go "beyond the legitimate functions of dodo-dom."

So the dodo never developed web feet to swim with or real wings to fly with.

The beasts of prey who liked dodo meat thought the dodo's ideas were very sound—they made him so much easier to eat.

And now there aren't any more dodoes.

★ ★ ★

But the dodo's ideas did not become extinct with the dodo.

American unions are constantly lectured on the virtues of the dodo's philosophy—particularly by those who'd like to dig their claws into labor.

And there are even some union leaders who preach pure-and-simple dodo unionism.

One of their favorite maxims is that unions should "keep out of politics."

Political activity may be all right for others, they say, but unionists would be "out of their element."

So there was much squawking from dodo-eaters and labor dodoes when the CIO formed a Political Action Committee and learned to swim in the waters of politics.

★ ★ ★

But even more undodo-like behavior was to follow from the CIO.

Not only did it become active in national affairs, it even tried out its wings in the firmament of world affairs.

It promoted a united conference of world labor, which at once sought to make its voice heard in the councils of the United Nations at San Francisco.

More squawking from dodo leaders of the AFL.

They said, in effect, that the American labor dodo should associate only with dodoes exactly like himself or remain isolated, and particularly that he should never mix with birds of a different hue.

They complained that the CIO was "plunging labor's economic objectives into the stormy sea of world politics."

And they added that for world labor to seek a voice at San Francisco was to go "far beyond the legitimate functions of trade unions."

★ ★ ★

Unlike the ancient dodo, the labor movements represented at the Washington world labor meeting have shown a capacity to survive in the most bitter struggle for existence.

The French unions did not let the Nazis eat them up on account of any dodo-ideas of "eschewing politics," or sticking to "economic objectives" and "legitimate union functions."

They went underground, united with every other group that wanted to fight the Nazis, and played the most active political part in national liberation.

The Soviet unions similarly did not have any dodo notions of "limited functions" when the Nazi hordes overran their country.

They became a leading and integral part of a great people's movement of resistance, fighting and producing to the limits of human endurance.

So too with British labor, which went so far beyond pure-and-simpledom into politics and national affairs as to become part of a government of war unity.

★ ★ ★

In the United States, the CIO—and the AFL too, for that matter—did not react like the dodo to our country's (and labor's) struggle for existence.

The unions found they were capable of many new functions in mobilizing their members for every kind of war activity and playing an active part in national affairs.

Now that victory is in sight, and planning for world peace and prosperity is on the agenda, American unionists won't take kindly to the idea that unions should only waddle like a dodo, and not go near the water or spread their wings.

The CIO, at any rate, is determined to play its full part, along with the rest of world labor, in bringing about world conditions in which both labor and our country can survive and prosper.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 April 16, 1945 No. 16

CIO Board Action

Annual Wage, PAC Drives Get Green Light

The CIO Executive Board this week voted unanimous support for the new labor-management charter, for a new outline of CIO-PAC activities pointing to the 1946 elections, and for an all-out educational drive on the guaranteed annual wage. The Board met in Washington.

Point one of the political action outline, adopted by the Board on recommendation of the PAC top committee, calls for PAC's to be set up in each state and city CIO council.

"These committees shall be the agencies of the CIO to carry out its program of political education and political action both among the membership of the CIO, and, in cooperation with other progressive community groups and organizations, among all the people of their communities," the Board stated.

Action on the annual wage program called for a special CIO research committee, appointed by Pres. Murray, to work with President Roosevelt's special group set up to study the question last month.

"The purpose of this committee will be to assist the several international unions in the preparation of the necessary data for submission to the Presidential Committee, and also to prepare a special CIO study which will clearly set forth the CIO position on annual wages," the Board said.

All CIO affiliates will be called on to supply this special committee with facts and figures on their industry in relation to annual wage possibilities, and will work with the CIO Research Dept.

HAIL NEW CHARTER

In endorsing the labor-management charter signed by the CIO, the AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the Board said:

"The CIO Executive Board wholeheartedly approves this charter and authorizes President Murray and the other CIO representatives to serve on the national committee which is to be established under this charter to participate in its work and seek to accomplish a full implementation of the principles set forth in the charter."

The Board, which met one day before the Administration Committee of the World Labor Conference, met Helen Blanchard, newly hired Director of Organization for the CIO Women's Auxiliaries and adviser to CIO Organization Director Haywood on organization of women in the CIO.

Following the instruction to CIO councils to set up state and community political action committees, the Board endorsed plans to:

1. Appoint at least one person from each international to keep in touch with the top PAC and direct the work of local PAC's within the international.

2. Conduct a drive for liberalization of voting laws and regulations in the 48 states and secure maximum registration, working with other progressive groups.

3. Center immediate activity on such issues as Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, extension of social security, full employment, 65c wage floor, and others as they come up.

4. Organize a series of regional meetings during May and June to bring these plans and programs up to the attention of all CIO members.

In addition, the Board endorsed plans for a series of pamphlets, to be issued monthly, and distributed for a yearly subscription of 50c. A CIO committee, to be appointed by President Murray, will supervise content and preparation of the pamphlets.

On finances, the Board approved a plan to raise $250,000 from CIO union treasuries, pro-rated among the internationals. A drive for votuntary contributions from CIO members and their friends will also be undertaken.

World Union Heads Honored at Banquet

Washington's swank Statler hotel had a new kind of dinner guest this week when Pres. Murray and the CIO acted as hosts to labor leaders from once occupied enemy countries of Europe, from Britain, from the Soviet Union, and from Latin-America, mixed in with high U. S. government officials and big-wig politicos.

The dinner, which had James B. Carey as master of ceremonies, was the first affair held for the Administration Committee of the London World Labor Conference, meeting now in Washington to work out a draft constitution for the new world labor federation born out of the London meeting.

Present from allied countries were such men as Ebby Edwards, vice-chairman of the British Trades Union Congress; Louis Saillant, secretary of the French Confederation of Labor (CGT); M. P. Tarasov, of the Soviet Council of Trade Unions; Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin-American Confederation (CTAL), and Walter Schevenels of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions.

On the U. S. government side were such figures as Secretary of Labor Perkins, Attorney-General Biddle, Supreme Court Justices Rutledge and Reed, Under-Secretary of War Patterson and Under-Secretary of Navy Bard, Postmaster General Walker and various Senators and Representatives.

"The aims of the World Labor Conference are to build a durable peace, to prevent aggression of all kinds, and to help build the brotherhood of man," Murray said in a short speech at the dinner.

"This great world labor movement was created out of the needs of the time. Its aspirations are those of the average citizen. The CIO is fully prepared to devote its full energies to the attainment of those goals."

Carey, who introduced the trade union speakers, spoke of the work of each one in helping to make the London conference a success, and pointed out that the three different languages spoken there were no handicap to full understanding.

One small incident almost occurred at the beginning of the dinner when William Green started for the CIO banquet room under the impression that an AFL dinner was being held there. Murray set him on the right track, over to another hotel.

Get your copy of CIO's newest pamphlet, "Everybody's Business," which tells in simple, graphic form how Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco will work for peace and security. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., Washington 6, D. C. 5c each; 100 for $4.50, 500 for $17.50; 1,000 for $32.50.

CIO Radio Roundup

Next CIO radio show will deal with Dumbarton Oaks, and the importance of the agreement reached there to the peace of the world. Time: 6:45 p.m. EWT Saturday, April 21, Blue Network stations.

* * *

The CIO Textile Workers believe that labor isn't getting the break it deserves over the air. In announcing an Easter broadcast carried over four New Jersey and one Pennsylvania stations and featuring Vice-Pres. George Baldanzi, TWU Regional Director Sol Stetin said recently:

"In spite of the cost we are going out in a big way for radio programs to counteract the subtle propaganda of anti-labor forces. We shall be able to draw public opinion to the side of the working man and strengthen our democratic faith by continuous and effective radio broadcasts."

* * *

Summer radio courses will be offered by the Universities of Minnesota and California and Western Reserve University. For details, write them, or the Federal Radio Education Committee, U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

SECRETARY-TREASURERS BUYERS' GUIDE

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
(Celluloid or Litho-Metal)
Convention Badges
•
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps
Emblems
•
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases
Bill Folds
•
All Articles Bear the Union Label
231 SO. WELLS ST. CHICAGO
Phone: Webster 4104 ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 566 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

Vets' Seniority—Labor's Position

The CIO and the AFL in their letter to Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines call for a reinterpretation of Section 8 of the Selective Service Act, with these objectives in mind:

1. Restoration of a veteran to his old job with additional seniority equal month for month to the time in service.

2. Granting a veteran who never worked before in the plant seniority equal month for month to the time he spent in the service, after he serves a probationary period.

3. Guarantee that a wounded veteran who loses his statutory re-employment protection should be given another job he can do and should be guaranteed wages paid an able-bodied worker doing similar work.

The Railway Labor Organizations would grant seniority equal month for month for time in service to a veteran returning to his old job, but not to a veteran who never worked on the railroad before.

The rail group opposed unearned seniority, and pointed out that public safety demands experience, and that their half-century-old seniority system has been upheld by the courts in many decisions.

The joint proposals for the interpretation of Section 8 are:

1. A veteran is not to be considered a temporary employe if at the time he entered the service he had acquired seniority rights, or the job he left or similar jobs still exist upon his discharge from service or from hospitalization within one year after his discharge.

2. Satisfactory military service as defined by the interpretation is to exclude only those who were dishonorably discharged, the armed services being asked to discontinue issuance of "intermediate" type discharges, which are neither honorable nor dishonorable.

3. Restoration of a veteran to his old job to include all job rights he would have had if he had remained on the job.

4. In case a veteran's old job or a similar one is not available, he should be eligible to have any other job he can claim in accordance with the seniority system, or—if there is no seniority system—to any job he is qualified to perform to which he in justice has a seniority right.

5. If the employer because of changed circumstances cannot hire the veteran in 90 days, the law is to be understood to protect the veteran's rights for a year to any job he can claim under the seniority system, or—in the absence of a seniority system—to any job he can claim to which he has seniority in justice.

6. A veteran with service-connected disabilities is to be given any job in the plant which he can perform and for which he has seniority under a seniority system or in justice.

7. The 90-day period to reapply for an old job is to be interpreted, in the case of a veteran who was transferred to the Enlisted Reserve Corps to enter an essential job, to mean 90 days after he is released from that job.

8. The veteran's rights are to be subject to his conformity to all reasonable conditions of employment to which he would have been required to conform had he remained continuously on the job.

Name Labor-Vet Job Group

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, U. S. Veterans' Administrator, apparently does not believe all the anti-labor news he reads in the papers.

Following a series of amicable meetings between the CIO Veterans' Committee and veterans' organizations to plan jobs for all, the daily press has been screaming that organized labor and the ex-servicemen's groups aren't speaking anymore.

General Hines apparently takes all these stories with a grain of salt because this week he named a committee to continue the discussions as CIO, AFL and Rail Labor organizations had recommended.

The committee so far consists of Ted F. Silvey, chairman, CIO Reconversion Committee; Robert Watt, AFL; Julius G. Luhrsen, Railway Labor Executives Assn., and Omar B. Ketchum, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

TO NAME OTHERS

General Hines also is expected to name representatives from the Disabled American Veterans, American Legion, Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, the railroads and interested government agencies.

The CIO Veterans' Committee, headed by Clinton S. Golden and including CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, had participated in the American Legion employment conference, the first time that the largest U. S. veterans' organization met with labor representatives in public to discuss jobs for all.

The CIO has been working with VFW for more than a year on seniority and other problems.

CIO, AFL and Rail Labor organizations at the Legion conference called for reinterpretation of Selective Service Board Local Board Memorandum No. 190-A after Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, attempted to palm off the memorandum as part of the Selective Service Act.

CIO's position as outlined by Golden, is:

"Local Board Memorandum 190-A is incompatible with the intent of Congress, with the efficent protection to the greatest portion of veterans, with the efficient and orderly operation of our economy during the transition from war to peace, and with equity as among veterans and as between veterans and non-veterans."

NMU Men Learn

Soviet Kids Bear Scars of Sevastopol

By LOUIS OGULL

"Long live our American Allies!"

So chanted class after class of Russian children in a renovated school in Sevastopol as visiting CIO merchant seamen were led on a tour of inspection.

The seamen, members of the National Maritime Union, told the story of their trip to the historic Black Sea port in an interview at NMU headquarters in New York last Tuesday. Their ship, the SS William Blount, had delivered a cargo vital to the success of the recent Yalta Conference. It was the first Allied vessel to pass through the Dardanelles and the Bosphorous in more than four years, and it was the first American vessel to anchor in Sevastopol in 22 years.

Military secrecy shrouds the cargo it carried. However, Captain Robert M. Morris, in command of a task unit of the U. S. Eighth Fleet, issued letters of commendation to the entire ship's personnel for having "materially contributed to the success of the U. S. delegation and the entire conference."

The deep scars of battle were everywhere visible in Sevastopol. They were most poignantly apparent among the nearly 500 school children visited by some of the seamen. Many had but one eye, others carried crutches—most of them had been made orphans by the war. But these youngsters, ranging in age from 4 to 15, smiled and sang happily throughout the visit.

"Please carry our greetings to the school children of America," they urged. The crew members plan to do so through the Teachers Union in New York. They intend to tell also how this Sevastopol school had been turned into a concentration camp during the Nazi occupation and how the present dining hall had been used as a Nazi torture chamber.

AID TO THE YALTA PARLEY was line-of-duty action for these NMU members, some of whom had participated in the D-Day invasion, have been torpedoed, or have taken the dangerous Murmansk run. Left to right: Jerome Marshall, Philadelphia; Pedro Rodriguez, Key West; Fred Hernandez and David Greenberg, New York City.

Action photos from Europe and the Pacific show how U. S. fighting men use the

Studebaker Weasel

ABOVE—This Weasel is climbing an embankment somewhere in France, as troops of the U. S. 9th Army pursued the retreating Nazis. The Weasel is geared to negotiate almost impossible grades.

AT LEFT—Mortar shells are being put aboard a Weasel in a western European combat area at a platoon ammunition dump only 800 yards behind the front lines.

BELOW—Here's a Weasel in the water, towing rubber rafts filled with supplies in the Bougainville campaign. This new "Champion" in warfare proved valuable also on Iwo Jima and in the Philippines.

THIS surprise vehicle of the war, the Studebaker Weasel, travels swiftly and stealthily on broad, flexible, rubber-padded tracks. Sure-footed on sand, snow, mud or swamp, where many other vehicles bog down, it also takes to deep water like a boat, when necessary. Thousands of Weasels are now streaming off the Studebaker production lines. Designed by Studebaker engineers, this versatile personnel and cargo carrier is powered by the same 6-cylinder engine that is used in the remarkably economical Studebaker Champion motor car.

Studebaker . . . Peacetime builder of fine cars and trucks

WARTIME BUILDER OF FLYING FORTRESS ENGINES—MILITARY TRUCKS—WEASEL PERSONNEL AND CARGO CARRIERS

News Roundup

Texas House OKs Right-to-Work Bill

Highlighting the need for increased political activity by unions was action this week of Texas and New Jersey legislatures.

In Texas, the House of Representatives jammed through 68-63 Christian American Assn. right - to - work bill, which outlaws the union shop and the checkoff system of collecting dues. The bill now goes to the Senate.

In New Jersey, the Legislature passed a fair employment practice bill that has a good title but makes bad reading. Its chief weakness is that it requires indictment by a grand jury of persons accused of discriminatory employment practices. All strengthening amendments asked by labor, civic and church groups were defeated.

Plea to Stop Coddling Fascists

The U. S. should stop "coddling fascist governments" such as Argentina and Spain and should "open the door" to people on our side, George Baldanzi, secretary of the Free Italy American Labor Council and vice-president of the CIO Textile Workers, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee this week.

Baldanzi, with Council President Joseph Catalanotti, a vice-president of the CIO Clothing Workers, appeared with a large group to ask for early hearings on Rep. Marcantonio's (ALP N. Y.) bill (HJ Res 99) to make Italy a full member of the United Nations rather than a "co-belligerent."

"If we do not permit peoples who have shown their desire to atone for their errors and to contribute to the common cause, to participate fully with us, then we are sending them back into the arms of those from whom we came to liberate them," Baldanzi pointed out.

"Leggo of me and jump, Kelsey! I told you a hundred times that parachute is UNION-MADE!"

Threat to Democracy

State anti-labor laws such as that recently passed in Alabama with Christian American Assn. sponsorship are part of a drive to "sterilize the exercise of rights which we are convinced are vital to the national interest." That was what CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman told the Supreme Court this week in oral argument.

Pointing out that these laws spring up in states that are being newly industralized, and that they come out of inexperience and fear of labor unions, he added:

"The states in which this legislation has emerged have assummed and anticipated evils which have not moved more industralized states to apply similar sanctions."

L. A. Election Victory

A broad coalition of CIO and progressive business forces this week helped re-elect Mayor Fletcher Bowron, Democrat, of Los Angeles. In a 13-candidate race, Bowron polled nearly 140,000 votes; the next highest man received 47,000.

Hits Speculation

Pres. R. J. Thomas, of the CIO Auto Workers, this week wrote Fred M. Vinson, Federal director of War Mobilization and Conversion, urging immediate action to halt speculation and inflated pricing of real estate and lands.

Thomas told Vinson that property owners are selling homes and land "at prices so exorbitant as to constitute a serious threat both to wartime rent regulations and to postwar economic stability."

Backs Urban League

Support for the Natl. Urban League's drive for $350,000 to finance its 1945 service expansion program was voiced this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Full Text of CIO Board Resolutions

The following resolutions were unanimously passed at the meeting of the CIO Executive Board, April 12.

Study of Annual Wage Program

WHEREAS, (1) The CIO, in pursuance of its demand for guaranteed annual wages, has secured the appointment of a Presidential Committee to study and formulate a program dealing with the establishment of an annual wage for workers, and

(2) It is essential that full information be supplied this Committee to demonstrate the necessity of adopting guaranteed annual wages as an essential means to achieve full employment.

RESOLVED: The Executive Board of the CIO hereby authorizes the President of the CIO to appoint a Special Research Committee on annual wages to consist of research representatives from the several CIO unions covering industries that present the basic issues involved in this problem, and the national CIO Research Dept.

The purpose of this Committee will be to assist the several international unions in the preparation of the necessary data for submission to the Presidential Committee, and also to prepare a special CIO study which will clearly set forth the CIO position on annual wages.

The national office of the CIO, and the constituent unions, should make available to the Committee all necessary assistance to carry on its work.

All material prepared by the Committee shall be submitted to the Executive Officers of the CIO for prior approval.

CIO Political Action

The Seventh Constitutional Convention of the CIO adopted a resolution on political action in which it continued the CIO Political Action Committee in its present form and as then constituted and directed that the Committee "shall be charged with the task of directing the work of political education and political action of CIO and shall service, advise and coordinate the work of the political action committees of state and city bodies which are the instrumentalities of the political activities of CIO in the field.

The CIO Political Action Committee now makes the following recommendations to the Executive Board for the implementation of this convention resolution:

1. Each state and city industrial union council shall establish a political action committee. These committees shall be the agencies of the CIO to carry out its program of political education and political action both among the membership of CIO, and, in cooperation with other progressive community groups and organizations, among all the people of their communities. They shall be serviced by and work under the general supervision of the CIO Political Action Committee.

2. Each international union shall appoint at least one person to be in charge of political action within such international union to maintain liaison with the CIO Political Action Committee and to have general direction of the work of the political action committees established in the local unions of such international.

3. The political action committees of the state and city industrial union councils, under the direction of the CIO Political Action Committee, in conjunction with the national CIO legislative committee and other appropriate CIO committees and departments, shall inaugurate a broad and intensive campaign within their communities in support of:

(a) The Bretton Woods agreement and H.R. 2211 for the ratification thereof;

(b) The Dumbarton Oaks proposals;

(c) The Wagner-Murray-Dingell Social Security Bill;

(d) The Murray-Thomas Full Employment Bill;

(e) Federal legislation to obtain a 65c minimum wage;

(f) Such other issues as may be determined from time to time.

4. The political action committees of state and city industrial union councils, acting under the general direction of the CIO Political Action Committee shall likewise continue and intensify the work of securing the fullest possible exercise of the right of franchise by organization for a maximum registration and vote and shall promote united action in the political field in collaboration with other organizations of labor, progressive groups, and forward-looking leaders of the two major political parties.

5. The CIO Political Action Committee has prepared a project for the publication of a pamphlet a month for distribution among CIO members at a cost of 50 cents for each series of 12 pamphlets. The subject matter and contents of each pamphlet are to be under the supervision of an editorial committee appointed by the president of the CIO including representatives of international unions and the national office of the CIO. In order to assure the success of this project, it is recommended that the international unions guarantee an aggregate minimum purchase of 250,000 pamphlets per month, by agreement among the internationals to assume proportionate shares of this guarantee.

6. In order to provide funds for the next 12 months for the payment of the administrative expenses of the CIO Political Action Committee and to finance its activities in connection with the issues enumerated in paragraph 3, the international unions shall make contributions from their treasuries to the committee in the aggregate amount of $250,000 pro-rated among such internationals.

7. The CIO Political Action Committee shall formulate a program for voluntary contributions to the committee by individuals and for a drive for such contributions among the members of CIO and their friends, the proceeds arising therefrom to be used to finance the activities of the National CIO Political Action Committee and of the state and city committees in connection with local, state and national primary and election campaigns.

8. A series of regional meetings shall be held during the months of May and June, to be followed by city-wide meetings, for the purpose of bringing the foregoing program to the attention of the membership of CIO, stimulating campaigns on the issues enumerated above and intensifying the work of CIO in the field of political action.

Labor, Industry Charter

WHEREAS, President Murray for the CIO, President William Green for the AFL, and President Eric Johnston for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce have agreed upon a charter for labor and management which furnishes the basis for continuing the national unity, that has proven to be so effective in the successful prosecution of the war, for the postwar period and thereby achieve a vastly expanding economy and creation of unlimited opportunities for every American and assure an enduring world peace; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the CIO Executive Board wholeheartedly approves this charter and authorizes President Murray and the other CIO representatives to serve on the national committee which is to be established under this charter to participate in its work and seek to accomplish a full implementation of the principles set forth in the charter.

United for the

The CIO NEWS caught delegates off

1 "THE OBJECTIVES OF men are pretty much the same wherever you go," declared CIO's President Philip Murray, "and so the common objective of a united labor movement. It is for the attainment and the perfection of the peace; the stopping of the world blood bath, and all the miseries of war that come in its wake."

2 VINCENTE LOMBARDO TOLEDANO represents 4,000,000 workers in 17 countries in the Confederation of Latin American Workers. For them he says: "In Latin America, we have no special point of view. In London we resolved on important matters about the condition of the peace and the postwar problems. Now our purpose is to present to the United Nations meeting in San Francisco our resolutions. This new found unity of the workers of the world is one of the greatest victories of this war. I take great pleasure in saluting the workers of the United States through The CIO NEWS, and my friend, Philip Murray, the President of the CIO."

3 ANGEL COFINO, secretary general of the Electrical Workers Union of Cuba, is among the 13 members of labor's international administrative committee. He represents Cuba's workers, organized into the Confederation of Cuban Workers, with a membership of 600,000. His own electrical union numbers 18,000.

4 SIDNEY HILLMAN TOGETHER with Murray represents the CIO on the administrative committee of thirteen, faced with the task of drafting a constitution. He attended the London conference, declaring: "I am deeply impressed with the oneness of labor's international thinking." Another international labor meeting will be held in Paris.

5 MICHAEL TARASOV REPRES of the Russian trade unions, t Trade Unions of the U.S.S.R. He Russian Brotherhood of Railroad repair of cars, and as a conductor Red Army officer on the "road to ship of the American and the Sovi shed on the battlefield—your soldi Germany. The best and strongest meet in danger and in need. The warmly the workers who sent thei are especially thankful to the sean

A PALL DESCENDED on the spirits of the international d ington this week, as they heard the news of the death full of confidence of victory, concerned with lab or's role and labor's new-found unity, and it was marred only by the pass Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The sessions of the committee of thirteen opened merely passing, and adjourned, honoring his memory.

The statement was signed by Philip Murray and Sidney Sir Walter Citrine and Ebby Edwards of the United Kingdom, chon of France, by Michael P. Tarasov of the USSR, by Vince Cofino of Latin America, by W. Schevenels of th e IFTU, and tional Trade Secretariats. The signers, togeth er with V. Ku of China, who had not yet arrived, composed the committee ference representing 245 delegates from 45 nati ons, as an ad constitution for labor's new organization. This group will p to gain for international labor a consultative voice at the Uni

The statement declared:

"The visiting delegations to this administrative committe leagues their sorrow at the grievous blow that has fallen up and of the whole democratic world. They share too with the the United Nations have been led led so far on the road to vic strength of purpose and clearness of vision as Franklin Delan democracy and freedom are principles calling for the fullest

"Franklin Delano Roosevelt fell in battle for the rights of

8 A MEXICAN, AN American, a Britisher, a R ussian, and a the workingmen throughout the world. They are left dano, Philip Murray, Ebby Edwards, a vice pres ident of the secretary treasurer of the British Federation of Miners, Mich Ebby Edwards together with Sir Walter Citri ne represents the British TUC. "I want Americans to know the marvelou able to stand up, especially in the south due to the bombing First, the aircraft, then the V-1 and the V-2 ca me, but the has been one of real confidence that they were pl aying a part themselves but for the people of the world," said Mr. Edwards guard as they arrived in Washington. Watch for more pictures and interviews next week.

Common Needs of Workingmen

SENTS the 20,000,000 members
e All Union Central Council of is also chairman of the Central Trainmen. He worked on the
His oldest son, aged 23, is a Berlin." He says: "The friend-et people is cemented by blood-ers and ours—against Hitlerite friendships are made when we Soviet people appreciate very r products to our country. We nen and the pilots."

elegates as they arrived in Wash-of President Roosevelt. They were stake in the future, happy with ing of a friend and supporter,

o adopt a statement on Roosevelt's

Hillman from the United States, by by Louis Saillant and Benoit Fra-nte Lombardo Toledano and Angel
J. H. Oldenbroek of the Interna-znetsov of the USSR and T. T. Liu of 13, elected by the London conministrative committee, to draft a ceed to San Francisco in an effort ted Nations conference.

e share with their American col-
the people of the United States,
m the thankfulness and pride that tory by such men of high courage, Roosevelt, to whom the ideals of measure of devotion.

the common man."

Frenchman shake hands uniting o right: Vincente Lombardo Tole-British Trade Union Congress and ael Tarasov and Louis Saillant.
7,600,000 organized members of s way the British people have been which never ceased since 1940.
irit of the people through it all n freedom and peace, not only for

6 BENOIT FRACHON was a turner in the metal industry. His union is the largest in France, 685,000 strong. He lived through five years of illegal existence. He said: "Fascism tried to destroy our unions. In August, 1940, Vichy dissolved the French Confederation of Labor. They permitted unions to continue on a local basis, although under strict police supervision. In effect, they broke off the heads of the union, smashed the center of organization, and attempted to exploit the local organizations for themselves. Labor had to apply for permission to hold a local meeting; had to submit the agenda to the police, and the actual meeting was supervised by the police. We joined the Council of Resistance, and worked underground with revolver in hand."

7 "OUR LIVES WERE full of drama and tragedy. Untold is the story of suffering of France. The French CGT today has 4,680,000 members. I, too, was in France, during the entire occupation by the Nazis.' Louis Saillant was the national leader of the Council of Resistance, a patriotic movement of political parties and trade unions opposed to Naziism. The toll of French labor is heavy. Two million Frenchmen were sent as prisoners of war to Germany—1,000,000 were civilian workers, and 1,000,000 were soldier prisoners. Seven thousand organizers and administrative officers of the French trade-union movement were killed. Eight thousand were deported as political prisoners to concentration camps. Eighty thousand trade unionists from the rank and file were killed.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Peace Plans Shaping Up

Next week (April 25) sees the opening of the United Nations conference in San Francisco.

The meeting will decide how we and our children—and our children's children—shall live in the future.

The question of possible future wars or future peace is not the only issue involved in the San Francisco meeting.

The things that are done there will involve our future jobs, our economic security and our social welfare, as well as the jobs and welfare of the other peoples of the world we live in.

Four members of the U. S. Congress are going to attend—two from each of the major parties. What is the job of the 433 Representatives and the 94 Senators who will stay in Washington? What will they have to do besides wait for the decisions of San Francisco?

And what is the job we as voters have to do while the San Francisco meeting goes on, and after it ends?

The pro-United Nations forces in Congress, and especially in the Senate, where treaties must be ratified, will need all the support they can get from us at home.

The forces in Congress that oppose the United Nations do not conveniently label themselves. Frequently they take refuge behind double-talk of the Vandenberg variety. They usually profess support—with a "yes but," or a string of reservations attached.

The pro-United Nations forces in the Senate do not have the clear two-thirds majority that is required to ratify a treaty in sight. The "yes but" men and the doubtful ones are the key.

Unless a big proportion of these —about 20 out of the total of 96— vote with the 46 pro-United Nations men to ratify the treaty that will come out of San Francisco, the conference will be a failure.

This is our key to action, as President Murray outlined it to us in declaring April "United Nations Month."

Both our Senators and our Representatives should receive letters from every voter while the San Francisco meeting is on—and the volume should increase after its work is over.

The letters should urge active support and votes for the new United Nations Organization that will come out of San Francisco.

They should urge immediate support for the Bretton Woods world trade agreement, now up in the House Banking and Currency Committee and shortly to come up in the Senate.

President Murray summed up the job of every CIO member when he said:

"American labor, because it has always been in the forefront in the fight against fascism, has a great responsibility to see that the fight stays won, to educate itself on the basic principles of our foreign policy and then to join with other patriotic citizens to impress upon Congress the will of the American people."

Congressmen to San Francisco

Two Senators and two Representatives are going to attend the San Francisco United Nations conference, which opens April 25. They will be part of the official U. S. delegation, taking a full part in all discussion and in helping to formulate U. S. policy.

They are: Senator Tom Connally (D. Tex.), chairman if the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R. Mich.), ranking GOP Committee member; Rep. Sol Bloom (D. N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, and Rep. Charles A. Eaton (R. N. J.), ranking GOP Committee member.

They'll be leaving with the rest of the U. S. official delegation this week. Letters and messages addressed to them at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco will reach them.

Write to these four men and to your own Senators, urging full support for the new world organization to be worked out at San Francisco.

Jobs In The 'Woods'

Currently the newspapers—especially the Roy Howard chain—are pretending that there's a great mystery about the Bretton Woods world trade agreement that no layman can hope to understand.

Actually Bretton Woods is easy to understand, when we look at it in terms of postwar jobs. Through the operation of this agreement, CIO President Murray estimates, the U. S. can secure about 5,000,000 jobs in export trades. Here's the breakdown that one CIO union, the United Auto Workers, has worked out in its latest Research Report.

According to the UAW, which cites U. S. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau as authority, the Bretton Woods agreement means at least a market for 1,000,000 cars a year, plus other Detroit industrial products.

This means 100,000 jobs for Detroit workers, the UAW Research Report estimates. And that's only a starter —if the Bretton Woods agreement is ratified by Congress.

The Bretton Woods bill (HR 2211), is sitting in the House Banking and Currency Committee. Have you written your Congressman to get it out on the floor and passed?

'Everybody's Business'

"Everybody's Business," CIO's new 20-page pamphlet explaining Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods, is off the press.

It's an illustrated, two color job that sells for five cents a copy, $4.50 per 100, $17.50 for 500.

Paper is scarce, and the first run had to be held down. Order now from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Missouri Valley (S 555)	Sets up MVA (like TVA) to control floods, bring new industries, jobs and farms to nine states.	Hearings set for April 16 in Senate Commerce Committee. CIO to testify.	Write your Senators to support.
Price Control (SJ Res 30)	Renews Price Control Act, enforcement agency.	Reported out of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (Sen. Wagner, D., N. Y., Chmm.) May reach floor before House Committee hearings.	Write Senators and Representatives to renew, with repeal of Bankhead, Taft and Taber riders that now hamper price control and enforcement.
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Promotes world trade; prevents economic aggressions; means jobs for U. S. workers, markets for industry and farms.	Bogged down by GOP in House Banking and Currency Committee; unfavorable report threatened.	Urge your Representative to support without amendments, which would throw entire agreement open again, take months to be passed on by other nations.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency with enforcement powers.	HR 2232 is still stalled in House Rules Committee; filibuster shaping up in Senate against S 101	Wire Rules Committee Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) for rule to get HR 2232 on House floor; write your two Senators to oppose threatened filibuster.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to millions in polltax states.	Discharge Petition No. 1 being circulated to get HR 7 out of House Rules Committee; 218 signers needed, 173 in.	Ask your Representative to sign DP 1 if he hasn't done so; vote for HR 7 on floor.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up— Issues to Watch

MISSOURI VALLEY: Hearings begin April 16 on S 555, the bill to create a Missouri Valley Authority to do the same thing for nine Missouri River states that TVA did for the Tennessee area.

The hearings are set first in the Senate Commerce Committee. After that the bill goes to Senate Irrigation and Reclamation and then to Senate Agriculture.

Getting the bill out on the Senate floor will take a long, tough campaign. At stake are 1,500,000 man-years of work, new industries for nine states, new farm land for thousands of veterans, new life for millions of farmers and good customers for businessmen.

Start writing your Senators now urging support for S 555.

* * *

FEPC: A big push is needed to get the bi-partisan bill (S 101, HR 2232) for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee out of the House Rules Committee, where its bottled up.

Writing to all CIO affiliates on the need for a new drive for FEPC, Legislative Director Nathan Cowan said this week:

"Full employment and fair employment are inseparable. The right to compete for jobs on an equal footing is a basic one, inherent in our constitution.

"No special privilege is provided the Negro or any other minority group by creating a permanent FEPC . . . Oppression of any minority directly threatens the security of all of us.

"The CIO stands four-square behind the establishment of a permanent FEPC, with power to issue orders enforceable through the courts, as our best guarantees against this threat."

Have you written?

* * *

FULL EMPLOYMENT: Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings on the Full Employment Bill (S 380) will start in a few weeks, after the Committee is through with the Bretton Woods bill (S 540).

* * *

EMIC: CIO is working to get the Emergency Maternity and Infant Care program that helps GI wives and babies extended and improved to cover veterans families and other GI groups now excluded.

The bill to renew EMIC and to provide funds will be ready April 16. Watch the Guide for further information.

EMIC has helped 600,000 GI families. Its morale value is incalculable.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

UAW Reg. Dir. Paul E. Miley, Cleveland, reports: Workers at the American Frog and Switch Co., Hamilton, Ohio, voted for the CIO. Intl. Rep. Bernard Wilberding was in charge of the drive and will start negotiations for a contract immediately.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Org. Dir., IUM&SWA, reports: Beth-Fairfield Yard, Baltimore, Md., employees voted 98% for CIO. Schoell Metal Crafts, Miami, Fla., Machinists & Foundry Workers Division of IUM-& SWA won by 56% over no union. At Wilmington Welding & Boiler Works Repair Yd. & Shops, Wilmington, Calif., CIO won by 64% over AFL and no union. At Florida Shipbuilding Corp., Ojus, Fla., IUM-SWA won by 62% over no union. A card check at Eastern Refrigerator Co., sub-contractors, Jacksonville, Fla., showed 14 out of 14 workers for the CIO.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Wm. Mayo, South Bend, Ind., reports: Michigan Paper Co., Plainwell, Mich., CIO 114, no union 83. PWOC Field Rep. Charles Mitchell and Neil Chesebro conducted this election.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., reports: North Brothers, Philadelphia, UERMWA-CIO 144, Yankee Tool Assn. 60, against 3.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. A. R. Hardesty, Dallas, Texas, advises: Southwest Tablet Manufacturing Co., Dallas, CIO 79, against 16. CIO Field Rep. A. M. Carter directed this campaign.

Taxicab drivers employed by the National Transportation Co., (Parmelee Cab System) voted 1102 to 1004 in favor of the CIO Transport Workers to represent them as bargaining agent. The election was ordered by the Board after the union argued successfully for reconsideration of cicumstances of an earlier poll last August, which the union lost by a vote of 1017 to 1001.

Acting CIO Reg. Dir. R. W. Starnes, New Orleans, advises that the United Press Bureau staff members in New Orleans are now members of the CIO Newspaper Guild. They were signed up by CIO Pub. Rela. Rep. Edward Stone. This group will automatically come under a national agreement.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Bonacci of Utah, advises: Negotiations of a new wage agreement for the CIO Bartenders of Rock Springs, Wyo., have been completed and the new wage scale has been approved, effective as of April 1, 1945. He also advises that organization has been completed among the employes of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. They have applied for a charter to the CIO Rubber Workers. They are now engaged in negotiations for a new wage agreement.

A. H. Esposito, President, PJ&NWA, reports: Shields Co., Attleboro, Mass., CIO 48, against 30. Intl. Rep. John Galluccio and Alfred Bregnard were in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Campaign, advises: Cities Service, Pettys Island Refinery, CIO 138, against 26. Botckeler Associates, Trenton, Mich., CIO 82, against 57.

Harry E. Jones, CIO Field Rep. reports: Wm. H. Frear Co., Inc., Troy, N. Y., CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, 92, against 61.

CIO Reg. Dir. James Ritchies, St. Louis, reports: C. Nelson Manufacturing Co., St. Louis, UERMWA-CIO has been certified at this plant. Rep. Logedon of the UE was in charge. An election at Robertson Aircraft Corp., St. Louis, gave CIO 19, AFL 0.

WORLD LABOR MEET

Delegates from Latin-America, Great Britain, France, Russia and other countries representing the World Trade Union Conference are now assembled in Washington preparing the proposed constitution which will be submitted to the various trade union movements in the countries for suggestions to be made at the conference which is expected to be held in Paris sometime in September. Delegates will proceed from Washington, D. C., to San Francisco to be on hand at the United Nations meeting.

As Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister of Production, Great Britain, said in his address to the delegates attending the World Trade Union Conference in London, "We have everything to gain from a free Press, free speech and free exchange of all the great cultural developments between the various countries, so that wherever men think and work for the benefit of humanity the results of their efforts are open and free to all . . .

"I know of no other body in the world, diverse as we are in colour race, creed and nationality, where men stick together as the working people have got to do."

Shipyard Union Offers Annual Wage Program

A comprehensive plan for a guaranteed annual wage for shipbuilding and ship repair workers, based upon a $3,000 wage for standard skilled mechanics with other groups paid in proportion, was adopted last week by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers' general executive board.

Also adopted was a proposal calling for reduction of the workweek from the present 48 hours to 40 and later to 35 hours, as soon as practicable.

The annual wage plan, announced by the union's president, John Green, recommended:

1. Establishment of a subcommittee of the War Production Board's Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee with labor, management and government equally represented, which would meet before midsummer to institute such a plan.

2. A standard annual wage pattern set at $3,000 for first class mechanics on a 35-hour week basis, with rates for other classifications in proportion.

3. Severance pay for all workers permanently laid off, equivalent to 8 per cent of their annual earnnigs up to a maximum of five years' benefits.

4. A planned construction program with allocation of new construction and repairs to maintain a constant level of employment.

5. A guaranteed annual wage insurance plan to provide for furloughed workers, through a fund raised by a 3 per cent payroll tax paid by employers until a reserve fund of $150,000,000 is established. The fund would be used to pay furloughed workers the difference between state unemployment insurance and the guaranteed annual wage.

6. A merit rating system aimed to encourage continuity of employment, under which employers would be freed from further contributions to the wage insurance fund after their reserve is established, for so long as they maintain full employment.

The proposal for establishment of a 35-hour week calls for a study of future needs in naval and merchant ship construction; rescinding of current Navy cutback orders; necessary cutbacks to be made in a way that will preserve a sound and healthy postwar industry and on a basis of ships, not yards; and reduction in weekly working hours from 48 to 40, then to 35, with the same take-home pay as for a 48-hour week, plus any increase permitted by revision of the Little Steel formula.

PWOC Appeals To FDR In Wage Case

The standard of living of some 200,000 workers in the meat packing industry has fallen so low, due to rising prices and curtailment of production that "they are unable to provide themselves and their families with the bare necessities of life," Pres. Lewis J. Clark, of the CIO United Packinghouse Workers, told Pres. Roosevelt last week, in an appeal for immediate consideration of the union's wage case.

Speaking as the president of a union representing 165,000 workers in the slaughtering and meat packing industry, Clark said in his letter to the President that the union's members have broken all previous production records and have not had a major strike since Pearl Harbor.

"I am appealing to you to appoint someone to act for you in considering this emergency and to immediately bring together the members of the War Labor Board, Director of Economic Stabilization and the Administrator of the OPA to work out some adjustment," the letter stated.

A circular sent with the letter states that although profits of the packers during 1941 to 1944 were higher than ever before, the workers in the industry have not shared in these profits by any increases.

Textile Pay Boost Goes Into Effect

Wage adjustments ordered by the War Labor Board in the CIO Textile Workers Union case involving 50,000 workers employed by 54 textile companies are to be put into effect immediately by those companies which have not requested price relief, according to a WLB resolution passed last week.

The Board's order called for a 55-cent hourly minimum rate; a 5-cent hourly increase in all rates above 50 cents an hour; a premium of 5 cents an hour for third-shift work in the southern cases, and one week's paid vacation for one year's service for employes in 11 southern companies where vacations were at issue. Five cents an hour retroactive to Oct 1, 1944, is to be paid to all employes unless the parties agree otherwise.

The companies and the CIO union were also directed to negotiate corrected wage-rate structures, using certain key rates as guide posts. The new wage structure must be submitted to the Board for approval.

Taxi Drivers Vote for CIO

Parmelee taxi drivers in New York City voted 1,102 to 1,004 for the CIO Transport Workers Union in an election conducted last week by the Labor Relations Board. Ballots were cast by 2,196 of the 2,459 drivers eligible to vote.

Make Your Family History A Success Story

Take the steps necessary to make it a tale of "Security and Safety."

A breadwinner's wife and children rightfully look to him for protection against want and hardship should they be deprived of his income. This he can provide for them by insuring his life for enough to see them through if he fails to survive them.

He can go even further than that by utilizing this sound protection agency for his own benefit should he live.

Ask the Prudential Man To Suggest a Program

THE PRUDENTIAL HAS THE STRENGTH OF GIBRALTAR

The PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA
A mutual life insurance company
HOME OFFICE NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

Annual Wage Is Sound Economics, Says Murray

Labor's case for a guaranteed annual wage was presented to the public in an article by CIO Pres. Philip Murray appearing April 8 in the New York Times Sunday Magazine section.

"In one way or another every postwar plan must direct its main objective toward the maintenance of the family life; that is, to make employment available for those able and willing to work," Murray stated. "There can be no dignity as a human person without the right to an opportunity to make a decent living for one's self and one's family.

"When any man willing to work is denied this right, he is no longer treated as the moral equal of his fellows. The individual feels like a social outcast; the unemployed feel they are not wanted.

"Only the work and responsibility that go with a useful job can make people feel that they are a part of their community, and not outcasts beyond its pale."

Taking up the problem of how full employment can be achieved, Murray declared that it "will not come by itself. Hard thinking, bold planning and the unselfish cooperation of all groups are essential to its achievement."

CRUX OF CASE

After outlining the background for the reasoning which prompted his union, the CIO United Steelworkers, to incorporate the guaranteed minimum annual wage in its demands, Murray criticized the social wastefulness of unemployment and the costliness of part-time operations, using the steel industry as an example and then presented the crux of the union's stand.

"Reduced to a simple formula the guaranteed annual wage as requested by the (steel) union, suggests that management be required to give workers 40 hours' work each week for 52 weeks—arriving at a figure of 2,080 hours. That figure of 2,080 hours would be multiplied by whatever is the individual's hourly rate.

"For each week during the life of the contract that the employe, for reasons beyond his control, does not receive a sum equal to this minimum amount, the company shall make up the difference."

STEEL INDUSTRY WRONG

It was not surprising, Murray said, to have the steel industry stamp the guaranteed annual wage as "impractical and illusory." It said the same thing about the 8-hour day, the 40-hour week and workmen's compensation. Steel industry spokesmen were wrong then and are wrong again about the annual wage, he declared.

As an illustration of its sound economic basis, Murray cited the "Minnesota experiment" of George A. Hormel & Co., meat packers of Austin. A contract signed between the company and the CIO Packinghouse workers which guarantees the workers 52 equal pay checks a year has worked effectively since 1940, in spite of the fact that the slaughtering and meat packing industry as a whole leads all the major industries of the country in labor turnover.

On a nationwide basis, idle men competing for the jobs of men who have work is a threat to the economic stability of the nation, Murray said. "It is axiomatic that where workers are assured full employment and economic security they furnish the backbone for the mass purchasing power so essential for the continued turning of the wheels of industry."

In its case before the War Labor Board, Murray explained, the Steelworkers contended "that the steel industry is in a perculiarly fortunate position whereby it can actually plan its operations so that it can produce a substantial percentage of the products for anticipated sales rather than have to wait to produce on the basis of available orders."

Greedy Meat Packers Scream for More Profits

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

It is hard to think of any charges that could come with worse grace from reactionary members of Congress at the present Senate food hearings than their attacks on OPA for failing to end the black market.

They are the very people who, ever since OPA began, have stood in the way of adequate appropriations. The result is that OPA today has 33,200 enforcement officers, or an average of only one for each county in the country.

Until its enforcement staff is doubled or tripled OPA can't do anything about a lot of violations it knows about.

OPA maintains that there has been terrific exaggeration at the hearings of the extent of the black market in meat, although they know it's a real menace.

HEARINGS PUT-UP JOB

It seems fairly clear to the interested consumer that the hearings are a put-up job. They were engineered by the meat packers, whose purpose is not to get more enforcement, but to get higher ceilings. The meat packers claim that they can't live if they sell at OPA ceilings and that therefore they must go into the black market. Price increases, they say, will increase meat supplies and end illegal sales.

Back in January, OPA asked these same meat packers to submit figures to prove their sad plight, and promised to raise ceilings if present ones proved to be unfair. Only a handful of the packers replied. The rest waited until the price control act was up and came howling to Congress.

It is a well known special interest pressure trick. The textile people did it last year and have netted $100,000,000 more profits from the Bankhead amendment. OPA figures show that present ceilings are giving packers the highest profits they ever made. Since the packers won't produce their own figures it's hard to disprove OPA's.

Mr. Brownlee, head of OPA's price department, gave the Senate food investigating committee pages of facts which showed that OPA price ceilings are not responsible for meat shortages. We have the largest cattle production in our history and they are being fed to normal weights. Moreover cattle slaughter for the last two months is 11% over a year ago. There has been a decline in hog production but that is due to feed shortages and low support prices last winter and not to OPA ceilings.

WORLD MEAT SHORTAGE

The truth is that there is a world meat shortage. Shortages always stimulate profiteering. It is that, and not unfair OPA ceilings, which has brought a black market. Unfortunately there are criminals who take advantage of wartime conditions.

Unnecessary price increases would not help. Vigorous enforcement backed by an aroused public opinion is the only answer.

Start now to organize a campaign in your community to press your Congressmen and Senators to vote for big increases in OPA's budget. And do all you can to rouse the housewives in your area to refuse to deal with black marketeers and report them to their War Price and Rationing Boards.

Labor Education Notes

Eby to Teach At CIO School

How the CIO can help put into effect the 60 million job program is one of the important problems which will be studied at the Southern CIO school, to be held May 7 to June 3 at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn.

Kermit Eby, director of the Natl. CIO Dept. of Education & Research, will teach a course on Labor Education, and Southern CIO regional directors will discuss CIO policy. The Training Within Industry Service of the War Manpower Commission adapted for teaching shop stewards will be a special part of the program.

Union men and women are already making application to their regional directors to attend, the school announces. Others interested may still contact the CIO directors in their areas. Tuition and board for the month will be $50.

New Feature in "Shipyard Worker"

A series of articles giving "The American Story of Organized Labor" and aimed at interesting new members is being run in the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers weekly paper. Another interesting new feature in "The Shipyard Worker" is a union quiz column called "Mind Sweepers."

The union's educational director, Elwood Peoples, and James Higgins, asst. director at Natl. headquarters in Camden, N. J., are both serving on a new state education committee, set up this month by the State CIO Council.

CIO Radio Chorus Formed in New York

A radio chorus is being organized by the Greater New York CIO Council with a public debut planned for August at Lewisholm Stadium. The chorus director is Simon Rady, music consultant for a number of Army camps in the New York area. Rady has directed choruses for Victor and Columbia recordings and for radio broadcasts on national hook-ups.

Auditions for the CIO radio chorus are scheduled throughout April for CIO members and their relatives, and a final public audition is planned for early May. Further information may be obtained from the council, 1133 Broadway, New York City.

L. A. Council Sponsors School

The Los Angeles CIO Council reports increasing attention being given to workers' education. A Peoples Educational Center, organized with CIO support, is now a thriving institution. Five CIO members were elected to the PEC executive board last year and the council thereafter assisted in recruiting CIO members for enrollment in PEC classes, induced locals to provide scholarships and helped to organize and sponsor courses at various CIO union headquarters.

The council has also worked closely with the Los Angeles City Board of Education and other educational bodies and given active support to progressive policies.

* * *

The Spring 1945 issue of "Labor Education Guide," published by the American Labor Education Service, 437 W. 59th St., New York 19, N. Y., lists current publications dealing with labor and the farmer, the church, management and the community, as well as other material of interest to labor.

Annual subscription to the Guide is 50 cents.

* * *

Mary Lawrence, Tennessee CIO education director, was scheduled to speak this week at the quarterly meeting of the Virginia CIO Council executive board.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole-Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO Natl. News by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

The Nation Pays Its Last Tribute

BELOW, LEFT: AT YALTA, the Big Three met for the second time, laid the basis for working together in the postwar. From this meeting, came the plans for the United Nations gathering in San Francisco this month. Left to right are: Prime Minister Winston Churchill, President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin in the patio at the palace in Yalta. In the rear are Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, Admiral Ernest King, Air Marshal Portal and Admiral William D. Leahy, with other high ranking Allied officers, February, 1945.

BOTTOM, LEFT: IN HAPPIER days, President Roosevelt and his running mate, Harry S. Truman. Together they won a fourth term. On learning of Roosevelt's death Truman declared: "The world may be sure that we will prosecute the war on both fronts, east and west, with all the vigor we possess to a successful conclusion. In that faith and with that spirit of courage we must carry on."

ABOVE: CROWDS FILLED Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House when the people heard that Roosevelt was dead.

Murray Pledges Support

Wires sent by CIO's President to Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt and President Harry S. Truman in name of International Executive Board. Full Text Follows:

April 13, 1945

The President
The White House
Washington, D. C.

In this tragic hour, when responsibilities of historic dimension are thrust upon your shoulders, we, the members of the International Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, extend to you, President Harry S. Truman, our solemn pledge that we will, together with all patriotic citizens of our country, dedicate ourselves to the completion of the domestic and foreign program which our lost leader has so brilliantly and skillfully charted. We know that the fulfillment of this program is your deepest desire and responsibility. Neither domestic nor international division or partisanship must be permitted to jeopardize the monumental task which history now places within your stewardship. The fruits of the late President Roosevelt's brilliant victories are within our grasp. Cooperation and unity alone will see them safely harvested. In the name of the Executive Board of the CIO, I extend to you our pledge that we shall not lag in our determination to work with you so that those tasks may be successfully accomplished.

Philip Murray.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt
The White House
Washington, D. C.

The members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations join today with millions of their countrymen to express their grief at the passing of the President. Our sorrow is not only a personal sorrow at having lost a friend and counselor. Our sorrow is more than that. At a time when his courage, wisdom and humanity have made his name a symbol among the peoples of the earth, he has been taken from us. At a time when his spirit was a flaming beacon, leading us to the place of peace and democracy, his light has been put out. At a time when his leadership was a gleaming sword, routing the forces of darkness in the world, that sword has fallen. Only history can do justice to the monumental achievements of this man. From the lips of the common people not only of this country but of South America, Canada, China, and Europe can we learn his gifts to our time. America has been his home, but the world is his sepulchre.

With bowed heads and heavy hearts we renew our pledge to march together with men of good will the world over to the goal which his democratic vision and tremendous courage have chartered for us.

Philip Murray.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 17 — April 23, 1945

We Remembered His Words

"AND so today, in this year of war, 1945, we have learned lessons—at a fearful cost—and we shall profit by them.

"We have learned that we cannot live alone, at peace; that our own well-being is dependent upon the well-being of other nations far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger."

—From the Fourth Inaugural Address of Franklin Roosevelt, Jan. 20, 1945

These words rang in their ears, as the people watched his last journey to the White House. They closed ranks, resolved to take that path he charted toward world security and lasting peace.

"His Devotion Came from an Unfailing Source—The Common Man" Said Murray

Excerpts from an address delivered by CIO's President Philip Murray over the Blue Network on Saturday, April 14, at 6:45 p.m., EWT, on the regular LABOR-USA, program.

ALL nations mourn Franklin Delano Roosevelt; all peoples, great and small, know they have lost a leader and a friend.

Today, while his funeral services were conducted at the White House here in Washington, I thought of the wave of grief that swept around the world at Thursday's tragic news.

In every great city of our country, in the small towns and the villages and the farms, in the mill villages, the coal patches and the steel towns, at sea and on all the world fronts, Americans mourn the loss of their President and their Commander-in-Chief.

It is not they alone who feel his loss. In Europe, on the east and west fronts that are now almost one front, our young men and their allies, the British, the French, the Russians, share the sense of loss that all of us feel. In the most remote villages of China, in the heart of the Philippines, in the most distant islands of the Pacific, and in the Arctic outposts, men and women today know that they have suffered a heavy loss with their American allies and friends.

WE HOLD HIM DEAR

Franklin Delano Roosevelt died in the service of his country and of humanity. He laid down his life as countless soldiers and fighters for freedom have laid down their lives in this greatest of all wars for human liberty. He died no less in the service of freedom than the boys who died on Iwo Jima or on the approaches to Berlin.

Franklin Roosevelt, after a lifetime of service to his people, might on a dozen occasions have chosen honorable retirement from public life, and still have gone down in history as one of America's great. He did not choose to ask for retirement, he chose instead to continue to serve his people and the peoples of the world.

He joins now the great company of Americans who have given their lives for freedom—a great company of men and women whose strength and whose devotion came from an unfailing source, the common man.

Now in the hour of his sacrifice we find ourselves certain of victory and certain of freedom. The oppressed peoples of Europe and Asia find themselves at the dawn of a new life of freedom they have not known before. The oppressors and the torturers of humanity find themselves on the edge of retribution and oblivion.

WE REMEMBER

Those of us who remember the days of the economic depression of only a few years back remember that it was Franklin Roosevelt's interest in and devotion to the common man that pulled us out of the dark valley of unemployment and suffering that we walked in then.

I remember going to him in 1932, when he was Governor of the State of New York. I remember telling him then how the working people of my community—the miners, their wives and their children—were finding their food in garbage cans. I remember telling him of the stunted bodies and the heavy blows to human respect that hunger and privation bring to men and women and above all, to their children.

Governor Roosevelt knew of these conditions. We who visited him then were not bringing him news of another world. His sympathy and his understanding were already on the side of the poor and the unprivileged.

What was new in our meeting was his determination to remedy the conditions of which we spoke. What was new was his conviction that those conditions could be remedied. What was new and hopeful was the confidence he gave to us—and to the nation—when he first took the highest office in our nation in 1933.

That was 12 years ago. In that time, the common man, it is safe to say, has made more progress in terms of economic and social welfare than in any comparable period of our recent history.

WHAT WE GAINED

Before 1933, we had no social security. There was no protection against the hazards of unemployment, of sickness, of old age, of loss of the family wage earner. Today we have a measure of protection, which will grow as we move along the path charted in the past decade.

Before 1933, the working man had no guarantee of his right to organize with his fellow workers in unions for mutual protection and mutual benefit. Today we have strong and stable unions, composed of millions of American men and women who work in our factories and mills, in our forests and offices, in our thousands of war production centers all over the nation.

It is well that the working people of America acquired this right to organize in unions backed up by law. It is well that they built their unions for any emergency that might overtake their nation. When the crisis came, the union men and women were ready. Their support of their nation and their Commander-in-Chief was forthcoming instantly, and has been maintained since the treacherous attack at Pearl Harbor.

The miracles of production, which Franklin Roosevelt and high officers of our armed forces have repeatedly praised, were possible because the working men and women were able to organize and perfect their democratic institutions in the period from 1933 until today.

The millions of young men now fighting on the world fronts have equal cause to remember the history of the past 12 years. The boyhood and youth of many hundreds of thousands of them was saved from despair by the measures of aid that President Roosevelt's administration and the Congress undertook.

The Civilian Conservation Corps, the Youth Administration, the projects of WPA and Resettlement, the aid and encouragement given to youth on the farms, are remembered now in the grief of the young soldier and sailor who learns of his Commander-in-Chief's death in action.

WE CALL HIM FRIEND

It is grief not only for a fallen commander who led them to victory, but also for a man who was their friend and their benefactor when they most needed one.

The free nations of the world join with our nation in mourning the death of Franklin Roosevelt.

Again we look to the history of the past 12 years to find the source of this world unity in victory and, at this time, in sorrow. Beginning with the Good Neighbor policy of 1933, which made our sister republics of Latin-America our friends, we find that Franklin Roosevelt was truly the builder of the great alliance that has helped save our country from being overrun by Fascist tyrants. He was, in every sense, the architect of the United Nations.

With the leaders of the United Nations, and in close friendship particularly with the leaders of Britain and the Soviet Union, he built the coalition of power that has overwhelmed Hitler and freed a continent. He has led us, with the oppressed people of Asia and the Pacific, to imminent victory over the imperialist warlords of Japan.

THIS WAS HIS PLAN

Finally, at Teheran and Yalta, at Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods, his leadership has laid the basis for firm continuing friendship among the United Nations and for a just and enduring peace. The Four Freedoms that he enunciated will be the guiding star for future peace and world security.

Death came to him just as he was preparing to cap the structure of the United Nations at San Francisco. What greater obligation can we have than to carry out at San Francisco the aims and objectives for which he gave his work, his devotion and his life?

President Harry S. Truman, his friend and co-worker, has declared that the fight for final victory and the drive for a world of peace and security shall continue.

In making this declaration, President Truman echoes the thoughts that are in every American's heart today. To him, as our Commander-in-Chief, we pledge the same support, the same work, the same devotion that we gave to the great and good man he succeeds.

Speaking on behalf of the six million men and women of the CIO, for their families, and for their sons in the armed forces, I know that I do their bidding when I pledge this:

We will work for victory. We will work for a just and lasting peace. We will work, under your leadership, for the future that has been charted by the beloved man whom Providence in its infinite wisdom has taken from us.

I join with mourning humanity in commending his great soul to God.

Labor Backs You, President Truman

Philip Murray, CIO's President, wires support of CIO. Local, Statewide, and national unions follow with thousands of messages pledging labor backing for victory and security.

Labor closed ranks behind President Harry S. Truman, in the hour of his need, impressed with the simple courage of the man, resolved to carry on the job to the end as Roosevelt did.

CIO's President Philip Murray telegraphed the support of the International Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, promptly upon his taking office, within a few hours of the tragic announcement of President Roosevelt's death.

This telegraphed pledge was followed through by President Murray on the air at 12:30 p. m., on Friday, April 13, 1945, and on Saturday.

"Labor can best honor the memory of its noblest friend by pledging its complete support and loyalty to our new Commander In Chief, President Harry S. Truman. We in the CIO, have the greatest confidence that will most ably fulfill the mandate which the American People gave to Roosevelt and himself in the last elections; that he will lead a united nation to speedy victory, promote all progressive social policies, and carry to a successful conclusion Roosevelt's great work in building a world organization of all the United Nations," President Murray declared.

"But to carry out these tasks, President Truman will need the most active support of all the American people. I know that I can speak on behalf of the whole membership of the CIO, when I say that we shall rally behind President Truman with wholehearted enthusiasm in the cause of labor, our country and all humanity," President Murray concluded.

Immediately following the executive board meeting, President Murray wired all International Presidents of all affiliated to CIO International Unions: "Think it important in interest of war effort that there be no letup in war production out of respect to memory of President Roosevelt. President Truman has expressed the hope that American workers and management will pay their tribute to Franklin Roosevelt by staying on the job and maintaining an unbroken production of war goods. I concur in this and urge that CIO members do likewise."

CIO's national secretary treasurer, James B. Carey, spoke on the radio urging "closed ranks" behind President Truman. He said in part: "America's fighting men can count on labor's loyalty and devotion to back them to the limit, not only through production and every other war activity, but also by strengthening and solidifying our national unity behind President Truman."

CIO International Unions, and locals telegraphed their deep sorrow, and their strong determination to "close ranks and carry on."

THE UNION, official organ of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers-CIO, put it this way: "We have at hand the tools he helped fashion for the task—the Teheran and Yalta agreements, the Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods plans. The one fitting monument to this great historic figure will be the firm world organization for a lasting democratic peace toward which he led the way."

The officers of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, Albert J. Fitzgerald and Julius Emspak, declared: "The spirit of Franklin D. Roosevelt will continue to inspire people everywhere for victory in war and security in peace. We of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, join with all others in uniting our nation behind President Harry S. Truman in the great work which lies ahead. Victory and lasting world cooperation must be our tribute to the passing of a great man."

The Oil Workers International Union wired President Truman: "We pledge to you in this dark hour our unfailing support in continuing the program and policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt for winning the war against fascism, building a just and powerful world organization for peace and assuring full employment and prosperity in postwar America," signed by E. Carl Mattern, first Vice President.

Thus began the vast outpouring of wires from locals, executive boards, international unions, city wide, state wide, industrial councils with one unfailing determination: "Closed ranks for victory in the war and the peace."

THE THIRTY-SECOND President of the U. S., Harry S. Truman, was born on a farm near Lamarre, Ohio, May 8, 1884. He lacked funds to attend college, and worked his way through school by taking a porter's job in a Kansas City drug store. Later, he worked in the mail room of the Kansas City Star, then moved to a job in a bank. Discouraged by his slow progress, Truman returned to his father's farm. When World War 1 broke out, he sailed to France as lieutenant and was promoted to captain soon afterward. With the Armistice, he returned home and put his war savings into a Kansas City men's clothing store which failed. Later, he became a highway overseer, then a county judge. He studied law and won the nomination to the U. S. Senate in 1934. Once in the national picture, Truman's hard work attracted attention and he was named head of the Senate committee investigating war contracts, where he demonstrated a capacity for leadership and a thoroughness that won him national recognition. Truman's investigations brought direct and indirect benefits through exposure of shortages in aluminum, rubber, steel, zinc, lead and manpower. The Truman Committee was widely credited with having stopped looseness and corruption in the execution of war contracts. As President, the new chief executive is expected to lean heavily on the people . . . to absorb from them his strength and to look to them for guidance. Loyal in his affiliations, a man of and for the people, President Truman has asked for the support of all Americans, and the help of Almighty God.

MOST DETROITERS HAD their first good look at President Harry S. Truman last Labor Day when he was the featured speaker at the CIO mass meeting in Cadillac Square. Truman spoke then emphasizing that human rights are prior to property rights, and that jobs are more important than profits. Pictures below, left to right: Welcoming committee of rank and file Auto workers with Truman, R. J. Thomas with Truman, and Truman in the Parade's lead car.

A Leader We Can Trust

President Truman's first message to Congress rang true and fine. He said what the American people expected and wanted him to say.

He expressed our national determination to carry through to complete victory and the unconditional surrender of the Axis.

He left no doubt of America's purpose to help build a strong and lasting United Nations organization.

He spoke of our labors to achieve a "social order worthy of our great heritage" and "a really democratic way of life." He promised there will be "no relaxation in our efforts to improve the lot of the common people."

In general, he pledged himself to carry on the great work so well begun by Franklin Delano Roosevelt and to be faithful to his ideals.

The CIO has been among the first to proclaim, in the words of President Murray, "its complete support and loyalty to our new Commander-in-Chief," and its determination to rally behind him "with wholehearted enthusiasm in the cause of labor, our country and all humanity."

In closing ranks behind President Truman, along with all other good Americans, the CIO and its members express their patriotic spirit of national unity, their victory purpose, their desire for United Nations unity and their support for the man upon whom Roosevelt's mantle has fallen.

But, more than this, the working people of America have confidence in President Truman as a man who, in his own right and on his own record, is splendidly qualified to give our country and the world the progressive leadership it needs.

As Roosevelt's running mate, Truman was given the same mandate as he was by the American people in the last elections. As Vice-President he worked closely, ably and loyally with Roosevelt to fulfill it.

In the Senate, Truman distinguished himself with a consistently liberal, progressive and pro-labor record. He was as consistent in his support of Roosevelt's foreign policies. And through the committee he headed he made noteworthy personal contributions to the success of our war effort.

The heavy responsibilities which now fall on President Truman's shoulders are not his alone. They are also the responsibilities of the whole American people, and he can only perform them with our united support.

Labor must, and will, do its full share, and more than its share, in backing up President Truman. It will do this with all the better heart because of the great confidence it has in our new leader.

Looking to 'Frisco

The world looks with hope to San Francisco this week, where the United Nations gather to organize against future aggression and for world peace and prosperity.

World labor is doing its part to further this great purpose by building a firm basis of labor unity for the unity of the nations. It will be represented by the Administrative Committee of the World Trade Union Conference.

The CIO will also be helping through Philip Murray, its consultant to our government's delegation, and through its other officers.

Every one of us can do our part by promoting popular understanding and support, and by urging Congress to approve the Bretton Woods agreement and all other steps necessary for effective world unity.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

EVER since her first introduction to politics in the last elections, Shirley has been a rooter for Roosevelt. She still is.

The first time she saw his picture, she said, "I like that man." She wore a Roosevelt button long after the elections, because she likes buttons.

Because all around her spoke well of Roosevelt, Shirley chimed in with all the extravagance of four to five years old.

She would look for Roosevelt's picture in the papers. She would call him her "boy friend" or "a nice daddy," and say she wanted to hug him.

It wasn't easy to explain to Shirley what people meant when they said that Roosevelt was dead.

We told her he had gone to sleep and wouldn't wake up again. But she could not accept or understand it.

"Wouldn't he wake up if I went and kissed him?" she asked. "Couldn't we wake him up by putting some candy in his mouth?"

When the voice of Jo Davidson, the sculptor, came over the radio in tribute to his living spirit, saying, "Roosevelt is not dead," Shirley jumped up with excitement.

"Roosevelt isn't dead," she cried, "the radio said so."

★ ★ ★

Of course, Shirley's Roosevelt is not dead. The familiar picture of a kindly, smiling man, the name on so many lips—which was all the Roosevelt Shirley knew—is as alive today in her mind as it ever was.

It will continue to live and have meaning in the minds of her whole generation and of generations of Americans to come.

To millions of Shirley's elders, Roosevelt was a voice over the radio, a moving picture on the screen, a character in the newspaper-book of modern history—not someone they knew in the flesh.

Yet many wept unashamedly when he died, as at the death of a close friend.

Of course, the radio, the press and the movies can make us know a public character as intimately as our own neighbors—and feel a personal loss when he passes out of our lives.

But the Roosevelt whom most of the people mourned was more than this. He was (and still is) part of themselves.

★ ★ ★

The worker who won the right to join a union, without being fired, associated his new-found independence with Roosevelt.

To the youngster of the depression, given useful activity and opportunity by the New Deal, Roosevelt meant a new chance in life.

The aged, the unemployed, the poor and ailing thought of Roosevelt as the conscience of a society beginning to take thought for them.

To the soldier, Roosevelt was the wise and victorious Commander upon whose leadership his life and his hope of early return depended.

To all Americans, Roosevelt was the symbol of their patriotism, their national unity and their determination to destroy the Fascist foes of freedom.

To all who yearn for peace and a happier world, Roosevelt was a big part of their vision, their hope and their striving for the unity and cooperation of all peoples.

This Roosevelt is not dead. How could he be? He is part of ourselves—part of the thinking, the hope and the effort that is passed on from one generation to another.

★ ★ ★

After Roosevelt died, it became a school-kids' gag to say, "The President is not dead"—and then explain that the President is Truman.

A President may die, but the President of the United States is always alive.

The national unity, the victorious purpose, the hatred of Fascism, the striving for a better lot for the common people, the hopes for world peace and prosperity associated with Roosevelt, live on undying in the American people and now find their personal symbol and national expression in President Truman.

★ ★ ★

Roosevelt was among the world's greatest. But the chief source of his strength was in the American people.

As victory approaches, the unity imposed by a common foe becomes weakened. Forces of disunity and reaction come into play which would have tested all of Roosevelt's statesmanship, and to combat which Truman will need all of our help.

If we are to keep alive and growing all that we associate with Roosevelt's name, labor must organize and be active as never before, and all the democratic forces must rally and work for their own salvation.

For what we have idealized in Roosevelt is part of ourselves and will live on only through our efforts.

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-Presidents
Joseph Curran John Green Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple Allan S. Haywood Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald Emil Rieve R. J. Thomas
Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director
Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925
Vol. 8 April 23, 1945 No. 17

CIO Auxiliaries Launch Organizing Drive

The CIO Women's Auxiliaries this week launched a campaign to strengthen existing organizations and to step up additional units. The campaign is being directed by Miss Helen Blanchard, elected by the auxiliaries' executive board. She also will work closely with CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood in the organization of women in the CIO.

"The wives, sisters and daughters of CIO members organized in auxiliaries constitute a vast reservoir of additional strength for the CIO," Haywood said.

Haywood cited the good work of the women in aiding their husbands, fathers and brothers —on the picket line and in union kitchens — during the early days of the CIO, and in campaigning last year for the election of Roosevelt, Truman and progressve members of Congress.

Miss Blanchard is particularly well equipped for her job. Not only has she served on three New York State minimum wage boards for the hotel and restaurant industry, but also she has served as legislative representative of the Women's Trade Union League in New York State and in the Working Conditions Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept.

"The long range aim of the CIO Auxiliaries," Miss Blanchard said, "is to improve the social, economic and cultural life of their communities, the nation and the world.

IMMEDIATE AIMS

"The auxiliaries right now are helping in observance of United Nations Month, proclaimed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. They are participating in the United National Clothing, the Red Cross and the Community and War Fund campaigns, and in the blood donor drives.

"We are naturally interested in continuance and strengthening of the OPA, and are working for the permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee and the Bretton Woods bills.

"As women we are opposed to discrimination in employment practices and do not want to see a third World War."

Left to Right: Miss Helen Blanchard, Philip Murray and Allan S. Haywood

Returning from a swing through Indiana and Illinois, Miss Blanchard reported she met with hearty support.

Not only was she enthusiastically received when she addressed the Indiana State Council of CIO Women's Auxiliaries at Kokomo, but she also was welcomed by Powers Hapgood, Indiana CIO regional director, and Walter Frisbie, secretary of the Indiana Industrial Union Council. The Indiana Council makes an annual contribution for auxiliary work.

At Chicago she met Walter Harris, Illinois CIO Regional director, and Mike Mann, secretary of the Chicago Industrial Union Council.

$5,000 FOR AUXILIARIES

When Miss Blanchard visited the executive board meeting of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in Chicago with Mrs. Mary Orlich and Mrs. Kay Carlin of the MMSW auxiliaries, MMSW President Robinson greeted her with the news that the board had just voted $5,000 for auxiliary work.

Continuing her visits, she will meet G. George DeNucci, secretary of the Ohio Industrial Union Council and CIO sub-regional director, at Columbus on April 26, and will make arrangements there with sub-regional directors to visit Cincinnati, Dayton, Akron, Cleveland and Youngstown.

CIO Urges Action on MVA Bill

CIO's plea for a Missouri Valley Authority to do the same job for nine midwestern states that TVA has done in its area was presented to the Senate Commerce Committee by John Brophy, chairman of the CIO MVA Committee, and James A. Davis, committee secretary and president of the Missouri CIO Council.

The CIO testimony came in the opening days of a long series of hearings that the MVA bill (S 555) will have to go through before it reaches the Senate floor. After the Commerce Committee, the bill goes to the Irrigation and Reclamation Committee and then to the Agriculture Committee. A vote is not expected before summer.

After pointing to the need for an MVA setup that would be responsible to the President, as TVA is, Brophy discussed the project in terms of benefits to the people of nine Missouri River states and its role in the full employment program.

Also discussing the jobs end of the program, Davis said that there are more than 200,000 CIO members in the Valley area who were vitally interested in the MVA, together with the rest of the workers, farmers and business men of the nine states.

"The members of the CIO in the Missouri Valley know how badly their region needs a sound, unified plan of development," he said. "They are concerned about their future and the future of the members of their families in the services. They are concerned about the future of their Valley and their country."

Warning of cutbacks—which are already taking place on a large and increasing scale—Brophy urged quick action on the bill to provide essential employment, not only in the Valley but throughout the U. S.

"If production in this country is to be maintained at war-time levels, and if the people who are likely to want work after the war are to find jobs, and thus maintain national purchasing power, tremendous investment projects must be planned and carried through by both private industry and government.

"It will be necessary for construction alone to aggregate $20 billion a year or more. A tremendous portion of this total construction program must be in housing and city re-development. Another very great portion must be in regional development of the kind we are talking about here."

Brophy emphasized the need for regional control of the MVA project, as is done in the TVA area, rather than control through Washington.

"There must be one agency; its seat must be in the valley where the people can get at it; and it must have the necessary authority to make decisions within the field of its responsibility," he said.

He also stressed the need for proper collective bargaining safeguards in the bill to protect the workers who will be employed on MVA jobs. This should be done as it is being done by TVA, he pointed out.

Textile Union Proposes World Labor Charter

Adoption of a World Labor Charter prescribing minimum labor standards for all countries which become signatories to agreements reached at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco was proposed this week by Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union, as a means of wiping out poverty, disparity of living standards, and economic inequality as causes of war.

Rieve's proposal is set forth in a pamphlet, "International Labor Standards, a Key to World Security." The pamphlet will be sent to all American delegates to the San Francisco conference and distributed widely among diplomatic representatives, trade union leaders, public officials, educational and other groups.

The pamphlet proposes that the United Nations Conference adopt a World Labor Charter consisting of a Code of Intl. Fair Labor Practices, which would become immediately binding upon every nation seeking international trade, and a Program of Intl. Fair Labor Practices, which would be a longer range goal to be attained with the more gradual ability of the world family of nations to bring its peoples up to such standards.

Both the Code and the Program are designed to protect workers in countries in which industrial development is taking place and to safeguard higher living standards where they already exist by preventing international trade competition based upon substandard working conditions.

As background for the proposals Rieve traces the relation of substandard living conditions, poverty and life expectancy to low productivity and low national income.

Before the war, Rieve said, the average real per capita income of the civilized nations ranged between $1,381 a year in the United States and $100 to $120 in China. Eighty per cent of the world population receive a per capita income well below one-fourth of that of the United States.

The longer-range objectives, incorporated in the proposed Program of Intl. Fair Labor Practices, would include: Full employment for all persons willing and able to work, at wage rates insuring a decent standard of living; abolition of servitude and compulsory labor in colonial and dependent areas; full development of all industrial resources; an 8-hour day and a 40-hour week; abolition of repressive measures against labor and full protection of the right to organize; broad social security, and participation of trade unions in the administration of all labor and welfare laws.

"These proposals," Rieve said, "are offered in a spirit of deep conviction of the need for increasingly higher international labor standards. Unless our newest instruction in the need for enforceable international cooperation to banish want from the earth is learned, this time forever, there may never be another chance to learn it."

Hillman Gets Award

Mr. Sidney Hillman, chairman of CIO-PAC, will receive the annual Teachers Union award for "Outstanding Service in the Cause of Education for Democracy" at a luncheon ceremony of the ninth annual education conference of the Teachers Union, Local 555, SCMWA-CIO, to be held on Saturday, April 21, at the Hotel Commodore.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, who will present the award to Mr. Hillman, will make the keynote address at the luncheon. Mr. Hillman, a recent delegate to the World Trade Union Conference in London, will be a participant at the San Francisco Conference.

Mr. Charles J. Hendley in announcing the award today said that the Teachers Union selection of Mr. Hillman to receive the citation is based on his leadership of CIO-PAC in its "education of the entire American people to the issues of the war and the peace."

CIO Asks End to AFL Jim Crow

The Natl. Labor Relations Board has a chance to strike a blow against Negro discrimination that will be a test case for in the fight against Jim Crow everywhere, the CIO Executive Board said in its meeting in Washington April 12.

The case involves an AFL local of 550 at the Larus tobacco plant in Richmond, Va., which put its 200 Negro members in a Jim Crow local and denied them contract benefits after it had been certified by the NLRB.

On complaint of the CIO Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers, an NLRB Trial Examiner recommended that the full Board revoke the certification unless the AFL local stopped segregating its Negro members.

Supporting the Trial Examiner's findings, the CIO Executive Board said in its unanimous resolution: (Resolved).

"That the CIO go on record in support of the FTA-CIO in this case and advise the NLRB that its action in this case will represent a vital test of the Wagner Act at a time when this country is engaged in a bitter struggle for democracy and against racial discrimination."

SIR WALTER CITRINE said: "We have reached at these meetings in Washington another milestone on the road marked out for us by the World Trade Union Conference in London, last February. The work upon which the administrative committee of the Conference has been engaged here has been to draft a constitution for the World Federation of Trade Unions and we have been trying to lay wider and firmer foundations for international labor unity than any that have existed before. The task is not easy. Many complicated problems emerge in the course of such discussions, involving the relationships of trade union movements in so many countries, each of them with its own traditions and methods of organization, in different stages of development, and with widely different industrial, social and political conditions. In the circumstances, I think we have made good progress with our immediate task, although we have not yet come to see eye to eye on all the details of our draft constitution. We are all of one mind about the objective and are resolved to work together for the establishment of an all-inclusive and democratically operated and controlled Trade Union International capable of prosecuting with energy and vigor a policy for the realization of the aims and ideals we have in common. We are united upon this single purpose and I think that all the delegations realize that successful attainment of this purpose depends upon our readiness to minimize the points on which we may differ, and to make concessions on matters of detail in the interests of our common cause. I am indeed very hopeful that before the visiting delegations leave the United States, we shall have framed a constitution that will be found generally acceptable by the national trade union organizations which participated in the world conference. We want the federation to be wide enough for all to join." He also said: "We must be able to welcome all bona fide trade union bodies into the international trade union family and give them all the opportunity to live and work together in friendship and good will. I want to express the cordial thanks of the visiting delegates to President Murray and his CIO colleagues for their generous hospitality. All the foreign delegates appreciated the excellent arrangements their CIO comrades had made for their comfort and convenience during their stay in Washington." Sir Walter KBE PC (a member of His Majesty's Privy Council) has been General Secretary of the British Trade Union Congress for 20 years. For 16 years he was President of the International Federation of Trade Unions. He was an electrician by trade. He was knighted by King George V at the Silver Jubilee in 1935. King George expressed a wish to recognize the trade union movement in the person of its secretary. Citrine accepted the title on that basis.

EBBY EDWARDS is the general secretary of the National Union of gether with Sir Walter Citrine, compose the British delegates to the tee of Thirteen which has the task of drafting a constitution for Conference, which plans to meet again in Paris in September. Ebby lishman, speaks with a thick Scottish burr. He explains it thusly: " England, is on the borders of Scotland. I expect that many genera came down to Northumbria from Scotland to steal sheep, and they

ERNEST BELL is secretary of the British Trade Union Congress international department. He is in effect the foreign office of Transport House, handling relations of the British TUC with other countries.

JOHN ABT IS Chief counsel for PAC and for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He is also an adviser to the administrative committee. He declared that "There has been unanimous agreement on all decisions."

OLGA VALLER speaks many languages. She accompanies the Russian delegate, Michael Tarasov, as interpreter. Jim Carey said: "Olga doesn't only translate the meaning, but she puts the accent where it belongs."

JAMES CAREY, CIO's national secretary treasurer, saw to the comfort of the delegates. He urged all CIO locals to order copies of the new pamphlet on the London conference, titled: "Report of the CIO Delegates," just off the press.

Paris Will Be Next Host to World Labor Meeting

The Washington meetings of the World Labor's Administrative Committee adjourned temporarily to reconvene next week in San Francisco. The thirteen delegates had been hard at work on a constitution for the World Labor Federation. Full agreement was reached on all points decided. The CIO NEWS continued to interview the visiting delegates.

By HELEN KAY

THE MOST dramatic story came from the French. Louis Saillant, Benoit Franchon and their administrative assistant, Robert Chamberon, had lived through four years of Nazi occupation; had carried on against them in the Conseil de Resistance de France.

"Our lives were full of drama and tragedy," said Louis Saillant, president of the French Council of Resistance, and representative from the French Confederation of Labor. "We worked with a revolver at our side. One bullet was for the Nazi, or Vichy representative who might come to arrest us, and the other was for ourselves."

Louis Saillant, having lived through the nightmare that was France, is concerned with its future. "We are free now, but it is as though our hands were merely unbound so that we could take up the cudgels once more for democracy. The French must recapture their democracy, even as we had it before."

Louis Saillant is youthful, vigorous. He was labor's representative, to the Council of National Resistance, and was its national leader. He explained its organization: "The Permanent Bureau of the Council of National Resistance had five members. CGT of France was represented with two members. This body was made up not only of trade unions but national patriotic organizations which were determined that Nazism would be driven from the soil of France. From this top committee, there flowed the Council of National Resistance, of which there were 17 members. Here also there were two members from the CGT. Under this was another committee of five, in charge of fighting the deportation of civilian workers to Germany. From this committee of 17, there was an Active Military Commission of three, directing the FFI. From this flowed the Maquis units, with half a million fighting Frenchmen. Such was our organization to combat Nazism."

The Maquis, comes from the Corsican word, underbrush. The Maquis of France were the underground soldiers of France. They derailed thousands of German trains; destroyed hundreds of French war machines and plants; killed thousands of Germans and their weapons came exclusively from the Germans.

Benoit Frachon explained how Vichy tried to destroy unionism in France. "Today French labor has over four million members. In August, 1940, Vichy dissolved the French Confederation of Labor. On a local basis they continued, although closely supervised by the government. In effect they broke off the heads of the union, smashed the center of organization and attempted to exploit the local organizations for themselves. Labor had to apply for permission to hold a local meeting; had to submit its agenda to the police; while the actual meeting was conducted under police supervision. Our answer was to go underground, to keep the real organization going."

Benoit Frachon is portly, genial. He wears heavy, hornrimmed glasses, and was amused when we insisted that he take them off. He heads the largest union in France, over half a million strong, the Metal Workers Union. He himself had been a turner in a metal factory.

"I must tell you about the things we lived through. American labor must know this. One of my friends and fellow workers in the center was discovered by the French police. He was tortured for three days by being stretched on a table; hit with clubs. But he would not give information. They turned him over to the Germans. They added finer torture to what had already been used. They hung him by his feet, and submerged his head in a bucket of soapy water until he fainted. Then they took him out, and repeated this. They tore off all his nails on his hands and feet by sticking steel pins into them. Then they shot an electric current through him, until he shook with shock. He ended in a concentration camp in Germany." Benoit Frachon's eyes blazed. When he spoke he had to get up from his chair, and walk about the room, his gestures were indignant, fierce. So great was the humiliation of France, of Frenchmen, of workingmen. His whole soul revolted against it.

"Of young Frenchmen who sang the Marseillaise when they were executed, there are thousands. 80,000 rank and file trade unionists of France were killed. 7,000 officials of trade unions were killed; 8,000 were deported to Germany. Another worker in our organization was put before the firing squad. A German officer urged him to talk. Instead the young man grabbed the Nazi's dagger from his belt, and killed him. He was crucified in revenge."

Saillant's pleasant, smiling face became grim. His face is very mobile. One moment it can be gay and jovial, the next moment hard, embittered. "I want to tell you about a woman, a brave gallant Frenchwoman. She was pregnant. The Nazis wanted information from her. She wouldn't talk. They took care of her until her day of labor. Then they sent her to the hospital. When her moment for delivery came, they bound her legs, so that her child could not be born. She and her unborn child died. The Nazis got no information.

"My confidential secretary was arrested," continued Louis Saillant. The Nazis held her prisoner. They wanted to know where I was. She knew, but she wouldn't tell. The Germans tortured her but she wouldn't speak. She was a woman in her forties, not beautiful at all, and they ridiculed her. They sent her to Germany; she has never been heard from again.

"But despite the daily drama and tragedy that was our constant companion, we are men with a sense of humor too. In our resistance movement, we had a Catholic curé. He was a fine marksman, and before aiming at a Nazi, he would make the sign of the cross."

The Frenchmen laughed. Even now from afar they could see the Catholic curé. But then they hastened to tell us about France today. Benoit Frachon continued: "We Frenchmen cannot look from the past into the future. There is a logical link between the past, the present and the future. During the occupation, we fought the Nazis. When we were freed, the first thing French labor was interested in doing was to produce for the war, in the open fight against Germany, because we knew that the future of France hinged on the efforts we could expend to defeat the Germans. Our second purpose was the total destruction of Vichyism, as well as any other form of fascism.

"Fascism is not yet completely destroyed in France. French labor still must see to that. The present French government has shown great weakness and mildness in regard to Vichy. The present regime, is not yet fully democratic. We have not yet regained freedom of the press in France. Our democratic papers have only a circulation of 300,000. They could have millions. This is not due to the paper shortage, for both the governments of Britain and Switzerland offered France paper. It is an indirect weapon to curtail our freedom of expression. So, too, with the campaign material for the local elections. On the other hand new, small, fascist groupings are given the same paper quota as large, popular movements.

"Further, the Provisional Consultative Assembly votes, and the government ignores their opinion. We must still fight up hill for democracy in France."

These men had lived through and fought Nazism for four years, under the very noses of Nazis, collaborationists and traitors, and doing so, had kept their labor unions intact. They would win out in their fight for democracy in France, too.

BENOIT FRACHON WAS one of the committee of five on the Council of Resistance. He, too, lived through four long years of Nazi occupation.

LOUIS SAILLANT WAS President of the French Council of Resistance. He was in France during the whole of Nazi occupation.

Mine Workers. He, to- Administrative Commit- the World Trade Union Edwards, though an Eng- Northumbria, in northern tions ago, my ancestors never did get back."

RBERT TRACEY has dled the press relations he British TUC for the 24 years. For 35 years, has been a member of the ional Union of Journal- which has nearly 10,000 nbers.

ERT CHAMBERON IS France. He interprets Louis Saillant and Benoit hon. He was formerly a rment worker in the fi- department of France. lived through four of Nazi occupation.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

A Tribute to FDR

The death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt brought sorrow to millions of human beings not only in our Nation but among the common people everywhere.

He became President of the United States in 1933, at a time when the Nation was in the throes of its most devastating depression; when millions of men, women and children were hungry and despair prevailed throughout the land.

He immediately accepted the challenge of the times and announced boldly that "there is nothing to fear but fear itself." What banks were left open throughout the nation, he closed down, and opened them after instituting security for the depositors. He tackled the unemployment situation by creating the WPA and our youth problem by establishing the NYA.

He immediately led the way in the field of social security, to give some protection to the unemployed and the aged. He had profound faith in the working men and women of the nation. He met the farmers' problem squarely and effectively and effectuated labor's bill of rights.

The labor movement at the time was limited in its jurisdiction; mass-production industries, in the main, were all unorganized. He brought a great degree of stability to the coal industry and enabled the miners' union to grow to its present strength, entering fields it had spent years trying to organize without success. Today the American labor movement in all industries has multiplied its membership approximately five times since 1932.

President Roosevelt championed the cause of the underprivileged and had an unshakable faith in the common man. In international affairs he saw the danger of the growth of Nazi and Fascist brutality and warned the nation of dark clouds that were appearing on the horizon.

He gave hope to the people of the occupied countries in their dark days of oppression and those resisting this oppression in his declaration of the four freedoms. He contributed greatly to the understandings arrived at between the United Nations and hoped to build a structure of guaranteed international peace and brotherhood.

He told his countrymen he would like nothing better than to retire to private life and to his home on the Hudson but he died in the service of his country; in the service of humanity everywhere—like Lincoln, without his work being completed, but his soul and the things he stood for will live on!

It is up to everyone of us to see that the things attained under his wise leadership shall be secured and what he strove for, attained. In this the labor movement can play a mighty role.

President Harry S. Truman in his first speech has declared for upholding Roosevelt's policies both in war and in the peace to come. The CIO will support the President in these efforts and prays they will be continued.

UAW Reg. Dir. Paul Miley reports: CIO won another NLRB election when 67% of the guards at the Intl. Harvester Co., Springfield, Ohio, voted for the UAW-CIO. Intl. Rep. Austin Patton was in charge of the drive.

CIO Reg. Dir. Carey Haigler, Alabama, reports: Lamson-Sessions Co., Birmingham, USA-CIO 135, Agl 97, no union 1. R. E. Farr, USA district director, was in charge.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Columbus, advises: Hocking Valley Implement Co., Lancaster, Ohio, card check, resulted in 78 out of 92 for USA-CIO. Reps. Hill and Parrish were in charge under the direction of Dist. Dir. Howard N. Porter.

Sub-Reg. Dir. G. Geo. DeNucci, reports another victory at Shelby Shoe Co., Portsmouth, Ohio, CIO Shoe Workers 1538, AFL 510. USWA Dir. George Martin and Rep. Emerson Pence were in charge.

Pres. Martin Wagner, Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, advises that UGCCWA Reg. Dir. Chas. A. Doyle, Niagara Falls, reports: General Abrasive Co., CIO 81, no union 71.

Sub-Reg. Dir. A. R. Hardesty, Dallas, Texas, reports: Lone Star Cement Corp., CIO 69, AFL 37.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., Springfield, Ore., CIO 97, AFL 57, no union 3. DeSoto Hardwood Co., Memphis, Tenn., firemen voted three to nothing in favor of CIO. Leahy Manufacturing Co., Kansas City, Mo., CIO 29, no union 4.

Jas. P. Sweeney, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Trenton, N. J., reports: CIO Food, Tobacco and Allied Workers won election at Henry Bock Cigar Co., Trenton, by a vote of 415 for CIO, 93 for no union. Charles Kovacs, and Fred Clarici, USA reps., assisted the vice president of cigar workers union in drive, as well as the CIO office staff.

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Women all over the world are sad at the passing of Franklin D. Roosevelt. His determination to build an international organization that would ensure peace among the nations expressed the dearest wish of women everywhere.

American women had a great stake, too, in Franklin Roosevelt's domestic policies. The Economic Bill of Rights which he originated held out the promise of a better America for our children to grow up in.

Trade union women felt particularly close to President Roosevelt because Eleanor Roosevelt is one of them. Her membership in the Newspaper Guild, and her long association with the National Women's Trade Union League, assured her sympathetic understanding of the problems of working women.

It is probably because of this association that President Roosevelt took such a keen interest in those problems. In February, 1944, when he submitted to Congress the request for a new appropriation of $150,000,000 for the Federal Works Agency, he said:

"I desire particularly to call your attention to the facilities made necessary by the need to employ more women in war industries and to keep them on the job with a minimum of absenteeism and turn-over. A part of the funds herein requested are to provide child-care centers and other facilities—so-called outplant facilities—to make the jobs of these war workers easier . . ."

Fortunately for us the ideas of Franklin D. Roosevelt on international cooperation and on domestic policy are now widely accepted.

NEW PRESIDENT'S PLEDGE

Harry S. Truman's first act as President was to order the San Francisco Conference to continue on schedule. In his first speech to Congress he said:

"I call upon all Americans to help me keep our nation united in defense of those ideals which have been so eloquently proclaimed by Franklin Roosevelt."

It is our responsibility to respond wholeheartedly to the appeal of our new President and to work harder than ever before to see that our Congress ratifies the Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks agreements, extends the reciprocal trade agreements act, passes bills to assure full employment and extend social security.

Connecticut Bargaining

Despite a last minute blitzkrieg by the Connecticut Mfg. Assn. to amend it to death, a little Wagner Act this month became law in Connecticut. The measure had the support of the CIO and other labor organizations.

A board of three to be appointed by the governor will administer the act, which prohibits discrimination against employes for union activity and interference with the workers in the right to organize and bargain collectively.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

SECRETARY-TREASURERS BUYERS' GUIDE

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
(Celluloid or Litho-Metal)
Convention Badges
•
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps
Emblems
•
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases
Bill Folds
•
All Articles Bear the Union Label
231 SO. WELLS ST. CHICAGO
Phone: Webster 4104 ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 388 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Price Control In Danger

A bold drive to crack ceilings on meat, engineered by big meat packers, is threatening to crack the whole of price control, now up in the Senate for renewal.

The drive is on in the Senate Agriculture Committee, where a supposed probe of meat shortages is being turned into an all out offensive on the consumer and the wage-earner.

The play is to use the outcry that OPA ceilings are responsible for the meat shortage (which they're not) as a lever for an amendment guaranteeing a profit on every meat operation.

This looks innocent (as the Bankhead textile amendment looked innocent) but its dynamite. It would be the opener for a whole series of similar moves to jack prices on other things.

While technically the Senate Agriculture food probers have nothing to do with renewal of price control, they act as though they did. Danger is that the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which does handle price control, will take their proposed amendment and put it in their report.

Wire your own Senators, and Banking Chairman Sen. Wagner (D. N. Y.), to close their ears to price jacking plans from meat packers or any other sources.

And remember that higher prices won't cure meat shortages. Cracking down on black marketeers, plus real funds for OPA enforcement, will help. OPA now has only 250 men for all the meat industry.

Truman Backs World Trade

President Truman has announced that he's for the bill (HR 2211, S 540) to ratify the Bretton Woods world trade agreement without reservations.

This should be a big help in getting the bill out of the House Banking and Currency Committee where its been limping for weeks now. Stories have been put out that an unfavorable report is brewing, with GOP Congressmen as the chief cooks.

Three GOP Committee members and two Democrats are pretty much key men on the report issue. They are Reps. Brumbaugh (R. Pa.); Sundstrom (R. N. J.); Gamble (R. N. Y.); Barry (D. N. Y.), and Baldwin (D. Md.). These men can be urged to vote for world trade, will read your letters.

Many Congressmen report that they're not getting much mail on Bretton Woods, except from the big bankers who oppose it.

There's five million postwar jobs in those Woods, according to CIO President Murray's estimate. Have you written?

And have you read CIO's pamphlet "Five Million Jobs In World Trade—the Promise of Bretton Woods?" Order now from CIO Publicity Dept., Washington 6, D. C., $4.00 per 100.

Our Job—Help President Truman

President Truman has plainly said that he intends to carry on the domestic and foreign policies of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Asked at his first press conference about his attitude on such questions as the FEPC and the polltax, and he answered by recommending a look at his record in the Senate.

The record shows that Truman voted to end a filibuster on the polltax repeal bill in 1944. It shows that he voted for the Kilgore reconversion bill of 1944 that would have helped workers as well as industry.

He voted against the move to eliminate FEPC from an appropriation bill. He voted to uphold FDR's veto of the Smith-Connally Act; for the Federal soldier's vote bill; for adequate price control; for food subsidies; for farm security; for a wage raise for railway workers; for TVA.

On foreign policy, Truman voted with FDR. He voted for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. His vote as Vice-President broke a tie that would have hamstrung lend-lease just before Roosevelt's death.

Five days after he took office, he announced that he is for Bretton Woods without reservations, and for renewing the reciprocal trade agreements.

Speaking to Congress and to the people, he asked for help in carrying out these basic policies. CIO President Murray has pledged that help.

Our job on the legislative front is to work harder than ever to see that President Truman has a Congress that will back him up in this program.

Long, Long Trail to MVA

(See story, Page 5)

The long, long Congressional trail to the Missouri Valley Authority project started in the Senate Commerce Committee this week with testimony by John Brophy and James A Davis, chairman and secretary of the CIO MVA Committee.

MVA, which means hundreds of thousands of jobs for workers, farms for veterans, new industries and a better life for a nine state area, faced a hostile committee in the first hearings. Later, it has to go through two other committees — Irrigation and Agriculture.

All in all the process will take at least until summer. Meanwhile, you can help by writing your Senators now to support the bill (S 555) during this process and when it hits the floor.

MVA means prosperity not only for the Missouri River states, but a big boost for the 60,000,000 jobs program —as Pres. Murray pointed out when he made it one of the keystones of his Re-employment Plan for the postwar.

Are You Listening?

CIO will have national radio programs coming out of the San Francisco United Nations Conference that begins April 25.

Programs will be on the regular CIO Blue Network Saturday spot at 6:45 p. m., EWT.

Watch also for a Mutual network show on MVA, tentatively set for this week, with a dramatization and with John Brophy as featured speaker.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control (SJ Res 30)	Renews Price Control Act.	Danger from Senate Agriculture Committee's food probe, which is being used as mask for proposal to crack meat ceilings in move to break all control.	Wire Sen. Wagner (D N. Y.), chairman of Senate Banking Committee and your two Senators to hold firm against meat packers' hi-jacking.
Missouri Valley (S 555)	Sets up MVA (like TVA) to control floods, erosion, bring new industries, jobs, farms to nine Missouri River states.	CIO has testified for in Senate Commerce Committee, which is very hostile. Bill next to Senate Irrigation, finally to Senate Agriculture.	Write your Senators to support through the committee process: vote expected by late summer.
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Promotes world trade; means jobs for five million in U. S., markets for farmers and industry.	Danger of unfavorable report from House Banking Committee through GOP votes and influence. Pres. Truman; CIO; independent bankers, etc., for.	Wire Rep. Spence (D Ky) chairman of Banking Committee and your own Representative to support as key to postwar jobs.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to millions in polltax states.	174 signatures on Discharge Petition No. 1, 44 needed to get it on floor.	Ask your Representative to sign DP 1 if he hasn't yet done so.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Bi-partisan bill making FEPC permanent.	Still stalled in House Rules Committee; filibuster may come on Senate floor.	Urge your Representatives to press for a rule to put HR 2232 on House floor.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up-- Issues to Watch

SOCIAL SECURITY: at long last, the Wagner-Murray-Dingell proposals to broaden and extend social security are going to get a hearing in Congress.

* * *

FOOD ORGANIZATION: a bill (HJ Res. 145), to put the U. S. in the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organizations has been reported favorably for House action.

This organization (FAO for short) was worked out at the United Nations Food Conference in Hot Springs, Ark., and is a consultative body to exchange information on food needs, usage, and crop conditions.

One of FDR's last messages to Congress urged that it be endorsed. It does not bind the U. S. to any set policy on food production or consumption.

* * *

WAR CRIMINALS: Rep. King's (D. Cal.), bill (H Con Res. 30), to punish Axis war criminals has been endorsed by the State Dept. The House Committee on Foreign Relations is expected to give it a favorable report this week.

The bill is designed to get around legalistic red tape that Hitler's friends in this country and Britain will try to use to save him and his pals from the gallows. It also applies to Hirohito and other sons of heaven.

CIO has testified for the bill. Write your Congressman to support.

* * *

WORLD TRADE: Congress is fighting out the reciprocal trade act renewal now, with Pres. Truman, Cordell Hull and other leaders urging renewal, GOP opposing it.

The act allows the government to reduce U. S. tariffs in return for reductions of tariffs that shut out our goods in foreign countries. CIO will testify for renewal.

The Senate Small Business Committee is holding hearings on world trade as it affects small business. Sen. Pepper (D. Fla.), is chairman.

* * *

'EQUAL' RIGHTS: this ancient phony that would rob men and women workers of all social and protective laws under the guise of equality will be coming up again soon.

President Truman was induced to endorse it by leaders of the Natl. Women's Party, who have persuaded other political figures, including Henry Wallace, to support their basically anti-labor proposition.

* * *

For School Lunches

Rep. Gordon L. McDonough (R. Cal.), writes the Guide to ask that he be recorded as having voted for the school lunch program, which squeaked through the House by one vote (without a roll call) three weeks ago.

Rep. McDonough points out that the Guide story on the vote, which was headed "GOP Fights Schoolkids," was by inference unfair to him. The Guide is glad to learn that he voted for the program.

BRITISH DELEGATES: These four English women will tour America to see how our people live and work. Left to right: Edith Maycock, Barbara Bates, Mary Jane Brodie and Margaret Jennings.

AMERICAN DELEGATION: The four trade unionists who have just returned from an eight weeks' trip to England, are, left to right, Grace Blackett, Anne Murcovich, Julia Parker and Maida Springer.

Labor Education

Midwest Meet

The tentative program for the Midwest Education Conference to be held at the Hotel Stevens, Chicago, May 19-20 under the sponsorship of the Natl. CIO Dept. of Education & Research, was announced this week by Kermit Eby, director.

Discussions rather than long speeches will be the method followed at the conference. At the Saturday morning session beginning at 10 o'clock, Director Eby will give a 20-minute opening speech followed by three ten-minute talks on the educational job of helping get new members, assimilating them, and helping them solve their problems.

The Saturday afternoon session from 2 to 5:30 will be devoted to (1) Techniques for Stewards' Training; (2) Training for Collective Bargaining, during which the United Auto Workers' slide film, "Svenson's Seniority," will be shown; (3) Education of New Members and the Rank and File.

At a dinner meeting Saturday evening arranged by the Chicago CIO Council, Clinton Golden, asst. to the president of the United Steelworkers, will speak on returning veterans and education. The Amalgamated Chorus and the Stage for Action will entertain and films will be shown.

Sunday morning will be devoted to a closed session for conferences between education people and Director Eby. At a luncheon at 12:30, Arthur Moore, editor, the Pantagraph, Bloomington, Ill., will discuss the relationship of farmers and workers.

The afternoon session will consist of round-table discussions on veterans, radio, summer schools and institutes and counselling.

Because of the ODT ruling, it has been necessary to limit attendance at the conference to 50, by invitation only. For information, write to George T. Guernsey, chairman of the Program Committee, at National CIO.

* * *

Labor's Viewpoint

Schools, churches and other groups are becoming increasingly interested in forming friendly relations with organized labor and learning the point of view of American trade unionists. Two incidents indicating this trend turned up at Natl. CIO headquarters this week.

Kermit Eby, director of the Dept. of Education and Research, was elected a member of the Federal Council of Churches' Industrial Division, and was invited to become a member of a group of 14 laymen selected by the American Assn. of School Administrators' 1947 Yearbook Commission to discuss with the Commission "some of the serious inadequacies of present day public school education."

PICTURE CREDITS: p. 1 Goodwin, Washington Post; p. 2 Dem. Comm., p. 3 Marston Pierce, p. 4 Saul Levin, p. 5 Sidney R. Bayne, p 6 and 7 Norman Driscoll and Sidney R. Bayne, p. 12, Black Star.

Goodwill Tour is Working Women's Dream Come True

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Many a working woman tending her machine through long weary hours might let her thoughts float away in day dreams, imagining herself traveling in far away strange lands, being feted by well-known people, with photographers dogging her steps, shooting pictures when she talks or smiles, just as though she were a movie star.

Such a day dream has come true for eight working women newly arrived in this country from Great Britain. Four of them are English workers chosen by their trade unions to become labor ambassadors of good will to America, and four are Americans returning from an eight-weeks' trip to Great Britain where they saw the people at work in their grim struggle to help win the war.

The exchange visits were arranged by agencies of the British and American governments.

This week the eight trade union women were in Washington, being entertained by labor and government leaders and telling their stories at press conferences, banquets, luncheons, government hearings, and being questioned by reporters and shot by photographers.

All eight of the women agree earnestly that American and British workers have many common problems that must be met through understanding and unity between the labor movements of England and America. All are active trade unionists.

The four British women are Barbara Bates, member of the Natl. Union of General & Municipal Workers and a shop steward at an engineering plant in Manchester; Jane Brodie of the Edinburgh Electrical Trades Union, senior shop steward at Bruce, Peebles & Co., Edinburgh; Margaret Jennings, vice-president of the Nottingham and District Hosiery Workers; and Edith Maycock, member of the Tailors and Garment Workers Union and executive chairwoman at a clothing concern in Kettering.

The American women comprise two from the CIO and two from the AFL. They are Anne Murkovich, of Reading, Pa., organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, a division of the CIO Textile Workers Union; Mrs. Grace Blackett, intl. representative, CIO United Automobile Workers at Chicago; Mrs. Maida Springer, Brooklyn, New York, Negro member of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, and educational director for Local 132; Mrs. Julia Parker, of Boston, organizer for the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL.

Anne Murcovich was deeply impressed by the trip of the four Americans to England and was all for more and bigger exchange visits. "Rank and file people like us can find out more in a week than officials can in a month," she said.

Mrs. Blackett said she was surprised to find the children so healthy and happy and praised the British for the way they had organized wartime living. "The British people's attitude toward the war is that it is a job that has got to be done, and they do it," she said.

Mrs. Parker was impressed with the courage the British women displayed. "Three million women were brought into war industry and moved about where they were needed," she said. "A truly remarkable job was done."

Mrs. Springer told how the money contributed by American trade unions was spent to help establish rest-break homes, seamen's clubs and other places to relieve the stress of wartime living.

The British women agreed that they found America even more remarkable than they had expected, particularly the quantity of food. Miss Brodie described the tiny weekly ration in Britain by contrast and Miss Bates passed her wooden-soled shoe around to show what was being worn in England.

Miss Jennings, who said she worked a 54-hour week in a hosiery factory, declared that she had "expected a lot of America," but did not expect as much as she saw.

Miss Maycock spoke at length on the problem of the British woman working after the war. "Women have played their part in winning the war and have a right to play their part in the postwar period," she said.

Following their week in Washington, each of the British women will accompany one of the American women to her home city to visit war plants and discuss labor problems with union officials and others. Then each will make an extensive tour of different parts of the country, similar to the trips made by the American women in England.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

ART by MORT MESKIN
STORY by COLE GREENE

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

IT'S NOT all work at Port Hope Labor College, Ontario, Canada.

OUTDOOR FORUM Features Miss Ruth Young, N. Y. UE-CIO Leader

Learning and Laughter

VACATIONS WITH pay are pretty much accepted practice these days. Clauses providing for them have become a standard feature of union contracts in most major industries. Unions are constantly liberalizing these features. At present 85% of all workers under agreement enjoy paid vacations. This means 11,500,000 workers. Compare this with 1940, when only 25% of American workers covered by agreements could consider a paid vacation as their right.

The vacation period itself has been liberalized. A year ago the most common type of vacation clause was one week's vacation with pay after one year's service. At present 56%—or 4,500,000 workers—get two weeks of paid vacation.

Unions fought for these paid vacations, and there are many unions which use the time for both rest and education. Such an experiment was conducted by the Canadian Workers' Educational Assn. in an old mill at Port Hope, Ontario, which was turned into a combination labor college and summer camp. A week's stay included room and board and tuition, which cost $13. Vacationists at this particular camp were war workers, most of them members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. An hour in the morning and an hour in the evening were devoted to classes, quizzes, movies, debates, symposia and discussion groups—the rest of the time to boating, swimming, picnicking and sunning.

This years Summer School will be held at Ocean Park, British Columbia, from June 16 to 26.

The value of a vacation for war workers was pointed out by Dr. Morris Raskin, director of the Auto Workers Health Institute. He declared that health is impaired, while production suffers when war workers do not take their vacations. He declares this is also a major cause of absenteeism.

SETTING UP exercises are a part of the curricula—for some!

RAPT attention is shown by Hugo Blum and Miss Betty Rubin

KP DUTY is made lighter by cooperative efforts of the students.

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 18 — 82 — April 30, 1945

National Edition

President Truman—The Record

(See Page 3)

AS HARDWORKING SENATOR, Chairman of Senate War Investigating Committee. AS PRESIDENT, SENDING off our delegation to the United Nations Conference with the message "we must learn to live together in peace". Left to right are: Virginia Gildersleeve, Senator Tom Connally of Texas, and Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

San Francisco

"Man On The Street" Is a Delegate Here

By LEN DE CAUX

THIS IS THE story of the Man in the Street who crashed the San Francisco United Nations Conference. Goodness knows how he did it. The whole area was "restricted" for blocks. You had to show a pass to get anywhere near the opera house where the big show opened. As for actually getting in, that took two or three more passes and all sorts of priorities and the atmosphere was sultry for miles around with the sulking of countless big-shots who couldn't get seats.

But anyhow there he was, watching history being made.

Frankly it wasn't much of a show. Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer would have staged things much more impressively. Even that ham, Hitler, in his hey-day would have made a big event like this much more exciting.

There wasn't any fanfare or pageantry. Just a band playing non - controversial tunes like "Stout-Hearted Men" and "Sweetheart, Come Back to Me," until the affair started.

There wasn't even any gold braid, brass hats or flashy uniforms. Just the work-a-day GI uniforms of a line-up of non-coms at the back of the stage. Soldiers and sailors who might just have walked in off the street.

In front of the stage were four gents in business suits. Secretary Stettinius was pretty slick to look at, with his silvery hair and his Arrow-Collar features. But not too impressive in the flesh, unless you were one to be overawed by superior clothing salesmen or bankers who prided themselves on that executive look.

As for the other three—a governor, a mayor and the secretary of the Conference—they weren't any great shakes to look at, no "hunks of heartbreak," as his kid sister would have put it.

So the Man cast his optics over the crowd in the orchestra seats, the folks he'd been rubbing shoulders with as he came in—Britishers, Russians, French, Chinese, Latin American, colored folks from a number of countries—46 varieties of nationalities in all.

Aside from the Saudi Arabians, who were costumed A La-Rudolph Valentino in the Sheik of Araby, the rest of the crowd were just like the Men in the Street you'd run into any time while strolling in New York or San Francisco.

The British were just as stringy and rosy-cheeked. The French as vivacious; the Russians as husky and healthy-looking; the Negroes as dark; the Chinese as small and dapper; the Latins as dusky and smoldering; the Norwegians as tall and fair, as any cross-section of their Americanized compatriots.

The Man suddenly remembered that his wife would be asking him how he it felt to be rubbing shoulders with the great, and what they looked like and how they behaved — these high and mighty rulers of nations, these Machiavellian diplomats, these chess-players with the destinies of millions. He knew she wouldn't be satisfied with his customary crack: "Just take their clothes off and they all look and act alike."

So he looked around for some of the guys with headline names. But it was funny how much smaller and more ordinary they looked in the flesh than on the newsreels struttin' their stuff from one historic scene to another, or talkin' at you with faces spread all over the screen.

There was Anthony Eden, pink-faced (you missed that on the screen), gangling and boyish. Over there was Molotov, chubby and friendly-looking—rather like his corner grocer, the Man thought—talking to a big fellow like a steelworker in Sunday clothes, Kuznetsov, in fact, who used to work in Pittsburgh mills.

And there—but shucks, he'd just have to tell his wife they all looked and acted like ordinary folks, like any other Man in the Street, in fact.

The Man cocked his ear for the speaking. First, it was just a voice by radio from Washington.

(Continued on Page 5)

AS SENATOR FROM Missouri, Truman opposed the rail wage cut, 1938.

HE HEADED THE Senate War Investigating Committee, known by his name.

HE URGED THE excess profits tax, and was known as a supporter of FDR.

THE TRUMAN COMMITTEE looked into everything, even the soup at Camp Meade, Md. The War Investigating Committee with the Camp Meade cook, shown above are: Wallgren of Washington, Joseph Ball of Minnesota, Tom Connally of Texas, and Ralph Brewster of Maine.

THEY ALSO INVESTIGATED shortages in aluminum, steel, zinc, and manpower. Here Senator Truman is shown with Charles E. Wilson, and K. T. Keller of the Chrysler Corporation, testifying on peacetime conversion. Left to right are: Joseph H. Ball, Truman, Mr Keller and Charles E. Wilson.

HE CAMPAIGNED WITH R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers and spoke on jobs and security at Detroit's Labor Day Rally.

CIO DELEGATES FROM his home state gave Vice President Truman facts on labor's plea for revision of the Little Steel Formula.

WITH HIS WIFE looking on, Vice President Harry S. Truman took the oath as President of the U. S. at the White House shortly after the announcement of Roosevelt's death. He pledged to follow in FDR's path.

President Harry S. Truman— The Record And the Tasks Ahead

Part I—As Senator

Speculation about President Truman began the day he took office on Roosevelt's death. What manner of man is the new Commander-in-Chief? What does he stand for and what will he do?

Most of the daily press speculated cheerfully—from their own point of view. Truman, they said, was a "conservative," compared to FDR. He would quickly start making a turn to the right and away from the policies and programs of the past 12 years.

The speculators put special stress on Truman's relations with Congress. With him in office, we would see a new "era of good feeling" between Capitol Hill and the White House—as though there'd been nothing but bitter rows between the two arms of government since 1933. The implication again, of course, was that Truman would get along with Congress because he would stay strictly to the "right of center" and wouldn't push things as they were pushed from 1933 to 1945.

The speculation is belied by the facts. President Truman will, of course, get along with Congress. FDR got along with Congress, too—after all, Congress passed on every New Deal legislative program, and voted for the overwhelming majority of them.

LOOK AT THE RECORD

The best way to answer speculation on Truman is to do what President Truman recommended to newsmen at his first press conference—look at the record.

President Truman served 10 years in the Senate before he became Vice President, and three months as presiding head of the Senate in 1945. During that time he was one of the most consistent supporters of the New Deal and the Roosevelt foreign policy.

Truman was for the New Deal in its infancy. Back in 1935 he voted for the Wagner Act; for Social Security; for the Tennessee Valley Authority; for loans at lower interest rates to farmers.

Two years later, he voted for the Wage and Hour Act; for the Civilian Conservation Corps that helped thousands of youth now fighting for their country; for the Wagner Housing Act, first move toward a national housing program; and on the world trade front, for the reciprocal trade agreements that stimulated U. S. exports after the disastrous slump of the Hoover depression.

The next year he voted for the first Federal civil liberties bill and began a series of votes supporting FDR's policy of rearming the nation for the war that broke out in Europe that year.

In 1940, he voted for the first Selective Service Act, for parity prices for farm produce. The following year he again voted for preparedness measures—arming of merchant ships, lend-lease, repeal of the neutrality act, and other measures that helped ready the nation for defense.

HE VOTED WITH FDR

By 1942, civilian mobilization issues were coming to the front, along with the more purely military ones. In this year, Truman voted for the first price control act and for renegotiation of contracts in an attempt to recapture some of the outrageous profits that were being made on war orders. He also voted for repeal of the polltax in a vote to end the filibuster in the Senate, and for the first GI vote bill.

Sharp struggles took place in Congress in 1943 around such issues as Farm Security, the Natl. Youth Administration, the Smith-Connally anti-union act, taxes and the like. Again Truman voted with FDR and the progressive position, with the exception of FDR's proposed $25,000 salary limit, which he opposed, and the price rollback plan.

The first Senate test vote on postwar foreign policy came on the Connally resolution pledging the U. S. in general terms to continuing United Nations cooperation. Truman voted for it, while criticizing its vagueness.

The election year saw Truman, before he knew he would be candidate for Vice President, again voting with FDR, with the important exception of the tax bill. Here he voted to over-ride the veto of the bill FDR described as "relief for the greedy, not the needy."

That year he voted for the Federal GI ballot plan; for the polltax repeal on a new cloture motion; for eliminating the requirement of income statements by unions, which CIO and AFL denounced. He voted against an attempt to kill the Fair Employment Practice Committee; against an attempt to kill TVA, and for subsidies to help hold down food costs.

Finally, in 1943, his vote as presiding officer broke a tie in the Senate on renewing lend-lease aid to our allies.

This is Truman's record. It shows him a steady, long time supporter of the main New Deal-pro-United Nations program that FDR charted from 1933 until that tragic day in April of this year.

Part II—As President

Truman's first word as President was to reassure the nation that he would follow out Roosevelt's program, with special emphasis on foreign policy. In turn, CIO President Murray pledged CIO's support to the new Commander-in-Chief, both in the war and in the period to follow victory.

What are the issues he is most likely to face in the next few weeks that will test his leadership—and also test the ability of progressive people to help him and Congress carry out his pledge?

No. 1 issue will be ratification of world security plans to come out of the San Francisco meeting. Here Truman will need the support of every CIO member and every individual who wants a future of peace and security. Some 18 or 20 doubtful Senate votes must be won to ensure the two-thirds majority needed for ratification.

Next on the foreign policy list is the Bretton Woods world trade agreement, now in the House for endorsement in HR 2211. Truman had already announced that he's for Bretton Woods without reservations. GOP House leaders are trying to stall the bill, hope to kill it by amendments.

Renewal of the reciprocal trade pact, which gives the government power to cut U. S. tariffs in return for cuts in foreign trade barriers, is also up in the Senate, has been endorsed by Truman.

Reconversion from war to civilian economy will take the center of the stage with V-E Day and will be on us as a main domestic issue by the defeat of Japan. Truman worked hard for a reconversion bill in 1944 that would have protected workers and veterans as well as industry. He can be expected to lead in the new campaign for an adequate reconversion program.

JOBS FOR ALL

Full employment, keystone of postwar security not only for this country but for the entire world, has Truman's support. In a speech made March, 1944, in Detroit, Truman said:

". . . we must be resolved to utilize the new productive capacity of the splendid plants built during this war. We must use them to provide jobs for the men in our armed services and for the war workers. . . . To do so, however, will require the utmost cooperation and mutual understanding between government, business and labor."

These are only four of the main issues Truman will face in the immediate future. At no time in history have the American people been faced with greater problems. Franklin Roosevelt laid out the path for us to follow, built up the country's strength for victory and postwar security.

Truman has pledged to carry out the legacy of Roosevelt. The CIO has pledged him the support of six million working men and women. He—and the country, and ourselves as part of our country—will need all the help we can give him.

ON MONDAY, APRIL 16, little more than 72 hours after taking the oath, President Truman gave his address to the Joint Houses of Congress. The keynote was expressed in the words: "I call upon all Americans to help me keep our nation united in defense of those ideals which have been so eloquently proclaimed by Franklin Roosevelt."

HE CROSSES Pennsylvania Avenue from his temporary residence in the Blair House to the White House.

"Nothing shall shake our determination to punish the war criminals even though we must pursue them to the ends of the earth."—President Harry S. Truman.

Punish the Guilty

Americans have been seeing some shocking sights these past few weeks.

They have been seeing the face of fascism in its German-Nazi and its Japanese-warlord forms. And they are horrified—whether they are GI's looking at Buchenwald or Manila or civilians looking at the news photos or the movie reels.

The first natural reaction is one of horror and incredulity. After that comes the desire to see that the criminals who made Buchenwald and Manila possible are caught, tried and punished.

This is more than simply a matter of retribution or revenge. It is a demand that these creatures be punished so that such things can never happen again.

The CIO put it well at the Chicago convention last November, when the delegates said in unanimous resolution:

"The full and stern punishment of war criminals must be assured. The German people must be taught that they shall atone for the crimes and horrors which they have visited upon this earth. The German industrialists and Junkers shall not receive any amnesty through their business and social contacts in the victorious nations to renew their drive for world conquest in the future."

A Matter of Decency

One of the most depressing sights on Capitol Hill is the current "probe" into food, and especially meat, shortages.

To listen to the probers, both official and self-appointed, you would get the impression that the American people have no sense of decency or honor left, that they were only concerned with themselves and to hell with the misery of the rest of the world.

This line comes particularly from the GOP side, with men like Senators Wherry (Neb.) and Taft (O.) as its chief exponents—though it must be said for a Democrat like Wheeler (Mont.) that he can insult the American people with the best of them.

The real reason why these professional viewers-with-alarm are screaming so loudly is revealed in Philip Murray's letter to the Congress on price control, in which he tells the Congressmen that cracking price ceilings is no way to crack food shortages.

Murray shows that men like Wherry and Taft are trying to break down the whole structure of price control, in order to increase the food industry's already fantastic profits.

That is why they lie about the American people when they shout that we dare not send food to Europe, for fear we will starve at home, that we mustn't be a universal "Santa Claus" and the rest of that line. They lie to us and about us because they want to use an imagined terror to enrich their friends and associates in the food industry.

FDR was right when he said, a few weeks before his death, that the American people would endure food shortages in order to help feed the starving victims of fascism.

Now comes the Gallup poll to show that 65 per cent of the American people are willing to put up with the shortages to help the people of Europe. Twenty-seven per cent are unwilling, eight per cent don't know.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

SAN Francisco pops up from the water's edge to greet passengers arriving by the Oakland ferry—beautiful, solid, inspiring—a monument to human ambition and teamwork.

But this unified impression is dissipated as you mingle with the cosmopolitan crowds in this temporary capital of the world.

As the United Nations conference gets under way, San Francisco is a babel of tongues and rumors and propaganda.

Hovering around the delegations of the 46 nations are lobbyists for almost every interest and advocates of almost every idea under the sun.

And threading their way through the packed hotel lobbies, with attentive ears and ready questions, are the largest corps of reporters ever to cover any single event in world history.

They are the honey that attracts many busy bees. Or, more accurately, they represent the spotlight of world attention which many actors are trying to share.

So, here in San Francisco, it is sometimes hard to keep one's attention on the unity and inspiration of the main act.

It is not a free-for-all debate on all the problems of the world. It is not concerned with boundaries, peace terms and conflicting national interests.

The sole purpose of this conference is to establish a world organization capable of taking collective action to prevent future wars, and to formulate principles and procedures under which some of the world's other problems may be worked out more satisfactorily in the future than in the past.

★ ★ ★

The San Francisco conference will be overwritten, but it will also be underwritten.

It will be overwritten because so many reporters have to file so much daily copy over so long a period, even when the main news is scant.

It will be overwritten because friction makes news, while harmony doesn't, even though the friction may be incidental, while the harmony is fundamental.

It will be overwritten because some powerful press interests are out to sabotage the conference by exaggerating differences and confusing the main issues.

But San Francisco will be underwritten by the peoples of the world, because there is universal agreement on its prime purpose among all peace-loving humanity, and because it represents the only hopeful alternative to future world disaster.

It will be underwritten because the governments of the great powers have in advance reached substantial agreement.

It will be underwritten because world labor is organizing to back it to the limit and foil the saboteurs.

★ ★ ★

The propoganda of the saboteurs follows certain obvious lines:

(1) It plays up the notion of "Uncle Sucker," claiming our diplomacy is softly sacrificing American national interests.

(2) It poses as champion of the small powers against the big powers.

(3) It sneers at world unity as utopian and unrealistic, while at the same time seeking to create disillusionment by measuring results against utopian and unrealistic standards.

(4) It directs suspicion and hostility against the Soviet Union, to undermine the peaceful and friendly co-existence of capitalist and socialist societies, upon which world peace and cooperation must depend.

★ ★ ★

To counter this propoganda, we have the evidence of our close war unity with the Soviet Union, despite different social systems; the great and obvious need of the USSR for prolonged peace and reconstruction; the Teheran, Yalta and Dumbarton Oaks agreements; and the success of the London labor conference in uniting the Soviet unions with the rest of world labor.

As to the smaller powers, they naturally seek all the influence they can obtain. But the big powers, representing most of the world's population and controlling overwhelming military and economic power, will have to be primarily responsible for preserving peace and promoting prosperity, and the whole San Francisco structure depends on their continued and unbroken unity. The small powers can't become the tail that wags the dog without disaster to themselves.

And as to Uncle Sam being "Uncle Sucker," that's the biggest laugh of all. American diplomacy is as hardheaded as any in the national self-interest, which it is setting first in this instance, too.

Any fighting man and his family can testify how great is America's stake in world peace. And our democracy and prosperity depend upon the closest cooperation with other peoples to combat Fascism, to expand world trade and to raise living standards.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 April 30, 1945 No. 18

World Labor Delegates Meet

Building the foundations of popular support for the world unity in the making at the United Nations Conference across the bay in San Francisco, leaders of world labor continued their business sessions this week in the City Club Hotel at Oakland.

These sessions are a continuation of the meeting of the 13-man administrative committee of the World Trade Union Conference, which began in Washington, D. C., April 13 and recessed the next week to enable its members to attend the San Francisco UNCIO.

While continuing their work on the draft constitution of the new World Trade Union Federation and on other plans for its formal launching at Paris in September, the delegates also maintained close contact with their respective national delegations to UNCIO and were planning formal representation to the big conference on behalf of the world labor body.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray is doing double duty as chairman of the administrative committee and consultant to the United States UNCIO delegation. James B. Carey is also attending UNCIO sessions as Murray's associate.

Vasili Kuznetsov, leader of the Soviet trade union movement, is also officially associated with both meetings as a member of the Soviet UNCIO delegation as well as a member of the world labor administrative committee.

The British Labor Party is represented in that country's UNCIO delegation by three members.

CIO's vice presidents are also on hand to make American labor's influence felt in the planning of the new world order.

Veterans' Hospitals Criticized

Improved treatment of patients in Veterans' Administration hospitals and cooperation of the CIO with both old and new veterans' organization are urged in the report of the enlarged CIO Veterans' Committee, headed by Clinton S. Golden and including CIO Sec. Treas. James B. Carey.

The committee found that more veterans' hospitals, as Congress has provided, are needed, and that the Veterans' Administration should be more eager to use improved medical practice in treating the hospitalized veterans.

The committee also called for an increase in the $23 to $28 wages for the 40-hour week now paid laundry, kitchen, clerical workers, physiotherapy and surgical assistants, as officials of the CIO United Federal Workers recommended.

New veterans' organizations with progressive policies "will become part of our national life and are most worthy of participation by the CIO and its veterans' members," the committee found.

While not overlooking the big business control and anti-labor attitudes of several of the veterans' organizations of the last war, the committee declared "progressive and democratic forces in these organizations need support."

Murray Writes Each Congressman Urging Continued Price Control

In a letter to all members of Congress last week, Pres. Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations said that the CIO is "convinced price ceilings are not the cause of the meat shortage, and that relaxation of price ceilings will not produce more meat."

Urging that price control be "continued and fortified" he said that "what we need is stimulation of all possible production, accompanied by adequate control of the supply from the slaughter house right through to the retail counter where families buy their meat."

President Murray had been following in the press the inquiry into meat supplies and black markets by a subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the Senate.

"Publicity emerging from the hearings conducted by the subcommittee seems to point more toward relaxation of price control than to strong action against black markets. One Senator is quoted as condoning the purchase of meat on black markets in the absence of meat available through lawful channels. If dissent from that view was expressed in committee, it escaped my notice in the press," he said.

"Surely these must be distorted accounts of what the current inquiry is leading to. It cannot be possible, while our country is still at war and our fighting men are engaged with the enemy, that any committee of the Congress is willing to lend itself in any degree whatsoever to an undermining of public morale here at home. Surely there can be no intended purpose to exploit our difficulties with respect to a diminished meat supply, or to suggest that relaxation of essential wartime controls should be proposed to ease these difficulties."

"There is enough food, over and above military requirements, for all of us in this country, provided it be properly shared and strictly rationed. To perform only a part of our vitally important obligation to the hungry people of Europe we shall have to maintain strict rationing. We are fully prepared to do what is necessary to make good the liberation of subject peoples for which our fighting men have given their lives." . . .

President Murray also pointed out:

1.—That the overall reduction in meat supply is due to a curtailment of hog production last year, which in turn resulted from the fact that reserves of feed grain supplies had been used up, and some reduction in livestock numbers was necessary.

2.—The meat scarcity which confronts housewives at the butcher's counter is aggravated by the black market.

3.—The large family of CIO is prepared to undergo all the inconveniencies that may be required of us in order that there shall be no question of our ability to supply the armed services with the best of everything we have and to meet our obligations to the utmost for the relief of hunger and starvation in Europe.

4.—But Congress must deal firmly with home front problems in the interest of the common good.

"We expect our government to insist upon equal sharing of whatever limitation in supply is necessary. We expect it to control the distribution of supplies so as to make unnecessary any participation in illegal practice on the part of the patriotic and decent citizens. We expect that those who dare to traffic for their profit in the bootlegging of the necessities of life be apprehended and given the treatment they deserve . . . as criminals," concluded Philip Murray.

"Man On the Street"

(Continued from Page 1)

Doggone it, that was ordinary too, just as ordinary a voice as you might hear in any street crowd. President Truman with his Missouri twang and a delivery that wouldn't win any prizes in an elocution contest, couldn't put over a radio speech like the old maestro, FDR.

But what he said made good horse sense. It rang true and sincere, like anyone does when he's getting something off his chest that he really feels is important.

"If we don't want to die together in war, we must learn to live together in peace.

"We still have a choice between the alternatives: the continuation of international chaos, or the establishment of a world organization for the enforcement of peace."

The Man in the Street was a bit of a cynic. At any rate no mush-head. He knew that most of the cat-and-dog stuff about Poland, power politics, diplomatic finagling, deadlocks, etc., was played up in the headlines to sell papers, or to grind axes for Hearst and his cronies. But he knew his politics. His human nature and his history—the pulling and tugging between nations as between people and that the brotherhood of man is not just around the corner.

So it made sense to hear Truman saying that the San Francisco Conference was not trying to settle all the world's problems, but to take one single step on which all men of goodwill are agreed.

"It is not our assignment to settle specific questions or territories, boundaries, citizenship and reparations," Truman said. "This conference will devote its energies and its labors exclusively to the single problem of setting up the essential organization to keep the peace. To write the fundamental charter . . . to create the structure . . . to provide the machinery, which will make future peace, not only possible, but certain."

There was plenty of pulling and tugging in American politics, the Man reflected, and finagling and smoke-filled rooms and selfish grabbing. But when enough Men in the Street wanted anything badly enough, they usually got it. They got Roosevelt, for instance, and they got enough national unity, despite all the bickering, to win a war as big as the present one.

The more the Man looked over the layout and thought about it, the more at home he felt. This was his show. The absence of fanfare and strutting and high falutin' paraphenalia was not coincidental. The Men in the Street in London, Moscow, Paris, Chungking and everywhere else wanted this thing that was cooking in San Francisco as much as they wanted anything. And as much as he did himself.

Their delegates might be stuffed shirts some of the time. But, on this proposition, they were human enough to know what it means to lose a brother, a son or a friend on the battlefield or to see their country bombed and devastated—and human enough to want to stop it from happening again. And even if they weren't they'd hesitate to face their own people without a record of having done their best.

I tried to interview the Man in the Street as he left the conference. But he wasn't one person, he was thousands. And the burden of the comment, in 46 tongues was: "We've got to make a go of it."

Come to think of it, we're all Men (or Women) in the Street when we hit the sidewalk, even diplomats. We've got that much common humanity. And millions upon millions of our kind, all over the world are looking to San Francisco, as the conference goes on, and also saying, "We've got to make a go of it."

World's Biggest Navel Orange Center Goes CIO

More than 1,000 workers in packing houses in Redlands, Riverside, Highland and Bryn Mawr, Calif., largest navel orange growing district in the world, have voted by a large margin in an NLRB election for the CIO Citrus Workers Organizing Committee, reports the California CIO Council. The CWOC is part of the Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers.

The victory climaxed a two-month organizing drive started when workers began spontaneous strikes over low wages and bad conditions and makes the CIO organizing committee bargaining agency in 30 packing houses throughout the state.

Skilled Groups Get Pay Boost

A pay increase of 5c an hour for all skilled maintenance employes of five automotive companies was ordered last week by the War Labor Board to "restore a proper rate relationship between skilled maintenance workers and tool and die makers."

The orders affect some 30,000, or only five per cent of the hourly-rated emuployes in about 150 plants of General Motors, Hudson, Packard, Murray and Chrysler. Three CIO unions are involved — United Automobile Workers, Rubber Workers and Electrical Workers.

The Board specified that its orders are not to form the basis for any claim of intra-plant inequity for production, tool room or other workers in the plants involved.

High Court Upholds Union

By Frank Donner

CIO Assistant Council

The Supreme Court on Monday, April 23, announced two important decisions which upheld the findings of the National Labor Relations Board that an employer may not discharge individuals for violation of company rules on solicitation of union members or distribution of union literature during non-working time on company premises. The National Labor Relations Board held that such rules, even when applied to all types of solicitation or literature distribution uniformly were invalid when applied to such activities on the employee's own time even though these activities were conducted on the employer's premises.

In the Le Tourneau case two members of the United Steelworkers of America were suspended two days each for distributing union literature on their own time on company-owned parking lots in violation of a long-standing rule adopted to control littering and petty thievery. Although there was no union bias involved in the adoption of the rule, the Board and the Supreme Court held that the employer must accommodate the absolute use of his property to the employees' right to organize.

In the Republic Aviation case the company before the existence of any union activity in the plant adopted a general rule against solicitation of any type. The UAW started an organizing campaign in the plant and one member of the union after being warned about the rule passed out application cards to employees on his own time during lunch periods. He was discharged and the Board held that the discharge was in violation of the National Labor Relations Act and the the rule itself violated the National Labor Relations Act since it interfered with the employees and their organizational rights. A second issue involved in the Republic Aviation case was the discharge of three employees for wearing UAW union steward buttons. The employer contended that the men by wearing steward buttons falsely represented their authority since the union was not the bargaining agent in the plant. The Board and the court held that the wearing of the union steward buttons carried no implication of recognition by the employer where there was no competing labor organization in the plant. The three employes discharged were therefore ordered reinstated with back pay.

These two decisions are of great significance in clarifying the organizational rights of labor unions. They unequivocally state that in the absence of special circumstances an employer may not so enforce his property rights as to interfere with the organizational rights guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act. Where no special showing is made the Labor Board will find that a plant rule which interferes with union activity, even though enforced in a uniform and nondiscriminatory way, is a violation of the National Labor Relations Act and discharges made pursuant to such a rule likewise violate that Act.

NORA IS FIVE years old. She has painted an easter egg, and a doll, and expects you to admire her work.

THIS IS PATSY'S first day here. She tried very hard not to get paint on her immaculate pinafore.

Union Play Group

MRS. ETHEL QUINN is a member of the Woman's Auxiliary Child Welfare Committee. Her husband is a UFWA member, working for the War Production Board. She helps the youngest group with their dancing.

DANTE RADICI IS very proud of his young pupil's paintings. He teaches them to work dancing. These are the five year olds at the art table. Large muffin tins hold the clean Radici what they're painting. Sometimes you can see it too.

HEY ARE HOLDING butterflies in their hands, and it is important that they n't escape. After awhile they'll fly away with them.

ATURDAY MORNING at the United Federal Workers of America Washington office at 1212 Eighteenth Street is children's day.

Under the direction of the UFWA Women's Auxiliary, and with the cooperion of a dancing teacher, an art teacher, a pianist, a story teller and helpful others, children of government workers are given a full program of morning ay and education, while confined housewives, can escape to do last minute shopng and other household or personal chores. The time is from 9:30 to 12:30. e children are from three to five years of age. They are divided into two roups. While the three to four year olds dance, the four to five year olds aint and work with clay. Then the smaller ones, trudge downstairs to the art om, while the older ones climb upstairs to flutter their wings like airplanes or tterflies, and the younger ones splash colored paints on paper, and call them rees," or "birds," or whatever they like. The Women's Auxiliary hopes to exnd the single day into a full week's program for next year. The present cost two dollars a month.

HE'S AN AIRPLANE. First the children stand in the corner and zoom their motors, then they take off to music.

with clay and watercolors. Rose Lieberman, an auxiliary member, teaches bright primary colors. The children mix them as they will, and then tell Mr.

THERE'S ALWAYS A small crisis to contend with, like helping a three-year old on with his coat. Mrs. Quinn has two of her own and can cope with the problem. He'll be better next week, at his second session.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Millionaires Amendment

One of the biggest steals in U. S. history is being attempted in the 48 states through a proposed constitutional amendment that would limit the Federal income tax to 25 percent of gross income.

The amendment, which has passed in 14 states, calls on Congress to hold a constitutional convention for the purpose of writing a 22nd amendment which has only one purpose—to spare the rich and soak the poor.

Here are some quotes from a legal memo on the proposal prepared by CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman:

"The destructive effects upon our government of the nefarious millionaires' amendment can hardly be overstated. This proposed amendment would permit millionaires who now pay about $800,000 on an income of $1,000,000 to pay only $250,000 tax while people with small incomes would pay at least 25 percent.

"A man with a $2,000 income who now pays about $175 would have to pay $500 with no exemptions. Enormous sales taxes would be saddled on that portion of the population least able to bear them.

"A tremendous windfall would be created for profiteers who have made incredible billions of profits out of the war. It would be a tragedy for every farmer and wage earner and small businessman in this country."

Sponsors of the amendment are some of the most notorious characters in and out of public life. Rep. Wright Patman (D. Tex.) has denounced one of its chief agents, Sam Pettengill, a former Congressman, as "America's No. 1 Fascist."

Main backer is Frank Gannett, millionaire newspaper publisher, whose "Committee or Constitutional Government" has been exposed by the La-Follette Committee and the House Committee on Elections as subversive and pro-fascist.

The amendment has passed in 14 states. Four states have rescinded it. This is what the CIO legal memo says on the slick methods used to get it by:

"The proposal suddenly and without publicity is presented in the legislatures. There is no security from this insidious lobby until the legislature has finally adjourned.

"A favorite trick is to slip through a resolution quietly during the last hours of the session when the people are not expecting it. The group seeks as far as possible to avoid publicity and operate in an atmosphere of plush-lined efficiency.

"It is a tribute to the alertness o the people that these millionaire lobbyists have so far not added a single state to the list, while they have lost four states which repealed action ormerly taken—Arkansas, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois."

Is this gigantic tax steal being tried in your state?

Things Are Cooking

Congress is going fairly slow right now, with all eyes on San Francisco, but things are cooking none the less.

Two main foreign trade issues are active: Bretton Woods and renewal of the reciprocal trade act.

On domestic issues, principal activity going on on the hill this week is on price control and the Missouri Valley Authority.

Of these, price control is the center of a fight against the welfare of the workers and consumers generally.

Missouri Valley, which is in the first stage of a series of three Senate hearings, is meeting its first active opposition in the Senate Commerce Committee, mainly from Sens. O'Daniel (D. Tex.) and Overton (D. La.).

A dangerous stew that has reached a new boiling point is the "equal rights" amendment, which has been reported out of the House Judiciary Committee and is headed for the floor.

Thus, though the big story is in San Francisco this week, and will be for a while to come, things still need our attention in Washington.

Are you keeping your eye—in a friendly but firm way—on your Congressmen?

New Drive on Vs. Wagner Act

There's a renewed and serious drive against the Wagner Act and the right to organize in unions of your own choice going on in the House Appropriations Committee.

It's a new version of the Frey rider, which the AFL's "Colonel" John P. Frey and other enemies of labor are trying to fasten on us again in the form of a trick clause in the appropriation for the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The rider says that the NLRB cannot spend any of its funds to investigate a complaint in a case where there is a contract that has been in effect more than three months, no matter what the nature of the contract.

A recent example was the Dawson Food Products case, where an AFL union was in the field and where the UAW-CIO had won an election by 125 to six.

When the UAW tried to bargain, the company said no, we have a contract with this AFL outfit and you can't touch us. The company then proceeded to "bargain" with the AFL union that got six votes to the UAW's 125 in the election.

The Frey rider in one form or another has been with us for three years. A year ago the CIO got it interpreted to exclude company unions.

Now it threatens to come back again to hold up honest unionism everywhere—honest AFL unionism as well as CIO.

Wire Rep. Butler Hare (D.S.C.), chairman of the House Deficiency Appropriations Subcommittee, and your own Congressman to stop this attempt to destroy the Wagner Act by a trick rider on an appropriation.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control (SJ Res 30)	Renews Price Control Act.	Danger from Senate Agriculture Committee's food probe, which is being used as mask for proposal to crack meat ceilings in move to break all control.	Wire Sen. Wagner (D N. Y.), chairman of Senate Banking Committee and your two Senators to hold firm against meat packers' hi-jacking.
Missouri Valley (S 555)	Sets up MVA (like TVA) to control floods, erosion, bring new industries, jobs, farms to nine Missouri River states.	CIO has testified for in Senate Commerce Committee, which is very hostile. Bill next to Senate Irrigation, finally to Senate Agriculture.	Write your Senators to support through the committee process: vote expected by late summer.
Bretton Woods (HR 2211, S 540)	Promotes world trade; means jobs for five million in U. S., markets for farmers and industry.	Danger of unfavorable report from House Banking Committee through GOP votes and influence. Pres. Truman; CIO; independent bankers, etc., for.	Wire Rep. Spence (D Ky) chairman of Banking Committee and your own Representative to support as key to postwar jobs.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Brings vote to millions in polltax states.	176 signatures on Discharge Petition No. 1, 42 needed to get it on floor.	Ask your Representative to sign DP 1 if he hasn't yet done so.
FEPC (S 101, HR 2232)	Bi-partisan bill making FEPC permanent.	Still stalled in House Rules Committee; filibuster may come on Senate floor.	Urge your Representatives to press for a rule to put HR 2232 on House floor.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up--- Issues to Watch

MISSOURI VALLEY: the first Senate Committee report on MVA is expected to be out of the Commerce Committee by May 15. After Commerce, it goes to Senate Agriculture and then to Irrigation.

Speaking on a nationwide network this week (Apr. 30) John Brophy, chairman of the CIO-MVA Committee, urged:

"Farmers and business people, teachers, doctors and lawyers, as well as workers in industrial plants and factories, should write to their Senators now and urge them to support the Murray bill (S 555).

"They should write their Congressmen too, and tell them they favor an MVA and want the Cochran bill (HR 2203) passed in the House."

★ ★ ★

"Equal Rights": the House Judiciary Committee reported this proposed amendment last week for House action.

Write your Congressman to oppose this proposal as an opening wedge against all protective laws for men as well as women workers.

★ ★ ★

EQUAL PAY: by way of offsetting the drive for the "equal rights" proposition, progressive groups are preparing a bill to require equal pay for equal work.

This will remove the chief source of discrimination against women workers. CIO has always supported this principle, both in law and in collective bargaining.

★ ★ ★

AID TO EDUCATION: CIO support for S 181, a bill to give Federal aid to education to the sum of $300,000,000 was reiterated this week by Kermit Eby, director of research and education for the CIO. Eby told the Senate Labor Committee.

"We wish to reiterate our support of the general principles of federal aid to education and aid to the children (supporting the provision of hot lunches, transportation and recreational facilities to all children regardless of school attended) and to leave to the Senate Committee the working out of a satisfactory mechanism which would result in possible passage of a federal aid bill."

★ ★ ★

BRETTON WOODS: CIO testimony will be given on this world trade issue probably some time next week, and by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

Meantime, the Natl. Planning Assn., of which USA-CIO Asst. Pres. Clinton S. Golden is vice-chairman, has come out for the bill. (S 540, HR 2211).

GOP Congress leaders are trying to whip up solid Republican opposition. Write your Congressman again to support.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Reg. Dir. Joe Walsh, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., reports: Laux Manufacturing Co., Wilkes-Barre, CIO 99, against 63. Field Rep. Frank Vrataric conducted the campaign with the cooperation of USA Dist. Dir. Courtney Shill and USA Rep. Thomas Cann.

Geo. DeNucci, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Columbus, reports: Aluminum Corp. of America, Newark, Ohio, USA-CIO 553, AFL 210. USA Dist. Dir. Howard N. Porter conducted the campaign, assisted by Reps. Al Marsh, Archie Casanta, Jim Parrish and Red Roberts. This was an attempted raid by the AFL in a community where the AFL has held sway for the past many years.

Pres. S. H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers, reports: Patterson Ballagh Corp., Los Angeles, CIO 20, against 7. U. S. Rubber Co., Worcester, Mass., CIO 116, against 16.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Org. Dir., Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, advises: Alabama Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Mobile, Ala., IUM&SWA won over no union with 58% of the votes. Gibbons Engineering & Machine Co., Boston, the IUM&SWA won over no union with 61% of the votes. Metal Products Corp., Miami, Fla., (machinists) IUM&SWA won over no union and the AFL with 71% of the votes. Standard Mfg. Co. (machinists) IUM&SWA won over no union and the AFL with 76% of the votes.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Campaign, reports: Petrolite Wax Co., Kilgore, Texas, CIO 30, against 8. Amerada Petroleum Co., Riverdale, Calif., CIO 24, against 21. Rio Rista, Calif., Unit, CIO 13, against 9.

Pres. Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, reports: Precision Scientific Co., Chicago, CIO 194, against 31. Mining Property of U. S. Potash Co., Carlsbad, N. M., CIO 175, AFL 9. Barth Smelting Co., Newark, N. J., CIO 71, no union 1.

Geo Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, reports: Keystone Watch Division, Riverside Metal Co., Riverside, N. J., UERMWA-CIO 215, AFL 68.

Julius Emspak, Secy-Treas., UERMWA, reports: Remington-Rand Co., Ilion, N. Y. plant: Tabulating Machine Division, CIO 940, against 85; Library Bureau Division, CIO 109, against 10; Guards, CIO 10, against 0. On an overall basis, this represents a 92% majority for the UERMWA.

The Fed. Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians report: Gielow, Inc., chose CIO by a vote of 36 to 9. Collective bargaining negotiations will commence immediately.

Walter Smethurst, Dir., Paper Workers Organizing Committee, reports: Election in Plainwell, Michigan, CIO 114, no union 83. Field Reps. Charles Mitchell and Neil Chesebro directed this election.

Un. Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employees, report: Century Biscuit Co., Indianapolis, Ind., CIO 64, against 30. Intl. Rep. Ruth Bennet was in charge. Frear's Department Store, Troy, N. Y., CIO received 92 out of 153 ballots cast. Secy-Mgr. John J. Gorman, Local 40, initiated the drive and carried it to successful conclusion.

John Galluccio, P&JNW Rep. reports: Shields Inc., Mass., CIO 48, against 30.

Pres. Morris Muster, Un. Furniture Workers, reports: Galloway Pease, Sumter, S. C., CIO 71, no union 12; Jasper Veneer Mills, Jasper, Ind., CIO 42, no union 12; Model Cabinet Co. ,Memphis, Tenn., CIO 9, no union 0; Stewartstown Furn., Stewartstown, Pa., CIO 64, no union 20; Ferguson Mfg. Co., Hoboken, N. J., CIO 156, no union 22; American Furn. Co., Batesville, Ind., CIO 150, no union 65; American Furn. Co., Martinsville, Va., CIO 263, no union 135.

Geo. Martin, Reg. Dir., Shoe Workers, reports: Selby Shoe Co., Portsmouth, Ohio, CIO 1538, AFL 510, no union 60.

John C. Lawson, Intl. Secy-Treas., Stone & Allied Products Workers, reports: Dixie Granite Quarry, Tiberton, Ga., CIO 41, against 1. Intl. Reps. Sam H. Scott and John Rucker handled the organization of these workers.

At San Francisco

Pres. Murray, Sec. Carey and the CIO Vice Presidents, including the writer, are now in San Francisco for the United Nations Conference. We are looking forward to something coming out of this conference that will bring the common peoples of the world closer together. We hope it will result in real concrete international cooperation which will make the post-war world safe for liberty-loving people and strengthen democracy throughout the world.

100,000 Textile Workers To Benefit by New Order

Approval of wage increases for 50,000 cotton textile and rayon weaving workers by the Office of Economic Stabilization is " a landmark in the union's long struggle to banish substandard wages and living conditions from the cotton-rayon industry," Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union declared this week.

In its order of Feb. 20, which the OES has now finally approved, the Natl. War Labor Board also set up "guide post" wage rates for a number of specific occupations and ordered the union and the mills to negotiate a balanced wage scale on the basis of these rates, which will require approval of the WLB and the OES.

In addition to the 50,000 workers directly affected by the order, at least 50,000 more will benefit almost immediately, as their employers, under contract with the TWU, have agreed to accept whatever wage order is approved by federal agencies.

"Although the award represents only part of the demands made by the TWU upon the mills a year and a half ago, it is a step forward toward our ultimate goal, the complete elimination of substandards of wages and living," Rieve said.

"The Natl. War Labor has agreed with the union that in order to live even on the bare subsistence level of a WPA relief worker in 1935, a textile worker with a wife and two children to support today needs at least 72c an hour, or $28.80 a week.

"That wage must and will continue to be the minimum wage goal of the union for every one of this country's million and a quarter textile workers in all branches of the industry.

"We have only begun to fight for a little less poverty for textile workers."

Under the order signed last week by Director of Economic Stabilization William H. Davis, wages in 23 southern, 25 northern cotton mills and six New York and Pennsylvania rayon weaving mills are raised five cents and the minimum rate is increased from 50 to 55 cents an hour.

Travel Pay Ordered For Copper Miners

The Kennecott Copper Corp. has been ordered by the War Labor Board to pay travel time to workers at its open-pit mine operations, Santa Rita, N. Mex. Amount of payment is to be determined by the corporation and the unions involved.

The CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers represents some 650 open pit and other workers, and the AFL, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen represent other groups.

The Santa Rita mine is an open pit more than 4,000 feet long, 3,000 feet wide, and 500 feet deep. The distance from the collar, or rim, of the pit is about two miles by way of a truck road. Employes go from the collar to their work by foot, automobile or by company bus, which does not go to all places of work.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7818
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
(Celluloid or Litho-Metal)
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps
Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases
Bill Folds
All Articles Bear the Union Label
231 SO. WELLS ST. CHICAGO
Phone: Webster 4104 ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 356 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

BUY WAR BONDS

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

The tremendous interest of the people of Britain in the success of San Francisco is one of the many interesting and heartening things told us by the British trade union women who are now visiting the United States.

Margaret Jennings, who comes from the Hosiery Workers Society of Nottingham said that she noticed a much greater interest in public affairs by everyone in Britain now. They are more aware of the importance of the people participating actively in government.

She commented particularly on the interest of the youngsters. School leaving age is fourteen in England and many girls and boys enter industry then. Lately these beginners have been flooding her with requests about the union—asking especially when they can join. This growth in interest in the unions is widespread, she says, and is part of the whole awakening of the people.

The outstanding courage and endurance of our British sisters who have lived through four years of devastating war stirs our admiration. These women did not complain but their comments on conditions here told volumes.

EGGS A MIRACLE

They simply couldn't believe it when they were served two eggs for breakfast the day of their arrival. "Two eggs on one plate," they exclaimed. "In England we get an egg once a month if we are lucky."

They commented, too, on the beautiful clothes they saw in shopwindows and the attractive appearance of American women. In England clothes are rationed and just now each person gets 24 clothes ration points for six months. A suit costs eighteen points, a pair of shoes seven points, pajamas eight points, full fashioned stockings three points.

But the shortages of food and clothing were after all just minor inconveniences. The constant danger from blitz and robot bombs; the day after day working in factories with black painted windows where there was never enough light or air; the night after night sleeping in subway tunnels or other air raid shelters—those were the conditions through which British women lived and kept on the job producing for victory.

EXPECT NO PRAISE

They are very matter of fact about what they have been through. They say they did what they had to. They are not looking for praise or rewards. They say it will be worth all they have suffered if we can win an end to fascism in the word and an enduring peace.

These British trade union women are confident that out of San Francisco will come such a peace. The people are more alert now than after the last war, they say. They will not let anything stand in the way of a United Nations Organization with power to stop aggression and prevent war.

Their confidence was echoed by Secretary of State Stettinius as he arrived in San Francisco for the United Nations Conference. He said:

"I come to San Francisco with the firm belief that the United Nations are united in their determination to succeed in establishing a world organization. . . . I say it because I believe all the peaceful peoples of the world demand this of us and the governments represented at this Conference must not and will not fail them."

White Collar School July 7-21

The Summer School for White Collar Workers will be held this year at Lake Forest, Ill., July 7-21. The program will combine sports and relaxation with discussions on current problems, particularly those relating to the labor movement.

Further information may be obtained from the school's National Office, 437 West 59th St., New York 19, N. Y.

Pamphlet Notes

Dumbarton Oaks

The story of Dumbarton Oaks is given in a humourously illustrated 14-page pamphlet, "Angels Could Do It Better," being distributed by the American Labor Party in New York. It was written by Joseph Gaer, Political Action Committee pamphleteer who did "The First Round," and is illustrated by Harold Sparber.

Pamphlet Press

Two pamphlets "The People Say" and the "1945 PAC Legislative Manual, for CIO Stewards, officers and PAC workers have been issued by the California CIO Council, CIO Bldg., San Francisco 2, for use in the current political action and legislative campaign.

Labor Education News

Negro College Fund Drive

The United Negro College Fund, organized to raise $1,550,000 for 32 southern Negro schools, is now conducting its second annual drive which opened April 18. Last year some $900,000 was raised for the support of these schools with a number of CIO groups contributing to the fund.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray who has accepted membership on the Natl. Advisory Committee of the fund said he did so "because he believed" that the educational opportunities for a tenth of our population must be increased.

"An increasing number of future leaders of America, including young men and women who will rise to positions of leadership in organized labor, are being trained in these institutions. I therefore request our CIO unions to lend their financial support to the United Negro College Fund."

UAW Has New Director

Jack Zeller has been appointed educational director of the CIO United Auto Workers to succeed William Levitt, former director who has been inducted into the armed services, reports UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas.

A member of Chrysler Local 7, Zeller has been an active UAW member for the past 11 years, nine of which were spent on the production line. He served one year as Chrysler Local president, one term as vice-president, and was the Local's educational director for five years. He also edited the Local paper for six years.

NMU School Gets Big Write-up

The Natl. Maritime Union's Leadership Training School was given a glowing write-up in an illustrated article printed in the April 21 issue of Collier's. It is called "Readin', Writin' and No Strikin'"; and is written by Harry Henderson and Sam Shaw.

"Professors wouldn't approve the English used," it starts off, "but the Natl. Maritime Union has a school which teaches members how to get along with their bosses."

The seamen's bosses have responded by agreeing to send their port captains and agents to the NWU's school. Part of this friendliness, the writers note, "stems from the fact that NMU policy includes the no-strike pledge, and that the pledge has been kept faithfully, although some 5,000 members have died to 'keep 'em sailing'."

When Henderson and Shaw went to visit the school, "manned by two former Columbia professors, Leo Huberman and Dr. Charles Obermeyer, and a seaman named Danny Boano," they report that they sat in on a class session "in a long, clean but smoky room decorated with murals on racial equality and picturizations of what the union can do aboard ship, such as holding classes in navigation and writing congressmen."

They were impressed by the seriousness of the students as well as their readiness to wise crack. Here's one bit they relate about a talk Boano gave on the responsibilities of a delegate aboard ship during which he mentioned the difficulties the ship's master faces.

"He is the Old Man and king of all he surveys," Boano continued. "But he has problems. What's his biggest problem?"

Seamen volunteered such answers as Navy convoy navigation and "his ol' lady."

Danny shook his head, saying, "You're getting hot, but I will tell you. He is the loneliest man aboard. We all suffer from loneliness, but he suffers most. Here he has gone and worked hard and risen to the top, and what happens? Nobody will speak to the son of a gun!"

W.L. Douglas Shoes
W.L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.
IN WASHINGTON
905 PENN AVENUE N. W.
(Opposite Department of Justice Building)
Stores in Principal Cities - Good Dealers Everywhere
INVEST IN VICTORY — BUY BONDS

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

ART by MORT MESKIN
STORY by COLE GREENE

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

THIS IS AN AMERICAN soldier. He was a prisoner of the Germans. His name is Charles Berry of Gates Mills, Ohio. He is a first lieutenant, captured during the battle of the Belgian Bulge. He was freed when the U. S. First Army Forces liberated the German prison camp at Limburg, Germany. He was weak from starvation.

ONCE THESE WERE MEN. Blood flowed in their veins, and they were strong enough to work and fight for their country. They were Polish men, doomed to extermination by the master race. That they loved, had children, wives and families, was of no concern to Nazis. At Chrudruf, Germany, the American Fourth Armored and 89th Infantry Division found this evidence of Nazi bestiality.

AND WHAT DID THEIR nationality matter? At Stavelot, Belgium, the Americans found these victims, children among them. The Allied nations, the Russians, the Americans, the Belgians, and the Dutch, the Czech, and the Jew, they have a common sorrow, and a common plea . . . a world of peace for "our children and our children's children."

Never Again

When the London World Trade Union Conference resolved that "stern punishment should be meted out to all war criminals, high and low, and that none shall escape due punishment," they already knew of the horror of the concentration camps, of the slave labor camps, and the prisoner camps.

As the American Armies advanced and captured town after town, they were horrified to find human abattoirs in almost every German community, where thousands of Englishmen, Frenchmen, Poles, Russians, Czech, and Americans, too, the peoples of the Allies were kept beaten, starved, killed in gas chambers, allowed to rot with disease. Actual conditions defied human imagination. An American delegation of Congressmen and newspapermen flew to Europe to investigate these camps at first hand at the request of General Eisenhower who said: "The barbarous treatment these people received in the German concentration camps is almost unbelievable."

As the Armies liberated American prisoners, a Federated Press reporter ran into a few union men among the Americans. Pfc. John H. Dunn, a Newspaper Guild member, and an editor of FP, told how he, together with 3,200 American prisoners lived at Bad Orb prison camp where the daily diet was less than 260 calories — below the starvation level. It consisted of watery soup, ersatz bread, indigestible cheese, and a vile coffee substitute all served in microscopic portions. Survivors were virtually skin and bones, clad in rags, many of them too weak to walk. Sanitation facilities in the building, which housed 160 prisoners, consisted of one rusty water tap. The toilet was a hole in the floor. There was no soap nor towels.

Pfc. Dunn refused to rot. He began to organize recreational activities for his colleagues. First, he started a weekly forum in which he delivered from memory 31 lectures on American history, attended by 50 to 100 POWs in an ice cold hall. He branched out to start a forum attended by a thousand prisoners. The half-starved men discussed such things as the postwar world and the GI Bill of Rights in the heart of a German prison camp deep in Naziland. They even got out a handwritten wall newspaper, getting their news from a radio smuggled piece by piece into the camp by British prisoners.

Four hundred of the Bad Orb inmates died before the camp was liberated.

At another camp, American prisoners near the Hammelberg Stalag were forced to work at virtual slave labor from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m., six days a week. They told of frequent blows and beatings from the prison guards. They told of how 50 prisoners were bunked in a single unheated room, formerly a stable, infested with lice and bedbugs. For covering there was only a piece of rag. Captured U. S. doctors were unable to help because of lack of equipment. Two Americans were forced to a shower, despite the fact they both had pneumonia. Sanitation was foul, with a single hole latrine serving 1400 men.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 19 May 7, 1945

Murray Urges 25% Pay Hike for Gov't Employes

Catherine K. Nonamaker, clerk in the Geological Survey, earns $1800 a year. She supports two children, a son and a daughter. All three lived in a one room apartment, the only thing she could get for her money in costly D. C.

CIO's President Philip Murray urged the Senate Civil Service Committee to up salaries of white collar government workers by 25%. He said in part: "I think it must not escape this committee's consideration that white collar workers throughout the nation have long been at a disadvantage with workers in industry on questions of pay and job security. This is a situation in which Congress, especially the U. S. Senate, has taken considerable interest and for which it has expressed a desire to find some remedy.

"Action by the Congress to bring federal salaries more nearly into line with the wages received by industrial workers would have a beneficial effect on salaries throughout the white collar field. If you consider the fact that the base salaries provided for Federal workers who have either had a college training or who have had a number of years of experience in performing exacting clerical duties are now considerably below the base pay of the average steel worker, there need be no fear that a 25% increase would be too much." The U. S. Senate Civil Service committee is now considering a 15% pay increase for 1,500,000 annual salaried federal employes. The bill before the Senate is S 807. The cost to the country as a whole is $755,900,000. The United Federal Workers urge all CIO unions to write their own Senators regarding this bill. They point out that the federal workers will actually be taking a pay cut with only a 15% increase, due to the prospect of the cut in overtime work. In view of this, they point out, the full 25% which they recommend will in fact only cost the country $500,000,000.

Even by conservative Bureau of Labor Statistics' standards, only one third of all government workers earn enough to support a family; another full third earn $1440 or less, and do not earn enough to support a single person decently; while 51% of all federal workers make $1620 a year.

Sylvia Guss, a map evaluator in the Alaskan Branch of the Geological Survey, is the wife of an Ensign serving overseas. She earns $1620 a year. She talks things over with Catherine Nonamaker. At right Marie Siegrist, President of the Interior Branch, United Federal Workers of America, watches Mrs. Nonamaker, the union's witness, leave for the U. S. Senate, to plead for a full 25% pay raise for all federal workers as minimum justice.

Report From San Francisco

By LEN DE CAUX

LABOR'S wholehearted devotion to the purposes of the United Nations Conference in San Francisco is finding expression in urgent requests that it be drawn into more active participation in the work of UNCIO and of the world organization to be established here.

In addition to the representations made by the labor movements of different countries to their respective government delegations, the administrative committee of the World Trade Union Conference, on behalf of 60 million organized workers in 35 countries, has formally requested official recognition of UNCIO in a consultative capacity.

World labor's request took the form of a statement addressed to Secretary of State Stettinius for transmission to the other chairmen and to the whole conference. It was signed by a subcommittee consisting of Sidney Hillman, Sir Walter Citrine, Louis Saillant and M. Tarasov, on behalf of the Administrative Committee.

We Are Of One Mind

"The workers of the United Nations are of one mind and one heart with all peace-loving people that out of the sacrifices and the sufferings of this most terrible and destructive of wars there must emerge the structure of an enduring peace," the statement declared, expressing world labor's unanimous endorsement of the broad principles of the Dumbarton Oaks plan.

"It is our purpose, in seeking official recognition at your conference, to give our full and devoted support to the realization of that great objective."

Labor's case for representation has so far been actively championed in the UNCIO only by the Soviet Union delegation, which alone among the major delegations includes an official trade union representative.

Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov reported that his delegation had asked the steering committee that the World Trade Union Conference be represented in the United Nations conference with an advisory vote.

The Soviet delegation did not press for a vote on the question, however, according to Molotov, "In as much as it was said to be difficult to comply with this request."

U. S. Opposes

Opposition to such world labor representation was believed to have come from the United States delegation on the grounds that it might offend the American Federation of Labor, which has so far refused to join with the rest of world labor in the WTUC.

American labor is represented by CIO, AFL and Rail Brotherhood consultants to its delegation, including Philip Murray for the CIO. But most of the other delegations have accorded no trade union representation.

The atttiude of the British Government in this regard was sharply criticized by Sir Walter Citrine, leader of the British Trades Union Congress. He said that its denial of the Trade Union claim to representation would cause "Widespread dissatisfaction among the millions of organized workers represented by the British TUC."

Citrine included in his criticism Clement Attlee and the other Labor Party members of the British delegation. He said that their assent to the "policy of exclusion" did not, in his belief, "express the view of the labor movement in Britain" and would not be endorsed by the forthcoming Labor Party conference in Britain.

British Reason

The reason advanced by the World Labor Committee in its request for representation included:

(1) "The magnificent contribution to victory" of the workers of the United Nations. "Surely they have earned the right to place in the councils whose decisions will determine whether their sufferings and sacrifices shall have been in vain," it said.

(2) The need of the international security organization for support by "The great mass of the people." The committee said that the World Trade Conference could perform the vital task of mobilizing labor support "with full effectiveness" only if it participated in the work of establishing the world organization and could assure the workers that labor had been properly consulted in the framing of the charter.

(3) The tasks and responsibilities labor will have to assume in the work of the security organization. "Its assistance," the committee said, "will be essential in perfecting international cooperation in the economic sphere to remove the economic causes of war by assuring rising living standards, greater security and a more abundant life for all peoples." Labor will also be called upon, it added, "to help enforce and to bear the major burden of economic sanctions which may be invoked against an aggressor nation."

For Representation

The statement called attention to the action of the London World Labor Conference, asking "Effective Trade Union representation" national organization and in both the security council and the social and economic council.

It asked that world labor be allowed to present its views as to how such labor representation may be secured, "Whether by amendment to the charter itself, which now makes no provision for labor representation whatsoever, or by administrative action of the international security organization, when established." The statement concluded by declaring:

"We ask for such representation, not only as an act of simple justice to the heroic working people of the United Nations, but because we are firmly convinced that the granting of our request would be of material assistance in assuring the realization of the great goal shared by all men of good will, a just and enduring peace for the peoples of the world."

CIO's President Philip Murray shares a laugh with other consultants to America's UNCIO delegation, David A. Simmons, President of the American Bar Association, and Edward Scheiberling, National Commander of the American Legion.

Walter Schevenels represents the International Federation of Trade Unions at the World Labor constitution committee, meeting simultaneously with UNCIO and seeking a voice there.

National CIO leaders arrive in Oakland, California, for sessions of the World Trade Union Conference administrative committee. L. to r., Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood, Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Pres. Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union; Pres. Emil Rieve, Textile Workers Union, and Pres. John Green, Shipbuilding Union.

The press is well represented at UNCIO. There are 1875 reporters, the number actually exceeding the delegates assembled. What they had to say, and how they said it, is a cause for concern (See Washington Guide, page 12).

"Labor Has Hopes"—Murray

WHAT LABOR hopes and expects from the San Francisco United Nations Conference was told by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a series of public addresses in the UNCIO city, including two speeches at mass meetings and a nationwide broadcast over the Blue Network.

On all occasions, he insisted that labor's chief concern is that the conference shall succeed in establishing an effective world organization to prevent all forms of military aggression.

Murray expressed his conviction that the conference "Will be a success, because it must be a success," and because "The alternative to world organization is international chaos, and future catastrophes for mankind that are too horrible to contemplate."

Labor has shown the way to world unity, the CIO leader said, by its success, at the London World Labor Conference and at the more recent meetings of its administrative committee, in composing differences very similar to those arising at the UNCIO.

Labor feels the need for the international security organization even more keenly than other groups, and will take the lead in mobilizing support for it, he asserted, because "labor makes most of the sacrifices, endures most of the hardships, and drips most of the blood when the world is plunged into a universal bloodbath."

Murray's second main point was that "to remove the causes of war, which are primarily economic, is more important than to cope with the conditions of war after they have arisen.

"Unless human misery and economic strife are eliminated, the dangers of fascism will constantly present themselves to the people of the world," he said.

"We shall have won the war, ony to lose the peace, if we do not immediately launch a great crusade against poverty and human misery, for full production and jobs for all, with rising standards of living."

Murray made three specific suggestions, in the course of his speech at a CIO mass meeting:

(1.) "I would like to see the UNCIO create a commission to promote the worldwide educational and cultural interests of all peoples."

(2.) "I would like to see a universal bill of human rights, so that we may destroy forever all sorts of racial and religious discrimination throughout the world."

(3.) "I would like to see the economic and social council, with real labor participation, establish the right of all workers in all countries to join unions of their own choosing; and become an agency to improve living standards and wages, and to shorten working hours, wherever possible.

The San Francisco Opera House, where the delegates to the United Nations Meet. The City of the Golden Gate is host to the United Nations. They were meeting as American and Soviet armies joined; as all of Italy surrendered; as fascist forces in Denmark, Norway and Holland gave up; as Mussolini was killed, and rumors of Hitler's death by suicide, cerebral hemorrhage, or what-have-you sped throughout the world. It was Naziisms doom, and the news from Frisco was fresh and vigorous, with the pledged promise that despite all—a way would be found to organize for peace for "our children and our children's children."

World Labor Leaders Said:

LEADERS of world labor had their say on international labor unity and the UNCIO at a CIO mass meeting in San Francisco. Here are some of the high spots.

Philip Murray, USA: "The leaders of the American Federation of Labor should come into the World Trade Union Federation and make their contribution to the welfare of their members and the welfare of the people all over the world. The door is open, and there's a "Welcome" on the mat."

V. Kuznetsov, Soviet Union: "The workers cannot permit any new war to happen in the future. We must eliminate not only the dangers of war but also the dangers of unemployment, working for rising living standards and wages and for real social security. Labor must be given recognition within each nation and on all commissions having to do with the peace. Labor showed its unity at the London Labor Conference by reaching unanimous decisions on all matters on the agenda, despite differing living standards and differing political systems."

Sir Walter Citrine, Britain: "In the World Trade Union Conference at London we reached unanimous agreement to form a new and all-inclusive world federation of Trade Unions. We want it to be all-inclusive indeed. We appeal to the American Federation of Labor, even at this late hour, asking that they should come along and throw in their weight with ours. But we will not be turned back by opposition of any kind from any quarters."

V. Lombardo Toledano, Latin America: "The political and economic wiping out of Fascism from every part of the earth must follow the military victory over Fascism. So long as the Spanish people have not recovered their liberty, the war is not over. A Fascist Spain would continue to be a permanent source of infection. Portugal is another Fascist state. Argentina is the most dangerous focus of Fascism in this hemisphere. As President of CTAL, I regard the admission of Argentina to the UNCIO as a defeat for all the Anti-Democratic forces, particularly in Latin-America."

Louis Saillant, France: "The workers of hand and brain furnished the largest number of battalions to the French Armies of Resistance. Our job now is to purge France of the remnants of Fascist ideology, of all sources of Fascist infection. In the elections just held, the majority of votes went to the victory over Fascism."

H. T. Liu, China: "China is grateful to the CIO Longshoremen of San Francisco who went on strike against shipping scrap iron to Japan. There have been 10 million Chinese deaths in this war: 15 million have been made homeless. No cities are unscarred. We must industrialize China. Trade to meet its needs will mean more production, more jobs in America . . . Freedom is indivisible, it is not only political but economic."

Between sailings, and from Hollywood, California, Charles Leavitt, member of PAC and the National Maritime Union, gets ballots for peace for the Chelsea Council for Citizens Action in New York City. He said seamen have an interest, too, as seamen, because they'll get their share of the 20,000,000 jobs if trade relations between nations are healthy. Signing the ballot for the San Francisco Peace Conference is Mrs. J. Lenahan, of 401 West 30th street. Her husband has been in the South Pacific for twenty months. He has never seen his son. She said: "It's for him that I want this peace. I don't want this baby to grow up and have to face another world of war. I think most mothers feel just the way I do. That's why I'm voting for San Francisco." Thousands of such ballots were collected in the city.

A Plea for a Plan

An Ancient Booby Trap

AFL craft officialdom is busy these days trying to revive an ancient booby trap that can do as much harm to AFL unions as it is intended to do to CIO unions.

This booby trap is the Frey rider to the Natl. Labor Relations Board appropriation, now up before the House Appropriations sub-Committee headed by Rep. Butler Hare (D., S. C.).

The rider prohibits the use of NLRB funds in investigating a complaint case where a contract has been in force more than three months, no matter what the nature of the contract.

It's aimed, by "Colonel" John P. Frey and other like-minded AFL officials, primarily at the CIO. Last year the CIO and other progressive forces put up a campaign against it, got it whittled down to the extent that out-and-out company unions were excluded from its protection.

The new version is just as dishonest, however, and just as dangerous to genuine unionism everywhere. A while back, the AFL Machinists contributed some thousands of dollars to the lobbying fund for its passage. Within a few weeks the IAM found itself bilked out of an organizing situation by the very rider it supported, when a company union was able to defy IAM attempts to organize a plant in Baltimore.

The Wagner Act protects all labor and helps give the entire community the benefits of stable labor relations. United and organized protest from all unions and all friends of orderly industrial relationships can stop this new version of an old attack on the Wagner Act, if it comes quickly.

FEPC in Danger

RECENT anti-Negro and anti-Semitic outbursts in Congress against the bill (S 101, HR 2232) to create a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee are aimed at one object—to stall the bill until the present FEPC appropriation runs out in June.

FEPC did a good job for war production, will continue to do it if allowed to continue and made permanent. Justice and fair play to all minorities is vital to any democracy, but the issue is more than one of simple justice.

We cannot have full employment, full production, unity and security in our nation so long as economic discrimination is permitted anywhere.

The FEPC bill will pass if 218 Representatives sign Discharge Petition No. 4. Speed is needed, to meet the deadline on the present FEPC's appropriation. Last year, it will be remembered, funds for FEPC barely squeaked through an attempted filibuster in the Senate.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE inside dope on the San Francisco conference, which has escaped the attention of the cynics and calamity-howlers, is that it has been doing nicely right from the start.

The reddest faces are those of the wise guys who disbelieved all official statements of good intentions, or read into them all sorts of double meanings and ulterior motives.

Their "deadlocks," "splits," "head-on clashes" and "irreconciliable divisions" have simmered down to disagreements which have been democratically adjusted, without detriment to the main order of business.

On the other hand, the truest prophets have been those who were so "simple-minded" as to believe that when the great powers pledged themselves to continued unity for world organization, at Teheran, Yalta and Dumbarton Oaks, they really meant it.

★ ★ ★

The attitude of the CIO and of world labor toward the UNCIO illustrates why the conference has never really been in any danger of failure.

Just as the CIO has regarded winning the war as of first importance, subordinating all other considerations to victory, so at San Francisco it regards the successful establishment of a world organization to maintain peace as far and away the most important consideration.

The CIO has vigorously pressed many demands of its own during the war. But it has advanced them, no matter how controversial they may seem to some critics, in the sincere belief they would contribute to victory. And the manner in which it has pressed these demands has been such as to interfere in no way with achievement of the goal.

So today, at San Francisco, the CIO and world labor are urgently asking for greater labor representation and participation.

But the chief reason for this is labor's belief it is necessary for the full success of the conference, and for the effective functioning of the new world organization. Labor simply wants the chance to do all it is capable of doing to make a go of UNCIO.

Because of this attitude, the CIO and world labor are advancing their suggestions in the most constructive spirit possible, and in such a way as to give no aid or comfort to those who would create a rift in our national and international unity.

The same may be said for most of the national delegations at San Francisco. They have naturally had many differences, but only as to the best methods of reaching goals on which all are agreed. So there has never been any real reason for anticipating deadlocks or splits that would interfere with the success of the conference.

★ ★ ★

As to labor representation at San Francisco, the Soviet delegation includes Vasili Kuznetsov as official representative of the trade union movement of that country. But this is exceptional.

The British, French and many other delegations include representatives of labor and working class political parties, rather than of the trade union movement.

So union leaders from these and other countries have been pressing their claims for special representation, if not on the delegations, at least in an advisory and consultative capacity.

On the United States delegation there is no direct labor representation. But the CIO, AFL and railway labor organizations are represented by consultants.

★ ★ ★

As to world labor, no satisfactory provision for representation has been made up to the time of writing.

The Intl. Labor Organization is represented in an advisory capacity, and the U. S. State Dept. has suggested that it be attached to the Social and Economic Council.

But the ILO is a governmental rather than a labor organization, being made up of government-appointed employer, labor and government representatives. Furthermore, it does not include the Soviet Union, and the AFL hogs American labor representation to the exclusion of the CIO.

So the administrative committee of the World Trade Union Conference, representing nearly all of world labor, is seeking official recognition by UNCIO, in a consultative capacity.

It calls attention to labor's vital concern with all phases of the work of the new Security Organization, and the necessity for labor's active support and participation to implement its decisions.

It asks for trade union representation in the Assembly of the International Organization and in both the Security Council and the Social and Economic Council, either by amendment of the proposed Charter or by administrative action of the new world organization, when established.

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-Presidents
Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas
Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director
Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925
Vol. 8 May 7, 1945 No. 19

CIO Urges Revival of Reciprocal Trade Act

Appearing first in a series of CIO unions to testify for renewal of the reciprocal trade agreements act, the UAW-CIO this week told the House Ways and Means Committee that its members saw 150,000 postwar jobs in a freer world trade after the war.

The UAW testimony, given by Legislative Representative Irving Richter, will be followed by testimony from the UE, the Mine Mill and Smelter Workers, the Textile Workers, the CIO Maritime Committee, and other CIO affiliates. Sec. Treas. James B. Carey will appear for the national CIO.

UAW supports the Doughton bill to renew the agreements (HR 2652) "because of its direct benefit to the industries which employ our members," the statement said. "We support this act also because we believe it is essential for the maintenance of peace and the development of prosperity."

The estimated foreign market for U. S. cars was put at 1,600,000 a year by 1950, which would furnish 150,000 to 160,000 jobs for U. S. automotive workers, Richter said.

This depends on a greatly expanded world trade, made possible by the reciprocal trade agreements, by the Bretton Woods agreement, and other measures.

U. S. workers and industry need not fear foreign competition, Richter said, pointing out that "a high level of imports has always been accompanied by high production and high employment in this country."

Some shifts will have to be made, he added, but if we have adequate unemployment compensation and above all full employment, this problem can be solved.

Richter cited world car census figures to show the potential market. In France, he said, there were 17 persons per car; in Britain, 19; Soviet Union, 161; Brazil, 249; India, 2,859; China, 5,939. In the U. S. there are four.

"To our mind the only thing that will hold down American living standards will be a failure to obtain full employment," he said. "By helping to expand our export program, the Doughton bill is helping to promote full employment and therefore is promoting the welfare of the country.

"Finally, by helping to expand our living standards, employment and security in other countries, the Doughton bill is an important step in maintaining peace throughout the world."

Auto Union Wins

A landslide vote of 1,159 to 338 was won by the CIO United Auto Workers in an election held among white collar workers of the Chance-Vought Division, United Air Craft Corp., Stratford, Conn.

Radio Talks Aid UAW In Bendix Vote

The weekly radio program of the CIO United Auto Workers in Elmira, N. Y., is credited with playing a big part in the NLRB election victory won recently by the UAW at the Bendix plant there. Workers in the production, maintenance and tool division voted 2,381 for the UAW to 1,803 for the AFL machinists. Plant guards voted 28 for the UAW to 21 for the AFL.

Every Sunday afternoon from August, 1944, to the election in April, workers from the Bendix plant and UAW organizers spoke over the air. The radio program started off with the UAW-CIO song, followed by questions and answers about union policies.

Dan Driesen Killed In Germany

Danny Driesen was killed last week in Germany, where he was a scout with the 7th Army. Before he went into the Army, Danny was Washington representative of the CIO American Communications Assn.

Dann's friends loved him. He had a warm, forthright personality and a dazzling smile—which he used frequently. Employers respected him, both when he was organizing for ACA and when he was battling issues out in Washington.

Dan was alternate to ACA Pres. Joe Selly on the labor advisory committee of the War Communications Board, where he was largely responsible for setting up labor-management committees in the telegraph, cable and wireless industries. He did a lot to step up war service and to force elimination of wasteful practices.

He trained in Oklahoma, Colorado and Georgia for two years, trying all the time to get overseas. He was over little more than a month before a Nazi sniper got him. His widow, Eleanor, lives in Washington.

That life may go on...

It is spring in Italy. From two mountaintops the American and Nazi artillery are dueling.

Far down in the valley, a plowman and his patient oxen plod imperturbably under the shells passing overhead, turning the brown earth in a furrow. He is old—long since arrived at the age of honorable retirement when a man should sit in the sun with his pipe and glass of wine. But his sons and grandsons are gone from the village, swallowed up by the war.

The season has come when the earth must be opened up for planting—for the begetting of another generation of crops. In war or peace, this cannot wait. Men must eat to live, and it is God's will that life should go on.

It was the same in Normandy. While armor clanked along the highways and infantrymen with Tommy guns flushed Nazi snipers from the hedgerows, the Norman farmers, calm and stubborn as the soil itself, tended their fields and performed the ancient ritual of farm chores.

Whether he practices the simple agriculture of the European countryman or the highly mechanized methods of modern American farming, the farmer symbolizes the continuity of life in war or peace.

International Harvester, known wherever soil is tilled, serves the farmer in war or peace.

International Harvester Company
180 North Michigan Avenue Chicago 1, Illinois

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER

1 On a turntable in the foreground, this B-24 is heading for the paint shop in the Ford Willow Run bomber plant, while a group of Liberators in the background receive finishing touches on the final assembly line.

2 The Gahagen family, Marcus, Ruby, Sue Jane and Robert, were just leaving Willow Run. The two years seniority Marcus Gahagan had in the plant wasn't enough to keep him working when the layoffs started. The Gahagan's came up from Fulton, Mississippi, where Marcus had worked as a carpenter. They were all sorry to go. When your CIO News reporter asked how they felt about moving, little Sue Jane piped up: "I like the school here lots better 'n' home. The teachers are nicer." The moving problem wasn't much, Marcus said. "We came up here with just suitcases and we're going the same way." The United States Employment Service had gotten him a job in Akron, and that is where they were heading. "Is Akron a nice place?" asked Mrs. Gahagan. "I'd like to live in a really nice place once."

WILLOW RUN

A PLEA FOR A PLAN

LIKE AN old-fashioned phonograph that needs winding, the gigantic Ford Willow Run bomber plant is slowly grinding to a stop.

From the beginning, this plant has received more attention and publicity than any other war plant in the nation. Top flight Ford and Army publicists made Willow Run into a symbol of America's industrial might, even during the dark days of 1942 and 1943 when the output was at times only 1% of total capacity.

The grandiose plans made for Willow Run never developed for a number of reasons. Housing, transportation, and working conditions were all contributiong factors. Originally, between 85,000 and 90,000 workers were to man the production lines turning out the highly-complicated Consolidated Liberator bombers. Employment figures never reached that total despite the efforts of every government agency to supply the huge plant with the necessary manpower. Recruiters were sent as far south as Texas to seek workers, but the rapid turnover of personnel in the shop far outdistanced the amount coming into help build planes.

It would be a serious mistake to write Willow Run off as a failure. Production figures towards the end have been as high, and efficiency has been on a par, with other plants making the same plane. The Liberators produced here have done their share and more to break the industrial and military might of the fascist nations. Willow Run workers, all members of Local 50, UAW-CIO, played a key role in achieving the goal of 50,000 planes called for by our late president, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

To Willow Run workers, to the UAW-CIO, to the small communities surrounding the plant, one thing is clear—what is done with this plant will probably set a pattern for the handling of other war-built special purpose factories.

As this is written there are no definite plans in sight for utilizing the tremendous production capacities of Willow Run. What is lacking in actual planning is more then made up in talk. Everyone here in Detroit talks about Willow Run. The War Production Board Talks, the Army talks, the War Manpower Commission talks, the Ford Motor Company talks, the three big Detroit newspapers talk, and every public official within a radius of 50 miles sounds off at the slightest opportunity.

The only group not limited to just talking is the union to which these workers belong, the United Auto Workers.

The UAW is both talking and doing. Mass meetings, delegations to Washington, newspaper ads, radio time, and conferences are all being utilized to bring the Willow Run story to the public. Hardly a day passes without some UAW activity getting the public eye . . . and holding it. People here are solidly behind the union in its fight to get work for the plant and to assure the Willow Run workers some sort of postwar security.

Currently, there is a battle going on between Ford and the War Manpower Commission. The Company wants to cut the work week to five days. WMC says nothing doing—keep it at six days. The schedule remains six and the next move by the WMC is awaited eagerly by all concerned. It's sort of a sideshow that draws more people then the Big Top. Regardless of whether the plant works five or six days its still going to be shut down in the absence of plans for the future.

It seems the Company's angle in this squabble is to spread the work and keep its basic force intact in the event new orders are received. The position of the WMC is (1) no one in authority has made any definite committments on utilizing Willow Run; (2) the workers are needed elsewhere; (3) a shorter work week just makes the take home pay smaller and solves nothing.

Cooperation between the WMC, the company, and the union on other matters is good. Prompt service is given laid off workers by WMC people stationed right in the Willow Run Employment Office. Recruiters from Packard, Bohn Aluminum, and Goodyear have been interviewing laid off workers right on the spot, and if hired arrange transportation and other matters immediately.

Nine days after the curtailment announcement over 4500 workers had been laid off. Layoffs are scheduled to continue at the rate of 800 daily until April 30 when the layoff rate will be cut to 600 daily. Of the 4500 laid off 60 per cent are women; 35 per cent of all workers are from other states; 20 per cent are leaving Michigan to return to their former homes, principally Ky. and Tenn.

3 Every kind of transportation was used to move out of the Willow Run project. Edna Price called a cab, and put her one trunk into it. Edna had been working at the plant 17 months as a hydraulic assembler, earning $1.10 an hour. She laughed when we asked her about her plans: "I've still got to eat, so I'm still going to work . . . some place." The USES had paid her fare up from Mt. Vernon, Ky., where she had been doing odd jobs in stores and restaurants. Her average earnings were $12 a week. "I sure liked it here," Edna said, "and I'm sorry the place is closing down. Do you know what's going to happen?" We didn't. Nobody else did either.

4 These rivet guns hammer away as workers in Department 936 pushed for a new construction record. They sliced off 53½ hours from their building time.

5 John Lee Miles was fixing his car. is "Going back home," he said, "back to White House, Kentucky. "I'm a miner, worked in West Virginia. Sure would like to stay, but there's nothing here." He has a wife and a baby 28 months old. He worked at Willow Run 23 months; earned $1.20 an hour as a stockhandler, extra heavy. His wife, Mildred Miles, 21, also worked for a while, but found it too difficult with the baby to mind. She complained of the housing! "Did you ever cook on a coal stove in a little tiny place with the sun beating down like all sixty? You'd think you were being cooked, instead of cooking."

A memorandum issued to members of the Detroit Area Labor-Management Committee by the War Manpower Commission furnishes some interesting information. The memo gives five kinds of persons to be laid off: women, spouses, homesick ones, those desiring a rest, those who wish to be referred to other jobs.

The memorandum being impersonal and objective in tone, doesn't attempt to bring out the fact that 99 per cent of the laid off workers wanted to keep on working. None of the workers interviewed by the CIO NEWS evidenced any joy, relief, or satisfaction at being let out.

What will be done with the huge plant which sprawls over 67 acres of Michigan countryside? What will be done with the three huge housing projects built by the government to house Willow Run workers? What will be done with the thousands of jobless workers who will not want to be shunted to some other part of the country? These questions are still not decided.

The simple solution would be for the Army to declare the plant surplus property and dispose of it to a private manufacturer, who would in turn be permitted to begin production of civilian goods. Another solution, although of a temporary nature, would be to shift suitable war work from areas where manpower shortages exist. So far no evidences of either solution being put into effect are apparent.

To add to the confusion surrounding the future of the plant is the on again -off again position of the Ford Motor Company.

Here are some statements issued by the Company:

September 12, 1941—"When the war is over we are going to retain the buildings we are erecting and construct airplanes on a mass production scale," Henry Ford told reporters. (Detroit News)

November 12, 1943—"We have been planning for a long time to build a cargo plane at Willow Run," Ford said . . . "The Federal Government has given us first option on Willow Run for postwar use and we plan to take up the option. Our first reason is to create jobs for the people who will need them. Some persons say that people in Washington will not let us have the plant. We have too much faith in the Government to believe anything like that. We know that the Government is just as much interested in postwar jobs as we are." (Detroit News and Wall St. Journal).

March 30, 1945—"Farming is in for its biggest expansion," Henry Ford says. "Every day we are finding new things—plastics, chemicals, food—that we can make from things that grow. . . . The world will need so many of these things that we are thinking of using Willow Run to produce the millions of tractors and other farm tools the world will need.

"We are not going to scrap a bit of machinery. We can find ways of making use of every bit of it—and there just isn't any sense to the idea of storing up machinery in big warehouses." (New York Times).

April 22, 1945—(News Item) Defense Plant Corporation officials are informed that the Ford Motor Company will not exercise its option to buy the Willow Run Plant. (Detroit Free Press).

The Willow Run shutdown is not a local problem. What happens at Willow Run will affect the future of America. The fight for 60,000,000 jobs will receive a severe setback unless speedy action is taken to utilize this plant. The abyss of insecurity into which these workers have been plunged is a direct result of the total absence of planning in connection with the postwar use of the world's biggest bomber plant.

The state of mind of Willow Run workers was concisely put by a welder coming off shift, "I don't know what they're goin' to do with this baby," he said, "but I sure as hell would like to have 'em do it quick."

Thomas' Post-War Auto Plan

ENDORSING a program drafted by R. J. Thomas, president of the union, the United Automobile, Aircraft, Agricultural Implement Workers of America, UAW-CIO, proposed that the automobile industry plan for the production of 10,000,000 cars and the employment of 900,000 workers per year during the post-war period.

The Thomas plan also urged that the automobile industry reduce the price of cars and trucks in the post-war years rather than increase them. Reduced prices of cars plus maintenance of a high level of income among consumers would easily make possible a 10,000,000 car a year production, the UAW said.

To make possible the creation of purchasing power which would enable the auto industry to dispose of ten million cars a year within five years after VE Day, the UAW's program urged: That firm price control be maintained during the reconversion period; carrying through of a speedy reconversion aimed at a sixty million job economy; reduction of taxes on lower incomes; immediate and substantial wage increases, and the protection of farm income; creation of an annual wage in all industries; full government support for needed public works; carrying through of the United Nations program of world, political, and economic cooperation.

To speed up the reconversion period, the UAW program proposed four steps:

"1. Immediate construction of the minimum number of machine tools necessary for getting out automobile production at the anticipated level of ten million cars a year.

"2. Authorization for the use of manpower and materials for required engineering, designing, and tooling work to prepare for reconversion wherever such authorization could be given without interference with the war production effort.

"3. Sale or lease to industry with the minimum delay of government owned machine tools not needed for post V-E Day war production controls to avoid interference car output.

"4. A system of continuing priority and production controls to avoid interference with continuing war work and to protect civilian production against all avoidable bottlenecks."

Four CIO War Heroes Decorated; Acclaimed

There are four new names to add to our growing list of CIO heroes—a Negro captain who literally shot his way through the Siegfried line; an Air Corps sergeant who helped bring his bullet-riddled and flaming bomber to its base; and two Seabees who went through the hell that was the landing at Iwo Jima.

Capt. Charles L. Thomas, a member of Local 600, CIO Auto Workers at the Ford Rouge plant, then a lieutenant, was in a scout car leading the Negro 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion against a strong German fortress at Climback, France, when the Germans opened fire.

Badly wounded, he grabbed the car's 50 caliber machine gun, raked the woods and buildings ahead, ordered two anti-tank guns into position and refused to allow himself to be carried away until he was sure his junior officer had everything in readiness to destroy enemy gun positions.

For this, he was the first living Negro in this war to receive the Distinguished Service Cross, the Army's second highest decoration. The other had been given posthumously.

Sgt. Walter E. Gomer, a member of Local 1874, CIO Textile Workers Union, at Cumberland, Md., was in a B-24 that heavily damaged enemy oil installations at Rumania. The plane was crippled and the waist gunner wounded when it was attacked by 50 enemy aircraft before reaching tis target. The enemy continued to attack the bomber, which burst in flames.

WINS SILVER STAR

Despite this, Gomer and other members of the crew succeeded in making a safe landing at the base. He was awarded a Silver Star for gallantry in action.

Two members of the CIO Auto Workers, Andrew F. Stuckenberg, carpenter's mate, first class, and Walter A. Stark, machinst's mate, second class, were among the first in their ranks to brave withering cross fire on the mine-studded beach at Iwo Jima.

A member of Local 248 at the Allis Chalmers Co., West Allis, Wis., Satrk was a member of a four-man team of specialists who volunteered to go ashore. They are believed to be the first four Seabees ashore at Iwo.

Stuckenberg went ashore three days later on a LSM (land-ing ship, medium). He was at the wheel of a truck. One of his buddies was struck by shrapnel when his tractor was being unloaded.

Stuckenberg and his companions managed to get a foothold on the terrace just in back of the beach, alongside the Marines.

"For three hours we just lay there and prayed," Stuckenberg said. "Shells were exploding all over the beach. I saw a warrant officer get a direct hit; the shell exploded and he just disappeared."

NMU Member Japanese Prisoner 3 Yrs.

In Japanese prison camps three years, Steward James Burns, a CIO Natl. Maritime Union member who has sailed 22 years, declared this week that what stuck most sharply in his mind was "the moment before liberation."

Interviewed by The Pilot, NMU publication, Burns said:

"I'll never forget that moment before our liberation—our planes arriving overhead, zigzagging over the camp, U. S. fliers parachuting down; U. S. troops and Filipino guerillas marching and waving to us, calling us in our own language."

He was kept first in Santo Tomas, Manila, and later in Los Banos, where the Japanese fed the prisoners only two meals a day, one being corn and rice, and the other consisting of rice and watery stew. He lost 35 pounds, but as soon as he had recovered his health he plans to return to the job of keeping 'em sailing.

"The Road to Democracy"

In Paintings By

SARA BERMAN-BEACH

May 1 - May 31

ARTISTS ASSOCIATES

138 West 15, N. Y. C.

Rose Pringle, Director

11-5 Daily—3-6 Sundays

(All works for sale. Prices on request)

The Movie Of The Most Vital Subject Of Our Time!

THE PEACE BUILDERS

PEACE PROGRESS — UNITED NATIONS — PROSPERITY FREEDOM

YALTA

HOT SPRINGS | BRETTON WOODS | DUMBARTON OAKS

OTTAWA | CAIRO | MOSCOW | TEHERAN

ATLANTIC CHARTER

UNITED ACTION FOR VICTORY

16mm SOUNDFILM · 10 MINUTES

Rental $1.25 per Day · Sale $17.50 per Copy

A DRAMATIC DOCUMENTARY SCREEN STORY OF THE HISTORIC WORLD COOPERATION TO WIN THE WAR AND BUILD THE PEACE

Produced by National Film Board of Canada · Released By Brandon Films Inc.

Show This Summary Movie as Background for Rallies on Dumbarton Oaks, Bretton Woods, San Francisco Conference, and for Memorial Meetings in Tribute to FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT

Also! PLANNED FOR YOU Free!

A Catalog of Selected 16mm Movies on "BUILDING THE PEACE"

Including Films on

PREVENTION OF WAR · SOCIAL PROGRESS

PROMOTING PROSPERITY · ACHIEVING FREEDOM

BRANDON FILMS 1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK 19, N. Y.

A flavor that shortens the miles

One of these days when the war is over, you'll travel in amazing new streamlined trains—you'll eat in unique new dining cars, and sleep in luxurious new-type Pullmans. • But you don't have to wait until the war has ended to enjoy perfection in one of the good things of life. Today, in Schlitz, you are truly drinking the beer of tomorrow. • On the dining cars of the future, that famous flavor found only in Schlitz will continue to shorten the miles by adding to the pleasure of travel.

JUST THE kiss OF THE HOPS

...no bitterness

Copyright 1945, Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Invest in Liberty! BUY WAR BONDS

Schlitz

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

UAW Reg. Dir. Paul E. Riley, Cleveland, reports: Wright Aeronautical Plant, Lockland, Ohio (fire inspectors and fire equipment operators) voted for the CIO. These employes will not become members of the main bargaining unit.

CIO Reg. Director Edward McCrone, Conn., advises: Chance-Vought Div., United Air Craft Corp., Stratford, Conn. (white collar workers), UAW-CIO 1159, no union 338.

Richard T. Frankensteen, vice-pres. and Natl. Aircraft director, UAW-CIO, announces: Bendix plants, Elmira, N. Y., production, maintenance and tool div., CIO 2381, AFL 1803; plant guards, CIO 28, AFL 20.

This drive was under the capable direction of Philip Carpenter, asst. director, Bendix Dept., assisted by Miss Ann Lemmons and Ed Wygant of the Bendix staff. Members of the Natl. Aircraft staff were in a large measure responsible for the drive's success.

Ben Henry, CIO reg. dir., Iowa, reports: Employes at Barker Poultry Equipment plant, Ottumwa, Ia., voted for the CIO United Steelworkers; Un. Rubber Workers won an election in the Ballistics Dept., Des Moines Ordnance plant, operated by U. S. Rubber.

CIO Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton, St. Paul, Minn., reports: Better Steel Products Albert Lea, Minn., USA-CIO 20, against 0; Queen Stove Works, USA-CIO 86, against 19.

Walter Harris CIO reg. dir., Chicago, reports: Globe Co., Chicago, (production and maintenance employes) CIO Packinghouse Workers 218, against 41. The Whitcomb Locomotive Co., Rochelle, Ill., (production and maintenance employes), USA-CIO 72, AFL 56, 2 neither.

E. D. Hodson, CIO reg. dir., Wilmington, Del., reports: Bond Equipment Co., Wilmington UERMWA-CIO 31, no union 7.

James Ritchies, CIO reg. dir., St. Louis, reports: Swift & Co. oil mill plant, Cairo, Ill. CIO 71 AFL 10. Denwood Linze Electric Co. St. Louis, UE 158, AFL 106. Rep. Charles Anderson of UE was in charge.

W. A. Copeland, CIO sub-reg. dir., Memphis, Tenn. reports: A. S. Barboro CIO Food, Tobacco Workers 24, no union 3; DeSoto Hardwood Flooring (firemen and oilers) IWA-CIO 3, AFL 0.

R. W. Starnes, acting CIO reg. dir., New Orleans, reports: Ipik Plywood Co., Lenner, La., CIO 87, against 18. Willie Dorsey, intl. rep. URWDSEA was the spark plug on the drive and will charter this group.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald, Sandner N. J., reports: Whippany (N. J.) Paper Board Co., CIO Paper Workers 61, Dist. 50, 4. PWOC Rep. Tony Adamo was in charge of the drive.

John C. Lawson, sec.-treas., Stone & Allied Products Workers, reports: Harris Granite Quarries Co., Salisbury, N. C., CIO 23, against 14. Rep. Sam. H. Scott was in charge.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO reg. dir., Carolinas, reports: Hadley-Peoples Mfg. Co., Siler City, N. C., Textile Workers 204, against 11.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Wm. R. Henderson, Little Rock, Ark., reports: Cameron Feed Mills, N. Little Rock, FTA-CIO 24, against 13. Intl. Rep. Harry Koger was in charge of the drive assisted by Georgia Morris, sec. FTA Local 88.

Bertie Selden, editor, FTA NEWS, also reports CIO election victories at California Vegetable Growers, Eaton Farms and Colorado River Farms, all of Blythe, Calif., and at G. D. Ellis Can Co., Camden, N. J., and General Cigar Co., Perth Amboy, N. J.

Geo. Craig, CIO reg. dir., Philadelphia, reports: Krieder Shoe Co., Lebanon, Pa., CIO Shoe Workers 71, no union 60. Congratulations to CIO Rep. Victor Ulivitch and Robert Trasher, USWA Rep., for the splendid job done.

MACY WORKERS GET NEW CONTRACT: When negotiations for a new agreement with R. H. Macy & Co., world's largest department store, broke down last week, some 700 members of Local 1-S, CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, staged a demonstration in front of the store. Joined by sympathetic union members from other city stores, they formed a solid ring of protest around the big Macy building. The company quickly came to terms, agreeing, among other things, to extend the union shop provision to every selling and non-selling department, exclusive of office workers.

PICTURE CREDITS—p. 1 Norman Driscoll; p. 2 and 3, Press Association Pictures, Federated Press, Marian Hille; p. 6 and 7, Marston Pierce and Acme Pictures; p. 8, War Department.

Amalgamated Assets Near Five Millions

A financial statement of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers made public in accordance with the union's established practice, shows net assets of $4,857,940 as of December 31 last. The statement covering a period of 11 months since its previous published statement, shows assets of $5,130,636 and liabilities of $272,696, leaving a balance of $4,857,940.940.

Of the total net assets a sum in excess of $4,000,000 is in cash and U. S. Government securities. The latter increased during the past 11 months from $2,972,000 to $3,342,000.

Pres. Sidney Hillmna and Sec.-Treas. Jacob S. Potofsky point out in a covering statement that the union's net assets increased $517,827 in the 11 months, despite the fact that per capita income was reduced by about three per cent from the preceding year because of the national draft and manpower shortages in the clothing and cotton garment industries.

The financial report shows that the union's general office distributed $211,432 to United Nations Relief and war and community funds, exclusive of $507,000 contributed by local unions and joint boards in various parts of the country.

Amalgamated membership stands at 325,000, the report states. Largest gain in membership was made in the cotton garment industry. Agreements have been signed during the year with some 100 new firms.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick
1725-41 W. North Ave. 7818
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
Convention Badges
Organization Flags
Parade Caps and Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases, Bill Folds
231 So. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois
Phone Webster 4104

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 354 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Buy War Bonds

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Tying the CIO closely into the life of the community is one of the important functions an auxiliary can perform. Several examples of auxiliary activities which do this have come to our attention recently.

Duncan Ladies Auxiliary Local 96, Intl. Woodworkers of America, reported at the district meeting of all Woodworker auxiliaries in British Columbia that they had been the only women's organization that took an active part in making a carnival held in Duncan a success.

"Much credit was given to our membership who actively participated in the lunch catering. We served well over a thousand people and financially it was a success. Much goodwill and harmony can be created by our auxiliaries participating in those affairs."

The Duncan carnival took place some time ago, but past month the San Pedro Women's Auxiliary of NMU held a dinner which served a similar purpose. On April 18 73 guests representing 28 organizations joined the auxiliary for a dinner at the YWCA. In addition to unions and auxiliaries, representatives of the Red Cross, United Seamen's Service, OPA, YWCA, Board of Education, Travelers Aid, USO and Democratic Club spoke on the achievements of women in their organizations in San Pedro.

As a result of this affair, which brought the auxiliary program to the attention of the other groups, the NWU auxiliary has gained increased recognition as a force in the community.

The Los Angeles Auxiliary Council did the same kind of thing when they arranged to sponsore jointly with the AFL Dinning Car Porters Auxiliary, a tribute to the wives and mothers of Negro servicemen. A large number of organizations cooperated in making the affair a success and the auxiliary council won wide commendation for initiating the program which built support for A California State FEPC.

UE Auxiliary 1138 in Hopkins, Minn., has long been active in community life. They did a real election job last November and are proud of their new Congressman. Here's the latest report on their activities from their able PAC Chairman Carrie Spott:

"We had Memorial Services for President Roosevelt. The Auxiliary called every home in Hopkins and explained about the services. The result, there were over 500 people in attendance.

"Then the Hopkins Civic and Commerce Assn. had a round table discussion on Dumbarton Oaks and they said the Auxiliary had done such a grand job getting the people to attend the Roosevelt Memorial Services they wondered if we would help them, so we called the homes again, and the result, 350 people were in attendance."

Pres. Philip Murray has always stressed that the CIO program is not just a program for labor. It's a program in the interests of our nation. One of our big jobs is to get organizations and individuals outside the CIO to understand this and to work with us on reaching these objective.

Nationally we have taken important steps in that direction. The charter calling for full production, full employment and full social security announced March 28 by Philip Murray, William Green and Eric Johnston is vivid evidence.

Locally there is also a big job to do and that is where an active auxiliary can give the union tremendous help.

Pamphlet Notes

Takes Up Meaty Questions

"The Meat of It" is the title of a new bulletin being issued by the CIO Packinghouse Workers, 205 West Wacker Drive, Chicago 6. It is prepared by Lyle Cooper, the union's research director, and is intended primarily for officers and stewards of the union.

Anti-Semitism

A 32-page pamphlet on anti-semitism, "The Jewish Conspiracy," by Max Nomad, sociologist and historian, has just been published by the Educational Dept. of Local 338, Retail, Wholesale & Chain Store Food Employes Union, 152 West 42nd St., New York City.

From Ohio PAC

The story of unemployment compensation in Ohio is told in a colorful pamphlet, "Freedom from Want" issued by the Ohio CIO Political Action Committee, 616 Hartman Theater Bldg., Columbus 15, Ohio. Price 500 for $5, or 1c a copy.

CIO Education

N. Y. Teachers Conference

"Education for One World — Jobs, Peace, Security," was the theme of the ninth annual education conference of the CIO Teachers Union held recently in New York. Against the background of a huge draped portrait of the late President Roosevelt, the conference re-dedicated itself to "an expansion of education to realize FDR's goal of world democracy."

The N. Y. Teachers Union is an affiliate of the State, County & Municipal Workers

The Teachers Union annual award for "Outstanding Service in the Cause of Education for Democracy" made to Sidney Hillman, CIO-PAC chairman, was accepted in a speech given by Dr. J. Raymond Walsh, PAC research director, in the absence of Mr. Hillman who had left to attend the San Francisco conference.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, presented the scroll. Charles J. Hendley, the union's president gave a speech of welcome.

UAW Housing Exhibit

An exhibit on housing and community planning will be held May 14 at the United Auto Workers' Union Bookstore in Detroit, to bring before the city's UAW members some of the projected plans for housing in this area. The exhibit is being run by the Bookstore in conjunction with the UAW Housing Department, the Citizen's Housing and Planning Commission and the City Planning Commission.

New York CIO Education Meet

New methods for trade union education is the subject scheduled for discussion at the second regular conference for CIO Educational Directors called by the Greater New York CIO Council, Saturday May 5.

The first conference, held Feb. 17, conducted panel discussion on mass education, selective education for leadership; educational and cultural activities in the community; and proposal for a city-wide CIO Chorus, which has since been formed.

FTA Sets Up New Department

A new National Education Department has been set up by the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers under the directorship of Connie Anderson, the union's former research director.

The new department will aim to help FTA locals with such problems as improving grievance procedure; making membership meeting more interesting; dealing with government, management, and community organizations, and bringing new members into the swing of local activities.

Plans have been mapped out to run one-week summer schools for leaders of locals in various regions; develope local education programs; arrange special courses for FTA locals located near trade union schools; issue pamphlets and mimeographed materials and supply material issued by the labor movement and other progressive organizations.

NMU Runs School In New Orleans

Union members elected by crews of both deep sea ships and river boats attended the Natl. Maritime Union's Leadership Training School held in New Orleans, April 23-28. Teachers included Leo Huberman, NMU education director and Aline Austin, river ports education director. Miss Austin was formerly an Antioch student assistant in the Natl. CIO office.

The Leadership School training courses will continue in New York during May and June and will then recess during July, August and September, reopening in the fall with a new program.

W. L. Douglas Shoes
W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.
IN WASHINGTON
905 PENN AVENUE N. W.
(Opposite Department of Justice Building)
Stores in Principal Cities - Good Dealers Everywhere
INVEST IN VICTORY — BUY BONDS

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by MORT MESKIN
Story by COLE GREENE

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Job to Do For Peace

The Washington Guide owes its readers an apology. A while back, we said that big daily newspapers planned to treat the San Francisco Conference (UNCIO) "fairly objectively" for the first week or so, opening up with the smear guns after that.

Though our information was good at the time, we've been proved wrong. The reactionary papers didn't wait for a week or a single day to pass before starting their drive against the conference.

The answer to this drive and to the more subtle needling practised by GOP leaders like Vandenberg, is to press harder than ever for the peace and world security measures now up in Congress.

Here are the main issues now waiting action:

1. Bretton Woods: S 540 and HR 2211. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey will testify next week for HR 2211 in the House Banking and Currency Committee. Bretton Woods means five million U. S. jobs in world trade after the war. GOP Congressmen are holding up ratification.

2. Reciprocal Trade: HR 2652 extends the act which allows for cuts in U. S. tariffs in return for cuts in foreign tariffs. UAW has testified for, other CIO unions to follow this week in House Ways and Means Committee. GOP members are openly filibustering, hoping to stall until after June 12, when act runs out.

3. Food Organization: HJ Res 145 in the House Foreign Affairs Committee would put the U. S. in the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. FAO is a purely consultative unit, will work on food production and consumption.

4. War Criminals: H Con Res 30 calls for punishment of all Axis war criminals despite legalistic red tape that may be used to help them evade trial and punishment.

It has been reported favorably by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, can be called on the House floor any time. Urge your Representative to support.

FEPC to Floor

The bi-partisan FEPC bill (HR 2232, S 101) for a permanent FEPC has a Discharge Petition (DP4) out to bring it on the House floor. 218 Congressmen must sign before the bill can be voted on.

Urge your Representative to sign.

Aid to Veterans

CIO is supporting three new bills to aid veterans:

1. S 878, HR 2912. These are identical bills sponsored by Sens. Murray (D., Mont.), George (D., Ga.), and Wagner (D., N. Y.), and Rep. Lynch (D., N. Y.) They give veterans credit for each month of service in the armed forces on old age and survivors' benefits now given civilians under Social Security. Top is $160 per month.

2. S 291, sponsored by Sens. Murray and Wagner, provides allowances for dependents of $5 a week on unemployment compensation. This is an increase over the present GI Bill of Rights, which has a $20 a week maximum, no allowances for dependents.

3. HR 1900, sponsored by Rep. Lesinski (D., Mich.), provides monthly allowances for dependents of totally disabled veterans.

In addition, a bill will be introduced shirtly providing health aid for veterans with non-service connected disabilities.

Price Control

Three public statements within the past two weeks underline the need for quick action to renew price control and make it more effective.

A week ago CIO President Murray asked all Congressmen to act at once and to resist the raids of profiteering food monopolists. He also pointed to the great need of U. S. food in the war-devastated countries.

Following this, Judge Samuel I. Rosenman reported to President Truman on the appalling hunger now existing abroad and the starvation that threatens the people.

This week, Truman asked Congress to renew price control and hit out at "irresponsible criticism (which) should not be permitted to break down the confidence of the people in an essential wartime program and a hard-working wartime agency."

Seamen's Aid

CIO is putting on a drive for a fair break for the merchant seamen—the war's most neglected heroes.

The drive is for passage of the "Seamen's Bill of Rights," which gives seamen roughly the same benefits that GI veterans get out of the GI Bill.

The bill is HR 2436, and it's in the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Rep. Bland (D., Va.), chairman.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Bretton Woods. (HR 2211, S 540)	Means five million postwar jobs in U. S.	Report expected soon from House Banking and Currency.	Renew letter, wire campaign to Representative for early vote without ammendments.
Reciprocal trade. (HR 2652)	Renews government power to make world trade agreements lowering U. S., foreign tariff barriers.	GOP filibuster holding up renewal in House Ways and Means Committee.	CIO unions will testify for this week; CIO national next week. UAW has already testified for.
Price Control. (SJ Res. 30)	Renews Price Control Act. Urged this week by Pres. Truman.	GOP Senators on phony food "probe" committee are trying to junk price ceilings, all controls on inflation for big food companies, especially meat packers.	Wire your Senators to fight any attempt to break price ceilings; protest use of food shortages to mask raids on your purse.
Frey rider.	A trick rider on an NLRB appropriation that freezes collusive contracts even where genuine unions have won elections.	House Deficiency Approriations sub-Committee, Rep. Butler Hare (D., S. C.) chairman.	Wire Hare and your own Representative to vote down as attack on Wagner Act, right to organize unions of workers' own choice.
Federal Pay raise. (S 807)	Gives U. S. workers their first pay raise since before Pearl Harbor; brings them up to Little Steel formula standards.	In Senate Civil Service Committee, where Sen. Byrd (D., Va.) is trying to kill it.	Write your Senators to support as first break for U. S. government workers, help to all white collar workers, protection for industrial wage standards.
"Equal Rights." (HJ Res. 49)	Wipes out all laws protecting standards of women workers, widow aid, etc. Wedge to end laws protecting men workers.	Reported out of House Judiciary Committee, ready for early House vote.	Write, wire your Representative to oppose as attack on all labor and social legislation. Opposed by church and civic groups.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Going Up— Issues to Watch

RECIPROCAL TRADE: Next week will see CIO testimony in the House Ways and Means Committee on renewing the reciprocal trade act. Act allows the government to cut U. S. tariff barriers in return for cuts on foreign tariffs against our products.

UAW-CIO has already testified (see page 5). CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey will testify for the national CIO. Others scheduled are UE, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO Maritime Committee, Jacob Potofsky for the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee. The CIO Textile Workers are also expected to appear.

Shortly before his death, FDR asked Congress for renewal, and one of President Truman's first public statements also urged Congress to renew. Congress opposition is coming from the GOP members of the House Committee.

★ ★ ★

PAY RAISE: S 807 is a bill to give U. S. government workers their first basic pay raise since before Pearl Harbor. The bill is now in the Senate Civil Service Committee, where it is opposed by Sen. Byrd (D., Va.).

★ ★ ★

APPROPRIATIONS: Labor's old enemy the "Frey rider" is attempting a comeback in the form of a trick clause attached to the appropriation for the Natl. Labor Relations Board. The rider would prohibit NLRB from hearing a complaint in a case where a contract, no matter of what kind, has been in effect three months.

This trick of attaching riders to appropriations is an ancient one, enables reactionaries to get their point across without facing a real legislative battle on it. In this case, the point is to amend the Wagner Act out of effective existence—something that the AFL and tory Congressmen openly tried some years back without success.

★ ★ ★

RECONVERSION: Watch for a new campaign for an adequate reconversion bill that will help workers as well as industry over the tough change from war to civilian production.

President Truman fought for an adequate bill as a Senator in 1944. He can be expected to give leadership again.

★ ★ ★

FULL EMPLOYMENT: Hearings will start soon on S. 380, Sens. Murray and Wagner's bill to put the U. S. behind the jobs for all program.

The Union for Democratic Action has a good kit of information on the bill and the jobs program. It includes the bill, an analysis, pertinent quotes, etc. Write to UDA, 9 E. 46, New York 17, N. Y., for a set, available in limited quantities.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 20 — May 14, 1945

"Work . . . Work . . . Work"

President Philip Murray sent the following V-E Day message to all CIO affiliates:

"The long awaited and long fought-for day of final victory over German Naziism has been declared by President Truman and the leaders of our victorious allies.

"In the nation-wide rejoicing over this great victory, made possible by the sacrifices of our troops and those of our allies, we shall not for one moment forget that we still have a stern job ahead of us to defeat imperialist Japan.

"The flood of war production that made today's historic victory possible must and will be continued until the armed might of democracy has overcome its deadly enemies in the far-flung Pacific and Asiatic fronts. I am sure that all CIO members will join with me in pledging to stay on the job until it is finished and until we have a just and lasting peace throughout the world."

The CIO and The War

IN THE LIGHT of V-E Day which CIO members along with rest of the nation welcomed joyfully and solemnly this week, The CIO News has taken a look back through the past four years to see how CIO labor faced up to the war. How the CIO met some of the outstanding war issues as expressed in statements and speeches of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and other leaders and in action taken by the National Executive Board and annual convention, is shown below:

CIO Foresees War

November, 1940: A plan for overhauling the National Defense Program was presented by Murray at the Atlantic City convention. He urged industry-wide councils to aid in speeding production.

Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers warned: "I hope that you are not resting under the illusion that it cannot happen here."

1941

February: Murray proposed the creation of a steel industry council for conversion of the entire industry into one great production unit to assure adequate supplies for military and civilian needs.

October: A special conference of CIO union representatives was called to discuss better planning for full production under the National Defense program.

November: CIO convention meeting in Detroit pledged all-out aid to nations fighting Nazis and urged full utilization of existing plant facilities and labor.

The War Comes

December: "We pledge all our aid to the nation", Murray said in a nation-wide radio address a few hours after the United States declared war on Japan. "Five million members of the CIO are ready and eager to do their utmost to defend our country against the outrageous aggression of Japanese imperialism and to secure the final defeat of the forces of Hitler."

A Joint Labor-Industry group of 12, six for labor, six from industry, met with Pres. Roosevelt and drew up the no-strike, no-lookout pledge, calling for peace ful settlement of all disputes through a War Labor Board to be set up to handle these disputes.

1942

January: CIO Pres. Murray, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and UE Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak were appointed CIO representatives to serve on the six-man Labor Victory Board.

March: In a nation-wide radio address, Murray accepted the challenge of War Production Chief Donald Nelson for a terrific speed-up in arms output, declaring that "America's production soldiers can turn the dark world military picture into one of victory for democracy."

July: "In no other war in history has labor been called upon to play such an important part," Murray said in a July 4th speech which reviewed the contributions organized labor had made to the war.

November: "Win the War" was keynote to fifth annual CIO convention held in Boston. It pledged "complete and absolute support" to Roosevelt and his war program, and called for "all-out mobilization to speed the war effort."

1943

January: In a New Year's message, Murray declared that "total mobilization for victory" was the CIO's No. 1 aim for 1943.

February: CIO Executive Board pledged the CIO to meet the challenge of Casablanca by providing "the sinews of war to our armies of liberation."

March: The U. S. cannot afford the luxury of an "idle machine, idle man or idle acre of land" in the war against Hitlerism, Murray told the Truman Committee of the Senate in testimony on total war mobilization.

May: The Executive Board reaffirmed the CIO's complete support for the "unconditional surrender" program of Roosevelt.

June: Murray called upon the new head of the Office of War Mobilization to "give labor a voice to help win the war."

The Executive Board meeting in Cleveland strongly reaffirms labor's no-strike pledge.

July: CIO's no-strike pledge again emphatically reaffirmed at executive board meeting.

November: The CIO convention meeting in Philadelphia again built its program around the theme of win-the-war, declaring that its main task was "to take the offensive to help win the war and a people's peace." The no-strike pledge was reaffirmed unanimously.

1944

January: Executive Board reaffirmed its no-strike pledge.

February: CIO News starts publication of a Servicemen's Edition.

April: Murray cabled Gen. Eisenhower on eve of invasion: "We pledge that the all-out production record . . . will be continued wholeheartedly in complete support of invasion."

June: Murray sent a D-Day letter to Pres. Roosevelt pledging the CIO to keep the no-strike pledge and to give "complete loyalty in any steps or any sacrifices that may be necessary to speed the day of total defeat of the Axis."

September: "This Labor Day finds our country near the crest of the great offensive for final and total defeat over the Axis," Murray said in his message pledging the CIO's continued all-out support for the war.

1945

February: Murray hailed the Big Three unity at the Crimean conference as "spelling the doom of the Nazi oppressors."

March: "We must act at once to stabilize our war economy for the tough job ahead of completing the defeat of Japan as soon as possible after Germany is knocked out of the war," Murray told a Senate committee in urging a stream-lined economy for V-E Day.

April: In a letter to President Truman following the tragic death of Mr. Roosevelt, Murray said: "The fruits of the late President Roosevelt's brilliant victories are within our grasp. In the name of the executive board of the CIO, I extend to you our pledge that we shall not lag in our determination to work with you so that those tasks may be successfully accomplished."

There will be a lot of changes in Germany with peace. This is one of them, a symbol of the good neighbor policy, made by S/Sgt. George A. Kaufman, of Fort Smith Arkansas, U. S. Ninth Army at Krefeld, Germany. Roosevelt Blvd. in memory of the architect of victory.

Here they are properly tagged and labelled, the vaunted SS troops of Adolf Hitler, prisoners of war. They do not strut now; nor do we hear them brag about the master race.

These Yugoslav prisoners were part of a group of 1200 hospitalized men who overpowered their German guards as the American Seventh Army approached and made their way to American lines. Their pride in us, is only exceeded by our pride in them.

Murray Tells Why Labor's Voice Was Needed At San Francisco

LABOR'S stake in the new world organization being blueprinted by UNCIO in San Francisco was explained by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a forceful statement to a special session of the whole United States delegation, to which Murray is a labor consultant.

Emphasizing CIO's complete support for the project, and the need for labor's active participation to make it a success, Murray complained vigorously of the lack of recognition so far accorded to labor. He presented a number of concrete suggestions for remedying this situation.

Referring to the request for representation made by the World Trade Union Conference, representing 60 million workers throughout the world, Murray declared:

"It is most unfortunate that the representatives of world organized labor have not as yet been given recognition at this Conference and afforded the opportunity, in a consultative capacity, to express the viewpoint of labor and participate in the forging of the charter of world peace.

"Labor everywhere will find it difficult to understand the failure to grant such recognition to the leaders of their organizations."

Murray noted that if it becomes necessary to repress aggression through the imposition of sanctions, "it will be labor and its unions upon whom will fall the heaviest burden and responsibility to accomplish the desired end," and added:

"It is of equal importance that the machinery to be established under the Dumbarton Oaks proposals affirmatively provide full recognition and effective participation of labor."

"The sole reference to any labor representation is in the State Department's suggestion that the Intl. Labor Organization (ILO) be attached to the Social and Economic Council.

"This is entirely unsatisfactory." (The ILO is a governmental organization including employer, labor and government representatives appointed by the respective governments. Its participation, Murray has repeatedly emphasized, can in no way be considered real labor representation.)

"The State Dept. by its own suggestion," Murray continued, "indicates that labor should be given recognition. But, unfortunately, the recognition is of a very puerile nature.

"Effective and full participation of labor in the activities of the International Security Organization, including the Social and Economic Council, is imperative."

The CIO leader called for direct representation of the World Federation of Trade Unions in the General Assembly in a consultative capacity, and for participation of representatives of the national trade union movements and of the WFTU in the work of the Social and Economic Council.

"Organized labor has a penetrating understanding of the desires and burning hopes of the common people" on social and economic problems, he said. "Its contribution to the work of the Social and Economic Council through direct participation would be immeasurable."

Murray suggested certain "guide posts" for the Council, to assure the "full enjoyment of human rights."

(1) "The struggle against poverty and unemployment must be won if the fundamental basis for future wars is to be eliminated." Mass purchasing power must be assured by jobs for all at steadily increasing wages.

(2) "Opportunity must be afforded to everyone to fully enjoy the cultural benefits which an expanding economy can provide."

(3) "Labor everywhere must be guaranteed the right to organize into labor unions of their own choosing and to engage in collective bargaining."

(4) Freedom of speech, press, assembly and worship must be guaranteed, and "the right of the people of each nation to choose their own form of government and their public officials in free elections."

(5) Expanded social security is essential to protect the individual against the hazards of unemployment, ill-health and old age.

(6) "Economically backward nations must receive adequate financial assistance in order that their peoples may improve their own living standards," and thus contribute to expanded world trade and prosperity.

Murray stressed particularly the importance of continuing United Nations unity for peace, saying:

"The lasting peace for which the people of the world now yearn will not be realized unless such unity continues, based upon the military power and political solidarity of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

"We must refrain from becoming engulfed with the innumerable minor projects and special pleas, meritorious as they may be, which may well endanger the expeditious conclusion of our real work, the creation of the International Security Organization."

Murray Helps Kuznetsov In Press Interview

Vasili Kuznetsov, Soviet trade union leader, proved himself more than a match for critics at a world labor press conference in San Francisco, attended by some 400 reporters.

Although CIO Pres. Philip Murray was on the job to protect the foreign labor leaders against hostile and provocative questions, the husky, slow-spoken former Pittsburgh steelworker who now heads the Soviet trade union movement insisted on personally answering all questions directed to him or concerning the Soviet Union.

Speaking English with some difficulty, Kuznetsov nevertheless met all questions head-on and without evasion, answering in a clear-cut and forthright fashion.

"Our trade union organizations are quite independent and democratic," he told a reporter who asked if the Soviet Union really had "free" trade unions.

"Membership is entirely voluntary, all executive bodies are elected, and the workers vote for their representatives by secret ballot."

Kuznetsov described the set-up of works or factory committees and other union executive bodies, and pointed out that when the workers become dissatisfied with their officers, the Soviet unions have provisions for recall and re-election.

He said that this was an "old question," and the fact it was still asked was either "due to lack of information about our trade union movement," which could be remedied by information supplied by the Soviet unions; or was "due to an unfriendly attitude toward the Soviet trade union movement." which the facts alone would not change.

Murray told the reporters that Soviet unions were arranging for a full and free exchange of information with the American labor movement, which he hoped would result in a better understanding here of their trade unions.

A question as to whether the Soviet unions have the right to strike brought Kuznetsov eagerly to his feet again.

"The workers of the Soviet Union have the right to defend their rights as they wish," he said, "but since the revolution they have not used this opportunity (to strike).

"There is so much representation for the workers in the Soviet Union, and so many means are provided for remedying their grievances that it is not necessary for them to strike.

"After all, we have a little bit different system. It is not our fault if our different system makes it unnecessary to strike."

A number of other questions designed to identify the Soviet unions with their government brought further evidence from Kuznetsov of the independence of their structure, financing etc.

Asked whether the Soviet unions had a different position from some other national labor movements in respect to the autonomy of each movement, Kuznetsov said: "I support 100 per cent what Philip Murray said about the unanimous conclusions reached by the administrative committee of the World Trade Union Conference in regard to autonomy and everything else.

"Our organization belongs to the world trade union body and will obey all its rules."

Replying to a question as to whether Communists would be excluded from the new world labor body, Murray answered in the negative, pointing out that its purpose is to unite all trade unions of the world "irrespective of considerations of race, nationality, religion, or political opinion."

Questions about Franco Spain drew from Murray an expression of world labor's opposition to this and other Fascist regimes, and from Lombardo Toledano, CTAL leader, the assertion that, "Latin American labor has from the first supported the Spanish Republicans against Franco. Until Franco is overthrown, this war is not over."

Kuznetsov and Michael Tarasov represent the Russian trade unions on the committee of 13 elected to draft a new constitution for World Labor's new organization. Kuznetsov is the only official trade union delegate representing his government at the San Francisco conference.

Speed Urged in Pacific War By CIO Men Back From Tour

Returning to San Francisco amid a splurge of V-E Day rumors, west coast labor leaders who saw the Pacific fighting at first hand would talk of nothing but the need for greater effort to lick Japan.

"The tempo of the war in the Pacific must be accelerated until the Japanese empire is forced to surrender unconditionally," the five CIO members of the delegation reported to the World Trade Union administrative committee.

"It's about the toughest show over the toughest terrain any of our boys have had to face," said Claude Ballard, president of the Intl. Woodworkers of America. "I thought the morale was wonderful. They are typical American boys doing a damned good job."

Mervyn Rathborne, secretary of the California CIO Council, said that "no one can appreciate what it really is until he's seen the heroism of the men in action."

Other CIO leaders, who toured the Pacific for several weeks, under War Manpower Commission auspices, included James T. Smith, Steelworkers; Roscoe G. Craycraft, Longshoremen & Warehousemen; and Cyril V. O'Halloran, United Auto Workers.

"The personnel of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps have expressed deep appreciation for the splendid production record on the home front," they said. "From seaman to admiral, and private to general, they ask only that the production of war materials and the ships to carry them be continued in the amounts required at the fighting fronts, on land, at sea and in the air.

United Nations Film Released

Peace Builders, a film showing the memorable meetings and actions of the United Nations leaders from the Atlantic Charter meeting up to the United National conference at San Francisco, has been released by the National Film Board of Canada.

This film, running time 10 minutes, is loaned free of charge to UAW locals by the Film Dept. of the United Auto Workers, 281 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit.

To Stop World War III

THE GREAT DAY has come; the day for which the world's free people have fought and worked and died.

The battle against Axis reaction began even in pre-Hitler days, when German trade unionists fought the Nazi thugs in the streets. The battle went on when Spanish workers and farmers fought Hitler's gangs in their country; when Czech patriots sacrificed their lives in fighting the Munich sellout; when the partisans and the underground of Europe and Asia fought back at organized state gansterism.

Now the military backbone of German reaction is broken. The Wehrmacht that imposed death and slavery on countless millions of men, women and children is defeated. The armies and navies of the United Nations have done such a thorough job that even the Germans will find it hard to pretend, as they did after 1918, that their armies were unbeaten and that a home front "stab in the back" brought about the Armistice.

The military backbone of German reaction is broken. The hard core of German reaction the industrialists and Junkers that the CIO condemned in its Chicago demand for punishment of war criminals—is still intact. The newspapers carry pictures of the aged fox, von Papen, and the young Alfred Krupp, placidly surrendering and being carried back to the rear in airplanes.

Punishment of war criminals, including the industrialists and bankers responsible for creating Hitler and arming the Wehrmacht, is not simply a matter of retribution, important as that is. It is a key issue in the steps needed to prevent World War III.

Nor can the German people, as the CIO resolution pointed out, escape the consequences of their share in the six years of crime from 1939 to 1945. In every German war, they have furnished the personnel for the armies and the weapons for use against their neighbors. And while the war went on, they have willingly accepted the share of the loot that their rulers chose to give them. In this war, as reports from American correspondents show, the share has been a pretty big one.

The Axis began its war of conquest more than a decade ago. The Japanese imperialists, when they attacked Pearl Harbor, were carrying out a plan for world domination conceived even before World War I. Their soldiers, their officers, their industrialists and Junkers are equally guilty of war crimes.

CIO President Murray, in his V-E Day statement, pledged the unremitting effort of the CIO's six million members to the war against Japan. President Truman reminded the nation of the long job that lies ahead of us in the Pacific and in Asia.

The United Nations meeting at San Francisco, and the union leaders drafting a world labor charter at Oakland, are building the peace and the security of the world against future aggression. They need all the help the people of the United Nations can give them.

They need help against the yes-but men who use the needling technique of a Vandenberg or a Hoover. They need help against forces that seek to protect the war criminals, high and low. They need help to mobilize the world behind peace and security as planned at Yalta, Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks, San Francisco.

The strongest, boldest and most ruthless effort of history to throw the world in chains has been defeated in the heart of Germany. The defeat of Germany's partner, Japan is next, and will be achieved.

The problems of creating a world of peace and of preventing another war of aggression will be solved—with the aid and the active work of every man and woman of goodwill in this country and in all the United Nations.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

SOME random impressions at San Froncisco:

Molotov is brisk, energetic and businesslike, to the surprise of those who thought of Russians as stolid as well as solid.

★ ★ ★

He shakes hands as if he meant it, flashes a ready smile and is quick on his toes, physically as well as mentally. He has a sparkle and vivacity not usually associated with broad Slavic features and stocky build.

★ ★ ★

Sir Anthony Eden, billed as Bond Street fashionplate, proves on closer inspection to be quite human and even a little crumpled at times.

He has poise, verve and mental distinction to match his distinguished appearance in the adoring eyes of aristocrat worshippers.

★ ★ ★

Toughest job is that of flashily-handsome Stettinius.

A certain brittle quality in his polished mannerisms betrays the high tension under which he works.

★ ★ ★

Some proletarian contrast to Eden is provided by short, chubby, twinkley-eyed George Tomlinson, red-haired Ellen Wilkinson, and mild-mannered Clement Attlee, Labor Party members of the British Though Tomlinson and Wilkinson came to the front as trade union leaders, they do not represent the British Trades Union Congress, and Sir Walter Citrine has raised unshirted hell over his government's failure to provide direct trade union representation.

★ ★ ★

French Minister of Health Francois Billoux is a leader of the Textile Workers' Union, but is not on the delegation as a representative of the French trade union movement, which has likewise protested lack of representation.

★ ★ ★

Inside story of first Steering Committee meeting at which the Soviet delegation raised the question of labor representation is that it was delegates from Egypt and Ecuador who presented the arguments against it.

Kuznetsov, trade union representative on the Soviet delegation, asked representation for the World Trade Union Conference in a consultative capacity and remarked that national delegations should also include union representatives.

He was told that national delegations were the business of each country, and that world labor representation would "open the door to other pressure groups."

Labor Premier Peter Fraser of New Zealand spoke in favor of labor representation, and F. M. Forde of Australia also had a good word to say for the World Trade Union Committee.

At the later Steering Committee session, when the economic committee's invitation to the WTUC was revoked, New Zealand was said to have joined with the Soviet Union, France, China, India, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Mexico and the Ukrainian and Bylorussian Soviet Republics in favoring World Labor representation.

The United States delegation was apparently silent at the first meeting, until Chairman Stettinius declared the matter closed. But it took the lead against the WTUC at the later meeting.

★ ★ ★

Contrary to Churchill's description of Soviet policy as "an enigma within an enigma," the Soviet delegates have seemed to this reporter among the least enigmatic and most plain-spoken.

Both Molotov and Kuznetsov have answered all questions at press conferences with more than average frankness, and Soviet statements have always given clear-cut reasons for their position.

In personal association, the Soviet delegates converse readily with, if anything, less than the usual reserve of persons having official responsibilities; and in closed sessions, they are reported to be exceptionally forthright.

The chief "mystery" seems to be in the minds of those who are unused to plain-speaking by politicians and diplomats.

CIO leaders who have been in personal contact with Soviet unionists at London, Washington and San Francisco have been able to clear up any misconceptions.

They have found them very like American unionists, easy to get along with, "regular fellows" with a sense of humor, and accustomed in meetings to the give-and-take of democratic procedure.

It is too bad AFL leaders have not had similar chances for personal contact, due to their self-chosen isolationism.

Arrival of the Ukranian and Byelorussian delegations has helped to show how distinctive are the characteristics of these two major nationalities of the Soviet Union, and how misleading it is to use the word "Russia" for a union of many quite distinct nations, of which the Russians are only one.

The Ukranians are particularly distinctive in language, culture and appearance, tending to be darker, more bright-eyed and more vivacious than the Russians.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 May 14, 1945 No. 20

Reciprocal Trade a Two-way Street For Peace and Prosperity

THE CIO went to bat for reciprocal trade this week, as Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey went on record for HR 2652, the bill now before Congress to renew the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act by declaring that "trade is a two-way street. We cannot achieve full employment and full production in the United States by expanding our exports without expecting to import foreign goods."

Other CIO Unions followed Secretary Treasurer Carey to the stand before the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives. They were: Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee and Secretary Treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union; the CIO Maritime Committee, and Emil Rieve of Textile. See Page 8).

"Two paths lie before the United States in the postwar world. One path leads to narrow nationalism, low wages, production at half of capacity, unemployment, and eventually war. The other path leads to full production full employment, prosperity, friendly cooperation with the other nations of the world and peace. We will follow the second path by adopting such measures as the bill which is now before you. Those who oppose this bill, whether they understand it or not, are leading our steps along the first path," said Carey.

Jacob S. Potofsky declared: "Any good neighbor program has to be built on trade relationships that are profitable to both sides. If we want to be as good friends as we should be, we must not boycott each other, and we must not exclude each other's goods."

"The way of cooperation must be mutually profitable. The renewal and strengthening of the trade agreements Act is one of the foundation stones in that process."

Reid Robinson, vice president of the CIO and president of the Mine Mill, and Smelter Workers Union, declared:

"If we are to keep our huge plants operating at full capacity after the war to provide full employment, it will be necessary to import large quantities of nonferrous metals. A high tariff on such a metal as copper will cost manufacturers using it around $120,000,000, which will be either passed on to the consumer or will cause the manufacturer to turn to substitute metals. Theoretically, the tariff is supposed to compensate the domestic producer for the added cost of his labor, as compared to the foreign producer's labor cost. Actually the tariff provides a subsidy to domestic producers. High tariffs do not mean high wages, as was shown during the depression after World War I. On the contrary lower tariffs will encourage an expansion of foreign trade which will in turn permit a high level of operations for our domestic industries so that no worker who wants a job need go unemployed."

The CIO Maritime Committee estimates that half a million jobs in the allied maritime industries and a 25 million ton merchant marine can be gained from enactment of HR 2652.

"Maritime workers know full well that trade is a two way proposition. They know from experience that no shipping line can prosper on one way cargoes. They know that imports make jobs."

JAMES CAREY

JACOB PETOFSKY

Pvt. Alfred Blaustein gives Dorothy Cohn, both members of Local 65, United Retail, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers (CIO) his idea of the right spirit of giving to the Clothing drive.

Sarah Levine and Ann Ross both work at Lerners. Labor-Management cooperation in the drive resulted in 16 huge cartons from Lerner's to the clothing drive. They are folding the garments for the needy.

WHILE sound trucks toured the city, labor dug deep into wardrobes and dug out clothes for the needy of Europe. Bakers trucks, bread trucks, laundry trucks, were suddenly equipped with sound, and toured the city on behalf of the Greater New York CIO Council and the CIO War Chest. The trucks featured a recorded appeal from the CIO to the public to intensify their efforts in the drive as a living memorial to the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Recorded appeals for the support of the drive were made by stars of the stage and screen, including Katherine Cornell, Canada Lee, Tallulah Bankhead, Franchot Tone, Raymond Massey, Jane Wyatt, and Irving Ceasar who sang a song especially written by him for the drive.

Have you got old clothes,
Old clothes to spare?
Have you got old clothes,
Old clothes to share?

Got to send them from New World to the Old World,
So the Lord won't lose his children
In a cold world.

Now the Golden Rule
Applies to you;
Look inside that trunk
And closet, too.

From their head to toes, they need
Your clothes—
Oh, Brother, hear their prayer:
Have you got old clothes?
Old clothes to spare!

Carey Calls Bretton Woods Cornerstone of Cooperation

IN TESTIMONY before the House Banking and Currency Committee last week, James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, urged that HR 2211 "be endorsed by the United States without further delay and without amendments or changes."

"Bretton Woods represents one of the most important cornerstones on which full international cooperation so essential to winning and maintaining the peace must be built. Throughout America and in the CIO Bretton Woods means jobs and security. Philip Murray has estimated that some 5,000,000 jobs for Americans can be found in export trades after the war if Bretton Woods proposals are adopted," he said.

Carey declared that jobs and economic security are not the only benefits of the Bretton Woods plan for "freeing and increasing world trade." He said: "We confidently expect that the expanded world trade that will result from Bretton Woods, and the freeing of trade from restrictive practices such as were employed before this war, will go a long way toward preventing World War III."

Carey pointed out that the proposed international monetary fund will make it possible to end evil and restrictive trade practices.

"Competitive currency depreciation, multiple currency practices, bi-lateral agreements that shut out certain countries in favor of others, the infamous system of blocked marks employed by the Germans, were all steps in the economic preparation for war that preceded the actual aggression of 1939. Without these economic steps, the military aggression would not have been possible. Germany was able to arm and stockpile raw materials by literally robbing smaller countries of their resources through blocked accounts. This must not be permitted to happen again."

Carey declared that currency depreciation is inevitably "paid for by the wage earners and the people of low income." And it follows then that "when the standard of living of the workers and farmers in foreign countries falls, our standard of living follows in the same downward direction."

"We cannot maintain full employment at adequate incomes in this country without a large volume of exports.

"We cannot expect to export to countries where the people do not have enough to meet the barest necessities of life," he said.

Carey declared that with America's participation in the Bank for Reconstruction and Development," we will be helping to build markets for the goods which our own factories produce."

Bretton Woods has already been signed by representatives of 44 nations, and was the result of months of previous drafting. Carey urged that we begin operation at once under its provisions and "if from time to time perfecting amendments are needed, the document amply provides for that. Borrowers cannot even have access to the Bank's assistance unless they can show unusual need."

Listed among the safeguards in the agreement are: the provisions for membership and management organization of the Fund guarantees that the interests of the United States are protected; the membership and management of the Bank similarly protect us; meanwhile, the possibilities of universal participation provided for in the agreement guarantee that under Bretton Woods as under Dumbarton Oaks, the nations of the world are launched upon a "great cooperative undertaking for mutual self-help."

World Labor's New Constitution

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE chief purposes of the new World Federation of Trade Unions, as set forth in the draft constitution announced at San Francisco, are as follows:

"The World Federation of Trade Unions exists to improve the living and working conditions of the people of all lands, and to unite them in pursuit of the objectives sought by all freedom-loving peoples, as set forth in the declarations of the London World Trade Union Conference in February, 1945.

"These aims and objects can only be fully attained by the establishment of a world order in which all the resources of the world will be utilized for the benefit of all its peoples, the vast majority of whom are workers by hand and brain, whose protection and whose progress depend upon the union of all their organized forces, nationally and internationally."

The World Federation therefore proclaims its prime purposes to be to organize and unite within its ranks the trade unions of the world, regardless of considerations of race, nationality, religion or political opinion; to assist the workers wherever necessary, in countries socially or industrially less developed, to set up their trade unions; and to carry on the struggle for the extermination of all Fascist forms of government and every manifestation of Fascism, under whatever form it operates and by whatever name it may be known.

Other main objects are to combat war and the causes of war by giving full support to the establishment of a powerful and effective international organization armed with all necessary powers to prevent aggression and maintain peace; to support the widest possible international cooperation in the social and economic sphere, and measures for the industrial development and full utilization of the resources of undeveloped countries; and to carry on a struggle against reaction and for the full exercise of democratic rights and liberties of all peoples.

THE STRUCTURE of a unified world labor movement, hammered out in weeks of discussion, drafting and give-and-take compromises, was finally unveiled last week at a press conference in San Francisco attended by more than 400 newspaper men and women from all over the world.

Formally, it is the draft constitution of what will be known as the World Federation of Trade Unions. It was drafted by the 13-man Administrative Committee elected by the World Trade Union Conference in London last February.

It has still to be submitted to the various national labor movements for approval, before being presented to the first constitutional convention of the new World Federation of Trade Unions, to be held in Paris, France, beginning Sept. 25, 1945.

The most remarkable part of this draft constitution is that it was unanimously agreed upon by a committee representing tens of millions of workers all over the world of all kinds of races, nationalities, religions and political opinions.

In the committee's meetings, which continued in Washington, D. C., and Oakland, Calif., from April 13 to May 5, there were many differences over national autonomy for affiliated labor movements, over methods of voting, over international trade departments and many other aspects of the proposed constitution.

But so strong was the determination to achieve unity in establishing a single, all-inclusive, powerful and fully democratic world organization of Labor, that it was possible to work out amicable solutions of all differences and to achieve unanimous approval of the final document. Following are some of the main features of the draft constitution:

COMPOSITION: The draft constitution provides for the affiliation of national trade union organizations, and the preamble declares that it is the purpose of the WFTU "to organize and unite within its ranks the trade unions of the whole world, irrespective of considerations of race, nationality, religion, or political opinion."

As a general rule, affiliation is to be confined to a single national trade union centre for each country; but, in exceptional circumstances, "more than one national trade union centre or individual national trade union organizations may be granted the right of affiliation."

VOTING AND DUES: In the Congress (convention) and General Council of the WFTU, organizations with a membership up to five million will have one vote per 50,000 members; organizations with more than five but less than ten million, one vote for each additional 100,000 members; organizations with more than 10 but less than 15 million, one vote for each additional 200,000 members; and for organizations with more than 15 million members, one vote for each additional 400,000 members.

Affiliation fees are reckoned in English pounds sterling on the following basis: Organizations with a membership up to five million will pay £4 per year per thousand members; £2 per year per thousand members in excess of five million but less than ten million; £1 per year per thousand members in excess of 10 million but less than 15 million; and ten shillings half an English pound) per year per thousand members in excess of 15 million.

NATIONAL AUTONOMY AND COMPLIANCE WITH WFTU DECISIONS: The autonomy of the trade union movement of each country is guaranteed by a specific article of the constitution. The same article provides that decisions of the WFTU must be immediately communicated to all affiliated bodies, for submission to the governing body of each and to be carried into effect by it, "unless within three months it shall have notif Secretary that, i particular decision plied by it, and s the General Secreta ment of the reas ability to give eff cisions."

The General Se powered to submit to the WFTU Exec for its consideratio further action, in c the affiliated org cerned, as the Exec believes will prom practical applicatio sions.

Within three m adjournment of a meeting of the Ge Executive Committ ated organization General Secretary it has taken to ap and to carry them country.

STRUCTURE A Structurally, the W of Trade Unions wi

(1) The World T gress (convention), its sovereign au meet every two ye

(2) The General by the World Cong sentative of all the izations. This will

(3) The Execut which is to be elec Congress and will

1 Harry Bridges introduces Philip Murray to west President Murray acted as hosts to the international their meetings from April 13 through May 5th, in Wa California. Murray declared there was a "Welcome" si all labor to join the World Trade Union Federation.

4 Sir Walter Citrine, Secretary of British Trade Union Congress and chairman of that country's delegation to the World Labor Conference at Oakland, Calif., discusses the British government's refusal to international labor representation at UNCIO with Sidney Hillman and Ebby Edwards.

eeting. The CIO and labor delegates during shington and Oakland, n on the doormat for 2 Vasili Kuznetsov was part of his government's official delegation to UNCIO. Molotov raised the question of representation for international labor in an advisory capacity, but was refused. He said he did not press the question, since it was deemed difficult "to comply with this request."

3 Sir Walter Citrine protested the fact that British trade unions had no official representation at UNCIO. He said this would cause "widespread dissatisfaction among the millions of organized workers represented by the British TUC. He included Clement Atlee of the Labor Party in his criticism.

ed the General its opinion, a cannot be ap- hall present to ry a full state- ons for its in- ct to such decretary is em- this statement tive Committee n and for such onsultation with anizations con- tive Committee ote the fullest n of the decinths after the Congress or the eral Council or ee, each affili- nust advise the f the measures y the decisions out in its own ade Union Con- which will be rity and will ars.

D OFFICERS: orld Federation l consist of:

Council, elected ress and repre- affiliated organ- meet annually.

ve Committee, by the World consist of 17 members elected from amongst candidates nominated by the Trade Departments. The 17 members of the Executive Committee will be distributed on a scheme allocating three to the USSR, two to Great Britain, two to USA, two to France, three to the rest of Europe, one to China, two to Latin America, one to the Pacific area and one to Africa.

(4) The Bureau of Management, which will consist of a Chairman and four Vice-Chairmen to be elected by the Executive Committee, and the General Secretary.

The General Secretary, elected by the Congress, is to be the principal administrative officer of the WFTU, with general charge of the staff and responsible to the Executive Committee for the administrative organization. He is to have charge of publishing a monthly bulletin and circulars in several languages, under the supervision of the Bureau of Management, to maintain regular contact with affiliated organizations.

TRADE DEPARTMENTS: The General Council is authorized to establish Trade Departments within the World Federation for such trades or industries as it may determine. The function of these Trade Departments is to deal with technical matters concerning their trades. They are to have full autonomy in this sphere, within the World Federation, but no power to make dicisions or carry on activities in connection with matters of general policy, which remain within the jurisdiction of the governing bodies of the WFTU. The Trade Departments are to be accountable to the General Council and to the Executive Committee for their activities.

Each Trade Department is to be represented in the Congress and the General Council by one delegate and one substitute who may vote by show of hands, but will have no vote in the event of a rollcall card vote. The Director of a Trade Department may also sit with the Executive Committee in a consultative capacity when matters relating to its trade or industry are under consideration.

HEADQUARTERS: The constitution provides that the headquarters of the World Federation shall be in Paris, France.

The members of the Administrative Committee, who drafted the constitution, are: Louis Saillant and Benoit Frachon, France; Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, USA; Vasili Kuznetsov and Micheal Tarasov, USSR; Sir Walter Citrine and Ebby Edwards, Great Britain; Vicente Lombardo Toledano and Angel Cofino, Latin America; H. T. Liu, China; Walter Schevenels, Intl. Federation of Trade Unions; and J. H. Oldenbroek, Intl. Trade Secretariats.

Assisting the Committee as technical advisers were Herbert Tracy and Ernest Bell (Britain); Robert Chambeiron (France); Lee Pressman, John Abt and Michael Ross (CIO).

Labor Invitation Was "Yes" and "No"

THE issue of world Labor representation at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco was still hot, as the CIO News went to press. The World Trade Union Conference was accorded recognition and invited to send observers on Wednesday, only to have the invitation revoked Thursday by a meeting of the top steering committee, at the instigation of the United States delegation.

CIO President Philip Murray, consultant to the United States delegation, immediately issued a vigorous protest. "The Congress of Industrial Organizations expresses great concern," he said, "with the action of the American representatives on the steering committee of the United Nations conference in securing the revocation of an invitation that had been extended to the World Trade Union Conference by the conference committee which deals with problems affecting the economic and social council."

The steering committee, including representatives of all the powers, had previously authorized committees dealing with special phases of the conference's work to invite any international organizations to send observers that they deemed might be helpful to their deliberations.

Acting on this authorization, the committee dealing with the economic and social council issued an invitation to the World Trade Union Conference among other bodies, and announced its action in the following statement:

"Following a decision of the steering committee, Chairman Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar" (Indian delegate who headed the committee) "announced his intentions to invite as observers of the committee's sessions appropriate representatives of the League of Nations, the International Labor Organization, the United Nations Interim Commission on Food and Agriculture and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. The committee decided also to invite observers from the World Trade Union Congress."

The following day, however, the United States delegation had the question placed on the agenda of the steering committee, and after this committee's meeting its Chairman,Edward R. Stettinius, announced that the invitations would stand for the other organizations but not for the World Trade Union Conference.

Although steering committee votes are not announced, it was reported that the vote against the WTUC was 33 to 10. The nations which voted for World Labor representation were said to be the Soviet Union, France, China, India, Ukrainian - Soviet Republic, Czechoslovakia, Byelorussian Soviet Republic, Yugoslavia and New Zealand. Mexico was believed also to have spoken and voted on the labor side.

In his statement, Murray also said: "The Administrative Committee of the World Trade Union Conference has heretofore made its request for representation, in an advisory capacity, at the United Nations Conference and fully demonstrated the imperative need for such recognition being accorded to world labor.

"It is therefore extremely unfortunate that after a committee of the conference which is primarily responsible for the formulation of policies concerning the economic and social council, by an overwhelming vote, extended an invitation to the World Trade Union Conference to sit with it as observers, the American delegation assumed the leadership within the steering committee to reverse this wholesome action."

WASHINGTON GUIDE

GOP Line Of Attack

GOP strategy in fighting world security and prosperity through increased foreign trade was well illustrated by Republican Congressmen during CIO Secretary - Treasurer Carey's testimony on reciprocal trade and Bretton Woods this week.

It has three basic points: 1) delay; 2) amendments that sound innocent but aren't and 3) an attempt to drive a wedge between labor and the foreign policies of the administration.

They have used every possible device to stall the committee in reporting on both bills, and so far they've succeeded all too well. Hearings on Bretton Woods have been going on for months. The June 12 deadline for renewing the trade agreements act is approaching rapidly, with no sign that the committee is ready to report.

The delaying tactic is wearing thin, though, as Rep. Fred Crawford (R. Mich.) rather sadly admitted to Carey when he commented: "I suppose we'll pass these things eventually—maybe before Thanksgiving."

The amendment is still being worked as vigorously as ever, both by Sen. Vandenberg in San Francisco and the GOP enemies of Bretton Woods in Congress.

Crawford's tone during the Bretton Woods testimony delivered for the CIO by Carey was almost pleading when he asked if CIO thought Bretton Woods was perfect and needed no changes, not even little tiny ones.

Carey, of course, didn't fall for that one. He explained patiently that no one thought Bretton Woods was perfect, but it was an agreement endorsed by 44 nations, it was workable, and any attempt to change it now would mean the whole process of getting agreement by 44 nations would have to start all over again.

The line of trying to drive a wedge between labor and the foreign policy of FDR and Truman was shown during the hearings on reciprocal trade in the Ways and Means Committee.

Chief GOP spokesmen during CIO testimony there was Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R. N.Y.). Reed's line was transparent in its simplicity. He accused the CIO of being the "tool" of big exporters, who wanted to use exports in some unexplained way to drive down American wages.

When Carey objected strenuously to hearing the CIO called a "tool" of anyone, Reed hastily added that it was an "unwitting tool" and that of course he meant no reflection on CIO's integrity. Then, said Carey, "All you mean to make is a reflection on our intelligence."

Labor knows that Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks and reciprocal trade mean jobs and security. CIO's job now is to translate that knowledge into achievement, by renewing its campaign for quick passage, without amendments, of bills that will carry these plans to realization.

Coming and Going

The food profiteers are trying to get it both ways. Led by the meat packers, they're trying to wreck price control by cracking ceilings on meat. GOP Sens. Taft and Wherry are the principal task force on this attack.

Led by Rep. Howard Smith (D. Va.), who works with the food lobbyists of the citrus fruit industry, they're trying to wreck the Wagner Act by exempting food industry workers through a trick rider on the appropriation.

Their slogan is almost classic in its simplicity: Up With Prices, Down With Wages.

For Freer World Trade

Joining with CIO Secretary James B. Carey and other CIO leaders in testifying for HR 2652, the bill to renew the reciprocal trade act, Emil T. Rieve, vice-president of the CIO and President of the Textile Workers Union, told the House Ways and Means Committee this week that his union supports the act.

"The Act has become an instrumentality for defining our foreign trade policy. It represents to the world our determination to work out a rational foreign trade policy," he said.

Rieve pointed out that workers must be assured protection against competition from lower wages in other countries. This, he said, is particularly true of the U. S. textile industry workers, who must not be subjected to low wage pressure.

"To allow the lower wages in other countries to undersell our industry would be fatal to a very large part of it," he said.

"Our economy has been adapted to, and our standard of living demands, this industry. It is vital and large. The war could not have been as successfully fought if we were not capable of producing our own textiles."

This protection can be assured by advancing world labor and wage standards, Rieve pointed out.

"We believe the most serious step which may be taken in the direction of eliminating substandard conditions of living and the tension which it creates is the adoption of international labor standards."

Rieve also asked for use of quota restrictions, when necessary, to protect U. S. indutsry from the "ruinous effect of foreign competition."

In concluding, Rieve said: "We believe that the reciprocal trade agreements act should be extended as it provides assurance to the rest of the world of our willingness to integrate into the world economy."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Bretton Woods. (HR 2211, S 540)	Means five million postwar jobs in U. S.	Report expected soon from House Banking and Currency.	Renew letter, wire campaign to Representative for early vote without amendments.
Reciprocal trade. (HR 2652)	Renews government power to make world trade agreements lowering U. S., foreign tariff barriers.	GOP filibuster holding up renewal in House Ways and Means Committee.	CIO unions and National CIO testified for this week. Wire your Congressman to support; present act runs out June 12.
Price Control. (SJ Res. 30)	Renews Price Control Act. Urged this week by Pres. Truman.	GOP Senators on phony food "probe" committee are trying to junk price ceilings, all controls on inflation for big food companies, especially meat packers.	Wire your Senators to fight any attempt to break price ceilings; protest use of food shortages to mask raids on your purse.
Federal Pay raise. (S 807)	Gives U. S. workers their first pay raise since before Pearl Harbor; brings them up to Little Steel formula standards.	Senate Civil Service Committee supports 15% raise. CIO asks 25%.	Write your Senators to support as first break for U. S. government workers, help to all white collar workers, protection for industrial wage standards.
"Equal Rights." (HJ Res. 49)	Wipes out all laws protecting standards of women workers, widows aid, etc. Wedge to end laws protecting men workers.	Reported out of House Judiciary Committee, ready for early House vote. Also in Senate Judiciary Committee.	Write, wire your Representative to oppose as attack on all labor and social legislation. Opposed by church and civic groups.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up— Issues to Watch

TAXES: Sen. George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is putting out newspaper feelers on the new tax program.

Sen. George promises cuts in personal income taxes. In the past, Sen. George's idea of tax cuts is a handout to the rich. He was the principal author of the tax bill that FDR vetoed last year with the descriptive phrase: "Relief for the greedy, not for the needy."

CIO will be announcing its tax program soon. Watch for it.

★ ★ ★

MISSOURI VALLEY: The Murray bill (S 555, HR 2203) has been given an adverse report in the Senate Commerce Committee, as was expected. It now goes to the Senate Agriculture and then to the Irrigation and Reclamation Committee.

CIO is fully back of this bill, which will create a Missouri Valley Authority like TVA to help farmers, businessmen, veterans and workers in nine states. Write your Senators.

★ ★ ★

WAR CRIMINALS: Newspaper pictures and stories of Goering and other Nazi mass murderers being fed chicken and cocktails by American generals are making people pretty sore and apprehensive about punishment of war criminals.

One good way to turn your indignation to practical use is to urge your Senators to support H Con Res 39, a bill to punish war criminals regardless of legalistic redtape.

It passed the House a week ago, now needs Senate action.

★ ★ ★

RECIPROCAL TRADE: this was CIO week on HR 2652, the bill to renew the reciprocal trade agreements enabling act now before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The present act expires June 12, is facing tough GOP opposition. Wire your Congressman.

★ ★ ★

SEDITION TRIALS: this is not an issue in Congress, but one that affects our future security. Some 29 indicted seditionists, anti-Semites, KKK leaders—all of them ferociously anti-labor as well as anti-American—got a mistrial when Judge Eicher died last year.

CIO Pres. Murray wrote to Attorney General Biddle at the time urging a new trial, and asked CIO members to write. This campaign helped Biddle make up his mind to order a new trial.

The new trial will go ahead with O. John Rogge as prosecutor again. Rogge needs support to hasten the case to trial. Letters to him, and to Biddle, urging that it start without delay, will help. Address both at U. S. Dept. of Justice, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Varro C. Jones, USA Dist. Dir., reports: Pacific Car & Foundry Co., Billings, Mont., USA-CIO 175, AFL 34, neither 14. This clears the way for further decisive victories in this area.

CIO Reg. Dir. Paul R. Christopher, Tenn., advises: Aloca, Chattanooga, USA-CIO 3654, AFL 810, District 50,985.

A. F. Hartung, CIO Reg. Dir., Portland, Ore., reports: Alcoa Plant, Troutdale, Ore. CIO 167 AFL 109.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, advises: Twin Disc Clutch Co., Rockford, Ill. (production & maintenance employes) UAW-CIO 113, against 59. At Wilson & Co., Chicago, CIO Packinghouse Workers received all of the 23 valid votes cast.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joe Dernonecurt, Oklahoma City, reports: Swift Product plant, Clinton, Okla., CIO Packinghouse Workers 45, no union 6. Organizational work was done by UFWA Rep. Buck Whittaker who has done a grand job.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Org. Dir., IUM-SWA, reports: Equitable Bearing Co., Inc., Waldon, N. Y., CIO won over No Union and the AFL with 66% of the votes. Southern Pine and Chemical Co., and Nelie Processing Corp., Jacksonville, Fla., were combined in one unit and the result was that CIO won over No Union and the AFL with 73% of the votes.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler, Kansas City, Mo., reports: Lederle Serum Co., St. Joseph, Mo., CIO Packinghouse Workers 25, No Union 16. Rep. Joe Wheeler was in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Campaign, reports: Atlantic Refining Co., Port Arthur, Tex., CIO 238, against 69; American Bitunuls Co., Oakland, Calif., CIO 184, against 0.

Julius Emspak, UE Secy-Treas., reports: CIO won at Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., Williamsport, Pa. This is the fifth Sylvania plant won by the UE in bringing over 8,100 Sylvania employes into the Union. UE defeated an independent union and won an election in the Clifford Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass. Some 1,250 people are in the unit. At Keystone Mfg. Co., Boston, Mass., 556 workers voted for the UE.

John B. Easton, CIO Reg. Dir., Charleston, W. Va., reports the establishment of a local for the SCMWA among the toll collectors on the W. Va. bridges crossing the Ohio River; in negotiations they secured wage increases and other benefits.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org., IWA-CIO, reports: Kesterson Lumber Corp., Klamath Falls, Oreg. CIO 68, AFL 55. Dan & Russell, Redmond, Ore., 16 out of 21 employes voted for CIO. Independent Sawmill Co., Williamina, Ore., CIO 12, AFL 10.

Wm. Mayo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., reports: American Paper Stock Co., Indianapolis, PWOC-CIO 28, against 18. CIO Rep. Howard L. McNamara conducted this campaign.

Fur & Leather Workers Intl. Union reports: Engel & Fetzer, Cleveland, Ohio, signed a union shop provision which culminates an 8-year struggle. Also provided were a guaranteed annual wage and other benefits. This agreement was negotiated by Local 86 Pres. Samuel Kurlan assisted by a shop committee.

Michael Livoda, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Denver, Colo., reports: CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes succeeded in negotiating a contract with Colorado Milling & Elevator Co., Greeley, after a cross-check of cards against the payroll. The contract included recognition of this Union and a substantial increase in wages for all employes. The union was also certified by cross-check of cards at Colorado Milling & Elevator Co., Fort Collins, Colo. Credit for these accomplishments is largely due to Intl. Rep. Marion Frazier.

J. E. Crossland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Houston, Texas, reports: Lone Star Cement Corp. Houston, CIO 97, AFL 7.

Ewald Sandner, CIO Reg. Dir., Newark, N. J., reports: General Chemical Corp., Edgewater, N. J., CIO Gas, Coke — Chemical Workers, 96, AFL 66. Assisting in this organizing campaign were David Elliott, Gerard Mullica and Spencer Kellogg Local Union members.

CIO Field Rep. Jack Rosen reports: At Western Exterminating Co., Newark, N. J., a card check among 28 employes resulted in a CIO

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir. for the Carolinas, advises: At White Furniture Co., Mebane, some 250 employes voted about two-to-one for CIO. Gray Concrete Pipe Co., Thomasville, N. C., CIO Stone & Allied Products Workers 35, against 26.

JAPS MUST GO TOO

By agreement between the Utility Workers Organizing Committee and the CIO, CIO Field Rep. Jack Altman has been assigned as UWOC Comptroller. His offices are located at 1133 Broadway, New

The free world was thrilled with the news of Germany's collapse. The might of free men overcame the might of brutality and hate as represented by Nazism. The war against Japan must go on in order that the honored dead who paid the supreme sacrifice to preserve freedom all over the world, shall not have died in vain. The CIO has pledged itself to carry on in this fight.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Utah CIO Hails Charter

The charter for industrial peace in the postwar period signed by the CIO, AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce was hailed as a milestone in labor-management relations by speakers at the recent convention of the Utah CIO Council convention at Salt Lake City.

Both John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils, and Adolph Germer, CIO national representative, acclaimed the charter. Symbolic of the new agreement between management and labor, Brophy also addressed a breakfast meeting of labor leaders and employers with Gus P. Backman, executive secretary of the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, as host.

Brophy and Utah's Gov. Herbert B. Max urged the retention of the Geneva steel plant at Provo, Utah, after the war. The plant is owned by the Defense Plant Corp.

Resolutions pledged cooperation with other groups to retain the Geneva steel plant, support to the CIO United Steelworkers in organizing the Geneva plant workers, urged voluntary contributions of $1 from CIO members to carry on the work of PAC and called for enactment of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill.

The no-strike pledge was reaffirmed. The convention also resolved to urge congressional approval of the Bretton Woods agreement without amendments (HR 2211, S 540), of the anti-poll tax bill (HR 2232, S 101) and the permanent FEPC bill (S 101, HR 2232).

Following are the two candidates nominated for president, to be elected the first week of June: Clarence L. Palmer, incumbent, and Sidney I. Lester, both of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Vice-presidents nominated are: Mining division, one to be elected, Kimball Kane, DeVon Pope and Frank West; Smelter and mill workers, two to be elected, Con Keith and Afton Davis, both cumbents; Steelworkers in Provo and south Utah, Chris Miller, incumbent; Steelworkers in Salt Lake City and Ogden, Arthur Mullett, incumbent; other affiliated unions, John H. Wood, Packinghouse Workers.

At a separate meeting, the Utah CIO Auxiliary elected Mrs. Dan Edwards as president and Mrs. Giles Croma as secretary.

27,000 Covered By Steel Order

A decision in the disputes between the CIO United Steelworkers and 12 non-integrated steel casting companies employing 27,000 workers, nearly one-third of the total employment in the industry was issued this week by the War Labor Board.

The decision follows substantially the Board's directive in the basic steel and iron ore cases, ordering night-shift differentials, correction of intraplant inequities, more liberal vacation pay, standard voluntary maintenance of membership and check-off.

The union's demands for a 17c general pay increase, guaranteed annual wage, a joint fund for members in the armed forces, elimination of geographical wage differentials and sick leave were denied.

As in the other cases, the denial of the 17c pay increase, to which labor members dissented, was without prejudice to reconsideration if there is any change in the national wage policy.

UAW Asks Revision Of WLB Wage Policy

Immediate review and revision of the War Labor Board's wage policies has been demanded by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers.

Thomas declared that reduction of working hours to 40 a week, which is already in effect in the Ford plants, and may be expected in other war plants, will seriously reduce labor's take-home pay.

UAW Pres. Thomas in a letter to WLB Chairman George V. Taylor urged that the board take action to maintain present overall wage levels notwithstanding reduction in working hours.

"The inevitable result of cutbacks in a great many plants in the automotive and aircraft industries will be large-scale unemployment and reduction of working hours for thousands of others," Thomas stated.

"The UAW-CIO has urged adoption immediately of a comprehensive plan for reconversion.

"The Road to Democracy"

In Paintings By

SARA BERMAN-BEACH

May 1 - May 31

ARTISTS ASSOCIATES

138 West 15, N. Y. C.

Rose Pringle, Director

11-5 Daily—3-6 Sundays

(All works for sale. Prices on request)

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS

Manufacturers

Celluloid or Litho-Metal

For—

Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems

CHARLES M. GERAGHTY

INCORPORATED

500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY

Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING

UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES

Recognized Union Labels

No Charge for Designs and Sketches

Also Specializing in

Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies

N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.

Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S

UNION LABEL STORE

Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps and Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary
Cases, Bill Folds

231 So. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois
Phone Webster 4104

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"

Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets

THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY

925 11th St., N.W.

100% UNION MADE

SEALS

RUBBER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 556 UNION MADE CIO

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

The achievement of V-E Day gives a wonderful send-off to the Seventh War Loan Drive. It dramatizes the magnificent achievements of our armed forces and makes us more than ever determined to speed final victory.

"Work, work, work," was the main emphasis of President Truman's V-E Day message and one of the first things all of us must work for is to send the Seventh War Loan Drive over the top in record time.

CIO Auxiliary Pres. Faye Stephenson suggests that we make this drive the occasion for a very practicial tribute to FDR. She says:

"The Seventh War Loan Drive gives every one of us a chance to show our devotion to the ideas of Franklin D. Roosevelt and our determination to support President Truman in carrying them out.

"The funds raised in the drive will go first and foremost for the arms and equipment our men need to insure the unconditional surrender of the fascist enemy.

"That is the first of the goals for which Franklin Roosevelt gave his life. Let's make an extra bond in his memory from each of us our slogan for the Seventh War Loan Drive."

Other Tributes

We have many other things to do in tribute to Franklin Roosevelt's memory which become even more urgent now V-E Day is here.

One of the most pressing of these is to help feed the people we have liberated in Europe. Two reports have been released recently which reveal how desperately that help is needed.

The War Food Administration estimates that twelve million tons of food should be sent into Europe between August 1945 and the same month in 1946.

Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, reporting to the President on conditions he observed in northwest Europe said:

"The immediate and long-range economic situations of these liberated countries are extremely serious. The needs vary from country to country.

"Seven million displaced persons brought into Germany from overrun countries as slave labor will increase its seriousness. These people have no source of food of their own, and will place a critical burden upon an already severely limited food supply."

If we are really in earnest in our determination to see permanent peace follow this war we must do all we can to see to it that the liberated peoples of Europe get enough to eat. Hunger leads to war.

We must make up our minds that we will get along with less of meat, fats, sugar and some other scarce foods than we are used to for the next year or more so that our neighbors in France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, etc., shall not starve.

Story of Chinese Labor

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

"The Chinese Labor Movement," by Nym Wales, said to be the first general history of labor in China, is a disturbing book.

It is disturbing first because it shows how important and yet how difficult it is for American and European workers to understand the confusions and conflicts of the Chinese labor movement. But if the new World Trade organization which has just concluded its meeting at San Francisco, is to function effectively, some basis of understanding must be reached.

Second, the book is disturbing because it makes some serious charges against a labor organization in China which has been receiving support from American and European labor.

The author, who is the wife of Edgar Snow, magazine writer and expert on Far Eastern affairs, has spent ten years living and traveling in China. Her book contains, in addition to her own observations, a short account of the background of the Chinese labor movement and a description of its modern phases, from the first stage in 1922 to the fifth, beginning with the war in Japan.

Like feudal Europe, China had its guilds, known as hongs and pongs, primarily to promote the craft interests of both employers and workers, but the real trade union movement developed much later than in western countries.

"Labor in China never went through the slow period of organization that occurred in many other countries, but was born in the chaos of revolutionary emergencies. It cannot be understood if one views it as a mere trade union development," states the author. "Rather it was a revolutionary mass movement of the infant working class struggling to free itself from the bondage of semi-feudal conditions.

Until 1920 and 1921, she says, "the workers were groping in the dark for new forms of organization to meet their needs." During the second stage from 1923 to early 1925, the labor movement went underground, due mostly to the repression under the war lords control of the interior.

In the third stage, during the 1925-27 revolution, more than 32,000 persons were sent to prison, nearly 38,000 were killed and executed, 25,000 died in open struggle and 13,000 were "executed barbarously." In the fourth or civil war period from 1927-37, the writer says, "an unorganized labor movement seethed constantly below the surface and burst out in sporadic strikes.

It is in her account of the fifth stage covering the period of the war with Japan to the present, that the author makes some challenging comments aimed at American labor groups. Speaking of the funds contributed solely for one organization by the Allied War Relief Committees of the CIO, AFL and Railway Brotherhoods, she says:

"I am astounded to hear American union leaders say that because China is a semi-feudal, backward country, of course the unions are weak and nothing better than those represented by the Chinese Association of Labor in Chungking is to be expected."

Going into what she terms "the complicated question of labor organization under the Chungking government," she says it "is a form of labor union conscription and regimentation." The Chinese Association of Labor was set up in 1938, she states, under government auspices.

The Ministry of Social Affairs, formed in 1939 by the Kuomintang, "a one-party dictatorship," is attempting "to create a 'labor front' copied after that in Japan and Germany," the writer charges. The German-educated brother of the Minister of Social Affairs, she reports, is head of a "labor camp" where "political malcontents are 'rehabilitated'."

The CAL, says the author, "is an embarrassing subject to treat frankly, as it is the present contact between China and international labor organizations, receiving nearly all relief funds sent to China by American labor.

She makes the suggestion that American and British labor unions "make their own investigation" by sending a delegation to China "to show their goodwill and interest in the problem of the Chinese workingman.'

The Chinese Labor Movement by Nym Wales; John Day Co., New York.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

New CIO Pamphlet

Says Low Pay Is Drag On Postwar Security

America's chances for achieving postwar security hang upon the problem of increasing the wages of our low paid workers, states a new 32-page CIO pamphlet, "Substandard Wages," just issued by the Department of Education and Research.

Basing its argument for a 65 cents an hour minimum wage on the story of what low pay means in human terms, the pamphlet is documented with the testimony and picture of seven sub-standard wage earners in varied fields of work.

"We feel that this is one of the most important publications yet prepared for mass distribution among our own members and among the general public outside the labor movement," said Kermit Eby, director of the Department of Education & Research in announcing the pamphlet.

"Full employment and the attending postwar security for all our population—including farmers, white collar workers, professionals and small business people—depends on the development of our greatest national market—Americans who now earn substandard wages."

Substandard Wages may be ordered from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place, Washington 6, D. C. Price, 15 cents a copy, 100 for $12, 500 for $48.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

It's Your Fight Now

DESPITE V-E DAY, despite the record of organized labor in war production, and despite the need for national unity, reactionary forces are trying to destroy the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

By a series of three trick riders on the NLRB appropriation bill and a cut in funds, the food monopoly lobby, the auto employers, and the mis-called "Christian Americans" are trying to rob you of your right to the benefits of genuine trade unionism.

Here's what you can do to block this anti-American plot:

1. Wire your own Congressman and Rep. Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, to defeat all riders on the NLRB appropriations bill and to restore the $500,000 cut in NLRB funds.

2. Get your shopmates, your friends and neighbors, your fellow workers in other unions to protest with you.

3. Urge local businessmen, farm leaders, professional workers, whose prosperity depends on strong unions and high wage levels, to join with you.

4. Point out to your community that an attack on labor is an attack on all—and emphasize the need for strong unions to protect the men who will come back from the war against fascist tyranny in Europe and the Pacific.

PENSIVE: "Colonel" John P. Frey, head of the AFL Trades Dept. and author of the "Frey rider," in a thoughtful mood as he contemplates new ways to protect company unions.

By C. W. Fowler

A WELL ORGANIZED, well financed and politically powerful conspiracy against your right to join a union of your own choosing is under way in Congress.

The conspiracy, revealed by CIO President Philip Murray in a warning letter to all affiliates this week, is aimed at the Wagner Act—first great achievement of the New Deal and keystone of labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

It is being directed by such enemies of labor and of national unity as Senator W. Lee ("Pappy") O'Daniel, chief Congressional front for the unsavory "Christian-Americans," Rep. Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), George Romney of the Michigan Automotive Council, Ivan McDaniel, lobbyist for the citrus fruit industry, and of course "Colonel" John P. Frey of the AFL Metal Trades Department.

As charged by Pres. Murray, the conspiracy aims to cripple the Wagner Act by imposing trick riders on the appropriation for the National Labor Relations Board, now before the House Appropriations Committee and due to move on to the House floor within a few days.

The riders, plus a $500,000 cut in appropriations, are designed to do four damaging things to the act and to the NLRB:

1. To protect collusive contracts between employers and employer-dominated unions by a clause preventing the Board from taking up a complaint case where a contract has been in force for three months or more.

This is the "Frey rider" that has been used in the past to prevent genuine unions — whether CIO or AFL — from moving against a company union where a contract, no matter how collusive, is in force.

2. To deny hundreds of thousands of food industry workers the benefits of the Wagner Act, through a clause prohibiting the use of NLRB funds in any case involving the food processing industry.

3. To prevent foremen from organizing and bargaining collectively through a similar clause denying the use of NLRB funds in cases involving them.

WING COLLAR Smith, bitter end labor-hater from Virginia, has both hands deep in the plot against the Wagner Act. Smith is also co-author of the anti-union Smith-Conally Act.

HEIL O'DANIEL: Sen. W. Lee ("Pappy") O'Daniel, prolific author of anti-labor bills, looks on himself and is pleased.

TOGETHER AGAIN: and here are "Colonel" Frey and his chief Congressional stooge, Smith, proving that its always foul weather when phonies get together.

4. To cripple the NLRB by a $500,000 cut in funds that will force it to lay off 22 per cent of its personnel, approximately 165 employes.

What do these riders mean to members and potential members of genuine trade unions—whether they are CIO or AFL? They mean that genuine trade unionism can be blocked by company unionism. They mean that corrupt, collusive organizations will have a green light in every place where employers decide to deal with them rather than with an honest union of the employe's own choice. They mean, if passed, the end of the Wagner Act as a law protecting the basic right of a worker to organize.

As Murray wrote in his letter to CIO affiliates urging them to halt this attack on the Wagner Act: "The act is a charter of labor's rights. It is a basic contribution of the Roosevelt Administration to the national welfare, and its unimpaired functioning is indispensable to effective labor-management cooperation in the postwar world."

Attacks on the Wagner Act are not new. The Liberty League, a collection of rich and reactionary anti-New Dealers ten years ago told employers who cared to listen that it was illegal and unconstitutional. The Supreme Court answered that when it upheld the act in a series of historic decisions.

Four years later, disgruntled craft leaders of the AFL joined up with attorneys of the NAM and reactionary employers to write proposed amendments to the act that would have completely crippled it. Philip Murray exposed and blocked that attempt in testimony before the Senate Labor Committee in February, 1940.

Two years ago, CIO protests forced a revision of the original Frey rider that tore away a measure of its protection to out-and-out company unions.

All during these years, the vigilance of the CIO, of rank and file AFL members, and of decent people who believe in collective bargaining stopped efforts to amend the Wagner Act by open Congressional action.

Now the enemies of national unity have determined to concentrate on the rider technique, by a series of trick amendments that they hope will not have to face the full light of Congressional debate.

Congress as a whole, as Murray points out, has refused to write exemptions into the law denying its benefits to food processing workers and to foremen, as the present riders seek to do. It has refused to give special protection to company unions—in fact, the original act was written to outlaw company unionism. It has refused in the past to slice appropriations as deeply as the present cut contemplates.

"All of these riders are being pressed by individuals who are not only disappointed litigants before the NLRB but whose efforts to amend the act have been rejected by Congress," Murray writes.

"The device of an appropriation rider is a particularly undemocratic and unAmerican means of obtaining special privilege. The proposed riders at one stroke would undo gains in labor's rights that have taken years of bitter struggle to win."

The sponsors of these riders do not aim at the Wagner Act alone. Murray writes ". . . it is clear from the plans of this conspiracy of lobbyists that if success is won with respect to the act, a similar campaign will be instituted to attach riders to the War Labor Board appropriation."

The tie-up between those who are trying to wreck price control and the lobbyists trying to wreck the Wagner Act is made clear through the food lobby's leadership in the rider conspiracy.

Food profiteers want both ends and the middle too. They want to junk price control by breaking price ceilings and reducing OPA to complete impotence. This is a wage cut in itself. On top of that, they want to cut wages by taking away the protection of the Wagner Act and by crippling the Board that administers it.

The role of the Michigan Automotive Council, which is most active in demanding the rider exempting foremen from the act, is in line with attacks on the CIO and the UAW over recent weeks and months.

The whole thing adds up, as Murray points out, to "a dangerous and well-organized conspiracy to destroy the effectiveness of the Wagner Act and to shrivel the scope of its application."

The conspiracy can be halted —if we act quickly. The riders and the cut in funds will come before the House Appropriations Committee within a few days, later to the House floor.

Wire your own Congressman and Rep. Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), committee chairman, to oppose all attempts to attach riders to the appropriation for the NLRB and to restore the $500,000 cut in funds already recommended.

Your right to join a union of your own choosing and to bargain for higher wages is at stake.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 21 — May 21, 1945

BUY BONDS

FRIDAY, May 25th, is the 59th birthday of Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. We can only quote Resolution Number One from the Seventh Convention of the CIO which states: "Philip Murray has given statesmanlike leadership to American labor, and his direction of all phases of CIO activity has resulted in the continued organization of unorganized workers, has improved the national morale, and protected the interests of labor and has shown us the way to mobilize the political strength of American workers in support of the war effort and for the establishment of a durable and lasting peace and for the realization of a true Economic Bill of Rights. The CIO voices its appreciation." The CIO wishes him a happy birthday.

In answer, Philip Murray urged the increased purchase of War Bonds: "I urge all loyal CIO members to maintain and increase their War Bond purchases. It is important that as the boys begin streaming back from Europe—as they will shortly—and later coming back from the Pacific, they find a maximum number of War Bonds piled up to await their return and to help the difficult change over to a peacetime basis. Hold onto the War Bonds you have already bought; increase your payroll allotment and buy as many more as you can."

The Press and the Conspiracy Against Labor Laws

By IRVING RICHTER

LAST week President Philip Murray, charged a conspiracy between the Automotive Council for War Production and the food processors for an all-out attack on the Wagner Act and on orderly labor relations. (See CIO News of May 14.)

The nation's press is furthering a conspiracy to provoke strikes. By their handling of strike news they are aiding some leading corporations — who are willing to gamble with the welfare of the nation in the hopes of inflaming public opinion against collective bargaining.

The press paved the way for the job that is "now up to Congress."

- The Automotive Council refused to join in signing the Labor-Management Charter which recognizes "the fundamental rights of labor to organize and to engage in collective bargaining." This Council is controlled by General Motors and Chrysler, and they in turn
- Dictated the refusal of the NAM chief, Ira Mosher to go along with the Charter.
- The Auto Council director, George Romney, has offered the same alternative for the Charter as Mosher of the NAM has offered: "This is a job for Congress."

The job in Congress will be to repeal all federal labor laws, and especially the right of collective bargaining. This was made very clear by John W. Scoville, in August, 1944:

"It is probable that public opinion will change in regard to collective bargaining. As industrial turmoil increases, more and more people will see the evils generated by collective bargaining, and we should look forward to the time when all federal labor laws will be repealed."

That is the part of the job, welding public opinion against labor, that the press undertook.

Documentation of these charges follows:

The papers studied were the three Detroit dailies, plus six other major papers: The New York Times (independent), the Chicago Tribune (McCormick-Patterson), the New York Telegram (Scripps-Howard), the New York Journal-American (Hearst), the Philadelphia Record (independent), and the New York Daily News (McCormick-Patterson). Their day-to-day handling of labor news was analyzed, with special attention paid to what was omitted, what was buried on back pages, and what was featured in bold headlines and prominent position. Their columnists, cartoons and editorials were not included in this study, but only the news columns.

Of these nine representative papers, only the Record gave a semblance of objective reporting. The big three chain papers, Hearst, Scripps-Howard and McCormick, were the worst.

Hearings on war production problems were held in the Detroit area by the Mead Committee.

Three weeks before the hearing, on February 16, 1945, the Detroit News (Scripps-Howard) carried in three columns, headed "Auto Industry Flays Union," a general attack on the UAW-CIO. This warm-up for the hearing was carried under a Washington dateline without even the pretense of a news release or any news event.

At the opening of the hearing, on March 9, the Detroit News headline for a four-column story was, "War Work Lag Blamed on Unions." This headline was based on the testimony of George Romney, director of the Automotive Council. People reading only the headline would never know that the major part of the story itself actually described the testimony of the state War Manpower Commission Director, who did not attack the unions.

On March 12, the News carried the headline, "Packard Overtime Loafing Told at Quiz." Yet the sensational charge by a plant foreman that the company deliberately kept production down and encouraged loafing was put at the tail end of the story, with no heading.

On March 11, the Free Press headline read, "Hundreds Loaf, Says Ferguson." But the story itself contained documented charges by a union witness that plants and equipment were idle in the Detroit area; that management "winks at gambling" in the plants.

Hearst's Detroit Times yelled, "War Production Hurt 25 Per cent By CIO, Industry Charges" (March 9), and across the front page on March 11, "Packard Loafers Facing Quiz."

One constructive note came out of the hearings. That was an agreement reached by the state War Manpower Commission, the UAW-CIO, and the Automotive Council regarding the protection of seniority for workers changing war jobs. The achievement was killed or buried beneath the union-busting headlines in all three of the Detroit papers.

So much for Detroit's papers. How about the other six?

"Senators Told CIO Drive For Power Cuts War Output 25 to 50 Per Cent," was the way the Scripps-Howard N. Y. World Telegram handled the story, in a headline that streamed across an entire page. In smaller type the paper explained that "(Romney) Presents Exhibits Showing Unions Aim To Control Plants."

The New York Times talked some more about "Union Usurpation Plans" in its March 10 story, and the Journal American featured "War Job Loafing."

The headline given by the World Telegram to its March 13 story was: "Probers Hear GM Men Quit After $18 Day."

With two notable exceptions, the New York Times of March 13 and the Record of March 11, not one of the six papers, during this entire period of hearings headlined testimony of UAW spokesmen. Labor testimony was buried or cut, usually reduced to a paragraph or two at the end of a story. Even when labor statements were adequately reported in the story, the headlines were so arranged as to stir up anti-union sentiment.

Yet throughout the hearings, in dozens of pages of testimony, nationally known union leaders provided constructive proposals and explained the real obstacles to Detroit war production.

The same week of the Mead hearings, the UAW Executive Board, meeting in New York, condemned striking Dodge workers in Detroit and scored local union officers for not living up to the union's no-strike pledge. Of all the six papers, only the New York Times (March 9) printed that story, but all played up the Dodge strike.

UAW-Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen charged on March 29 that one of the Dodge strike leaders was given a management job for his strike agitation. Not a single paper carried that item.

Also missing from all six papers during the period studied was the decision of the National CIO Executive Board, meeting in New York March 10-12, to uphold the no-strike pledge.

At this period, the UAW-CIO announced a 2 to 1 referendum vote in favor of upholding the no-strike pledge. Except for the Free Press, which gave it six inches, all ignored or buried this news.

Most newspapers don't print the stories of growing understanding between labor and other groups of the population, or between U. S. labor groups. But they grab any inter-union differences. Here's how Hearst, who smeared the CIO throughout the hearings, played up Matt Smith of MESA, an anti-CIO union, after his testimony ate the Mead hearing: "MESA's Smith Silences Senators."

All but the Record featured after his testimony at the Mead any other labor story—the fight against the Little Steel formula, the world labor meeting, etc.

Another part of the obstructionists' line, to which the papers have lent willing support, is the constant attack on the Administration. To repeal labor laws, they must first undermine the administration which passed them.

It is no accident that only one of the nine papers carried the most sensational expose of all recent stories of political corruption. The story broke on March 7, when Senator Joseph Guffey (D., Pa.), shattering all precedents and senatorial courtesies, stood up on the floor of the Senate and pointed to his colleague, the senior Senator from South Dakota:

"Senator Bushfield was financed by Joe Pew and the other fatcats of Republican politics, as well as the duPonts, Alfred Sloan, and Col. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune."

Guffey charged that probably the largest slush fund in American political history — about $4 million—was raised by the Re-Republican political machine in Pennsylvania in 1944. About $875,000 of this was left over, which, Guffey charged, will be used to "buy or steal" Pennsylvania elections in 1946, in the same manner as Bushfield's election in South Dakota was bought by the GOP in 1942.

The Philadelphia Record gave this story front page space and complete coverage. But not a line of it appeared in the New York Times ("All the News That's Fit To Print"), the New York Daily News, the New York Journal American, the New York World Telegram, the Chicago Tribune, or any one of the three Detroit papers!

The conclusion? Reporters are trying to do an honest, objective reporting job on labor news. Some few publishers are, too. But the bulk of the U. S. dailies are burying the real labor news beneath misleading headlines or killing the stories altogether.

As Stars and Stripes recently pointed out, "The loyalty of American labor seldom makes the headlines."

The unreconstructed union-busters in American industry are counting upon the headlines to inflame public opinion for a drive in Congress to repeal Federal labor laws. Strike provocation is a basic part of their plan. To this end, as Senator Guffey (D., Pa.) has charged, they are preparing to spend record sums of money to buy the Congressional and Presidential elections in 1946 and and 1948. The press is providing the headlines about "industrial turmoil" and burying the news about the vote-buying conspiracy. In short, the press is furthering a conspiracy, knowingly or otherwise, to provoke strike and disorder.

Senator Bushfield, frowning, squirming and red faced, maintained silence when charged with being financed by Pew. He is shown here with Robt. Taft (Rep. O.)

Senator Joseph Guffey (D., Pa.) charged that a tremendous slush fund, perhaps the largest in the history of American politics, was raised by the Republican political machine in Pennsylvania last year.

Probers Hear GM Men Quit After $18 Day

By the United Press.

DETROIT, March 13.—The average forge employee consid... $18 enough money to make i... day and stops working ... made that amou... War Investigati... told today.

The s... commit... Genera... forge s...

Senate w... mittee, wh... duction slo... wondering... cases, ma... control that ... ing, Charles ... Howard staff ... article on today.

...ators pressed an... effect of assigning ... production quotas.

Asked by Sen. Hol... (R., Mich.), commit... whether piecew...

quotas. Wi...

Sen. Ferguson asked Carl ... Timken-Detroit Co. forge ... anager, and Philip Lutje... United Auto Workers ... O) committeeman at the ... orp.'s Dodge forge shop. ... udies seem to reduce ... ut. Time studies de-

Page Twenty-one.)

24 P.C. Slowup At Packard Laid to Union

Production Slashed By Resistance, Army Offic... Tells Senators

By the U...

...Words, ...anese

...s agency ... yesterday ... Manila ... Luzon ... ect." ... d by ...

...T. March 12.—An Army ... ified today that union ... to Packard Motor Car ... production ... as 24 ...

Seamen Win Stay in Bonus Cut Proposal

A DRIVE to cut down merchant seamen's earnings, even before V-J Day, was stalled this week by national CIO and CIO maritime industry union action. The drive came with a "proposal" by the Maritime Emergency Board to end wartime bonus payments to seamen on the Atlantic run, ostensibly on the ground that the war has ended in that ocean.

Ending the bonus would mean a drastic cut in take-home pay, CIO Pres. Murray pointed ont in a wire to Admiral Emory S. Land of the U. S. Maritime Commission and to Congressional leaders.

It would also, he said, "result in severe hardship to families of merchant seamen and produce severe manpower problems in shipping." He urged the Board to hold up its consideration at least until the Labor Dept. has completed a current study of seamens' earnings.

Murray's plea was backed up by rank and file members of the NMU and by NMU Pres. Joseph Curran, who told the three-man Board just what an end to the bonus would mean to the seamen and their families.

The proposed cut also comes at a time when the NMU is negotiating with shipowners for wage adjustments "based on seamen's rights to maintain a family and to have living standards equal to workers in shore industries—which seamen have not yet been able to establish."

Contrary to the general impression promoted by newspapers, merchant seamen do not make high wages, the CIO maritime unions pointed out. In large ads appearing in daily papers, the NMU revealed that the wages of an Able Seaman—a highly-skilled worker—work out at 42 cents an hour. Ordinary Seamen make about 34 cents, and on shipboard, overtime doesn't begin until 56 hours have been worked in the week.

Able Seaman George Conklin put it this way: "I'm making $50 a month more now than I did before the war. Living costs are up 45%. It's hard enough to get along now, even with my wife working. Our three-year-old kid has to be taken care of outside our home. I'm married eight years, and we've got nothing saved.

"Sure, I'd stay at sea. There's a war to be won. But it'll be tough if this bonus cut goes through."

The argument that the war is over in the Atlantic was knocked down by Curran, who pointed out that no Board sitting in Washington can "regulate the range of a Japanese submarine or bomber." Mines and other wartime hazards will remain in the Atlantic for months and even years, he added.

"This is a real wage cut," he said, "a cut in our income. We ask that this proposal be at least postponed, and we ask that the Board use its influence to persuade the ship operators to bargain collectively with us for a real increase in basic wages. Our seamen want to live in decency as other men do."

Shipyard Union's New Book Club

A drive for 10,000 subscribers to the new Labor Book Club sponsored by the Education Dept. of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers got off to a fine start at an "Author and Reader Family Night" held recently for Local 1, Camden, N. J. Some 1,000 members attended the affair.

Featured guests included Margo, stage star of "A Bell for Adano," adopted from the novel which is the Book Club's first selection; Howard Fast, author of "Freedom Road," May-June selection, and Elizabeth Hawes, who was on the staff of the United Auto Workers' education dept. when the UAW Book Club was first formed.

An intensive three-week campaign within the Camden local is being conducted by the local education committee under the guidance of the shipyard union's National Education Dept.

Joe Curran, president of the NMU and vice president of the CIO, told the hearing: "Ours is the only industry where a cut in earnings is being contemplated. If this goes through, it won't be the last. Men with families won't let them starve—they'll have to take shoreside jobs."

Julio Garcia figures his base pay rate without the wartime bonus at 36 cents an hour. Garcia has three dependents, including an aged mother. His rent is $60 a month, and he doesn't see how he'll manage if he has to go back to $87.50 a month. Garcia wants to stay in his war industry—if he can.

Charles A. Mills says: "I'll try to stay in shipping, but if my four kids suffer I'd have to go shoreside. Then I'd be drafted and my family would get $135 a month in allotments. They'd be better off with me in the Army, though the Merchant Marine tells us they're short 135,000 men."

Able Seaman James A. Kerr has been sailing for 17 years. "I've got four kids, and they're hearty eaters. Our rock-bottom living costs are $50 a week. If this bonus cut goes through, I go back to my base rate of $100 a month. How am I going to pay the rent and feed the kids on that?'

Murray Gives Steel Workers Directives On Orderly Procedure to Peacetime Work

PHILIP MURRAY, as President of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, sent a communication to all district directors giving them an eight-step procedure to be taken when notification of cutbacks reaches them.

"With victory in Europe, every member of our Union can justly take pride in his contribution to the defeat of Naziism," said President Murray. "The continuing war against Japan will still require the utmost devotion of all of us in meeting war production programs and war-supporting production programs. However, the military requirements for a one-front war against Japan will involve cutbacks in certain production programs."

In steel, these cutbacks will be most severely felt in plants producing ordnance, aircraft and shipbuilding equipment, and in plants producing components and end products for military use.

The armed services are filing through the Production Readjustment Committee of the War Production Board their proposed cutbacks by product and plant. When final decision has been made after careful review and screening by the WPB, the Office of Manpower Requirements will notify district directors of USA-CIO of these cuts.

Among the steps suggested by Murray to be taken on receipt of such notification are: plantwide meetings; discussion on employment possibilities; consultation with management for reconversion to civilian production; rousing of community sentiment for the use of plants heretofore only with a war production history for civilian production; meeting with municipal and civic authorities, Chambers of Commerce and Associations of Manufacturers for full production and full employment in the industries located there.

"Full employment continued through the Japanese war and on into peace is of concern not only to the members of the United Steelworkers and to the membership of the CIO as a whole, but also to all of the people of America. The prosperity of our members is but one segment of the total prosperity that we wish for all America. Reconversion that is accomplished rapidly and in a planned and orderly manner will make this prosperity possible; and your action now and in the months ahead will help insure this rapid, planned and orderly reconversion for the plants and industries under contract to the United Steelworkers of America," concluded President Murray.

Dyers Ask FDR's Birthday As Holiday

The Federation of Dyers, a department of the CIO Textile Workers, believes it is the first union to ask that Franklin D. Roosevelt's birthday be added to the paid holidays called for by union contract on an industry-wide basis.

This demand was among the 14 major points presented by the Federation in recent negotiations for renewal of contracts with Metropolitan New York-New Jersey companies employing 25,000 workers in some 275 plants. The contracts expire next Sept.

Haywood Urges 'On Guard' For Organizing Rights

By Allan S. Haywood

THE right of labor to organize is under serious threat. The employers who were most active in promoting strikes during the war are now sending their lobbyists up to Congress to say:

"These wartime strikes show that we've got to take care of labor." They even went so far as to have an official of the NAM appear in an off-the-record meeting with propriations Committee, outlining cuts in the NLRB appropriation and the passage of certain riders.

Some AFL unions have this year refused to go along with renewal of the Frey Rider, but the top officialdom of the AFL is again lobbying for the renewal of this company union move. The AFL is now embarrassed by the fact that the union-busters in industry are using the precedent of the Frey rider to push other riders, one to prevent the use of NLRB funds for protecting collective bargaining rights of foremen, and another for protecting collective bargaining rights of food processing workers.

The move for the two new riders failed in the House Appropriations Committee. But the Frey Rider has been renewed and a substantial cut has been made in the NLRB appropriation. The matter will be on the House floor as this goes to press.

We find the lobbyists against NLRB and collective bargaining, are also lobbying against full employment. They want breadlines as a means of destroying the labor movement. The following quotation from one of the braintrusters of this move, John W. Scoville of Chrysler Corporation, shows that they are also out to destroy the basic rights of farmers and workers:

"While I condemn collective bargaining as an assault on liberty, as an evil thing . . . I realize that collective bargaining is only one chick in the foul brood of vultures that seek to pick the meat from the bones of honest men . . . farmer schemes for parity prices are of this malignant type."—(Speech before Kiwanis Club of Detroit, August 1944.)

Never before has the issue been made so clear. It is scarcity for farmers and workers, or prosperity for both.

United Action Needed

THE broad offensive going on against American living standards can be halted and thrown back—but only if every CIO member, his wife and his neighbor gets to work and stays at work until the danger is over.

The three front attack is no accident—any more than fascism was an accident or the attack at Pearl Harbor was an accident. It is a planned, conscious drive by the most reactionary elements in this country. It must be beaten back by the same kind of unity and planned action that beat back the Nazis and will beat back the Japanese.

Here's the outline of the drive against American well-being and security now going forward.

One: plans in Congress and outside it to wreck price control, thereby loosing a flood of inflation that could wash away every wage gain and every approach to a recent standard of living that have been achieved in years of struggle.

Two: the drive, repelled for the time in the House but still threatening in the Senate, to wipe the Wagner Act off the books by trick riders on the NLRB appropriations, which could put labor relations back to where they were 20 years ago.

Three: the proposal, aired last week by the Emergency War Maritime Board, to cut merchant seamen's earnings as much as 50% by eliminating wartime bonuses.

The price control crisis must be met by the organization of community-wide action as was done last year and the year before. Announcement of a special week dedicated to the fight against inflation will be made shortly by a group of organizations including CIO, its Auxiliaries, consumers, church groups, professional associations and the like.

The special week will rally every group and every individual in the country who would be hurt by inflation—and that includes all except the minority of profiteers and the lobbyists who earn a prostitute's living by working on their stooges in Congress.

The drive against the Wagner Act has been somewhat choked in the House, where a vote on the appropriation bill rejected two riders aimed at robbing food workers and foremen of their collective bargaining rights.

The same unity of all who benefit from strong unions and good wages—and that again excludes only the profiteers and the greediest of the employers—will stop this attack in the Senate.

The attempt to cut earnings of merchant seamen—who have given 6,000 lives to their country—is a cloud no bigger than a man's hand, but unless it is stopped it can spread over every union in the CIO and over every paycheck in the country.

CIO President Philip Murray's support of CIO maritime unions in the quick protest against the proposed act has halted it for the time being. The same kind of united, national action that will save price control and protect the Wagner Act must be rallied to put a quick and permanent end to even a "proposal" to cut wages.

The forces that seek to destroy American security have the same reactionary stripe as those that sought to destroy world freedom and security in the German phase of the war against fascism.

Their success now, while we have yet to defeat Japan, would give direct aid and encouragement to every enemy our nation and the United Nations still has to overcome.

United community action will defeat this drive as it has defeated similar wars upon the people in the past.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

SAN FRANCISCO divides its frequent fogs into two kinds, "High" and "Low."

But the lowest kind of fog during UNCIO hasn't rolled in from the Pacific. It has come from the two local Hearst papers, with assistance from Scripps-Howard.

* * *

The Hearst press has tried to turn the building of the world peace into a Babel-Tower of dissension and confusion.

The Bible story of Babel says: "And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar."

The Hearstians have improved on this by using brickbats and slime.

* * *

Aiding press propagandists to confuse and divide are numerous Soviet-baiting lobbies, with expensive headquarters, daily press conferences and an output of literature that seems to know no paper quota.

A sample of their work was the whispering campaign about imaginary fights among the Yugoslav delegates, and that Subasic had gone into hiding.

In hospital with a minor throat ailment, Subasic exposed the lies as soon as he could see reporters.

Even well-intentioned reporters have had difficulties, since so much of the news has come from behind closed doors, from meetings of the Big Four, from the Steering Committee, etc.

"Reliable sources" are not always too reliable, it seems.

Sample: The conflicting accounts by News-Week and Time of the first announcement of the arrest of the 16 Poles accused of sabotaging the Red Army.

News-Week set the scene at a dinner given by Stettinius in his Fairmont Hotel penthouse apartment. It had Eden called out by messenger to receive the news, which Molotov later confirmed.

Time, on the other hand, had Molotov as the host on the occasion. It described Stettinius and Eden "perking to attention," when Molotov suddenly announced the news to them.

* * *

Looking back on the conference from Los Angeles and points east, it is easier to get perspective on its great achievements than in the man-made fog of San Francisco.

The exaggerated surface differences, mostly unrelated to the main business, have tended to obscure the more fundamental agreements.

Actually, the main outlines of the new world set-up have been agreed upon with surprising unanimity. There is little doubt that remaining problems, on trusteeships, regional security plans, etc., will be similarly adjusted.

This doesn't suit the plans of the anti-UNCIO crowd, whose most extreme expression is the Hearst press.

Many isolationists in Congress, for instance, pay public lipservice to world organization because they know how strong is the popular demand.

But privately, they frankly admit they look for some international incident, or for enough rows at San Francisco, to turn the tide of American public opinion, so they may come out openly against world organization.

* * *

It is to provide such an incident, and to create such dissension, that the Hearst press and other propagandists have been working so hard at San Francisco.

Believing with Hitler's successors that the United Nations can most easily be divided by the "Bolshevik Bogey," they have declared a wordy war on the Soviet Union, with more exaggerated attacks than they ever directed against the Nazi or the Japs.

In so doing, these so-called "isolationists" have thrown off their "peace-loving" cloak and revealed themselves as warmongers and imperialists.

The essence of their policy is not "freedom from foreign entanglements, which is "impossible in this day and age." It is rather repudiation of the United Nations alliance against Fascism, and alliance instead with Fascist and reactionary elements for suppression of the democratic upsurge throughout the world, for creation of an anti-Soviet bloc and for an eventual third world war.

* * *

Against all such tendencies, united world labor can become a powerful unifying factor.

Labor everywhere has everything to gain from the alliance of all freedom-loving peoples against Fascist reaction, and from world organization to check aggression and preserve peace.

That is why the World Trade Union Conference has shown the way to resolve national differences and has achieved such amazing goodwill and unity.

In each country, as well as internationally, labor will lead the fight against fascists, reactionaries and "isolationists," to make a real success of the new World Security Organization.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux..... Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 May 21, 1945 No. 21

"We Can Plan Postwar Production"

"THE CIO looks upon Fred M. Vinson as chief of an Economic General Staff, responsible for and capable of organizing the logistics of maximum production and employment, and of carrying the battle against deflation, inflation and poverty," declared CIO President Philip Murray in a statement giving the CIO's position on the problems ahead with reconversion a reality.

As an implementation of this Murray declared that the need is even greater now than in 1944 for the unemployment compensation provisions and inter-area transfer provisions of the Murray-Kilgore bill.

Declaring that coming "cut-backs and cancellations of war production will be deeper than has been officially stated," and that "consequent unemployment of industrial workers, and loss of their income and purchasing power is of course the concern of the CIO," President Murray pointed out that "the prosperity of industrial workers is found only in the prosperity of all Americans."

He declared:

Now is the time for the U. S. to determine how it shall organize itself to benefit from victory over Germany, while the war continues against Japan.

The military will ask for "and shall receive" all they need to advance our arms to similar triumph in the Pacific. At the same time "proper consideration must be given to prevent unemployment and economic deflation in our own country."

American soldiers must know as they leave for the Pacific war that American genius for organization will also be applied to bring security for every American in peace.

The CIO called for bold and forward action through every federal agency to use the mass of information and skill that exists:

1) to make sure that reconversion shall be accomplished rapidly and in a planned and orderly manner;

2) to make sure that policies shall be adopted to maximize employment in order to provide 60 million good paying jobs and to fulfill the Economic Bill of Rights enunciated by President Roosevelt and supported by President Truman.

The statement pointed out sharply to Judge Vinson that plans must be made; that he must issue orders for their execution and "to declare to J. A. Krug, chairman of the War Production Board that his agency has important work still to do, and that it does not exist to go out of existence at this time. WPB's deliberate suicide now would adversely affect the nation's prosperity and create grave unemployment."

Murray asked that labor be more fully consulted, declaring that Section 203 (c), in One and Two of the Act provided for such consultation.

Murray declared that he does not admit the validity of any legal objections that federal agencies cannot operate as an economic general staff in planning for full production. He quoted from the Act, Section 101 (c) One, authorizing the power of formulating "such plans as are necessary to meet the problems arising out of the transition from war to peace."

Murray States CIO Wage Policy in Reconversion

WITH reconversion an immediate problem, CIO's President Philip Murray urged that "take-home pay be maintained as high as at present to sustain national income," in a statement of CIO policy presented to War Mobilization and Reconversion Director Vinson.

"Cut backs are under way; workers have been laid off; and the reconversion period has begun. A formulation of wage policy to meet this condition is not a problem of the future but an immediate necessity so that workers may be able to buy enough and so that employers will be able to estimate both labor costs and consumer demand," declared Murray.

"The new policy should be directed to maintaining full production and full employment. Expansion, not contraction, of purchasing power, therefore, must now be our objective. Take-home pay must be at least as high as at present to sustain national income. Merely maintaining current hourly wage rates is not enough. A substantially reduced work-week, downgrading, and the shift back to lower-paid occupations make it essential to increase wage rates to make up for the resultant loss of earnings," he said.

Murray declared that such a policy would not require any upward price adjustments nor, with price control, initiate any inflationary spiral. He urged an upward adjustment of basic wage rates of at least 20 per cent to simply "restore pre-war relationships between wage rates, prices and productivity per man hour," the last of which he estimates has increased by 10 per cent in the last four years.

(1.) The abolition of the wage bracket, since it is based essentially on the preservation of present wage rates, which has imposed injustices on American workers, and destroyed national wage standards achieved through collective bargaining.

(2.) The raising of the substandard ceiling from 55 cents to at least 65 cents an hour for all employes.

(3.) Appropriate adjustments for the "forgotten workers" in white collar, government and professional areas.

(4.) The prohibition of reductions in wage rates.

Murray declared that wage controls must be maintained at "least until VJ Day." "In conclusion," he said, "the CIO believes that the War Labor Board must be given greater authority than it has had during the last two years in the establishment of specfic wage policies and in the making of specific decisions. The problems that will be created by reconversion will exceed in their difficulty and complexity the problems that faced the Board heretofore. The Board must be granted the necessary freedom of action to make appropriate decisions within a very general frame-work without being subject to veto by the Director of Economic Stabilization."

"I Saw It With My Own Eyes"

"I had killed the German machinegunner's assistant and was reloading my Garand to get the machinegunner when he got me in the right shoulder," declared Pfc. Edward K. Assel, Pittsburgh, member of the CIO Steelworkers, at the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, this week.

"My BAR (Browning automatic rifle) had frozen in the battle of St. Vith while I was fighting with the 30th Division," continued Assel, whose brother William, now in the Navy, is also a member of the United Steelworkers. "The machinegunner had hit eight of us. When my BAR froze, I picked up the M-1 (Garand) of one of my dead comrades.

"Protected by a mound of earth, I bumped off the assistant. I was putting another clip in the M-1, thinking I would be able to hit the gunner from the same position.

"Only my right arm was exposed, and that's where he got me."

A former open hearth worker at the Bethlehem Steel at Sparrow Point and at Pittsburgh Steel at Monessen, Pa., Assel has undergone three operations, the latest at Walter Reed where a piece of bone from his left leg was grafted on his splintered right arm. Another operation will be necessary.

Serving his second consecutive enlistment in the Army which he joined in 1941, he was with a 30th Division patrol when the bodies of the 100 massacred American artillerymen were discovered near Malmedy, Belgium. He also served in the Army from 1934 to 1937.

"All you hear about German bestiality and atrocities is true," he declared. "I wouldn't have believed it myself but I saw the mutiliated bodies of American men with my own eyes. Their heads were bashed in, eyes gouged out, and bodies all shot up.

"After we saw the mutilated bodies, we heard the story from 18 men who escaped by pretending they were dead."

The Americans had surrendered to German SS troops. The men, lined up on the road, had been riddled by machineguns on SS tanks 20 yards away. Any who survived were finished off by Nazi bayonets.

"Industry Gestapo Must Go"

Steubenville, O.—More than 200 local union leaders from the CIO United Steelworkers this week heard Asst. Pres. Van A. Bittner and CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood urge renewed action on the Weirton drive to bring unionism to the last citadel of industrial reaction in steel.

"The industrial Gestapo has to go in the United States," Haywood told the meeting. "We can't make political democracy real while we allow the Weirton brand of dictatorship to remain. This is reaction's last citadel in steel. When it is taken, our union will be secure."

Bittner urged all USA-CIO members to contact Weirton workers, tell them about the union, strengthen them in their fight for collective bargaining.

"Sooner or later Weirton will have to recognize the union," he said. "How soon it does so depends on you. This fight is of paramount importance to all steelworkers, their wives and their families. Let's put it over now."

The meeting, one of the most successful in local steel union history, was called by USA-CIO Director R. J. Davidson, in charge of the Weirton drive, and Assistant Director Nilles.

Charter Gets Wide Support

WITH unanimous vote the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States last week approved the labor-management charter which was signed on March 28th by Chamber President Eric Johnston, Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and William Green, president of the AFL.

This unanimous decision will stimulate local chambers to meet with labor leaders on local levels to promote such charters in their communities. Already such spontaneous actions have taken place in communities throughout the country.

The charter was signed by the three, subject to the approval by the three organizations. The CIO Executive Board has already approved the charter.

Portland, Ore., was the first community to draft a charter of their own for labor-management "continued operation in the peace for the highest possible production and employment at wages assuring a steadily advancing American standard of living." On March 29th, the Oregon State Senior Executives of the AFL and the CIO and the Oregon president of the Chamber of Commerce signed a joint statement accepting the terms of the labor peace charter and complimenting Green, Johnston, and Murray upon that attainment.

"Six years of labor peace in this state attest to the value of the type of understanding between management and labor under which we have been operating and which the labor-management charter expands on a national basis," declared Frank E. McCaslin, Portland Chamber of Commerce president.

In Ohio, the executive committee of the State CIO and AFL have approached the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce to draw up a charter on a state level.

The Memphis (Tenn.) Chamber of Commerce invited labor to meet with it in committee to put the charter into effect.

At Fort Wayne, Indiana, the CIO called upon the Chamber of Commerce to initiate a labor-management charter there.

The United Office and Professional Workers of America telegraphed the Chamber of Commerce that the charter "strengthens prospects for a bright future."

The charter recognizes the American system of free competition, the right of management to direct industrial operations. In turn management recognizes the right of labor to organize and conduct collective bargaining without interference.

N. J. Unions Answer Press' Refusal

When the Perth Amboy (N. J.) Evening News refused to print news of the signing of the joint labor-management charter by Eric Johnson, Chamber of Commerce, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, and AFL Pres. William Green, the CIO unions in this area published a statement outlining the basic principles of the charter and circulated it throughout the district.

1 Helping to win the war by working on the production front is Shiro Ebihara, CIO United Auto Worker employed in a Cleveland plant, where his employer says he is one of the most valuable men. His son, Henry, pictured below, was the first Japanese alien to enlist in the U. S. Army, after the ban was lifted.

2 Born in Tokyo, Henry Ebihara, right, of Cleveland, wrote President Roosevelt: "I only ask that I be given a chance to fight." Under a War Dept. ruling lifting the enlistment ban against Japanese aliens, Ebihara, a CIO Auto Worker, was the first of this group in this country to enlist in the U. S. Army. With him is Roy Shiba, also a CIO Auto Worker, second to enlist. Shiba also lived in Cleveland.

3 As living proof of its policy of welcoming back Nisei, the California CIO Council at San Francisco has employed as a secretary Miss Alice Takeuchi. She returned to San Francisco from Columbus, Ohio, where she had lived for a time following her release from the Jerome, Ark., relocation center. Council executive committee condemned "those who are attempting to split the American people by arousing racial prejudice for their own partisan ends."

4 Sgt. Karl G
the CIO Warehousemen's to be the first war to become a erans of Fore

Ar

IN Placer Coun charged with Sumio Doi. Sum descent. He has ing been given a tion on the part intolerance on t against Japanese their homes.

Nisei is an A
the situation beco
Ickes issued a sta
the Nisei, includi dynamiting, three Since then and b tempted shooting

In striking co ward a minority
Nisei by the Calif out the country w in again taking up

This story te and also tells ab
on the home front

Tom Nakamu

The future lo duction cutback been told by the p a Detroit concern
the Navy, to repo

The Internal proved placement

He had hard of the other work

"Why do we one of them said.

"We're at wa

Vainly did a on his fellow wor had been approve that other Nisei

The argumen

. Yoneda, member of Longshoremen's and Union, is believed Nisei soldier of this member of the Vet- gn Wars.

5 Imagine the surprise of these German storm troopers when upon surrendering after a deadly exchange of fire in the Orciano area in Italy to find that their captors were Japanese Americans. These Yanks were members of the 100th Infantry Battalion, consisting of Nisei, which won a Presidential citation for "outstanding duty in action" during the Italian campaign. "The fortitude and intrepidity displayed by the officers and men of the 100th Infantry Battalion reflect the finest traditions of the Army of the United States," the citation declared. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commander, himself presented the Presidential citation to the battalion. In some of the action in Italy the 442nd Combat Team, also composed of Nisei, helped the 100th Battalion and acquitted itself proudly.

nericans — by birth — by choice — by loyalty

By FRED ROSS

y, California, a jury acquitted three men planting a dynamite bomb on the farm of io Doi was a loyal American of Japanese just returned from a relocation center, hav- clean bill of health by the Army. This ac- of the jury climaxed a wave of terror and he West Coast conducted by hoodlums Americans (Nisei) seeking to return to merican of Japanese descent. So grave has me that last Monday Secretary of Interior tement calling attention to 24 acts against ng 15 attempted shootings, one attempted cases of arson and 5 threatening visits. efore the CIO News went to press an at- and a threatening visit were reported.

ntrast with this attitude of intolerance to- group is the welcome accorded the loyal ornia CIO Council and CIO unions through- which have aided them in getting jobs and the thread of community life.

lls how some of the unions have helped; t the war record of this minority group , and their bravery on the war front.

ra heaved a sigh of relief.

oked brighter. Laid off because of a pro- t the Aluminum Alloy Co., he had just ersonnel manager of the Palmer Bee plant, making much needed radar equipment for t for work on the night shift at 7 p. m.

Security Division of the Army had ap- of Tom on the new job.

y been at his bench before he heard some ers discussing him.

have to work with that Jap b - - - - - - - d?" r with them, aren't we?" another put in.

calmer member of the group try to impress kers that Tom was a loyal American, who d by the Army for work in the plant, and are dying for the United States.

ended when one of the group said: "What are we waiting for? You cream puffs stay. I'm blowing."

With that he walked from the plant. He was followed by 13 others.

But Tom stuck, staying on the job until the 7 a. m. whistle blew.

The CIO Steelworkers which holds a contract at Palmer Bee backed the company when it told the 14 that Tom would be retained and that they would be fired if they did not return to work. Then the union told the men they would be expelled if they failed to return to the plant.

Three men returned the next evening and apologized to Tom, and the following night the entire 14 were back on the job.

This is one of the many cases of CIO cooperation with the War Relocation Authority, the agency charged with relocation of the Nisei.

The action of the Steelworkers was in keeping with the CIO policy of non-discrimination against workers because of race, color or creed.

Well aware of the problem, the California CIO executive council early this year in a resolution condemned "those who are attempting to split the American people by arousing racial prejudices for their own partisan ends.

The resolution also called on State and local officials and the people "to cooperate with the War Dept. in order to assist in the readjustment of these loyal Japanese Americans to our community life."

The San Francisco, Los Angeles, Alameda and Sacramento CIO Councils have all publicly supported the return of the evacuees.

The San Francisco CIO Council has employed Alice Takeuchi, evacuee from the Jerome, Ark., Relocation Center. Yuki Kato, another evacuee, is employed in the St. Louis, Mo., office of the CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes.

CIO locals and their officials in California and throughout the country have also championed the cause of the Nisei.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers has urged fair play and the right to jobs for loyal Nisei in a letter to all regional directors, international presidents and local union officers.

The sound sense of the attitude of the CIO unions is fortified by the war record of their own members—both Japanese aliens and Nisei.

The first Japanese aliens to volunteer for the Army when a ban against their enlistment was lifted by the War Dept. were Hank Ebihara and Roy Shiba, two CIO Auto Workers from Cleveland.

Ebihara comes from an all-union family. His father, Shiro Ebihara, works as a machine tool operator in a vital war plant at Cleveland, where Hank was employed prior to enlistment, and like his son is a member of the Auto Workers.

A sister, Amy, works in a textile plant and has been active in the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers. A younger sister, Fumi, employed in a lens grinding factory, belongs to the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

A member of Local 10, CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and a former vice-president of the Alaska Cannery Workers, Sgt. Karl G. Yoneda, one of Merrill's Marauders is believed to be the first Nisei of this war elected to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

While in the China-Burma-India theater, Yoneda was elected to Howard A. Sperry Post 3570, San Francisco, an all-labor post.

Further evidence of the Nisei's fighting loyalty is furnished by the exploits of the 100th Infantry Battalion, which participated in the landing at Salerno.

The battalion made four drives across the Voltuno River, aided in the capture of the bitterly-contested Cassino, took an active part in the march on Rome, spearheaded the attack on the important seaport of Liverno in the campaign to expel the Nazis from the upper ranges of the Italian Peninsula. The 442nd Combat Team, also a Nisei unit, participated with the 100th Battalion in some of this action.

For "outstanding performance of duty in action" at Belvedere and Sasseta, Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commander, awarded the Presidential citation to the 100th Battalion.

"The fortitude and intrepidity displayed by the officers and men of the 100th Infantry Battalion reflect the finest traditions of the Army of the United States," the citation declared.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Including The Sink . . .

Current obstructionist strategy in Congress seems to be to throw everything in the path of progressive legislation, including the kitchen sink.

Here are some of the more sink-like objects that have been tossed on the floor of Congress and on the committee tables recently—chiefly by GOP Congressmen, some of whom seem to be trying hard to show the nation what total war really means.

Item: Rep. Gearhart (R., Cal.) tried to amend the reciprocal trade agreements act by making all agreements with other nations subject to court review on the plea of any individual who felt himself injured by them.

This would make a mockery out of reciprocal trade, since it would mean that any person in the U. S. could hold up any agreement involving no matter how much trade. Trade relations conducted on such a basis would be a farce.

Item: Senator Taft (R., O.) has a proposed amendment to the price control renewal act that would baldly and simply end price control. This would mean an economic crisis that would make Hoover's days look secure in comparison.

Item: Rep. Rankin (D., Miss.) screams "communism" and spits racist venom at the proposal for a permanent FEPC and everything else that irritates him—even an investigation of his patronage preserve, the Veterans Administration.

Item:—but why go on? The point is not the number of kitchen sinks that obstructionists drop, but the reason why they drop them.

They don't expect that every one will be a blockbuster. They do expect, however, that they will serve some purpose, if only delay and confusion. This is the key to the strategy of the Congressmen who are against Bretton Woods, against world trade, against the United Nations, against labor.

The strategy doesn't work forever, though at times during the course of long and filibustering hearings it seems almost to do so. It would work less well if the majority leaders established a little more discipline, kept a little better order and required more attendance of their own people.

During James B. Carey's testimony on reciprocal trade, for example, the only Democrat who bothered to stay in the committee room was the chairman, Rep. Brent Spence (D., Ky.). The opposition to reciprocal trade stayed to the bitter end, and naturally had the monopoly of asking questions.

With the new Congress, some challenges have been made during particularly dirty examples of obstructionism. Rep. Rankin has been called several times by new and progressive Representatives. Members get up on the floor and defend unions from smearing attack.

More is needed to persuade the obstructionists that their tactics won't work. As of this week, the Congress has a big backlog of major legislation that has been allowed to pile up—with deadlines approaching more and more rapidly every day.

Progressive bills in this backlog include the Bretton Woods bill, the reciprocal trade bill, price control renewal, polltax repeal, permanent FEPC, and others.

The backlog can be reduced, if we work for it, and if we help all Congressmen, including the progressive ones, to do the job from their end. Let our slogan be: away with the kitchen sink and let Congress do its job.

It's Your Wages They're After

The three point attack on wages and living standards now going on in Washington became clearer this week with the report of the Senate Agriculture Committee on the food situation.

The report, with a vigorous dissent by Sens. Lucas (D., Ill.) and Ellender (D., La.) calls for breaking ceiling prices on meat, which would be the signal for breaking all ceilings.

As described by Sen. Lucas, it "is in keeping with the dangerous theory now being advocated by certain special interests in this country to the end that the Price Control Act be repealed."

This is a direct attack on all consumers, labor, professional workers, farmers, housewives, alike.

The attack on labor's wage and living standards is being made through attempts to wreck the Wagner Act in the NLRB appropriation bill.

Here the method is a little more subtle, but no less dangerous. The plan is to use the rider device, by which legislation can be wrecked through trick conditions imposed on the appropriation for the agency charged with administrating it.

Point three of the triple offensive is the proposal—still only a "proposal"—to deprive merchant seamen of their wartime bonus on the Atlantic run.

In none of these instances do the enemies of decent living standards quite dare to propose an open wage cut.

The ending of price control would be an economic disaster to every worker and consumer in the country. The crippling of the Wagner Act would be a serious blow at every union and every pay envelope.

A reduction in seamen's income would mean suffering for the families of scores of thousands of our most heroic frontline fighters—and would be the signal for cuts in earnings in every other industry.

Perhaps we're tired of writing to Washington. But we'd soon find ourselves even more tired and harassed if we lose price control, lose the Wagner Act, lose our painfully built up wage and living standards.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
NLRB appropriation.	Includes "Frey rider" that protects company unions; has $400,000 appropriation cut for NLRB; aimed to kill Wagner Act, wreck unions.	Frey rider and cut voted by House; now to Senate Appropriations Committee.	Wire your two Senators to restore cut, defeat all riders when the bill comes to Senate after House passage.
Reciprocal Trade. (HR 3240)	Renews government power to make world trade agreements by lowering tariff barriers here and abroad.	Reported out of House Ways and Means Committee. GOP opposed, well organized for House vote at early date.	Wire Representative to support without amendments.
Price Control. (SJ Res. 30)	Renews price control act.	GOP drive in Senate to wreck price control being sparked by Taft, Wherry, et al through Agriculture Committee report released this week.	Renew wires, letters to Senators urging renewal without amendments. Urge community action; prepare for "Fight Inflation Week."
FEPC (S 101; HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency.	Still bottled up in House Rules Committee; Discharge Petition out; needs 218 signatures.	Urge Representative to sign.
Polltax repeal. (HR 7)	Gives 10 million white and Negro citizens the chance to vote.	Discharge petition 1 will probably be completed this week; debate expected by May 29.	Urge your Representative to work for a big majority vote.
Bretton Woods. (S 540, HR 2211)	Paves way for 5,000,000 postwar U. S. jobs in world trade.	Report still awaited from House Banking and Currency Committee.	Representative to vote for without Keep urging your amendments.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up—Issues to Watch

RECIPROCAL TRADE: After weeks of hearings, the House Ways and Means Committee has reported favorably on HR 3240, in a party vote of 14 to 11. One Democrat, West of Texas, voted with the Republicans.

The bill extends U. S. government authority to negotiate for cuts in world tariff barriers. A GOP drive to introduce hampering amendments is expected on the floor this week. One proposed change would subject agreements to court review at the demand of any individual who feels himself "injured."

If the bill is still in debate as you read this, wire your Representative to support HR 3240 and to reject new amendments.

★ ★ ★

MISSOURI VALLEY: Sen. James A Murray (D. Mont.) charges the utility interests with using a huge slush fund to fight S 555, the MVA bill that received an adverse report from the Senate Commerce Committee last week.

MVA means jobs, farms for returning soldiers, flood and erosion control, new industries for nine states. Next hearing is in the Senate Irrigation Committee. Write your Senators to support.

★ ★ ★

WAGNER ACT: the House this week voted down moves to exclude food workers and foremen from benefits of the Wagner Act, voted for the Frey rider and a $400,000 cut in funds for the NLRB.

This is a real victory on two of the crippling moves directed against the Act.

The appropriation bill now goes to the Senate Appropriations sub-Committee, headed by Sen. McCarran. Wire him and your own two Senators to restore the cut in funds, remove the Frey rider and oppose any attempt to re-introduce the two riders defeated in the House or any others.

★ ★ ★

INTL. EDUCATION: CIO is supporting H. Res. 215, which would put the U. S. into the Intl. Office of Education an advisory and consultative body such as the Food and Agricultural Organization.

CIO Research and Education Director Kermit Eby testified for H.Res. 215 this week in the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Regional Director Pete Mosele, NYC, reports: Harris Structural Co., South Plainfield, N. J., USA-CIO 93, Independent Union 77.

John Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Syracuse, N. Y., reports: Champion Sheet Metal Co., Cortland, N. Y., USA-CIO 59, against 49. This campaign was conducted by USA Rep. John Kowalski.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, advises: Samuel Bingham's Son Mfg. Co., Chicago, CIO Rubber Workers 48, AFL 2, no union 10. URWA Reps. Manson L. James and Stanley Lester were in charge.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir. Philadelphia, reports: York Electric & Machine Co., York, Pa., USA-CIO 48, AFL 32, against 3.

Un. Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, advise: Namm's Department Store, Brooklyn, N. Y., (Wrappers, cashiers, etc.) CIO 80, AFL 39; (cafeteria, & restaurant employes), CIO 67, AFL 1. Providence Warehouse & Production Division of Green Brothers, New England, CIO 60, AFL 1. Special commendation for this excellent job goes to Reps. Boudreau and Kuhsner.

Harry Rosenzweig, Bus. Mgr. Local 305 and Intl. Rep. for Westchester Co., reports: American White Cross Laboratories plant, CIO 55, AFL 1. The New England Joint Board, URWDSEA report: Rumford Baking Powder & Allied Products Co., voted 89 to 16 for CIO.

Wm. B. Taylor, director, Oil Workers Campaign, reports: Lone Star Gas Co., Dallas, Texas (Maintenance Dept.) CIO 36, against 4. Five C Refinery, Santa Maria, Calif., employees voted 100 per cent for the CIO.

Meyer E. Stern, Dir. Dist. 6, CIO Packinghouse Workers, reports: American Agricultural Chemical Corp. South Amboy, N. J., CIO 45, against 4. Plans are under way to organize other plants of this company with the end in view of signing a master agreement.

Pres. Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, announces: Arrow Aluminum Castings Co., Cleveland, Ohio, CIO 61, no union 37; Southern Naval Stores, Columbia, Miss., CIO 95, no union 38.

Thos. F. McGuire, IUMMSW Field Rep. in Ontario, reports: Local 598, Sudbury MMSW, signed the second collective agreement with the International Nickel Co. Ltd., of Canada covering some 10,000 workers. This was the result of approximately two months of negotiations and includes voluntary irrevocable checkoff of dues, improvement in the seniority set up and grievance procedure. On V-E Day a collective agreement was signed at Port Colborne between the Port Colborne Refinery Workers' Union and the International Nickel, containing similar improvements.

C. W. Danenburg, Regional Director, UGCCWA, reports: Koppers Coke Wood Preserving, Montgomery, Ala., CIO 55; no union 4. Organizer Harry Zebal was in charge.

A splendid meeting was held in Steubenville, Ohio, on Sunday, May 13, all USO locals in the area and other unions, called by Director R. J. Davidson and Asst. Director Nilles of the Weirton Steel. Drive. A good job is being done and all officers pledged themselves to get fully into the drive. Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President, USA-CIO, and the writer were the speakers. Watch Weirton for results!

The National Mediation Board has assigned a mediator to conduct a hearing, on the CIO's request for an election among the shop crafts on the Pennsylvania Railroad, to be held in Philadelphia, shortly.

Let us not forget that the organizing of the unorganized is of paramount importance now!

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Profit-Mad Oil Moguls Must Be Curbed, Says Union Head

Senate investigation of oil cartel practices were commended in a statement issued this week by Pres. O. A. Knight of the CIO Intl. Oil Workers Union. Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney is chairman of the special petroleum committee which opened hearings in Washington May 17.

"We who produce, process and ship our nation's oil have long realized that our labor was used, against our will, in helping to arm Nazi Germany and Japan for World War II," Knight declared in a statement directed to Sen. O'Mahoney.

"We know that powerful American oil companies entered into agreements with firms in Germany and Japan, that they handed over valuable American patents and processes to our enemies and that they assisted in the acts of aggression committed by Hitler and the Mikado, beginning with the rape of Manchuria in 1931.

"The Oil Workers Intl. Union also realizes that these firms are anxious once again to get into the international cartel racket and to start all over again the profit-mad policies which can produce World War III.

"May your committee shed the pitiless light of publicity upon such machinations and recommend to the Senate measures which will make impossible a repetition of the ghastly record of the 1930's when certain major U. S. oil companies collaborated with Hitler and the Japanese military clique and threw the world into the shambles of war.

"The Oil Workers Intl. Union, representing the rank and file of the oil industry, pledges to you its unfaltering support in curbing the anti-social activities of such cartels so that the world may enjoy peace and prosperity."

"Jacky" Brophy Goes to Portugal

Jacqueline Brophy, daughter of CIO Director of Councils John Brophy, sailed this week for Lisbon, Portugal, where she has been assigned as a clerk in the State Department's Foreign Service.

UAW Catalog

The new film catalog for 1945 issued by the United Auto Workers' Film Dept. contains an extensive list of motion pictures suitable for union showings and gives information about how and where to order them. The catalog may be obtained from the UAW-CIO Education Dept., 1324 Maccabees Bldg., Detroit 2, Mich.

In Honolulu

Plans for an educational program to include eventually some 25,000 plantation workers, 12,000 of whom have already been organized, has been announced by the Oahu CIO Council in Honolulu.

The council has elected a special educational committee to organize regular classes on the plantations, and has appropriated $100 a month to be spent chiefly on literature. Courses planned include economics of Hawaii, labor history of Hawaii and of America, current events and English.

PICTURE CREDITS: Harris & Ewing, Sidney R. Bayne, Norman Driscoll, War Department.

"The Road to Democracy"

In Paintings By

SARA BERMAN-BEACH

May 1 - May 31

ARTISTS ASSOCIATES

138 West 15, N. Y. C.

Rose Pringle, Director

11-5 Daily—3-6 Sundays

(All works for sale. Prices on request)

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps and Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases, Bill Folds
231 So. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois
Phone Webster 4104

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Badges
Dues Buttons
Bronze Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 566 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

IT'S going to take hard work to get our child care centers continued. The Republican members of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee made that clear at the May 16 hearings on extension of the Lanham Act.

They were very critical of the large amount which the Federal Works Agency estimates will be needed for child care centers in the coming year. After all, they said, now that VE-Day is here there will be substantial cuts in production and women will be the first to go. Why not stop this child care nonsense.

Congressman Ralph W. Gwinn (R) of Bronxville, N. Y., said that in his community the child care centers were out soliciting babies and that the agency shouldn't rely on the local community to give them an accurate picture of the need.

Congressman Rolla C. McMillen (R) of Decatur, Ill., was even more critical. He felt that the centers would encourage women to stay in industry, whereas they "should be discouraged or even driven, if necessary, back to their homes where they belong to take care of those children."

Congressman Lanham gently pointed out that many women were still needed in war industry and that the aircraft plants, for instance, were still hiring women.

Federal Works Agency, in presenting its case for extension of the act, reported that half of the women whose children are in the centers are heads of families and that a high proportion are wives of servicemen. These women must work to support their children.

ARGUE ECONOMY

But in spite of the excellent case they made for the continuing need for federal assistance in maintaining child care centers, Federal Works is yielding to so-called economy pressure. They cut $14,000,000 from the $36,000,000 which the applicants said they expected to need to operate facilities for working mothers during the coming year.

They report that they are increasing the maximum fee which can be charged these mothers from 50c to 75c a day—which we know from past bitter experience will make them too expensive to meet the needs of many low-paid women workers.

Finally, FWA informed the committee that they are renewing child care projects on a quarterly basis only—instead of for a whole year—so that they can check each quarter to see how many centers can be closed down.

All of this makes it clear that a campaign to bring home to Congress the continuing need for child care centers is urgent.

H.R. 3187 was favorably reported to the House by the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee May 16, at the conclusion of one morning hearing. It must pass Congress and an appropriation made before funds will be available to continue the program next year.

Every Congressman who has centers in his district should hear from his voters and especially from mothers who use the centers, how vital they are. Letters from wives of servicemen and of men wounded or killed in action would be particularly effective in pointing up the continuing federal responsibility.

Congressmen should be urged to speak on the floor for H.R. 3187 and to appear before the Appropriations Committee in support of the full appropriation. Quick action is needed to prevent any interruption of the program.

Labor Education

Eby Teaches At CIO School

Kermit Eby, national CIO director of education & research taught a class in "Workers Education, Why and What it is" the first week of the CIO Southern School held at Highlander Folk School during this month. Theme of the course is "60 Million Jobs. Full Employment for Workers after the War."

Students for the most part are local union officers, presidents of state and local CIO Councils and CIO representatives. Unions represented include United Auto Workers, Transport Service Employes, Oil Workers, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, Rubber Workers, Intl. Woodworkers, Paper Workers, Packinghouse Workers, United Steelworkers, Textile Workers, and the Houston, Tex., and Oklahoma CIO Councils.

Policy, class and work schedules at the school are decided by a council elected by the students. Classes start each morning with a discussion of CIO policy and organization led by a visiting CIO regional director.

Paul Christopher of Tennessee led this discussion the first week, followed by William Henderson of Arkansas and Carey Haigler of Alabama the second week. Ernest Push of Virginia and Charles Gillman of Georgia are scheduled for the remaining two weeks.

A Training Within Industry course conducted by the War Manpower Commission was held two hours a day, and James Dombrowski, exec. sec. Southern Conference for Human Welfare, formerly with the CIO-PAC, was scheduled to lead a discussion on political action.

New PAC Pamphlet

A new pamphlet supporting the Bretton Woods proposals has been issued by the CIO Political Action Committee in its latest nationwide campaign on political issues.

"Bretton Woods is No Mystery" is a 20-page illustrated booklet which explains simply the purpose of the international monetary agreement, what it means to labor, and answers the objections bankers and others have made to it.

It charges that "big bankers and their monetary experts," opposing the world monetary program, sought to make "a very complicated mystery" of Bretton Woods to discourage general understanding of the program.

Adoption of the Bretton Woods program, it contends, will mean at least five million additional jobs for American workers and its principles are easier to understand "than a recipe for apple-pie or the rules of rummy."

The CIO-PAC has issued 250,000 copies of the pamphlet as the first of a pamphlet-a-month series to be distributed by the committee on vital national and international questions. PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman said that this is only the first run and predicted that it would be distributed by the millions.

Pamphlets to be issued later will deal with the world security conference, the world trade union conference, a guaranteed annual wage and an increased minimum wage, race relations, Missouri Valley Authority, development of natural resources and other current matters.

These pamphlets will be timed, Hillman stated, to meet the debates on legislation.

He also announced that the CIO-PAC, by arrangement with Pamphlet Press, Inc., subsidiary of Reynal & Hitchcock, publishers, will make available its pamphlet-a-month to the general public, through the cooperation of the National Citizens' PAC and other progressive groups.

CIO's Youth Program

America's children are a deep concern of the CIO, as the extensive program for education, maternal and child health, youth security and housing adopted at the last Natl. CIO convention shows. The resolutions embodying this program has been reprinted by the CIO Dept. of Education & Research in an attractively illustrated 4-page leaflet, "For American Youth." Copies may be obtained from the Natl. CIO office, 718 Jackson Place N.W., Washington 6, D. C., 3c a copy; 100, $2.50; 500, $9; 1,000, $15.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Labor Continues to Press For Voice at UNCIO

By HARRY READ

SAN FRANCISCO—Labor representation in the peace structure of the United Nations moved measurably closer to realization this week as the air was cleared on the issues involved in establishing a world constitution in keeping with the Dumbarton Oaks proposals.

Earlier, the Steering Committee of the United Nations Conference on International Organization had rejected labor's proposal for representation by reversing a decision of the committee on economic and social cooperation to invite the World Federation of Trade Unions to sit in on its deliberations. This over-ruling of the committee's invitation was vigorously protested by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, consultant to the American delegation. Just before he was recalled east on CIO business. Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, associate consultant, remained in San Francisco.

The apparent change in attitude towards representation of labor and other economic groups came Thursday when all the consultants met with the full American delegation headed by Secretary-of-State Stettinius. The entire group concurred in a four-point program of suggested amendments in the Dumbarton Oaks draft.

The first of the four proposals was an amendment providing for representation in the economic and social council of "major non-governmental organizations, national and international, which are concerned with matters within the competence of the council." The other three points suggested clarification on participation of official international groups; asked full representation of educational groups; and requested the establishment of an interim committee to carry on the work of the economic and social council.

There was every indication after the meeting that the American delegation was favorably inclined to the requests of the consultants.

Pres. Murray has laid the groundwork for the change in attitude at an earlier meeting of the consultants with Stettinius. On that occasion, Murray's insistence on full recognition in the world charter of human rights and the fundamental freedoms, played a large part in an amendment proposed a few days later by the American, British, Soviet and Chinese delegations.

In accordance with the principle voiced by Pres. Murray, Sec.-Treas. Carey had proposed an amendment providing for representation of the major economic groups, "specifically industry, agriculture and labor." A CIO memo in support of the proposal was sent to Stettinius by Carey.

On May 11, Carey returned from a hurried trip to Washington where he testified before House committees on reciprocal trade agreements and the Bretton Woods proposals to find that Robert Gaylord, chairman of the Board of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, had issued a press statement that "the NAM joined in the appeal and ran an assist for the CIO."

Subsequently the consultants from the large business groups, the farm organizations, and the educational groups held several meetings, with Carey representing the CIO and Robert Watt the AFL. When the discussions were reported to the other consultants, they promptly concurred in the proposals.

It was then decided that in the meeting with the American delegation, Carey would speak for American labor; Philip B. Reed for the Intl. Chamber of Commerce, Gaylord of the NAM for American business, Allan Klein of the American Farm Bureau Federation for American agriculture, and Dr. George F. Zook of the Education Assn. for the educational groups.

"We are concerned with the fact here that huge segments of our population have, in exercising their human rights, retained in their own hands determination of their economic affairs," Carey told the American delegation.

"Our political representatives are empowered by us under the Constitution to represent us only in limited specified matters, and they have never been entrusted with determination of all economic formulas. The common people work out their own economic plans through labor unions and their associations representing business, agriculture and education.

"Their right to do so is beyond challenge under any theory of government; and it is a right they prefer to exercise in world affairs."

Radio Notes

A DRAMATIZED program on price control will highlight the CIO radio show Saturday when it heralds Fight Inflation Week, tentatively scheduled for June 10-17.

The CIO radio series, "Labor-USA," which hits the Blue network at 6:45 p. m. EWT each Saturday evening, is gaining an ever-widening audience. A broadcast on the Fair Employment Practices Bill May 5 brought letters from all parts of the country.

William Gaffney, of the Social Science department of Mount St. Michael's in Spokane, Wash., sent congratulations. A vocational guidance instructor, Florence Moskowitz, Jersey City, asked for more information with which she could combat the "spineless New Jersey FEPC law."

Hannah Kaufman, Chicago, wrote directly to the Blue network and praised them for alloting radio time to "a splendid program from labor and in so doing more nearly approaching democracy on the air waves—something too long overdue."

* * *

In addition to the national CIO radio series, CIO councils in various cities are airing their own radio shows.

On the west coast, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland, Ore., CIO Councils are bringing labor news direct to the radio audience. With the beginning of the San Francisco United Nations Conference, the Portland program was highlighted by a series of forums to discuss the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and the aims of the San Francisco parley.

The editor of the Oregon Journal, Marshall Dana, British consul for Portland, James McDonald and Dr. Ah Silwing, Chinese counsel, were heard on the first broadcast.

Subsequent programs introduced George Scott, bureau chief of INS; Capt. Lionweaver, U. S. Marines; Dr. Compton, former president of Reed College, and Daniels McDade, vice commander of the American Legion.

Latin Labor Thumbs Down Argentina at UNCIO

By LEN DE CAUX

LABOR PROTESTS against the admission of Fascist Argentina into the UNCIO are occurring all through Latin America, according to V. Lombardo Toledano, President of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL).

He criticized the U. S. State Department for having previously "carried on the fight against Argentina singlehanded, and without enough consulation with the Latin American countries."

This led, Lombardo said, to stirring old fears of "Yankee Imperialism" and to some countries being unwilling to follow the United States lead.

They finally put pressure on the United States on behalf of Argentina, which pressure, he said with a smile, "I think the State Department was very pleased to have."

Lombardo also remarked that Britain has always supported Argentina, and criticized Mexico's Foreign Minister Padilla for having "changed his mind overnight" about Argentina.

He said, however, that Padilla has agreed to push for World Labor Representation in the permanent United Nations set-up, and to introduce amendments for this purpose.

Another Latin American country, besides Mexico, that voted for UNCIO representation for world trade union conference was Guatemala, where there has recently been a democratic revolution against a reactionary regime.

Gautemala, along with Brazil and Honduras, is one of the few Latin American countries without a CTAL-affiliated labor movement, according to Lombardo. But with its new liberties, labor there is expected to join up shortly, he said.

Brazil has up to now forbidden any international affiliations to its unions, the CTAL leader said. But he believed the increasing democracy in evidence there in connection with the current elections would lead to growth of the Brazilian labor movement and its eventual affiliation with CTAL.

Lombardo distinguished sharply between the dictatorships in Brazil and Argentina. He said the Vargas dictatorship in Brazil was a purely personal dictatorship of a type long common in Latin American countries.

The personal dictatorship in Argentina, on the other hand, is a Fascist dictatorship modeled after the fascist regimes in Spain and other European countries.

Three of those most vitally concerned with the problems taken up at the CIO Veterans Conference appear satisfied that their civilian future is in good hands. They were photographed at the first CIO citywide conference on veterans' welfare on May 12 at the Park Central Hotel, under the auspices of the Greater New York CIO Council. Over 300 delegates from labor, civic, veterans and welfare organizations attended the conference and adopted resolutions calling for a broad program of jobs, security, hospitalization and education for veterans of the armed services and merchant seamen. L. to r.: Pvt. Julius Appel, Liberty, N. Y.; Cpl. Raymond M. Smith, Wellsboro, Pa.; Cpl. Joseph A. Hoffman, Philadelphia, Pa.

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 22 May 28, 1945

On Teen Age Workers—

Philip Murray Said:

"OUR nation is rich in gold and silver, in coal, iron and all the resources men are prone to count when they measure a nation's wealth. But the products of mine, factory and farm are not our most valuable asset. Our boys and girls are the foundation upon which we build our hopes for a better tomorrow. They are the true measure of our nation's strength.

"The well-being of these boys and girls must not be neglected, nor the demands of today's emergency be permitted to rob tomorrow's need. We want no "lost" generation when this war ends. Rather, we will need a generation of healthy, well-educated youth, believing in democracy as their way of life.

"To protect the future, we must see that our boys and girls carry on with their education now. So won't you, in whatever capacity you speak, write or act for the CIO, encourage the boys and girls in your community to return to school, to attend regularly, and to study hard?"

THADDEUS (Teddy) Manelski is 16 years old. He works for the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation in Newcastle, Delaware. He's producing for the Arsenal of Democracy. His job is important, and he's doing it well.

But . . .

There has been a startling increase in the number of child laborers and teen age workers during the war years.

Three million between the ages of 14 and 17 years of age were employed in April, 1944.

Five million of the same age group were employed during the summer months.

The High School population of the country has been reduced by 1,000,000 in three years.

One million of those working were 14 to 15 years of age—one out of every five children of these ages in the population.

Two million were 16 or 17—two out of every five of these ages.

"Every American boy and girl needs the best education and training the Nation can provide. Both for the children themselves and for the future of the country, more high school training than ever is needed," said Katherine Lenroot of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau.

Labor knows the value of training and study. Our soldiers know how much modern wars depend on scientific knowledge.

Labor also knows how much a lasting peace will depend on intelligent and trained minds, trained in appreciation of democracy. As a nation, Americans believe that our children must be wiser and abler and more prosperous than we are. We rely for this education on our schools.

They are the arsenals of democracy in peace.

(See more on Page 6)

Rankin Tries VA Whitewash, Flays Witnesses

THE Rankin Committee named by the House to probe the Veterans Administration has been using everything but the rubber hose on its witnesses.

Three witnesses had appeared up until the time the CIO News went to press, Rep. Philbin (D., Mass.), Albert Deutsch of the newspaper PM, and Albert Q. Maisel, who wrote a series of articles for Cosmospolitan magazine telling of shocking conditions at veterans hospitals.

And with no exceptions the witnesses got the same kind of grilling they would have received if they were defendants in police court.

The fact that Philbin was a Congressman did not get him any better treatment. With John E. Rankin (Polltaxer, Miss.), chairman of the committee, leading the attack aided and abetted by Joe W. McQueen, committee counsel, Philbin was asked time and again whether he knew personally of the bad conditions in VA hospitals described in the hundreds of letters he submitted to the committee.

"Your business is to investigate the conditions," he told the committee. "I'm furnishing the leads."

Philbin was quizzed at length on the distribution of copies of the Cosmopolitan containing one of Maisel's articles to members of the House.

When he said that he assumed full responsibility for the distribution of the articles, Rankin insisted on knowing the name of Philbin's friend who made arrangements to get copies of the magazine.

Philbin asked as a matter of personal privilege as a member of the House to be permitted to give the name to an executive session of the committee, but Rankin continued to insist that he tell the committee.

"Joseph Smith," Philbin finally said, which of course did not mean anything to the committee.

Objecting to this type of questioning, Rep. Green (D., Pa.) said: "Seems like we're investigating Mr. Philbin." At the insistence of Rep. Rayfiel (D., N. Y.) Rankin called an executive session at which, it was reported, the propriety of the questioning did not come to a vote.

Deutsch and Maisel fared even worse. They had to review their life histories. They were asked where they went to school, what jobs they held, their draft status, and Deutsch even was asked what his father did.

Deutsch didn't really get a chance to testify. His articles, he explained, were based partially on information received from 100 physicians, all of whom he would be willing to name except about five, who were VA employes who spoke to him in confidence.

Rankin wanted to know the names of the five.

"I stand on freedom of the press," Deutsch said.

"There is no freedom of the press that permits a man to gather information of a destructive nature and spread it before the public," Rankin replied.

"This information was not destructive," Deutsch said. " I think it was constructive."

"It doesn't make any difference what you think," Rankin shouted. "You can answer or I will cite you for contempt." Deutsch refused to answer.

Rankin called for an executive session of the committee during which members were reported to have voted 11 to 9 against citing the writer for contempt.

Deutsch was again called to the chair, and again under questioning from Rankin refused to reveal the names of the VA employes. Rankin called for another executive session. Meanwhile, Rep. Edith Rogers (R., Mass.) and Rep. Rayfiel (D., N. Y.), who had been opposing him left.

First witness to undergo the grilling at the hands of Rep. Rankin was Rep. Philip Joseph Philbin (D. Mass.), who turned over hundreds of letters complaining of conditions at VA Hospitals.

The committee then cited Deutsch for contempt. Rankin refused to give the vote, but others reported:

For contempt proceedings—Rankin, Peterson (D., Fla.), Allen (D., La.), Gibson (D., Ga.), Stigler (D., Okla.), Irvin (D., N. C.), Carnahan (D., Mo.), Pickett (D., Tex.), Cunningham (R., Iowa), Bennett (R., Mo.), Auchincloss (R., N. J.), Vursell (R., Ill.).

Against contempt proceedings—Green (D., Pa.), Huber (D., Ohio), Kearney (R., N. Y.), Scrivner (R., Kan.), Ramey (R., Ohio).

Until the time the CIO News went to press, Rankin had not dared to bring the Deutsch citation to the House for action. Administration leaders reported that Rankin could not get more than 75 votes on the contempt motion.

When Maisel took the stand, Rankin and McQueen proceeded to subject him for an hour to gruelling cross-examination without giving him a chance to testify to what he knew.

Their strategy was finally halted for a time when Reps. Domengeaux, Kearney, Green, Ervin, and Pickett objected and asked that Maisel be allowed to tell his story. Seeing that he was beaten, Rankin gave in.

Later on when Mrs. Rogers tried to ask the witness some questions, McQueen objected, which drew this caustic retort from the Congresswoman:

"This is a committee investigation. I will ask questions in my own way and in my own time."

This finally silenced McQueen for the day and allowed Maisel to say on the basis of talks with officials and doctors and his own investigation that:

He had reports on beatings of patients at VA hospitals, which were based on letters from their relatives, which he offered to submit to the committee.

Some VA hospitals were so overcrowded that diet kitchens were used for wards, with the result that food prepared at a central kitchen at the Castle Point, N. Y., hospital was served cold.

Modern surgery was not used sufficiently at veterans' hospitals, a condition that resulted in more deaths and fewer recoveries than in similar institutions run by States and counties.

Many VA hospitals are understaffed and poorly staffed.

He had seen a number of instances of callousness on the part of doctors.

For 13 consecutive terms, Rep Rankin (Polltaxer, Miss) has been a member of the House, was elected in 1944 by only 17,493 persons.

Hope for Labor Consultation Grows at UNCIO

By HARRY READ

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26—Adoption by the American delegation this week of a proposal originally advanced by the CIO, virtually assured organized labor, on both national and international levels, of a place in implementing the World Constitution for Peace being drafted here at the United Nations Conference on International Problems.

The proposal is predicated on the insistence of CIO President Philip Murray in the opening days of the Conference that recognition of human rights be accorded a principal place in the World Charter which is expected to outlaw fascism in all its assorted forms.

Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, who remained here to represent CIO as consultant after President Murray was called back east, adhered closely to the established CIO formula of advocating measures that benefit all the people. As a result CIO found flocking to its support the big business groups, the farm organizations and the educational consultants. Their example was followed by the rest of the consultants who represent the balance of the 42 organizations holding consultative status here.

There had been a tendency among members of the American delegation headed by Secretary of State Stettinius, with a resulting influence on delegates of other nations, to treat the entire subject matter from a purely political standpoint. Carey's sustained insistence that the people of this nation have preferred to keep determination of their economic affairs largely in their own hands, changed the whole approach of the consultants and delegates alike.

As a result, the American delegation has now tentatively agreed to an addition to the chapter of the Dumbarton Oaks agreement which sets up an economic and social council of the world organization. This tentative amendment reads as follows:

"The economic and social council shall be authorized to make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations, international, and where appropriate, national, which are concerned with matters within the competence of the council."

This amendment was drafted as a re-wording of the proposal made last week by the consultants that the council should "from time to time arrange conferences with and receive recommendations from major non-governmental organizations, national and international, which are concerned with matters within the competence of the council." The consultants' amendment was in turn a rephrasing of the orignial CIO proposal.

The proposal for participation of non-governmental organizations in the work of the economic and social council now backed by the American delegation, was unanimously approved unofficially at a dinner given by CIO Monday night of this week to representatives of organized labor in attendance at the conference. Present at Carey's invitation were Peter Fraser, Prime Minister of New Zealand; Michael Tarasov, USSR; J. F. Walsh, Australia; Francisco Aguirre, Cuba; H. T. Liu, China; Haakon Lie, Norway; Mr. Goodwin, Canada; and Martin H. Miller, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Robert Watt, AFL consultant, had planned to attend but was prevented by other business from doing so.

The status in the World Constitution of the International Labor Organization, a tri-partite body composed of industry, labor and government, which was established by the old League of Nations, has not yet been finally determined. There had been discussions of including it by name as a governmental agency in the set-up of the economic and social council, but there apparently has been a change in sentiment against its specific mention until its constitution has been liberalized to accord direct participation in its affairs of all bona fide labor organizations throughout the world.

James Carey meets with Stettinius during consultants meeting. Left to right are: Robert M. Gaylord, Nat. Association of Manufacturers; David A. Simmons, American Bar Association; James B. Carey, CIO, and Edward R. Stettinius.

Murray Urges 20% Wage Increases Now

WAGE increases of at least 20 per cent are urgently needed to stave off economic collapse after the War, Pres. Murray told President Truman in his first call at the White House since FDR's death.

Murray left a copy of a CIO wage policy statement, originally released May 14, which President Truman said that he would study carefully with Stabilization Director Vinson. (See CIO News, May 21.)

Excerpts from the statement follow:

"Cutbacks are under way, workers have been laid off, and the reconversion period has begun. A formulation of wage policy to meet this condition is not a problem of the future but an immediate necessity so that workers may be able to buy enough and so that employers will be able to estimate both labor costs and consumer demand.

"The new policy should be directed to maintaining full production and full employment. Expansion, not contraction, of purchasing power, therefore, must now be our objective. Take-home pay must be at least as high as at present to sustain national income. Merely maintaining current hourly wage rates is not enough. A substantially reduced workweek, down-grading, and the shift back to lower-paid occupations make it essential to increase wage rates to make up for the resultant loss of earnings.

"Such a policy would not require any general upward price adjustments nor, with proper price controls, initiate any inflationary spiral. In 1944 price levels were far enough above costs to yield $25 billion of profits before taxes. Production for war purposes has passed its peak and production for civilian purposes will be on the increase. Thus, purchasing power is declining as more goods become available for consumers.

"Labor's earlier argument that wage rates must be increased to keep pace with the cost of living still holds good, and would necessitate an upward adjustment of at least 10 per cent, using the most conservative estimates. But such an adjustment would make no allowance for the increase in labor productivity, which in over four years may be estimated conservatively as 10 per cent or more.

"Thus, a 20 per cent increase in basic wage rates is necessary simply to restore pre-war relationships between wage rates, prices and productivity per man-hour. But unless labor receives an even larger share of what it produces than in 1940, when ten million workers were jobless, even more workers will be unemployed.

"An immediate increase in basic wage rates is essential, equalling at least 17 cents in steel and similar amounts in other industries."

June 10-17 Is "Fight Inflation Week"

THE week of June 10-17 is "Fight Inflation Week." Nineteen organizations have banded together to issue a call to action, and have pledged to carry through the fight against inflation.

The Price Control Act expires on June 30, and the first item on the order of business is to fight for the renewal of the Price Control Act, and the agency for which President Harry S. Truman issued a special "word of deserved commendation. . . . Had it not been for OPA and the stabilization program we should have had runaway inflation. . . . Congress has given us a good law and I hope Congress will extend that law for at least another year."

The call to action urged all members of the organizations and all citizens to carry on this fight. The organizations pledging themselves are: Nathan E. Cowand for the Congress of Industrial Organizations, Mrs. Faye Stephenson of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, Kathryn McHale of the American Association of University Women, Mrs. Joseph H. Welt for the National Council of Jewish Women, Rev. Francis McPeak of the Council of Social Action, Congregational and Christian Churches, Mildred Gutwillig of the National Federation Settlements, Willard Givens of the National Association, Lelia Massey of the American Home Economics Association, Elisabeth Christman of the National Woman's Trade Union League, Colsten Warne of the Consumers Union, Katharine Armitage of the League of Women Shoppers, Millard Rice of the Disabled American Veterans, Ruth Craven of the National Council of Catholic Women, Mary McLoed Bethune of the National Council of Negro Women, A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Mrs. Laura Essman of the Ladies Auxiliary Railroad Labor Organizations, Mrs. James W. Irvin of the National Board of the YWCA. Mrs. Herman Lowe, President of the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries.

The call to action points out that the "danger to inflation is greater than ever before. That there must be no negotiated peace with inflation through special interest amendments, no compromise with black markets. Rationing must continue to assure fair sharing, and to enable us to help prevent starvation of liberated peoples. The OPA must not be crippled for lack of funds."

The organizations urge that during the week of June 10-17, and until the Price Control Act is passed—that all the members of the organizations signing the pledge let the people of "every community tell their Congressmen that they must renew the Act without inflationary amendments and must appropriate enough funds to enable the OPA to fight the black market."

The following 12 points were issued as a suggestion for action in each community to dramatize the need for continuing and strengthening OPA and to let Congress know what the people want:

1—Get interested organizations together in your community. Work up a number of projects for Fight Inflation Week to be done in your city.

2—Ask your Mayor (Governor, too, if there is any chance) to proclaim the week June 10-17 as Fight Inflation Week.

3—Visit the editors of your papers. Discuss the urgent need for continuing price control and rationing. Stress the need to protect our servicemen and their families from inflation. Urge them to write editorials; give news coverage.

4—Get in touch with your religious leaders. Ask them to arrange sermons in the churches June 10-17 stressing our moral responsibility to help feed the people we have liberated from Nazi terror. Ask them to point out that we must continue price control and rationing here for some time if we are to meet that responsibility and still see to it that our food is fairly divided among us.

5—Draw up a petition addressed to your Congressman urging him to work and vote for renewal of the price control act without amendments and with full appropriation.

6—Get out a leaflet explaining the urgency of the campaign and calling upon people to write their Congressman.

7—Arrange community meetings with prominent community speakers.

8—Cover meetings of organizations, leaflets, postcards, petitions.

9—Arrange radio broadcasts during Fight Inflation Week.

10—Get everybody writing letters.

11—Arrange a housewife-retailer meeting at which both groups pledge to fight the black market by refusing to buy black market food.

12—Arrange a demonstration which will interest people and get publicity during Fight Inflation Week. For instance have a caravan or float which goes from block to block with big signs and a loudspeaker to get signatures for petitions, distribute leaflets and help housewives write postcards. Or have a baby carriage parade with suitable signs.

A final word of advice was: "And plan to keep your campaign going until the law and appropriation are passed."

What Will Your Dollar Buy?

A League of Women Voters Chart

Elmer Benson Heads NCPAC

ELMER Benson, scholarly and earnest former Governor of Minnesota, declared in a press interview in Washington this week that his first official act as Chairman of the National Citizens Political Action Committee was to assure President Harry S. Truman of his committee's support in "fulfillment of the goals of Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

Governor Benson is the new acting chairman of the Executive Council of NCPAC. Sidney Hillman remains as honorary chairman.

Benson will spend his time in the field, working to broaden the base of NCPAC. "We plan to broaden both the scope of the committee and the work," he said. "We will continue our friendly cooperative working relationship with CIO-PAC, sharing the same offices in New York City, but will devote our time and make every effort to have farmers and business men predominate in our committee."

"You might mention in passing that both the chairman and vice chairman are farmers," laughed Benson. He referred to Vice Chairman James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union who was also present. Benson owns a 520 acre farm in western Minnesota.

Benson declared that he was well impressed with the record of President Truman both as Senator and as President. He declared that NCPAC would continue to support men and issues, that NCPAC was interested not in a partisan Democratic Congress, but a "democratic Congress with a small d."

"If we can have a paid field worker in every hamlet, we'll have it," declared Benson. NCPAC hopes to have an organization in every state. NCPAC hopes also to open a legislative office in the nation's capital.

There are 800 organizations represented on the National Executive Council, guided by a steering committee. "If we had a meeting of our member organizations," declared Benson, "we'd have a pretty good sized convention."

At present NCPAC looks toward continuing to improve the calibre of the Congress in 1944. By 1948 they hope to help get out a vote of 75,000,000. "One way to do that would be to wipe out the poll tax," said Benson.

NCPAC's program is nonpartisan political action to afford a "broad base upon which citizens from every walk of life may work in unison with the forces of organized labor, farm, business and professional groups for: Complete and final victory; A just and durable peace; Attainment of President Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights; Elimination of racial discrimination; Attainment of full voting rights.

CIO Opens Dept. Of Intl. Affairs

THE CIO has opened a Department of International affairs and has appointed Michael Ross as Director of the Department, President Philip Murray announced this week.

CIO participation in the World Trade Union Congress dramatized the growing need for maintaining relations with the labor movements of other countries. Michael Ross as director of the department will conduct the CIO's official business with representatives of international labor. He will also serve as CIO representative and liaison with the State Department and other agencies of the federal government whose interests are in foreign affairs.

Michael Ross represented the CIO in recent meetings in Paris and London as well as at San Francisco where he was liaison officer for the members of the Administrative Committee of the World Trade Union Congress.

Ross was born in England and worked in the British Labor Party and trade union movement. He has also lived in various other European countries, and "has wide experience in this field," declared President Murray.

New Wage Policy Urgently Needed

CIO's demand for a 20% increase in basic wage rates has been carried to the White House by Pres. Philip Murray and is now under consideration by top government officials.

The urgent necessity for a new formulation of wage policy is obvious to American working people who are already suffering from reduced purchasing power as a result of the reconversion under way since V-E Day. But it also needs to be widely understood by the general public, which will suffer too unless the proper adjustments are made.

The CIO has long led the fight for revision of the Little Steel formula to adjust wage rates to increased living costs. It warned that unless this was done before V-E Day, the whole country as well as labor would suffer from the most serious economic madadjustments as reconversion got under way.

These new problems are now upon us, and every one of CIO's previous arguments is fortified by actual experience.

With the cutbacks, layoffs, reduced working hours and downgrading of a reconversion period, it is no longer enough merely to maintain current hourly wage rates.

It now becomes even more essential to increase them substantially to preserve take-home pay and to prevent a serious reduction in workers' purchasing power.

More than this, if full production and full employment are to be maintained, and a disastrous economic slump is to be averted, there will have to be not only no contraction, but on the contrary an expansion of purchasing power to maintain and increase the demand for consumers' goods which will hereafter become increasingly available, as war production is cut back.

CIO's case for an immediate 20% increase in basic wage rates is based on two main factors: (1) the need for at least a 10% increase to bring wage rates into line with living costs, as most conservatively estimated; and (2) the need for at least an additional increase of 10% to compensate labor for its greatly increased productivity over the last four years.

Even such a 20% increase, however, as Murray points out, will do no more than to restore pre-war relationships between wage rates, prices and productivity per man-hour. Under those circumstances some ten million workers were jobless in 1940.

So it is obvious that merely to restore this status quo is not enough, and that labor's purchasing power and its share of what it produces will have to be still further increased if we are to avert more unemployment and develop an expanding economy.

All this does not mean, however, that the CIO is asking that the lid be taken off wages and prices while the war with Japan is still raging in full force.

The CIO recognizes that wage controls must be maintained, at least until the end of the war. All it is asking at the moment is that wages be so adjused as to achieve effective economic stabilization.

Nor will CIO's wage demands necessitate any price increases or lead to more inflation, if proper price controls are enforced, since profit levels are so high as to be able to absorb the necessary wage adjustments.

If CIO's wage policy receives the study and consideration to which it is entitled, it will be found to be a noteworthy contribution to the economic welfare of the whole country and to our war effort, and it will receive the public support that is necessary to make it effective.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

ONE OF THE clearest lessons of the San Francisco conference is the indivisibility of domestic and foreign policy.

The CIO has never fallen for the notion that there is some kind of wall between the two, or that labor can concentrate solely on its domestic interests, leaving foreign affairs to governments and diplomats.

It has recognized that peace and war are fully as vital labor concerns as are wages and jobs; and that wages and jobs themselves are directly at stake in foreign trade, Bretton Woods and all other phases of international planning.

That is why the CIO has taken the lead for international labor unity and for labor representation at all international conferences.

But the UNCIO has also shown the indivisibility of domestic and foreign policy by revealing how strongly the United States delegation has been influenced by domestic pressures and considerations.

★ ★ ★

Because of Roosevelt's justly famous world leadership, it was too hastily assumed by many that the delegation he appointed would follow through in the spirit of his policies; and there have been many disappointments with its actual performance.

Roosevelt was known as the outstanding champion of United Nations unity, and particularly of the closest and friendliest relations between the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain, upon whose mutual cooperation world peace and prosperity most depend.

He was also known as the outstanding foe of fascism everywhere, and regarded Argentina as the chief source of fascist infection in the western hemisphere.

Roosevelt's name was associated with the 60 million jobs program for full employment. He saw the importance of world labor organization as a popular prop for the world organization of the nations. And he sympathized strongly with the aspirations of colonial peoples for self-government and national independence.

So there was much hope that the United States would assume leadership at San Francisco against any fascist penetration of UNCIO, against attempts to divide the Soviet Union from the other nations, for the self-determination of all peoples, for the promotion of full employment, and for a greater voice for world labor.

★ ★ ★

Unfortunately, the United States delegation at San Francisco has fallen far short of such expectations.

It earned the scathing criticism of CIO President Murray by taking the lead against representation for the World Trade Union Conference, which was supported by a number of other nations and actually approved by a conference committee until the United States secured reversal of this committee's action.

It led the fight for the admission of Fascist Argentina. It did little to combat, and in some respects helped to feed, the virulent propaganda designed to create an anti-Soviet division.

Instead of taking moral leadership on behalf of independence for subject peoples, it joined with the colonial powers in opposing insertion of the word "independence" as a goal for countries under trusteeship.

It even opposed including the promotion of "full employment" in the charter as one of the purposes of international economic and social cooperation.

★ ★ ★

To understand such attitudes, it must be explained at once that Roosevelt did not appoint a delegation wedded to his policies.

On the contrary, he included opponents as well as supporters his policies, so that the delegation might be broadly representative and might forestall Senate opposition such as wrecked President Wilson's plans.

So the U. S. delegation includes tory Republicans like Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Mich.) and Rep. Charles Eaton (N. J.) and other administration opponents, who have had their way too often at San Francisco by threatening Congressional opposition.

Vandenberg and Eaton, for instance, are reliably reported to have opposed charter reference to "full employment" on the same kinds of grounds that they oppose full employment plans domestically.

And other international attitudes of the U. S. delegation were similarly determined by domestic political considerations.

In a word, labor has to cope in foreign affairs with the same line-up that opposes it in Congress on domestic issues.

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-Presidents
Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas
Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director
Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925
Vol. 8 May 28, 1945 No. 22

Supplies for MacArthur's men in the Pacific—and their Allies—have poured into this Australian port and hundreds of other ports since Japan first struck at Pearl Harbor. Today the Merchant Marine needs 115,000 more men to complete the long haul to victory in Tokyo.

National Maritime Day

All races and creeds work and fight together in the U. S. Merchant Marine. Section of newly unveiled photo-mural in CIO Natl. Maritime Union headquarters in New York shows Negro and white seamen at work painting their vessel.

TWELVE years ago, in the first year of FDR's administration, Congress set aside May 22 as National Maritime Day to honor the men and women who build and man the ships of America's merchant marine.

Since that time, and particularly since Pearl Harbor, we have built and manned the greatest merchant fleet in world history. Today we have 4,000 ships, more than 50 million deadweight tons; in one year we carried 77 million tons of supplies to the fighting fronts. Close to a quarter million men are in the American merchant marine.

The U. S. merchant marine, built by members of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, manned by members of the Natl. Maritime Union, the American Communications Assn., the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., has lost 6,000 men by enemy action.

Yet today American seamen get no protection from the Wagner Act, from Social Security, from the Wage Hour Act. They still lack a "Seamen's Bill of Rights" similar to the GI Bill. Their base pay for a skilled AB is 42 cents an hour—and there are proposals to cut their earnings in half by eliminating the Atlantic war risk bonus.

Urging a strong and stable merchant marine after the war,—without which we cannot have full employment—Rep. Jackson (D., Wash.) said in Congress that seamen must have: "1. An adequate wage. 2. Continuous employment. 3. Enactment of the Seamen's Bill of Rights. 4. Revision of the various social security laws to give coverage to merchant seamen."

And in the Senate, Sen. White (R., Me.) added that our country wants "a merchant marine that will be abreast of the latest developments. It wants a sizable shipbuilding industry behind its merchant marine. It wants decent conditions for our seamen who cover the lanes of the seas in their ships."

The chart shows the increase in the number of merchant seamen.

School and the Teen Age Workers

Story by Pictures

1 WHEN this new machine came into the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation Plant in Newcastle, Delaware, none of the older men would volunteer to work on it. It was too big. But Teddy did. He is 16 years old, and has been working here since December, 1944. Teddy is called a router. He cuts aluminum from a jig for airplane parts. He gets 80 cents an hour. Teddy's sleeves are taped up; and he wears a protector for his face. The hot aluminum flies all over the place as he works.

2 TEDDY'S family at Sunday dinner. L. to r. are: Teddy's mother, Hod w "Teddy" 16, and Johnny 14. They all live at 900 Brown Street in Wilm

"TEDDY" Manelski is 16 years old, and has been working for a half year now at the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation in Newcastle, Delaware. The Bellanca Aircraft Corporation is an important war plant. It subcontracts for component parts of the Navy Helldiver, C-46's, TBM3's, transport patrol boats, and parts of the Mars, the Navy Transport plane, in addition to innumerable other vital war machines. Teddy himself is doing more than a man's job. When the huge machine he is now working on came into the plant, the company asked for volunteers. None of the older men would volunteer. The job looked too big, too hard. But Teddy volunteered. And he's been working with a head shield as a protector while the hot aluminum splashed all about him ever since.

Teddy began by working in the shipyards last summer. He thought it would be temporary, and he would go back to school in the fall. He did go back to school. He really wanted to stay there, too. And his parents wanted him to stay. But he just couldn't get interested in school work again. Teddy was going to a vocational high school, and the work there seemed like play work, after the shipyards. He didn't study. He was doing poorly. His father took him to task.

"Teddy," he said: "You're either going to settle down and study, or you quit and go to work." So he went to work in December of 1944, at the Bellanca Aircraft Corp., and quit high school in the eleventh grade.

He makes $31 a week. He gives his mother $20 which has enabled the family to purchase a house, clothe the children "for the first time in their lives." Teddy keeps ten or eleven dollars, out of which he purchases his own clothes, including shirts for $3.50; goes to the movies every night; gives his kid brothers quarters whenever they ask for some spare change. His only savings since he's been working are eight $25 bonds, deducted from his pay. As to his future, he has no plans. He thinks he'll work at Bellanca until he's 18, and then there's the Army.

Teddy's father would have liked to have Teddy finish school. He is a leather worker, member of a CIO union, and thinks a high school education is valuable. "But after all he wouldn't study."

There are two hundred or more teen age workers in the Bellanca Aircraft plant, nearly 10% of the total working force. And in 1944 in Delaware 6,500 boys and girls like Teddy left High School to work in similar plants. In the country the figures are more alarming.

In the summer of 1943 some five million boys and girls from 14 through 17 years of age went to work. When the schools opened in the fall there were one million fewer boys and girls enrolled in America's high schools than in the year before we entered the war. The child labor and youth employment figures for the country have been radically changed during the war years 1940 to 1944.

In the two decades preceding 1940 child labor had been steadily decreasing. It fell from nearly two and a half million in 1920, to about one million in 1940. During these four war years, urgent demands for all kinds of manpower, high wartime wages, patriotic pressures and social restlessness have pushed the numbers of teen age workers to this high.

More than seven times as many teen age workers (14-17) went to work in 1943 as had in 1940. In the spring of 1944, the figure was 3,000,000, of which 1,000,000 were in the 14-17 age group. During the summer months the total figure swelled to 5,000,000.

The situation has become so alarming that the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the U. S. Office of Education, the War Manpower Commission, educators and community leaders are now urging 6 TEDDY cut his finger on the aluminum jig. The nurse at the Bellanca Aircraft plant gave him first aid.

7 MARY Hepburn is the shop steward and is proud of Teddy who is also a member of the United Auto Workers Union (CIO).

8 TEDDY sits out to sun himself during his half hour lunch period. About 10% of the working force are teen agers.

9 TEDDY brings his lunch in a paper bag; he buys coffee and pie to finish up with at the shop canteen.

Helen Kay
by Rebecca Snyder

g Manelski, Teddy's father John, Henry 15, Anthony 10, Thaddeus ngton, Delaware.

that school is priority number one for America's youth.

They give the following as reasons for the increase:

A desire to earn money. "Jobs are easy to get; pay is good. Money in the pocket makes you your own boss, and you can have a good time."

A desire to help the Nation. "Uncle Sam wants everybody to fight or work. Youngsters can't go to war, but they can take jobs."

Desire to help the family. In millions of homes where the adults are either in the service or at work, a young person is apt to be out of things or in the way. But getting a job helps to get attention, add to the family income, and put you on a par with the patriotic older members.

Doubt of the Future: These teen age boys and girls are children of the depression. They and their parents remember when jobs were hard to get. They are fearful of a lack of jobs when the war is over. Better work now while jobs are plentiful. School can wait.

Doubt of education. Youngsters cannot be expected to take the long view of education and balance its values against immediate pleasures or economic returns. Nor can they anticipate the difficulties in returning to school after breaking off.

The danger to the nation in the employment of young workers of 14-17 is great. The Children's Bureau points out that:

Accidents are most frequent among young workers. Immature judgment and recklessness leads to accidents.

Teen age workers move restlessly from job to job. The Chief of the Bureau of Attendance of Cleveland's Board of Education reports that a third of some 12,000 youths studied were shifting from job to job.

The health of America's youth becomes jeopardized with such employment. Doctors say the rapid growth of the middle teens makes them undergo many physical and emotional changes. This maturing process throws an added strain upon the young worker and makes him especially susceptible to unfavorable health conditions that may alter the course of his physical development. Safeguarding the health of America's youth should be a public concern.

The CIO Teachers have put up a standard of a minimum of a high school education for every American boy and girl. They also condemn as outdated the mechanical separation of "academic high schools and vocational high schools." Education for democracy should include both.

Some communities were able to initiate school and work programs. In Los Angeles, schools have a four-four plan, with four hours in school and four hours on the job. Last year 20,000 students were employed and 16,000 of these maintained school programs which insured graduation. Other cities had similar, more limited programs.

"Our boys and girls are the true measure of our nation's strength," said President Philip Murray. The Children's Bureau urges labor to join with other groups in organization of a community-wide "Go To School Committee." Campaign material can be procured from the Department of Labor. They urge giving the facts in the shop, and seeing that posters are displayed and that shop stewards talk with young workers about the importance of school; and help in the promotion of recommended standards for part-time school and part time work programs for young

In urging education for the young, they suggest: "He's winning his service stripes. Are you winning your diploma? Point out that soldiers study too. It takes training to keep pace with the great advances in skills going on now in wartime. There'll be more when the war is won. Get your education now."

3 TEDDY'S favorite meeting place is the Candy Kitchen, where the boy's buy their milk shakes and ice cream sodas. Teddy has $10 a week to spend on himself. "A lot of money," he admits and likes it. The boy next to him works in the shipyards.

4 TEDDY goes to the movies every single night of the week. It is his favorite recreation. Of the five boys in this picture, only two are in school at present. The others are working in the local shipyards, and in the aircraft plant.

5 TEDDY gathers his gang at the corner grocery store. The boys like to bowl. They also play cards, shoot crap, and kid each other about girls. Most of these boys are already working. Only a few of them are still going to the local high school. Teddy lost interest in high school after one summer at the shipyards. When he returned to school in the fall, he just couldn't apply himself to school work. He preferred a job.

Education Leaders and Organizers Pool Ideas

Here are some of the 125 delegates and visitors who attended the CIO regional education conference held last week in Chicago.

Clinton Golden, left, and Kermit Eby look over the pamphlet exhibit.

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Organizers and education leaders of the CIO had a grand chance to swap ideas at the regional conference held by the National CIO's Dept. of Education & Research last week-end in Chicago, and they made the most of it.

Kermit Eby, director of the Department, in summing up what the conference felt should be the main functions of CIO education, boiled down the discussion to these main points:

- The program should be aimed to serve organizing, and to teach CIO members, new and old, about the aims of trade unionism.
- It should serve unions by presenting them with methods that will help them to function effectively.
- Sharp emphasis was laid on the need of training shop stewards, as the key people in maintaining the union.
- The relation of unions to government and the necessity of understanding the present government set-up as it affects labor was stressed.
- A closer relationship in educational work should be maintained between various CIO organizations, including the Political Action Committee, so that new pamphlet material and methods developed may be made available to all and duplication eliminated.

A highlight of the conference was a dinner speech by Clinton Golden, assistant to the President of the CIO United Steelworkers, who drew upon his years of experience in educational, administrative and organizing work in the trade union movement, in outlining a CIO education program.

The union is the base upon which all really successful educational work must be built, he said. It must be developed from within the union, not superimposed from without.

"If we are to maintain our social gains and make the contribution of which organizations of labor are capable to the progress and well-being of mankind, we must make use increasingly of the rich resources of accumulated knowledge and wisdom that education can make available," Golden said in conclusion.

George Guernsey, chairman of the Conference Planning Committee, who is making a survey of workers education throughout the country, told of the tremendous resources and modern techniques now available for use in educational work.

Other main speakers included Walter Harris, CIO regional director in Illinois, who talked about the relation of education to organizing. Mel Heinritz, sec.-treas., Wisconsin CIO Council, told how education can help get new members and Sam Evett, Steelworkers, outlined how it can help unions maintain their gains. C. W. Culbreath of the Ohio Farm Bureau spoke on the relationship of farmers and workers.

Jack Zeller, UAW Intl. education director proposed that CIO correspondence courses be started, and Edwin Schonfeld, education director, Farm Equipment Workers, outlined a course on collective bargaining.

These three (left to right) are Barbara Bates, British trade unionist now visiting in Chicago; Elizabeth Moore and Sadelle Berger, both from the United Electrical, Radio Workers.

Al Whitehouse, Kentucky CIO president (left) and Vin Sweeney, United Steelworkers' publicity director.

GEORGE GUERNSEY
Chairman of the Conference Planning Committee.

Svend Godfredsen, editor and educational director of the United Packinghouse Workers and Annette Van Howe, editor of a paper published by Dist. 1 of the same union.

From the Natl. CIO organizing staff, L. to R., Harry Harberthear, asst. regional director in Cincinnati; Irwin DeShetler, Kansas City director; and Gobel F. Cravens, Chicago representative.

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

FIGHT Inflation Week is a special challenge for housewives. We know what a hard time we've been having to make ends meet with some overtime pay to help. Now, just when cutbacks are cutting pay checks, we find price control in serious danger.

The truth is that the special interest groups and their spokesmen in Congress hope to take advantage of the V-E Day feeling that the war is nearly over to gouge the public. Profits are more important than lives to them. They don't care if their efforts result in slowing war production and increasing the sacrifices our boys must make for Victory over Japan.

Senator Taft has actually proposed that as of next January, we end the wartime stabilization program. Remember him? He's the same Senator Taft who got an amendment into the price control law to forbid the requirement of grade labeling and to limit the power of OPA to control quality.

He's busy right now raising doubts about the San Francisco agreement. He's opposing the provision that there must be a unanimous vote of the permanent Council members before force is used to combat aggression. He wants us to forget that unless the big five do agree on such major decisions, the world peace machinery will break down.

In fact, you can be pretty sure when you see Taft's name attached to anything, that it isn't in the interests of the people of this country.

We do not have to base our opposition to weakening or scrapping price control on our distrust of Senator Taft, though. Most of us have seen or heard what happened to prices after the last war.

There's a very effective chart which Mr. Bowles used in presenting his testimony to Congress on the need for renewal of the stabilization act. It shows that 43 per cent—almost half—of the rise in living costs due to the last war took place after the armistice. 91 per cent of the rise in rents occurred after the war was over, 47 per cent of the rise in clothing, 37 per cent of the rise in food.

Just imagine what would happen if we relaxed price control now when the war is not over. There's a world-wide food shortage. OPA and WPB both tell us clothing will probably be scarce for at least two years. In most war production areas housing is terribly short. What we need actually is tighter price control.

How can we get that?

The answer is very simple. Tell your Congressman and Senators how you feel. Let them hear that you want the price control act renewed with no weakening amendments. Let them know that you support a large appropriation for OPA so they can do a more effective job of enforcing price ceilings and combatting black markets.

Get your friends and neighbors busy. Help organize community meetings, door-to-door canvassing with petitions, and streams of letters and post cards to Washington.

The Price Control Act may be up in the Senate as you read this.

WIRE YOUR SENATORS

Remember the allotment checks of the families of our boys in the Pacific won't increase if prices rise. It's up to us to protect them as well as ourselves.

'Good Schools For All' a Myth

CHARGING that a difference of 60 to 1 exists in educational opportunity in the United States today, the CIO, in its monthly Economic Outlook supports federal aid to education.

"The job of educating America for its great responsibilities in the years ahead is not a local problem," the Outlook stated in an article entitled "Good Schools for All—The American Myth."

Citing a study by the American Council on Education, the Outlook points out that whereas some pupils are being educated in fancy classrooms supported by $6,000 each year, twice as many are taught in classrooms on which less than $100 a year is spent.

When you buy Men's and Boys' Clothing, Shirts, Work Clothes, Neckties and Gloves, see that they bear the Amalgamated Union Label

Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America
15 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK N.Y.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 356 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR

CIO STATIONERY

WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES

MILPRINT, Inc.

431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN

Over 750 CIO Employees

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
CLARENCE L. HOULE
CAD. 9085
424 Book Bldg.
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps and Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases, Bill Folds
231 So. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois
Phone Webster 4104

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 356 UNION MADE CIO ORGANIZING COMMITTEE
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

R. G. Davidson, USA Intl. Rep., Philadelphia, reports following election victories: Globe Hoist Co., Chestnut Hill, Pa., CIO 79, against 12; Geo. W. Swift, Jr., Inc., Trenton, N. J., CIO 71, against 22; American Brake Shoe Co., American Manganese Steel Division, New Castle, Del., CIO 74, against 39; Economy Engineering & Machine Works, Chester, Pa., cross check among 19 employees showed 13 for CIO; John A. Roebling's Sons Co., Trenton, N. J. (timekeepers and inspectors) CIO 54, against 14.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Alabama, reports: Dorsey Brothers Trailer plant, Elba, Ala., UAW-CIO 128, no union 50. CIO Field Rep. K. G. Ingle and UAW Rep. G. W. Guest and S. E. Chambers are responsible for this fine victory.

UAW Reg. Dir. Paul E. Miley announces: Thompson Grinder, Springfield, Ohio, (run-off election) CIO 103, Company Union 100. Intl. Reps. Austin Patton and Robert Smith were in charge. At Universal Tool Co., CIO received 90 per cent of the votes cast. Intl. Rep. George Wilkins was in charge of the drive.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: Chefford-Master Mfg. Co., Inc., Fairfield, Ill., (production & maintenance employees), UAW-CIO 387, against 297.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Bender, Maryland, advises: Seldner Co., Baltimore, ILWU-CIO 21, against 0. Intl. Rep. ILWU James Moore was in charge; Comfort Springs Co., CIO Furniture Workers 115, no union 4. UFWA Rep. Louis Gilbert was in charge.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., Carolinas, reports: Hans Rees Tannery, CIO Fur & Leather Workers 108, AFL 64, neither 4. Rep. Hardy Scott assisted by the CIO Regional Office are to be credited for this fine victory. Southern Co., CIO Stone & Allied Products Workers, 41, against 0. Rep. Sam H. Scott handled this campaign; U. S. Rubber Co., Charlotte, N. C., (cafeteria employees), CIO won by a substantial majority.

Helen Kingery, Dir. Pub. UOPWA-CIO, reports: International Harvester Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. (office & technical employees), CIO 558, against 278.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. John Majrillo, reports: John Deere Plow Co., Syracuse, N. Y., CIO Farm Equipment Workers 97, against 64.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, reports: Koppers Co., Wood Preserving plant, Montgomery, Ala., CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers 55, against 4. UGCCWA Field Rep. Harry Zebal was in charge.

Through Pres. Murray the CIO is asking that the Little Steel formula be changed and the workers granted a 20 per cent increase. This is essential if we are to protect the purchasing power of those employed and meet the cut-backs and unemployment ensuing. The purchasing power of the American workers must be maintained. Industry has lavish profits, larger than at any time in its history, even after the payments of all taxes. Take-home wages where plants are reducing the working week is going to be seriously impaired. Many are already having difficulty.

Pres. Murray called up Pres. Harry E. Truman to act—hoping he will see this thing clearly in the interest of the people of the nation and not in the interest of a selfish few who have gained tremendously by war profits while the workers have suffered through having wages frozen and soaring prices.

The UAW-CIO Executive Board is in session at this writing in Washington, D. C. Many UAW members are affected by these cut-backs. The USA-CIO Executive Board meets this week in Pittsburgh to discuss problems affecting the steel industry.

Those in the field must keep on untiringly organizing the unorganized so that we can meet the difficulties that will arise during the post-war period.

IWA Pact Covers 5,000 Plywood Men

A contract between plywood operators in the Douglas Fir industry in Oregon and Washington employing 5,000 workers, and unions affiliated with District 9, CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America has been renewed for five years. The union shop contract has been in force since 1940, with a record of no work stoppages since its inauguration, states Dist. 9 Pres. W. J. Baker.

Groups covered in the renewed contract represent about 60 per cent of the plywood operations in the Douglas Fir area.

White Collar Pay Increase Extended

White collar workers in the higher salary class can be granted automatic pay increases, the War Labor Board ruled last week in a decision involving some 6,000 salaried employes in 12 Westinghouse Electric plants.

The request to extend to the higher paid group the company's present practice of granting an automatic 10 per cent increase after six months' service to those making $250 or less a month was requested by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Industry members dissented. The union's request for automatic in-grade progression from minimum to maximum of the salary range was denied, with labor members dissenting.

8,000 Fur Workers Win Job Security

Job security and paid vacations are the high spots of an agreement covering some 10,000 New York fur workers made this week between the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union and the Associated Fur Coat & Trimming Manufacturers, Inc.

Ben Gold, the union's president, hailed the agreement as "the best we ever had." It brings to a successful conclusion a 15 months' struggle during which the employers defied a decision handed down by the War Labor Board and threatened a lock-out. Negotiations broke down repeatedly before agreement was finally reached.

The job security provision outlaws discharges except for just cause, which is to be determined by an impartial chairman. Previous agreements specified an open period in each year during which employers had the unrestricted right to discharge workers.

The vacation clause calls for one week's paid vacation, equivalent to the worker's regular earnings, for a season's employment, retroactive to 1944. The agreement also recognizes the WLB's order on equal division of work during 10 months of the year, continuation of restrictions on the number of employers engaged in productive work, and prohibition of contracting.

The agreement covers about 10,000 workers in 750 Association shops. Six hundred independent shops in addition have already signed agreements embodying these demands. In all, about 15,000 New York fur workers will be affected by the new agreement.

The pact which was unanimously approved by the fur workers at a big mass meeting this week, becomes effective upon ratification and will remain in force until February, 1948.

Union officials who headed the negotiations included Pres. Gold, Irving Potash, manager, and Joseph Winogradsky, asst. manager, Furriers Joint Council, and Jack Schneider, business agent.

Labor Bank Has New President

Election of Michael M. Nisselson as president of the Amalgamated Bank of New York to succeed Adolph Held, resigned, has been announced by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

This pioneer labor bank sponsored by the ACW, established 22 years ago, was dedicated "to the service and advancement of the labor movement."

Since its inception it has transmitted $56,000,000 to more than a million persons abroad depending for their lives on remittances from friends and relatives in this country.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.

20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Standard Oil Must Disband Company Union

The Standard Oil Co. of California has been ordered to disband the Standard Employes Assn., company union, and to cease unfair labor practices by the National Labor Relations Board.

This board decision was given last week after over two years of deliberation, hearings and appeals. The NLRB found that Standard Oil not only approved formation of the Employes Assn., but had financed and encouraged its operations.

During the court hearings, the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Committee has been actively organizing the Standard Oil plant at El Segundo, Calif., one of the nation's largest plants, in the face of stiff competition from both the company and its association.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

ART by MORT MESKIN
STORY by COLE GREENE

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Federal Action Needed Now

One of the most-used arguments against a Federal anti-polltax bill or a Federal bill to set up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission is one that runs this way—let the states do it. After all, there's a lot of opposition to a Federal bill from certain sections of the country. They can—and do—stall Federal action. But in the states, where these people don't control, we can do business.

The argument is a misleading one, as state legislatures in Illinois and Alabama showed this week. In Illinois the State Senate killed a bill for a state FEPC by pigeon-holing it in committee. In Alabama the lower house killed a polltax repeal bill by an overwhelming vote of 70 to 25.

Up in New York the fight for a state FEPC bill took months. Other states have had similar tough campaigns—in Pennsylvania, for example, the campaign for a state FEPC did not succeed in passing a bill with teeth in it.

Of course, the opposition to Federal legislation against discrimination and other feudal hangovers is difficult to overcome. Certain Senators—even men of otherwise progressive outlook on many issues—are openly promising to filibuster both the polltax repeal and the FEPC bill to death.

But Federal action can be won, and when it does come, it obviates the need for 48 separate campaigns. It also allows the CIO and other forces behind progressive legislation to mobilize on a national scale, bringing the full weight of organized opinion to bear.

HR 7, the polltax repeal bill, will likely be voted upon in the House this week. After that, it goes to the Senate—where the filibuster is threatened.

The FEPC bills are ready for action in both House and Senate. In the House, HR 2232 has a discharge petition out on the floor that needs around 118 signatures to become effective. The Senate Labor and Education Committee has reported out S 101 by a vote of 12 to 5.

Renew your campaign for Federal action now on both these measures. State action alone will not do the trick.

Bretton Woods Wins

BRETTON WOODS: the House Banking and Currency Committee has reported out the Bretton Woods world trade agreement bill (HR 2211) by a sizable majority of 22 to 3. An early House vote is expected. GOP opposition, though defeated in the Committee, can still be vocal on the floor. Keep after your Congressman for a quick yes vote without amendments—and start on the Senate, where the bill now goes to Banking and Currency.

Ask Social Security Study

Following is a brief statement by CIO Pres. Murray on new social security amendments introduced this week by Sens. Wagner and Murray and Rep. Dingell.

"The CIO welcomes the introduction of a revised Social Security bill by Senators Wagner and Murray and Congressman Dingell and urges its members to lend every support to early hearings before the Congressional committees.

"The American people want an adequate system of Social Security throughout the country covering the widest possible group of Americans, including agricultural and domestic workers and the self-employed. We want to see the aged properly cared for.

"We expect early action on emergency unemployment compensation. Persons temporarily or permanently disabled should be properly protected by insurance. Where the blind, the aged, or dependent children and others in need of public assistance are not sufficiently provided for, the Federal government should aid the states in meeting these needs.

"Finally we favor early action to meet America's health needs. Our war production proves that Americans can afford the Social Security our people want and need.

"In the months immediately ahead the CIO proposes to conduct a nationwide discussion among CIO unions in preparation for presenting testimony at the forthcoming hearings."

Two Major Gains

Prospects for postwar peace and security have brightened considerably with two major victories in the House over the past two weeks—the 14 to 11 vote on the reciprocal trade agreements act and the 22 to three vote on the Bretton Woods bill.

Powerful Republican opposition to both bills kept them in committee for many weeks. Continuing talk of amendments served to distract attention from the main job of getting the bills to an early and decisive vote. But finally even the GOP had to yield and the bills are now ready for debate and vote.

Both the Bretton Woods and the reciprocal trade bill received strong CIO support, particularly the Bretton Woods measure. The support was given because CIO members realize that their own future was closely bound up with the two agreements for expanding world trade.

Support also came from businessmen, farmers, housewives and professional workers. The same kind of united effort is still needed, despite the success in winning favorable committee action, before the two bills become law.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
NLRB appropriation.	Includes "Frey rider" that protects company unions; has $400,000 appropriation cut for NLRB; aimed to kill Wagner Act, wreck unions.	Frey rider and cut voted by House; now into Senate Appropriations Committee.	Wire your two Senators to restore cut, defeat all riders when the bill comes to Senate after House passage.
Reciprocal Trade. (HR 3240)	Renews government power to make world trade agreements by lowering tariff barriers here and abroad.	House vote expected by May 28. GOP opposed. Next to Senate.	Wire Senators to support without amendments.
Price Control. (SJ Res. 30)	Renews price control act.	GOP drive in Senate to wreck price control being sparked by Taft, Wherry, et al through Agriculture Committee report released this week.	Renew wires, letters to Senators urging renewal without amendments. Urge community action; prepare for "Fight Inflation Week."
FEPC (S 101; HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency.	S 101 reported out. House bill still bottled up in Rules Committee; Discharge Petition out; needs 218 signatures.	Urge Representative to sign Discharge Petition. Ask Senators to pass S 101.
Polltax repeal. (HR 7)	Gives 10 million white and Negro citizens the chance to vote.	Eight signatures needed on DPI as of May 25. Vote can come May 29.	Urge your Representative to work for a big majority vote.
Bretton Woods. (S 540, HR 2211)	Paves way for 5,000,000 postwar U. S. jobs in world trade.	Report still awaited from House Banking and Currency Committee.	Keep urging your Representative to vote for without amendments.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up-- Issues To Watch

SOCIAL SECURITY: Sens. Wagner (D., N. Y.), Murray (D., Mont.) and Rep. Dingell (D., Mich.) put their new amendments to the Social Security Act into the hopper this week.

The bill calls for a 10-year program of new hospitals, health centers, etc., grants to states for health services, maternal and child welfare, aid to the aged, blind, dependent children, etc.

Unemployment benefits are set at a minimum of $5 a week, maximum $30, for a top of 26 weeks. Prepaid personal health insurance and retirement disability and survivors' allowances at a minimum of $20 a month, maximum $120, are included.

About 15 million workers not covered now come under the new bill, including agricultural and domestic workers. Contributions are set at 4 per cent from workers and employers. Veterans will get credits for social security benefits of $160 for each month in service. Watch for further CIO analysis and reports on this bill, and for early hearings.

★ ★ ★

WAGNER ACT: Prompt CIO action stopped half of a four-way plan to wreck the Wagner Act in the vote on the House appropriation bill (HR 3199) last week, when two proposed riders excluding foremen and food workers from the act were shelved.

The House did vote for a $400,000 cut in funds for the NLRB and for the Frey rider. The bill now goes to the Senate Appropriations sub-committee headed by Sen. McKellar (D., Tenn.). Urge your Senators to restore the cut, end the Frey rider.

★ ★ ★

ANTI-UNION: There's a string of anti-union bills quietly lying around in Congress, where they can be picked up and pushed through to passage if a favorable opportunity shows itself.

Sen. O'Daniel (D., Tex.) has a proposed constitutional amendment that would outlaw union shop contracts, abolish overtime pay, allow employers to intimidate workers joining unions, make picketing a crime.

Rep. Miller (R., Nebr.) has one outlawing the union shop and the check-off. Sen. Bailey (D., N. C.) has another outlawing any contract providing benefits not paid directly to the employe (aimed at benefits other than straight wages in a contract). Rep. Colmer (D., Mass.) has another cancelling the effect of union contracts for workers returning from the armed forces—and so on.

The point is not that these Congressmen hope to get their particular bill through at any specified time, but that they do plan to create disunity, split up harmonious labor relations, and generally harass the unions. And they always hope that such bills can be slipped through at an opportune moment — as Rep. Hobbs (D., Ala.) almost slipped his anti-union bill a few weeks ago, only to be stopped by quick action on the part of Rep. De Lacy (D., Wash.).

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

The CIO NEWS

National Edition

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 23 — June 4, 1945

Truman Asks Aid For Unemployed In Reconversion

CONGRESS was asked this week by President Truman to close "a major gap in our reconversion program: the lack of adequate benefits for workers temporarily unemployed during the transition from war to peace."

Setting the necessary benefits at a top of not less than $25 a week for 26 weeks, Truman asked that this coverage be extended to include "Federal employes, maritime workers and other-workers not now insured" under the present Social Security Act.

He also pointed out that many state benefit scales are "inadequate to maintain purchasing power and to provide a reasonable measure of economic security for the workers" and urged that the proposed emergency benefits be financed entirely by the Federal government administered by the states.

"Most states fix a maximum of $15 to $18 a week," he said. "This is clearly inadequate to protect unemployed workers against ruthless cuts in living standards, particularly if they have families."

The length of time benefits are paid under present state laws is too short, he added, explaining that in most states they only last at best 16 weeks, "and many workers do not qualify even for this length of time."

Congress has already laid plans to help business, through the postwar tax refund scheme, farmers through extending support prices, and veterans through the benefits of the GI Bill of Rights, Truman pointed out, and has made plans for termination of war contracts without loss to industry.

"The transition from war to peace is part an parcel of the war and we cannot shirk our obligation to those temporarily unemployed through no fault of their own," he told Congress.

Providing for displaced workers now is also a necessary part of the production job to defeat Japan, he explained, saying: "To produce what is needed for the Pacific war we must appeal to the workers to accept and remain in jobs which they ultimately must lose when munitions production ceases. The government has thus incurred a moral obligation to these workers and to those who have stuck faithfully to their post in the past."

Only 30 million of some 45 million non-agricultural workers are today protected by unemployment benefits, Truman explained. Biggest group of the 13 million not covered that Truman discussed is the Federal workers in arsenals, navy yards, government offices and the like. After that come the maritime workers.

Truman also discussed the need for changes in the present Social Security Act in the conclusion of his message, pointing out that these changes will necessarily take a great deal of time before Congress passes on them.

In his final point, he expressed the hope that "the appropriate committees of Congress will undertake immediate consideration."

President Truman urged Congress to pass legislation raising unemployment compensation benefits, and taking steps to alleviate suffering during the transition to peace.

President Truman as Senator with Undersecretary of War Patterson and Harvey Kilgore, author of a bill embodying the same program, which was defeated last year by Congress. The bill was known as the Truman-Kilgore bill and also dealt with the human aspect of reconversion.

R. J. Thomas visited President Truman last week with a delegation of Auto Workers protesting firings in the auto industry. About 10,000 have been laid off at Willow Run, and many more thousands at other plants. He urged reconversion planning. Left to right leaving the White House are: President R. J. Thomas, UAW, CIO; Frank Winn, member of Thomas's staff; W. G. Grant, President of the Ford Local 600, and Matthew Hammond, President of Local 157. (See Page 8.)

New Fronts Against Labor

The plot to destroy the Wagner Act, first revealed in The CIO NEWS of May 14, opened on another Congressional front this week, with a drive to eliminate CIO and AFL unions from the food industry.

The new front was opened in Rep. Howard Smith's (D. Va.) special House Committee to smear U. S. government agencies. Immediate union targets are the CIO's Food, Tobacco and Allied Workers and the AFL's Teamsters, which have organized food workers on the west coast and elsewhere. The longer range target is the Wagner Act itself and all workers who benefit from it.

Leader for the employers is food lobbyist Ivan McDaniel, exposed in The CIO NEWS as the main force behind the proposed NLRB rider to exclude food workers. Chief front in the committee is Smith himself, with able help from Reps. Hoffman (R. Mich.) and Hartley (R. N. J.). Other employer agents include a man appropriately named Toothaker, and John J. Wineberry, who doubles as Committee counsel.

These gentlemen don't come out openly to say that they want Congress to up and pass an amendment exempting some three million food workers from the Wagner Act. They work more subtly than that, leaving the demand for an amendment to the Congressmen.

What they do is urge changes in NLRB procedure that would have the same effect. This tactic is aimed both at the committee, which will undoubtedly recommend amendments, and at the Board, which they hope will be intimidated by it. Incidentally, that hope has been substantiated in the past.

The War Labor Board is another target of this attack, as shown by Austin Anson of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Growers and Shippers, who admitted his group refused to obey a WLB directive issued months ago.

Main propaganda line of McDaniel, Anson and Co. is the pretense that food packing is "farming," not industry. Actually, it is run like any manufacturing industry, and comes under the same laws.

The attack at the moment is on the food workers. If unchecked here, it will quickly spread to all workers—as NLRB member Gerard Reilly inadvertently admitted. The admission came when Reilly agreed that seasonal workers should require a new NLRB certification at the end of each season, even if it only lasted six weeks. Then he added that he thought this should apply to all plants where high labor turnover exists—which would include practically every plant in process of reconversion from war to peace production.

The new drive against your right to join a union of your own choosing is the most serious since Pres. Murray stopped the last one in 1940.

Write, wire your Congressman and your Senator now to halt it.

Before It Begins

The best time to fight inflation—like the best time to fight fire—is before it begins.

We have a good chance to fight this all-consuming fire now by quick united action on Fight Inflation Week, set for June 10 to 17.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee has given a good, two-to-one report for SJ Res. 30, the Price Control Act Renewal Bill. The report asks the Senate to renew the Act for one year, without amendments.

After the Senate vote, the bill goes to the House Banking and Currency Committee, and then to the House floor for a vote.

All over the country workers, consumers, housewives, are uniting to tell their Congressmen they want no inflation in America, now or after the war is won.

Price Control is both a war and a postwar job that has to be done, and done right. After World War I, prices doubled from 1918 to just before the crash of 1920—because there was no control.

Living standards, buying power, jobs depend on keeping price control and enforcing it. Wives and families of fighting men must have price control to stay alive on their allotments.

Price Control Renewal without amendments is No. 1 on your legislative must list.

A cut in Price Control is a cut in wages, living standards, war job efficiency at home. It's a cut in morale and fighting efficiency for the men overseas.

Credit CIO on Trade

Credit for the successful House vote on reciprocal trade renewal is given to CIO witnesses who testified for it, both by Congressmen and by leading national magazines.

Testimony of Jacob S. Potofsky, who appeared for the CIO Latin-American Committee, CIO Secretary James B. Carey and Emil T. Rieve, president of the Textile Workers, was largely instrumental in winning over many doubtful votes, according to reports on the Hill.

Similar credit was given in "Time," which wrote up Potofsky's appearance before the Committee, and in "Newsweek," which carried a long story on Rieve as a witness.

Senate Lineups

Here are the tough or doubtful members of the Senate Finance Committee where hearings on reciprocal trade renewal start this week.

Hawkes (R. N. J.); Bailey (D. N. C.); Gerry (D. R. I.); Johnson D. Colo.); Vandenberg (R. Mich.); Taft (R. O.); Butler (R. Neb.); Millikin (D. Colo.); Brewster (R. Me.), and LaFollette (P. Wis.).

Keep Your Eye On Congress

A quick tabulation of bills now before Congress.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control. (SJ Res. 30)	Renews price control act expiring June 30.	Reported out by 10 to 5 in Senate Banking and Currency Committee. Taft (R. O.) and Thomas (D. Okla.) crippling amendments defeated. Vote early this week, then to House Banking and Currency.	If vote not taken, wire Senators to renew without changes. Urge Representative to work for early hearings and vote.
Polltax repeal. (HR 7)	Gives vote to 10 million U. S. Citizens.	Discharge Petition 1 signed; House vote can come June 11. Next to Senate Judiciary Committee.	Wire Representative to restore cut, eliminate Frey rider, quick action, no filibuster.
FEPC (S 101; HR 2232)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee permanent.	DP 12 needs 100 signatures in House. Funds also needed to carry on present FEPC.	Urge Representative to sign DP 12, support funds for present FEPC.
NLRB appropriation.	As passed by House, includes Frey rider, $400,000 cut in funds to enforce Wagner Act.	Now in Senate Appropriations sub-Committee, headed by Sen. McKellar (D. Tenn.)	Wire Senators to restore cut, eliminate Fred rider, oppose all riders.
Reciprocal Trade. (HR 3240)	Renews power to lower U. S. barriers in return for foreign concessions on tariffs; promotes postwar jobs.	Passed by House; next to Senate Finance Committee where tough GOP opposition is expected.	Urge Senators to support as passed by House.
Bretton Woods. (S 540, HR 2211)	Promotes postwar world trade by smoothing foreign exchange, rebuilding and developing world economy.	House vote expected this week; next to Senate Banking and Currency Committee.	Urge Senators to support.

(Note: Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up—Issues to Watch

RECONVERSION: President Truman has asked Congress for a bill providing emergency unemployment aid of $25 a week for 26 weeks. The Truman request includes Federal employes not now covered by social security.

Rep. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee before which the bill will come, has said he doesn't think it's needed. Mounting cutback layoffs prove Doughton wrong. Write your Representative to support early hearings.

* * *

"LIMITATIONS": Rep. Gwynne (R. Ia.) has proposed a six months "statute of limitations" on workers' claims under the Wage Hour Act, the Wagner Act and other protective laws.

This would mean that no worker or union could file a claim against an employer six months after the damage was done. Wage-Hour and similar acts were passed by Congress without any such limits, were intended to protect workers' rights and provide recourse without arbitrary time limits.

Hearings on the Gwynne proposal are tentatively set for June 11 in the House Judiciary Committee. Urge your Representative to oppose any such move as tending to nullify protective legislation.

* * *

SCHOOL LUNCHES: the House Agriculture Committee (Rep. Flanagan, D., Va., chairman) has a bill setting up a permanent school lunch program to cost $100,000,000 a year. Plan gives one hot, nourishing meal a day to children of war workers, others, thus lifting nutrition standards and helping war production.

The House Committee has a proposal to cut the funds in half, exclude child care centers which care for war workers' kids. Full Committee hearings are set for this week, next to Senate Agriculture Committee. Urge Senators and Representative to support full $100,000,000 program without discrimination.

* * *

EQUAL RIGHTS: this proposal, which threatens all labor protective laws, is coming up possibly this week in the House Judiciary Committee. Some Congressmen still claim to be in the dark on CIO's attitude toward it.

Write yours now to remind him that CIO is still opposed, will oppose anything that threatens labor's gains.

* * *

GUIDEPOSTS . . . taxes—watch for CIO program coming up soon . . . social security—CIO supports Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill, will issue detailed study . . . jobs—S 380, Senate bill to help provide jobs for all Americans, will have hearings spread over until fall before action is taken . . .

WASHINGTON GUIDE
Published by CIO Legislative Dept.
PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary
Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler Irving Richter

Murray Urges "Fight Inflation" Week June 10-17

SENATE REPUBLICANS are trying "to cut the heart out of price and rent control and to give a green light to profiteers," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in a letter to all affiliates urging active work in "Fight Inflation Week," set for June 10 to 17.

"Senator Taft is leader of this fight. He wants inflation. On May 10 he told the Senate that our purpose from here out should be —'the prevention only of unfair price inflation'," Murray wrote.

"He will demand, first, approval of his own amendment; second, approval of the packer amendment (by Thomas, Okla.); and, failing in these, a temporary renewal of the law for three or six months beyond June 30.

"All these efforts must be defeated. They all undermine price control. They all aim to give profiteers one last bite at wages and family savings before war ends. Extension of the law for only three or six months would create a field day for black markets, stimulate hoarding by middlemen, and freeze reconversion in its tracks — all in anticipation of higher prices when controls and penalties cease.

"To allow profit-seekers and speculators to be turned loose upon our people now would be a catastrophe. With our armed forces returning from Europe and going on to Tokyo, this Republican proposal to legalize inflation and profiteering is a libel upon the faith and decency of our nation.

"CIO must be heard from vegorously on this issue, and at once."

20% Wage Hike Asked by Steel Workers

IMMEDIATE revision of the national wage policy to permit an increase in basic wage rates of at least 20 per cent was demanded by the Executive Board of the United Steelworkers of America meeting in the Keystone Hotel, Pittsburgh, Saturday, May 26.

President Philip Murray was instructed to present this demand on behalf of the steelworkers of the nation to President Truman and Director of War Mobilization Vinson.

The Board also adopted a two point policy on the question of unionization of foremen and supervisory personnel. With regard to personnel having the right to hire and fire, the union pointed out that they are not eligible to membership in the United Steelworkers and no effort shall be made to organize them.

With regard to foremen and assistant foremen, gang leaders and others of this character, who are actually directly related in their work to the production and maintenance workers, "the union shall endeavor to negotiate with the several employers for the purpose of arriving at a mutually satisfactory agreement pursuant to which our existing agreements covering production and maintenance workers shall be extended to include such additional employes."

CIO Urges Ending Of Pay Freeze

CUTBACKS and cuts in overtime pay will endanger purchasing power unless wage freeze orders are relaxed, the CIO member of the War Labor Board said this week in a resolution presented to the WLB in Washington.

Two main executive orders—Nos. 9250 (the general freeze order) and 9238 (the "hold-the-line" order)—should be revised together with the WLB directives flowing from them, the CIO members said in the resolution presented by Van A. Bittner, assistant president of the United Steelworkers.

In addition, the WLB should be given authority to "make such wage adjustments as may be necessary and which shall not substantially affect the cost of living:

"a) to aid in the effective prosecution of the war; b) to eliminate substandard wages and c) to assure a continued high level of purchasing power for the maintenance of full production and full employment."

CIO Urges Retrial Of Seditionists

IMMEDIATE re-trial of the 28 indicted seditionists whose tactics hastened the death of Judge Eicher, first to try them, was urged on Attorney-General Biddle by CIO Pres. Murray this week.

"One of the most important problems confronting our nation today is that of making certain that both at home and abroad all vestiges of Naziism shall be firmly and permanently eliminated," Murray told Biddle.

"This objective can be met only if we make certain that those in our country who seek to establish a fascist underground at home shall be punished for their crimes.

"The anti-semitic activities of the defendants, their associations with the German Bund, and, in some cases, direct alliance with Hitlerite Germany, stamp them as persons who were determined to conspire against the well-being and the interests of this nation and its people."

The original 28 indicted fascists were put on trial last year, with O. John Rogge as prosecutor for the government.

Harold Roberg and his son Howard. "About my cottage. I only bought it last summer. I give the CIO and our late President credit for what I have now."

Union Victory Gardener

THERE were 18,000,000 victory gardens in the nation last year. This year the Department of Agriculture hopes to encourage even more. For this purpose they are holding Victory Garden rallies in four centers this week: at New York, Chicago, Minnesota and Omaha. The nation's victory gardeners produced about 40 per cent of the fresh vegetables last year.

Harold Roberg works at the General Register Corporation, a war plant on Long Island, and is a member of Local 1227 of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO). He lives at 35 Fairmont Avenue, Huntington, Long Island, New York. He takes his garden seriously, for three reasons: more production, keep prices down and recreation. He feels he's helping the farmers along in a small way, and he knows because he was raised on a farm. "You'd be surprised, when you're working back of a machine all day, how it helps you. Its something to look forward to, and much better recreation than throwing balls around a bowling alley," he said.

His backyard is about 80 feet deep. Some of it is still lawn with flowers for his wife, Eleanor. His son, Howard, and he take care of the Victory Garden. They "turned the ground as soon as the snow was off." He works in his garden all day Sunday. Weekdays he doesn't get home until nearly eight o'clock, but after eating he spends a "half hour looking at it, and picking around."

The net result will be: several bushels of string beans, carrots, cucumbers, and a couple of hundred pounds of potatoes. "There'll be plenty of tomatoes, too." He encourages others to do the same: "Its healthy to get dirt under your fingernails," he says.

He expects a yield of several bushels of stringbeans, carrots, and cucumbers. Tomatoes and potatoes he'll count in the hundreds of pounds from his backyard farm.

Prosperity Insurance

DUE to the failure of the last Congress to make any provision for the human element in reconversion, President Truman is now having to ask emergency action when the emergency is already upon us, and cutbacks and layoffs are threatening the most serious distress for millions of war workers.

Congress has made no provision for the relief of these workers, although it has protected profit interests by allowing business to carry back postwar losses against profits tax payments, and has granted agriculture support prices to protect it against a postwar collapse of income.

Existing unemployment insurance is not only completely inadequate for this emergency, but it also fails to cover the millions of federal employes, maritime workers and agricultural and domestic employes.

The CIO will therefore give its hearty support to Truman's proposal for supplementary federal unemployment benefits up to $25 a week for workers with dependents, for extension of the benefit period to 26 weeks, and for coverage for federal employes, maritime workers and other workers not now insured.

This still does not go far enough, however, since no provision of transportation costs is suggested for war workers who will have to be shifted long distances to new civilian jobs.

Immediate action by Congress is necessary not only to relieve the sharpest human distress but also to protect the whole country against a disastrous decline in consumer purchasing power.

As Truman aptly puts it, "adequate unemployment insurance is an indispensable form of prosperity insurance."

Fight Inflation Week

THE CIO has joined with many other cititizens' organizations in making the week of June 10-17 a "Fight Inflation Week."

It may seem at first a curious paradox that at the very time when CIO has to fight a serious deflationary trend, so far as wages are concerned, it has also to join the fight against the gravest danger of inflation in prices.

But actually these two fights are one. They are a continuation of CIO's long campaign for a stable and balanced economy to win the war and win the peace.

This has meant campaigning to raise wages to the level of increased living costs, and at the same time campaigning for the strictest price control to keep down living costs and prevent inflation.

At the present time, reconversion cutbacks, layoffs, downgrading, etc., are threatening the most serious losses in workers' take-home pay. So CIO is having to demand a 20% increase in basic wage rates to maintain purchasing power and to restore the pre-war relationships between wages, prices and productivity.

But at the same time, with the Price Control Act due to expire on June 30, profiteers are out to take the lid off prices and to permit such inflation as would make it impossible for wages to catch up with living costs.

The CIO therefore joins with all other public-spirited groups in declaring that there must be no "negotiated peace" with inflation, no compromise with black markets, no crippling of OPA through lack of funds, and no inflationary amendments to the Price Control Act.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

DO you bounce or do you just fall down and go boom?

If you don't have springs or elastic in your composition, to make you bounce up when you fall, it may go hard with you.

For there are a lot of folks with a lot of influence who are counting on our "natural resilience" (ability to bounce) to make everything all right in the long run; meanwhile, in the short run, they don't mind if we come some awful croppers.

★ ★ ★

According to Chairman Krug of the WPB, some 6,600,000 jobs are "most likely to be affected by cutbacks," and some 4,800,000 persons will "no longer be required for war activities" in the next six months.

But meanwhile many of these workers will find jobs in civilian production, so he figures the number of jobless will jump to 1,900,000 in June, July and August and should decline again to 1,300,000 at the end of six months.

On the basis of these predictions, the WPB is proposing to lift all possible production controls affecting civilian production, and to trust to luck—or "natural resilience"—that everything will come out all right in the end.

★ ★ ★

Krug claims that production regulations "automatically put ceilings on initiative, imagination and resourcefulness," though they don't seem to have checked these qualities during the war, judging from our miraculous production records.

The CIO fears that the "open-ending" favored by Krug will lead to a scramble by wealthy speculators to obtain material for high-priced luxury goods, at the expense of essential civilian goods at controlled prices.

It calls, instead, for continued programming of production to maintain full employment and the maximum production of essential civilian goods.

It holds, as Philip Murray said, that "the organization of production for housing, consumers' durable goods, transportation, food and clothing is as essential to our welfare as the organization of production of planes, torpedoes and cannons."

★ ★ ★

As to the WPB estimates above quoted, we don't know how they were arrived at, nor how Krug can be so positive in his predictions. Doubtless other estimates will predict far greater unemployment.

But even accepting these estimates, the millions mentioned are not just numerals for statisticians to figure with, nor even rubber balls that bounce.

They are flesh-and-blood human beings, who must live "in the short run," and to whom cutbacks and layoffs mean the loss of their savings, less food for their families and every kind of humiliation and frustration.

Furthermore, these figures do not take into account loss of earnings through shorter hours, downgrading, etc., for millions of others who may not become entirely jobless.

★ ★ ★

Krug, of course, does not represent the extremists who seek to remove all controls, on prices and social welfare as well as on production, with the idea that after we "faw down," a "boom" will somehow follow.

There are powerful elements in Congress and industry who want to lift the lid on everything, or rather to remove all supports for a balanced and expanding economy.

They are opposing the continuance of price control and seeking to cripple OPA. While they ask unrestricted opportunities for profiteers in high-priced production, they also oppose higher wages, expanded social security and emergency measures to relieve human distress.

★ ★ ★

Running directly counter to these reversions to Hooverism are the labor and administration demands for continued anti-inflation controls; Truman's call for unemployment benefits up to $25 a week for laid-off war workers; and the newly-introduced Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill for greatly expanded social security.

Even more important, as an immediate measure to cushion the distresses of reconversion and to lay the basis for postwar prosperity, is CIO's program for a new wage policy, including a 20 per cent increase in basic wage rates and a minimum for all of at least 65 cents an hour.

Aside from actual layoffs, which must be relieved by emergency benefits, the greatest distress threatening the largest number is from reduced take-home pay as war orders drop off; and the greatest need for an expanding economy is steady and increasing mass purchasing power.

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-Presidents
Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas
Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director
Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925
Vol. 8 June 4, 1945 No. 23

First Test On World Trade

THE House last week voted to renew the reciprocal trade agreement act over solid Republican opposition. The act is a necessity to expanded world trade after the war and to postwar jobs for the U. S., and the first test of Congress on cooperation with the rest of the world for postwar prosperity.

The key vote, given below, was on a motion by Rep. Knutson of Minnesota, leader of the Republican opposition to the bill, to recommit it—which would have meant killing it. This was defeated by 212 to 181. Only seven Republicans voted on the side of postwar jobs and world trade on this motion. After the motion to recommit was lost, the House voted 239 to 153 to pass the bill. This time 33 Republicans voted for the bill, which they could afford to do since they had demonstrated their party loyalty in the earlier and more important vote.

(Note: "R" means that the Congressman voted against the motion to recommit, which was the right way to vote; "W" means that he voted for it, which was a wrong vote. "NV" means not voting.)

ALABAMA

Boykin (D)	NV
Grant (D)	NV
Andrews	R
Hobbs (D)	R
Rains (D)	R
Jarman (D)	R
Manasco (D)	R
Sparkman (D)	R
Patrick (D)	R

ARIZONA

Harless (D)	R
Murdock (D)	R

ARKANSAS

Gathings (D)	R
Mills (D)	R
Trimble (D)	R
Cravens (D)	R
Hays (D)	R
Norrell (D)	R
Harris, Oren (D)	R

CALIFORNIA

Lea (D)	W
Engle (D)	R
Johnson, Leroy (R)	W
Havenner (D)	R
Welch (R)	NV
Miller (D)	R
Tolan (D)	R
Anderson (R)	W
Gearhart (R)	W
Elliott (D)	W
Outland (D)	R
Voorhis (D)	R
Healy (D)	NV
Douglas (D)	R
McDonough (R)	W
Patterson (D)	R
King (D)	R
Doyle (D)	R
Holifield (D)	R
Hinshaw (R)	W
Sheppard (D)	R
Phillips (R)	W
Izac (D)	R

COLORADO

Gillespie (R)	W
Hill (R)	W
Chenoweth (R)	W
Rockwell (R)	W

CONNECTICUT

Ryter (D)	R
Koppleman (D)	R
Woodhouse (D)	R
Geelan (D)	R
Luce (R)	W
Talbot (R)	W

DELAWARE

Traynor (D)	NV

FLORIDA

Peterson, J. Hardin (D)	W
Price (D)	R
Sikes (D)	W
Cannon, Pat (D)	W
Hendricks (D)	R
Rogers (D)	R

GEORGIA

Peterson, Hugh (D)	R
Cox (D)	R
Pace (D)	R
Camp (D)	R
Ramspeck (D)	R
Vinson (D)	R
Tarver (D)	R
Gibson (D)	R
Wood (D)	R
Brown (D)	R

IDAHO

White (D)	R
Dworshak (R)	W

ILLINOIS

Douglas (D)	R
Dawson (D)	R
Rowan (D)	R
Kelly (D)	R
Gorski (D)	R
Sabath (D)	R
O'Brien (D)	R
Link (D)	R
Gordon (D)	R
Resa (D)	R
Church (R)	W
Reed, Chauncey W. (R)	W
Mason (R)	W
Allen (R)	W
Johnson, Anton J. (R)	W
Chiperfield (R)	W
Dirksen (R)	W
Arends (R)	W
Sumner (R)	W
McMillen (R)	W
Simpson, Sid (R)	W
Howell (R)	W
Price (D)	R
Vursell (R)	W
Heidinger (R)	NV
Bishop (R)	W

INDIANA

Madden (D)	R
Halleck (R)	W
Grant (R)	W
Gillie (R)	W
Harness (R)	W
Johnson, Noble J. (R)	W
Landis (R)	W
LaFollette (R)	R
Wilson (R)	NV
Springer (R)	W
Ludlow (D)	R

IOWA

Martin, Thomas E. (R)	W
Talle (R)	W
Gwynne (R)	W
LeCompte (R)	W
Cunningham (R)	W
Dolliver (R)	W
Jensen (R)	W
Hoeven (R)	W

KANSAS

Cole (R)	W
Scrivner (R)	W
Winter (R)	W
Rees (R)	W
Hope (R)	W
Carlson (R)	W

KENTUCKY

Gregory (D)	R
Clements (D)	R
O'Neal (D)	R
Chelf (D)	R
Spence (D)	R
Chapman (D)	R
May (D)	R
Bates (D)	R
Robsion (R)	W

LOUISIANA

Hebert (D)	R
Maloney (D)	W
Domengeaux (D)	R
Brooks (D)	R
McKenzie (D)	R
Morrison (D)	R
Larcade (D)	R
Allen (D)	R

MAINE

Hale (R)	W
Smith, Margaret Chase (R)	W
Fellows (R)	W

MARYLAND

Roe (D)	R
Baldwin (D)	R
D'Alesandro (D)	R
Fallon (D)	R
Sasscer (D)	R
Beall (R)	W

MASSACHUSETTS

Heselton (R)	W
Clason (R)	W
Philbin (D)	W
Holmes, Pehr G. (R)	W
Rogers, Edith Nourse (R)	W
Bates (R)	W
Lane (D)	W
Goodwin (R)	W
Gifford (R)	W
Herter (R)	W
Curley (D)	R
McCormack (D)	R
Wigglesworth (R)	W
Martin, Joseph W. (R)	W

MICHIGAN

Sadowski (D)	R
Michener (R)	W
Shafer (R)	W
Hoffman (R)	NV
Jonkman (R)	W
Blackney (R)	W
Wolcott (R)	W
Crawford (R)	W
Engel (R)	W
Woodruff (R)	W
Bradley (R)	NV
Hook (D)	NV
O'Brien (D)	R
Rabaut (D)	NV
Dingell (D)	R
Lesinski (D)	R
Dondero (R)	W

MINNESOTA

Andresen, August H. (R)	W
O'Hara (R)	W
Gallagher (D)	R
Starkey (D)	R
Judd (R)	R
Knutson (R)	W
Anderson (R)	W
Pittenger (R)	W
Hagen (R)	W

MISSISSIPPI

Rankin (D)	R
Whitten (D)	R
Whittington (D)	R
Abernethy (D)	R
Winstead (D)	R
Colmer (D)	R
McGehee (D)	R

MISSOURI

Arnold (R)	W
Schwabe (R)	W
Cole, William C. (R)	W
Bell (D)	R
Slaughter (D)	NV
Bennett (R)	W
Short (R)	W
Carnahan (D)	R
Cannon, Clarence (D)	R
Zimmerman (D)	R
Sullivan (D)	R
Ploeser (R)	W
Cochran (D)	R

MONTANA

Mansfield, Mike (D)	R

NEBRASKA

Curtis (R)	W
Buffett (R)	W
Stefan (R)	NV
Miller, A. L. (R)	W

NEVADA

Bunker (D)	NV

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Merrow (R)	R
Adams (R)	W

NEW JERSEY

Wolverton (R)	W
Hand (R)	W
Auchincloss (R)	W
Powers (R)	W
Eaton (R)	NV
Case (R)	W
Thomas, J. Parnell (R)	W
Canfield (R)	W
Towe (R)	W
Hartley (R)	W
Sundstrom (R)	W
Kean (R)	W
Norton (D)	R
Hart (D)	R

NEW MEXICO

Anderson, Clinton B. (D)	R
Fernandez (D)	R

NEW YORK

Sharp (R)	W
Hall, Edwin (R)	W
Latham (R)	W
Barry (D)	R
Roe (D)	NV
Delaney, James (D)	R
Delaney, John, (D)	R
Pfeifer (D)	R
Keogh (D)	R
Somers (D)	R
Heffernan (D)	R
Rooney (D)	R
O'Toole (D)	R
Rayfiel (D)	R
Celler (D)	R
Buck (R)	W
Baldwin (R)	R
Marcantonio (ALP)	R
Dickstein (D)	R
Bloom (D)	NV
Torrens (D)	R
Powell (D)	NV
Lynch (D)	R
Rabin (D)	R
Buckley (D)	R
Quinn (D)	R
Gwinn (R)	W
Gamble (R)	W
Bennet (D)	R
LeFevre (R)	W
Kearney (R)	W
Byrne (D)	R
Taylor (R)	W
Kilburn (R)	W
Fuller (R)	W
Hancock (R)	W
Hall, Leonard (R)	NV
Taber (R)	W
Cole, W. Sterling (R)	W
Rogers (D)	R
Wadsworth (R)	NV
Andrews (R)	W
Elsaesser (R)	W
Butler (R)	W
Reed, Daniel A. (R)	W

NORTH CAROLINA

Bonner (D)	R
Kerr (D)	R
Barden (D)	R
Cooley (D)	NV
Folger (D)	R
Durham (D)	R
Clark (D)	R
Burgin (D)	R
Doughton (D)	R
Erwin (D)	R
Bulwinkle (D)	R
Weaver (D)	R

NORTH DAKOTA

Lemke (R)	W
Robertson (R)	W

OHIO

Bender (R)	NV
Elston (R)	W
Hess (R)	NV
Gardner (D)	R
Jones (R)	W
Clevenger (R)	W
McCowen (R)	W
Brown (R)	NV
Smith, Frederick (R)	W
Ramey (R)	W
Jenkins (R)	W
Brehm (R)	W
Vorys (R)	W
Weichel (R)	W
Huber (D)	R
Griffiths (R)	W
Thom (D)	R
McGregor (R)	W
Lewis (R)	W
Kirwin (D)	R
Feighan (D)	R
Crosser (D)	R
Bolton (R)	R

OKLAHOMA

Schwabe (R)	W
Stigler (D)	NV
Stewart (D)	NV
Boren (D)	NV
Monroney (D)	R
Johnson (D)	NV
Wickersham (D)	R
Rizley (R)	W

OREGON

Mott (R)	W
Stockman (R)	W
Angell (R)	W
Ellsworth (R)	W

PENNSYLVANIA

Barrett (D)	R
Granahan (D)	R
Bradley (D)	NV
Sheridan (D)	R
Green (D)	R
McGlinchey (D)	R
Wolfenden (R)	W
Gerlach (R)	W
Kinzer (R)	W
Murphy (D)	R
Flood (D)	R
Fenton (R)	W
Hoch (D)	R
Gillette (R)	W
Rich (R)	W
McConnell (R)	W
Simpson, Richard M. (R)	W
Kunkel (R)	W
Gavin (R)	W
Walter (D)	R
Gross (R)	W
Brumbaugh (R)	W
Snyder (D)	R
Morgan (D)	R
Graham (R)	NV
Tibbott (R)	W
Kelley (D)	R
Rodgers (R)	W
Campbell (R)	W
Corbett (R)	R
Fulton (R)	R
Eberharter (D)	R
Weiss (D)	R

RHODE ISLAND

Forand (D)	R
Fogarty (D)	W

SOUTH CAROLINA

Rivers (D)	R
Riley (D)	R
Hare (D)	R
Bryson (D)	R
Richards (D)	R
McMillan (D)	R

SOUTH DAKOTA

Mundt (R)	W
Case (R)	W

TENNESSEE

Reece (R)	NV
Jennings (R)	W
Kefauver (D)	R
Gore (D)	R
Earthman (D)	NV
Priest (D)	R
Courtney (D)	R
Murray (D)	R
Cooper (D)	R
Davis (D)	R

TEXAS

Patman (D)	R
Combs (D)	R
Beckworth (D)	R
Rayburn (D)	R
Sumners (D)	NV
Johnson, Luther (D)	R
Pickett (D)	R
Thomas, Albert (D)	R
Mansfield, Joseph J. (D)	R
Johnson, Lyndon B. (D)	NV
Poage (D)	R
Lanham (D)	R
Gossett (D)	R
Lyle (D)	R
West (D)	W
Thomason (D)	R
Russell (D)	R
Worley (D)	NV
Mahon (D)	R
Kilday (D)	W
Fisher (D)	NV

UTAH

Granger (D)	W
Robinson (D)	R

VERMONT

Plumley (R)	W

VIRGINIA

Bland (D)	R
Daughton (D)	R
Satterfield (D)	NV
Drewry (D)	R
Burch (D)	R
Woodrum (D)	R
Robertson (D)	R
Smith, Howard (D)	R
Flannagan (D)	R

WASHINGTON

DeLacey (D)	R
Jackson (D)	R
Savage (D)	NV
Holmes, Hal (R)	W
Horan (R)	W
Coffee (D)	R

WEST VIRGINIA

Neely (D)	R
Randolph (D)	W
Bailey (D)	R
Ellis (R)	W
Kee (D)	R
Hedrick (D)	R

WISCONSIN

Smith, Lawrence (R)	W
Henry (R)	W
Stevenson (R)	W
Wasielewski (D)	NV
Biemiller (D)	R
Keefe (R)	W
Murray (R)	W
Byrnes (R)	W
Hull (Prog)	W
O'Konski (R)	NV

WYOMING

Barrett (R)	W

Int'l Visits Urged by Murray

VISITS among world trade unionists will go a long way to help solve "many immediate and severe problems relating to reconversion and reconstruction" in the United Nations, Pres. Murray wrote in proposing an exchange of union delegations to the leaders of world labor's "Big Three" this week.

Writing to Citrine of the British TUC, Saillant of the French Confederation Generale du Travail and Kuznetsov of the Soviet All Union Council, Murray said:

"With the decisive defeat of the Nazi military forces in Europe, many immediate and severe problems arise relating to reconversion and reconstruction.

"If we are to enjoy a peaceful and prosperous postwar, the contribution of organized labor toward the solution of these new problems must equal that which organized labor made during the war. In this connection, I believe it would be of invaluable assistance to the leaders and members of the CIO to have the opportunity of meeting with the representatives of your organization for the purpose of exchanging views and information.

"I therefore take this opportunity of suggesting that, at an early date and subject to your convenience, our respective organizations exchange delegations. I am certain that in this manner our organizations will be materially assisted in developing a common program for the solution of our mutual problems.

"I also wish to express to you at this time my deep gratification at the very successful outcome of the conference of the Administrative Committee in Oakland, California, and am looking forward to an equally successful convention of the World Trade Conference in Paris in September.

Women Take Lead in Fight On Inflation

CIO AUXILIARIES are already working on "Fight Inflation Week" even though the official beginning is set for June 10 as an intensified drive for renewal of the price control act without amendments.

In Camden, N. J., they've persuaded Mayor Brunner to make the week official and to call a meeting to plan its activities. This job was done by Marine and Shipbuilding Local 1 Auxiliary.

UAW Auxiliary Pres. Dorothy Keene has sent an urgent letter on the week to all auxiliaries, signed by herself and Sec. Treas. Catherine Gelles. The Michigan Auxiliary Council is getting thousands of signatures on a petition to their Congressmen. The Federal Workers Auxiliary in Philadelphia, working with the PAC, is sending a delegation to Washington. June 9, the CIO Auxiliaries Executive Board will meet in Washington and call on key Congressmen and Senators on the subject.

1.—When the American workers were called upon to produce for the Arsenal of Democracy, they set new highs, in productivity. In 1944 there were 72,900,000 Social Security accounts, the highest on record, and still this figure did not give the full extent of the output, because there were vast numbers of working people, farmers and the self-employed contributing to the Arsenal who were not covered by the Act.

2.—With reconversion there will be signs such as these: "No Help Wanted." The first Social Security Act was born in the midst of the great depression. There were too many such signs, and there was no unemployment compensation. Today reconversion plans are proceeding too slowly. But the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill charts a program for a better future by helping to meet the problems of postwar reconversion and rehabilitation, and by laying a floor plan for tomorrow's security.

5.—The present Social Security Act gives aid to the blind. Some 72,000 were helped in 1944.

6.—The Social Security Act aids widows and dependent children. You pay for this monthly out of your pay.

7.—The new Social Security Bill reduces the age of eligibility for women to receive benefits to 60 years.

8.—It provides benefits to a disabled husband or widower 65 and over; and to higher lump sum death pay.

THE NEW SOCIAL

THE WAGNER-Murray-Dingell Bill is not something for the far-off future, but the plan for tomorrow. With reconversion a reality, the passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill becomes pressing and immediate.

Already President Truman has taken cognizance of the problems of reconversion, and the extent of unemployment during the passage from war to peace by urging increased unemployment compensation benefits. (See pages 1 and 4.)

The Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill, introduced last week in the Senate by Senator Robert Wagner of New York as S 1060 "for himself and Senator Murray of Montana" and by Congressman John Dingell in the House, is "to provide for the national security, health and public welfare." This bill also increases the amount of unemployment compensation benefits, in both money and time. This bill will take a lot of fighting for. It was introduced in June 1943, but no hearings were held on it. Today its timeliness is without question. There should be popular demands for hearings, and passage of the new Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill.

The following are some of the principal changes in the social security program provided in the bill:

1.—Creates a national s consisting of: a) old age vors insurance; extended lump sum death benefits;
temporary disability insur fits; c) prepaid personal he

2.—Provides for a perm of public employment offic
by the Social Security Bo

3.—Extends and libera
the federal old age and su corporating some 15,000,0 covered.

4.—Establishes a new and temporary disability i administered by the Socia insurance benefits for wo up to $30 a week, and inc maternity leave for marr

5.—Provides for a pr service insurance for all old age and survivors ins dependents. The Surgeon G the technical and professio gram. Each insured per to services of a physician

3.—When there is no steady job, there is no steady pay envelope. The New Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill establishes new highs in weekly benefits with sums up to $30 weekly for persons with dependents. This will help to meet the pressing problem of providing for the displaced persons during reconversion.

4.—This young Negro woman worker is applying for a Social Security card at an employment office. The New Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill provides for a permanent national system of public employment offices to be administered by the Social Security Board. It transfers the present employment service six months after the end of the war from the War Manpower Commission to the new U. S. Employment Service created by the bill. This is planned for training, rehabilitation and channeling of manpower where it is needed, to fight against depressed areas after reconversion.

SECURITY BILL

social insurance system retirement and survidisability insurance;
b) unemployment and ance; maternity bene-alth service insurance.

anent national system
es to be administered ard.

lizes the provisions of urvivors insurance, in-
000 persons not now

Federal unemployment nsurance system to be l Security Board with rkers with dependents cludes twelve weeks of ed women workers.

epaid personal health persons covered under surance and for their General will administer
nal aspects of the pro-on would be entitled and could choose any doctor he wished from among those in the community who had voluntarily agreed to go into the system.

6.—Protects and extends the social security rights of all persons in the armed forces by giving them "wage credits" of $160 per month for the entire period of their military service, without deductions from their pay.

7.—Establishes equal contribution rates for employes and employers—of 4% on all wages received or paid, up to the first $3600 a year.

8.—Provides for a federal social security advisory council representing employers, employes and the general public, to formulate policies of legislation and administration and to investigate and make recommendations on coverage, adequacy of benefits and financing.

9.—Provides for a comprehensive public assistance program of Federal grants to States for assistance to needy persons.

10.—Provides for a ten-year program for the construction and improvement of hospitals and health centers to be administered by the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service.

9.—The new bill covers about fifteen million persons not now covered, including farmers and self-employed.

10.—The bill provides for a ten-year program of hospital construction and for more health centers.

11.—The benefits would come in the mail as a right and not as charity, worker and employer paying 4%.

12.—The employes of State and local government may be covered under the new Act, voluntarily.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Ralph W. Tillotson, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Erie, Pa., reports: Struthers-Wells Corp., Perry Forge & Shell Division, Titusville, Pa., USA-CIO 247, no union 15.

CIO Reg. Dir., Geo. Craig, Philadelphia, reports: S. Austin Bicking Paper Mfg. Co., Downingtown, Pa., CIO Paper Workers Organizing Committee 74, AFL 29. PWOC Field Rep. William Sheer was in charge. Congratulations to all participating. Cochrane Corp., Philadelphia, UERMWA-CIO 117, against 35. General Electric Co., Philadelphia and Darby, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 667, against 107.

A. R. Hardesty, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Dallas, Tex., advises: Padgitt Brothers Co., CIO 26, against 10. CIO Reps. L. J. Metker and A. M. Carter conducted this campaign.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Regional Dir., Birmingham, reports: Parts Division of General Motors Corp., Birmingham, UAW-CIO 25, no union 0. CIO Field Rep. Cherry and UAW Rep. George Guest are to be credited for this victory. Farmers and Ginners Cotton Oil Mill, Birmingham, CIO Packinghouse Workers 24, no union 12. UPWA Rep. Ada Lee Howell deserves credit for this victory.

Reid Robinson, president, MMSW-CIO, announces following election victories: American Smelting & Refining Co., Perth Amboy, N. J., CIO 59, no union 11; Southern Cotton Oil, Birmingham, Ala., CIO 53, no union 1; Bloomfield Manufacturing Co., Chicago, CIO 94, against 33, and Eagle Picher Insulation Co., Joplin, Mo., CIO 137, against 42.

United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers report: National Gypsum Co., National City, Mich., CIO 107, no union 2.

Robert C. Edwards, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Huntington, W. Va., reports: Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., UERMWA-CIO 199, no union 15. UE Field Rep. Mrs. June Callicoat was in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports: Magnolia Pipe Line, Ft. Worth, Tex., CIO 468, Independent 340.

Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers announce: Shields, Inc., Attleboro, Mass., CIO 48, against 30. Intl. Reps. John Galluccio and Alfred Bregnard directed the drive.

The writer had the opportunity of addressing several United Steelworkers' local unions, members and families at a meeting held in Reading, Pa., on Saturday, May 26. The meeting was preceded by a banquet and concluded with a floor show. The hall was packed to capacity and hundreds had to be refused admission. Board Member Medrick and Representative Conrad, local presidents and staff are to be complimented on the fine affair.

Reading really has been put on the map the last few years from an organizational point of view. The USA-CIO leads!

Two employers having contracts with the USA-CIO also addressed this meeting and are in accord with the charter adopted by CIO President Philip Murray, AFL President Wm. Green and Chamber of Commerce Pres. Eric Johnston. It was a great day for the United Steelworkers.

The next day I attended an organizing conference of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee for the employes of the Penn Power Co., where the company union has been in existence for some time but is now slipping. Local representatives and organizers at this meeting expressed determination to conduct this organizing campaign to a successful conclusion as the workers want the CIO. Things are shaping up in the utility field and we can look for very satisfactory results in the near future.

On June 2, I will address the Highlander Folk School in Monteagle, Tenn. The CIO has been in charge of the program at the school and from all reports are having splendid success. The workers from our different unions and shops are selected by the unions to attend the sessions.

SIGN ANTI-DISCRIMINATION PACT: The CIO Anti-Discrimination Committee of Philadelphia and Delaware County this week signed an agreement with the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, pledging to take action to correct any unfair job practices because of race, creed, color or national origin involving a CIO local. Seated, left to right, are: James Fleming, FEPC regional director; Norma Becker, CIO Anti-Discrimination Committee. Standing: Peter J. Murphy, Pres., Delaware County CIO Council; Samuel R. Risk, FEPC examiner; and James H. Jones, chairman, and Robert Parker, Sec., CIO Anti-Discrimination Committee.

Thomas Confers With President and Kaiser On Cut-Back Crisis

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers left Detroit for the West Coast this week to confer with Shipbuilder Henry Kaiser and his staff on reconversion and postwar employment plans.

His meeting with Kaiser follows a conference he had last week with Pres. Harry Truman at which he discussed the production cutbacks in the Detroit area.

"I told the President of our support of the full employment program and he seemed very much interested," Thomas said at a press conference after the interview. "We got more satisfaction from him than we have had from any other Federal official.

"Pres. Truman told us he had certain plans of his own now going and he asked me to give him more details about our problems. I am going to submit him a brief on the unemployment picture, set out our opposition to the Little Steel formula and show how it is creating future unemployment."

Thomas said the brief will also ask the President to rescind Executive Order 9240, prohibiting double time pay except when seven days are worked, and urged that manpower controls be lifted in Detroit.

Expressing the belief that a monopoly in Detroit is preventing auto industry expansion, Thomas said: "I know there are people who want to build cars, but the small parts boys say they can't supply them. I believe the Attorney General should investigate this situation immediately, and I shall so inform Pres. Truman."

The UAW President was accompanied on his West Coast trip by Alex Taub, automotive engineer, formerly associated with Vauxhall, Ltd., England, General Motors Corp.; Otis Winn, Detroit architect, and William G. Nicholas, director of the UAW Housing Department.

"Mr. Kaiser, who has shown himself to be one of the most progessive and successful wartime production men, is interested in automobile production and mass production of housing as immediate and postwar projects," Thomas said before leaving for the West Coast.

"The UAW-CIO is concerned with providing maximum employment in the reconversion and postwar period for automobile and aircraft workers. We are interested in making every possible effort to utilize tremendous wartime plants and facilities which are now on curtailed production or being shut down."

Because of these mutual interests, he said, he was meeting with Kaiser to see what can be worked out. "It is obvious that management at present in the automobile and aircraft industries has no plans to provide full employment for its present workers.

"The UAW-CIO is therefore canvassing the field thoroughly and will offer every possible cooperation to induce new interests to enter the industry."

Carey Calls For Ending Of Prejudice

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey in a Memorial Day statement called for rededication to principles of human rights so that mankind would free itself from discrimination such as was practiced by the fascists. Carey is also chairman of the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination. His statement follows:

"Memorial Day this year holds a deeper significance than ever before as we honor those who have given their lives on the field of battle in defense of principles we hold to be self-evident. Life and liberty, and their legitimate use to better the conditions of all men in mind, body and property, constitute these principles.

"The universal wars in which we have been engaged stem in their entirety from disregard of these principles. We, together with the other free peoples of the world, have waged one of these wars to victory in Europe; we and our loyal allies are determined to carry the war with Japan to a similar victorious conclusion. Our fight is for the innate rights of human beings.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations, from its inception, has led and will continue to lead the battle for human rights. This Memorial Day of 1945, dedicated to those who have died so that others yet unborn might be free, should be a special reminder to CIO members that discrimination and fascism alike mean human degradation."

Big Union Drive On:

Pay Low, Profit High at Wards

The drive to organize the 80,000 employes of Montgomery Ward, is well under way announces Irving Abramson, new national director of the Montgomery-Ward Organizing Committee. New headquarters have been opened in New York City at 100 West 42nd St.

"The CIO supports morally and financially the efforts of the United Retail Wholesale & Department Store Employes to secure the benefits of collective bargaining to the employes of Montgomery Ward." Pres. Philip Murray has stated.

Montgomery Ward's empire is composed of 646 department stores throughout the nation, nine mail order houses, five warehouses, and 209 catalog offices. At present the nerve center of the mail order and warehouses is in Chicago which is organized in Local 20 of the URWDSEA, Abramson said.

In addition to the Chicago store and warehouse, the other three largest stores at Dearborn, Royal Oak, and Detroit, Mich., are organized. The National Labor Relations Board has certified Local 40 as bargaining agent for the mail order house in Albany and the department store connected with it. Department stores in Jamaica, N. Y. Trenton and Plainfield, N. J., Barry, Vt., Kansas City, Mo., and Denver, Colo., are also organized.

Sewell Avery, chairman of Ward's board of directors, is adamant in his fight against the CIO. He refused to accept the policy of collective bargaining as a normal labor relations, and defied WLB rulings. As a result the government seized properties in Jamaica, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City and Denver, Colo. Behind Avery is the constant moral support of Col. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune. It is a showdown on labor's right to organize, Abramson declared.

The MWOC has signed up a staff in every city where there is a mail order house to be organized. Some 60 per cent of the entire business of Montgomery Ward is done by the mail order houses, Abramson pointed out. The gross volume of business last year was about $600,000,000.

Profits after taxes were around $25 million dolars in 1944. The treasurer of the company announced that "if the company today paid all of its debts and obligations, there would still remain $48 million dollars in cash in the till."

At the same time Montgomery Ward remains one of the last business institutions that still has a 40 cents an hour minimum wage. As a result the labor turnover at Montgomery Wards is 176 per cent.

The labor violations of the Montgomery Ward Company are notorious. Not only does chairman Avery refuse to execute the orders of the WLB to pay increases, recognize the union, and pay the back wages, but he has also violated the federal trade practice act, and OPA regulations, Abramson declared.

Sen. James E. Murray (D., Mont.), co-author with Senator Wagner of the proposed Social Security amendments, is known for supporting progressive measures in the past and for his interest in workers and small business. He is the newly appointed chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

SEE YOUR
SINCLAIR DEALER
for service that makes your car last longer

Florida CIO Fights For Union Shop

THE Florida CIO is filing suit in a Federal District Court to test the constitutionality of the Florida "right to work" amendment which bans the closed shop.

The plaintiffs in the suit are the CIO, the Fla. State Industrial Union Council, UAW, UMSWA, FTA, NMU and the ANG and locals of these internationals functioning in Florida. The defendants are the Governor of Florida, the Attorney General and local enforcement officers.

The complaint rests on three principles:

1. That the "right to work" amendment interferes with the civil rights of labor organizations and their members to assemble and to work together in order to achieve trade union objectives;

2. That the Union shop is a valuable property right which is arbitrarily destroyed by the Florida "right to work" amendment;

3. That a State statute which forbids closed shops in contracts between unions and employers engaged in interstate commerce is unconstitutional.

The local attitude on labor unions was expressed by Tom Watson, Attorney General of Florida, in a similar case brought by the AFL, when he referred to labor unions "as a great octopus, reaching out long avaricious tentacles."

Frank Donner, Assistant CIO Counsel, filed a 42-page injunction suit attacking the anti-closed shop amendment.

No Approval Needed

Employers who wish to raise wage rates now below the 55 cents mimimum may do so without obtaining WLB approval, the War Labor Board has announced.

DEALERS WANTED

By Contemporary Publishers of Winnipeg, Canada, for their line of progressive books at magazine prices. They retail at 25c each and the dealer makes a clear 33⅓% profit. We prepay all charges, including duty, freight or express, etc. Some of our well-known titles are "Secret of Soviet Strength" by Dean of Canterbury, "Truth About Soviet Russia" by the Webbs, "My Russian Travel Diary" by Major A. S. Hooper, etc.

Our latest book, "INSIDE RUSSIO TODAY" by famous foreign correspondent, Raymond Arthur Davies, just off the press. Would like to hear from all those interested in handling our popular titles. Write for full particulars to CONTEMPORARY PUBLISHERS, 333 Portage Ave., Winnipeg, Canada.

Sen. Robert Wagner (D., N. Y.), co-author of the new Social Security bill is author of the Natl. Labor Relations Act, the Natl. Housing Act and many other beneficial laws.

SOLD EVERYWHERE
5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS
for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
Herbert E. Lennig
Trinity 1-4600
6432 Cass Avenue
(Directly across from UAW-CIO Office)
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

FLAGS EMBLEMS

TEDDY'S
UNION LABEL STORE
Union Dues Buttons
Lapel Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
Convention Badges
American Flags
Organization Flags
Parade Caps and Emblems
Brief Cases, Secretary Cases, Bill Folds
231 So. Wells St., Chicago, Illinois
Phone Webster 4104

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STATIONERY

PAPER WORKERS LOCAL 310 UNION MADE CIO
LET MILPRINT FURNISH YOUR
CIO STATIONERY
WRITE FOR SAMPLES AND PRICES
MILPRINT, Inc.
431 WEST FLORIDA STREET
MILWAUKEE 1, WISCONSIN
Over 750 CIO Employees

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Every day now the papers are full of stories about cutbacks that are taking place now or are scheduled for July and August. We're face to face with the post V-E Day reconversion period we've worried about for so long, and so far we haven't achieved the safeguards for labor that CIO has repeatedly called for.

Here's what we need:

1. Increases in base rates so we can balance our budget without overtime pay. President Murray has called on President Truman to approve a 20 per cent increase.

2. Extension of unemployment insurance so that Federal workers, seamen, agricultural workers, domestic workers—all those now excluded—will be covered.

3. Increases in the amount of unemployment insurance payments and in the length of time workers are covered so that every unemployed worker will be entitled to payments for 26 weeks up to at least $25 a week for workers with dependents.

4. Travel allowances to permit workers who have moved to war jobs to get back home.

This week President Truman sent a message to Congress urging enactment of part of this program. He called for emergency action to protect our workers during the reconversion period. However, he did not ask that unemployment insurance be extended to agricultural and domestic workers and he did not ask for travel allowances for war workers.

When we write our Congressmen and Senators to support the President's program we must urge them to include these provisions.

One thing President Truman's message did very well. It made clear that this extension of social security is not just a matter of justice and humanity for our unemployed—it is a necessary step in heading off depression.

"Decent unemployment benefits would serve as a bulwark against post-war deflation," he pointed out. "By assuring workers of a definite income for a definite period of time, Congress will help materially to prevent a sharp decline in consumer expenditures which might otherwise result in a downward spiral of consumption and production. Adequate unemployment insurance is an indispensable form of prosperity insurance."

It is clear, however, that although these steps are in the public interest, we in the labor movement must lead the campaign to take them.

First we must get our membership aroused to put pressure on the administration to meet President Murray's demand for authorization of a 20 per cent wage boost. Who knows better than we women who do the buying how badly that is needed. From our own household budgets we can supply the most convincing arguments for the urgent need of revising base wage rates upwards. President Truman and Economic Stabilizer Director Fred Vinson should hear from us on this issue.

Second, we must ask our Congressmen and Senators to act quickly on extending the coverage of unemployment insurance, increasing the amounts to keep up buying power and providing travel allowances to help war workers home.

Guild Radio Program Wins Merit Award

The New York Newspaper Guild's radio forum, Free Speech, won first award for public discussion programs on non-network stations in the ninth annual American exhibition of educational radio programs at Ohio State University.

The award was for excellence in the entire series of Guild programs which have been broadcast weekly over WMCA, but was based specifically on the Feb. 27 program which discussed the question, "Will the 60 Million Job Plan Work?" Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) spoke for the affirmative and Sen. Robert Taft (R., Ohio) for the negative.

Free Speech, which consists of an ad lib press conference after speakers have briefly outlined their position, first went on the air in December, 1944. A typical program featured hot words between Vice Pres. John A. Zellers of Remington-Rand Corp. and CIO Counsel Lee Pressman over breaking the Little Steel formula.

Many famous Senators, Congressmen and leaders of national, international, military, literary, art and theater affairs have appeared on the program along with well known labor leaders.

Interviewers have included such top-flight newspapermen as Ed Sullivan of the New York Daily News, Earl Wilson of the New York Post, Radio Commentator William S. Gailmor, Alexander Uhl and Victor Bernstein of PM, Alfred Larke of Federated Press and authors Allan Chase, Michael Sayers, Rex Stout and Albert Kahn.

Labor Education

UAW Summer Schools Grow

The United Auto Workers summer school program, like the big union which sponsors it, has been growing bigger each year. Started several years ago with one school, it has developed into a widespread program with courses held in various parts of the country.

The program is under the UAW's Dept. of Education headed by Jack Zeller. Noble Combs is summer school director.

In 1944 sessions were held at the University of Michigan, University of Indiana, Hudson Shore Labor School in New York; Highlander Folk School in Tennessee and the Port Hope Labor College in Ontario. More than 325 students representing some 100 UAW locals attended the schools.

This year there will also be a school at the University of Chicago and possibly one in Ohio.

A unique feature of the UAW summer schools is the student control of the program. At the opening session of each school a steering committee is elected by the students which has charge of all arrangements and activities. Students also elect other committees such as recreation, grievance and housing.

Each school is planned by a committee representing the UAW Intl. Education Dept., the officials of the university and the local unions in the area. The courses usually last one week, with one and a half hour class periods.

Standard courses include public speaking, parliamentary procedure, collective bargaining, discrimination, labor history, political action and the postwar outlook.

NEW COURSES

Courses being added this year include leadership training, education and recreation committee methods. In addition, splendid workshop groups are conducted on any topics the students wish to take up.

Examples are shop paper editing, radio programs, dramatics, and use of films. In the evenings the program usually consists either of forums on questions of union policy, with various points of view represented, or talks by outstanding speakers, including top officers of the union.

The faculty is drawn both from the university and the staff of the International Union. In a course such as collective bargaining, a number of experts will be drawn in and the course coordinated by one person.

Teachers from the university handle such subjects as parliamentary law and discrimination, with union personnel handling courses which deal with more technical union problems. In many instances, courses are taught jointly.

The only cost to the student is that of room and board. The university provides dormitory space at a low cost and classroom and recreation facilities are free of charge.

LOCALS PAY COSTS

The students' expenses, including lost work time, are usually paid by the local union. Many students, however, take their vacations at the time of the summer school, thus enabling a local union to send additional members to the school.

The steering committee of the UAW school held last year at the University of Michigan met with a special committee representing the university to discuss the possibilities of extending the university's services to workers throughout the year, and its responsibility of making its resources available to the people who support it by paying taxes.

This is the first of a series of summer schools run by various CIO unions. The Textile Workers Union schools, the Office & Professional Workers' and others will appear in later issues.

Harvey G. Baker, education director of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers' local in Jacksonville, Fla., announces that the local has started a "limited modification" of the NMU leadership training course.

Haywood at Highlander

Southern CIO organizers and local union leaders attending the month's course being given at Highlander Fold School in Monteagle, Tenn., were scheduled to hear a talk by CIO Vice Pres. and Organization Director Allan Haywood Saturday, June 2.

The meeting is the highlight of the final week at the second annual CIO school sponsored at Highlander by southern CIO regional directors. The course was attended by 26 key members of local unions from nine southern states, who were selected by regional directors to attend the school.

"Chief purpose of the school," said Paul Christopher, Tennessee regional director, "is to give union leaders training which will equip them to assume greater organizational responsibilities and enable them to assume positions of more active leadership."

Charles Gillman, Georgia director, led discussions on organizing techniques and contract negotiations, and a course in CIO policy which ran throughout the school was taught by Christopher, William Henderson, Arkansas subregional director, and Ernest Pugh, Virginia director.

TWU Guest Teachers

Leo Huberman, education director of the Natl. Maritime Union and Asst. Director Charles Obermeyer were recent guest teachers at the Transport Workers Union Leadership Training School in Philadelphia.

Huberman instructed the students on collective bargaining, the Wagner Act and the War Labor Board, and Obermeyer discussed company unions and methods used to divide workers by discrimination and red-baiting.

USA-CIO Certified At Alcoa Plants

The CIO United Steelworkers was certified by the NLRB as qualified union for workers in plants of the Aluminum Corp. of America at Troutdale, Ore., and Alcoa, Tenn., following elections won overwhelmingly by the CIO union.

In the Oregon election, the vote was 176 for the CIO to 109 for the AFL, and in Tennessee, 3,654 for the CIO to 810 for the AFL.

Mariner Awards Reach 3,400

A total of 3,400 Mariner's Medals have been presented for men killed, wounded, injured or suffering from dangerous exposure as the result of enemy action, the War Shipping Administration announced this week. During March 193 Medals were awarded to men of the Merchant Marine.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY TROUBLE SHOOTER

Art by Mort Meskin
Story by Cole Greene

COPYRIGHT NATL. CIO NEWS

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

Produced for the CIO NEWS by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

This big gun is nearly ready to shoot the target, Tokyo. James T. Smith, Steelworkers subdirector in California, declared after a tour of the Pacific battlefronts: "Somebody has to make the stuff and get it out there. And that means us. Now that the war is over in Europe, we can't let down. We have to work harder, if anything, until it's all over. The stake is final victory and peace. Nothing we can do to win would be too much."

The ten labor leaders sailed around Fort Drum in the Philippines. The day before high explosives and gasoline had been dropped on the "concrete battleship" and touched it off. Were there still Japs there, dead or alive?

Mervyn Rathborne shakes hands with General Krueger, head of the Sixth Army. The labor leaders were briefed on conditions on all fronts, were shown the need for a steady stream of equipment and were thanked for labor's contribution to date.

Target Tokyo

"TEN civilians climbed into a Navy plane on the evening of April 1 to get a look at the Pacific war. They were picked because they were labor leaders and the Army and Navy wanted them to see what the job was and come home and tell their fellow unionists about it. I happened to be one of the ten," explained Mervyn Rathborne, State CIO Secretary of California, in reporting on his trip over the many islands of the Pacific, pointing at the new target for final victory, Tokyo.

Half of the ten in this picked party were AFL leaders, the other half were CIO. In addition to Mervyn Rathborne from the CIO were: James T. Smith, international representative of the United Steelworkers of America; Claude R. Ballard, president of the International Woodworkers of America; Roscoe G. Craycraft, vice president of the International Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union, and Cyril V. O'Halloran, vice president of the United Auto Workers of America.

"When we came back, we were still civilians," continued Mervyn Rathborne, "but we had been all over the Pacific battleground, had seen more of this part of the war than any group of civilians, and had been close to some of its hardships and dangers."

These labor leaders talked with high Army and Navy personnel; they talked to GI Joe, and brought messages back from him; they inspected the war material sent to the Pacific, and they know of the increased needs for the final round of this war against fascism. And they saw the face of war itself.

Cy O'Halloran told of MacArthur's words on labor. '"I have everything to thank the American laboring people for and nothing to criticize them for. The supplies have gotten out here. American labor has done a wonderful job.'"

James T. Smith spoke of Chester Nimitz's tribute to the job labor has done on the production front. "We heard the same kind of praise from all top officers from General Richardson and Admiral Dudley in Hawaii to General MacArthur in the Philippines," he said.

As to what GI Joe wants, it's simple. "'We want to get this job finished and get home.' That's what all of them say," said Mervyn Rathborne.

"It's a rugged existence for these boys. They are under continuous strain. They can't get much sleep. Their chief concern is keeping alive and that's a 24-hour job. In this struggle to do their work of killing Japanese and keeping themselves whole, there isn't much room for concern with political or other developments at home. But one worry sticks with them—it is what awaits them when they get home. They want to be sure of having a job. They are fearful of a repetition of the aftermath of the last war, when our boys came home to depression and breadlines, and many of them told me that they look to the labor unions to prevent that this time," said Mervyn Rathborne.

General MacArthur expressed it for the boys, too. James T. Smith reported that MacArthur said: "'I feel I am speaking for all of the military,' he said. 'They want to come back to a reasonable amount of economic security. They want a decent standard of living and a job.' Then MacArthur pointed a finger at our group and added, 'That's your job'"

These labor leaders had a chance to see the destruction at Manila, the shambles at Iwo Jima. They personally inspected places that were named by the boys: Bloody Nose Ridge and Hell's Half Acre on Peleliu. "But before they'll all come home, there'll be a lot of fighting and dying. There was no doubt of that in our minds after our swing through the Pacific battle areas. We came away with a feeling of the immensity of this war against the Japanese and of the desperate, fanatical kind of enemy we are facing," explained James T. Smith.

The labor leaders also saw repair shops and reconstruction work in progress. "But the miracle of Yankee mechanical ingenuity out there for my money," said Smith, "was the huge floating drydock we saw 7,000 miles out in the Pacific. Pontoons had been built separately at Stockton, Eureka and Portland and floated all the way out there."

"If I can properly convey my impressions from the war front, if I can present the picture of GI's over there in dust, in mud, in blood, fighting the enemy, trying to stay alive and longing more than anything in the world to come home, then I think we will lose no time in doing everything we can to help our boys stay alive," said ILWU Vice President Roscoe Craycraft.

Cy O'Halloran declared: "That's a tough war they've got there, and they need all of our help."

At a machine shop in Pearl Harbor and in other Army and Navy repair shops in the Pacific, the visiting labor leaders found the latest and best equipment. "It was a machinists' dream," said Jim Smith. "We hope to see that equipment in our shops after the war."

The CIO NEWS

Weekly Publication
Of the Congress of Industrial Organizations

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

Vol. 8, No. 24 — June 11, 1945

National Edition

IN CONGRESS last week Congressman John W. Flannagan (D., Va.) introduced a Bill to Provide $50,000,000 in grants in aid to the states for a permanent lunch program "to safe-guard the health and well-being of the Nation's children." The bill is H. R. 3370.

Startling revelations during selective service showed that the nation's nutritional standards were low. Two out of every five young men rejected for the draft were for causes traceable to malnutrition . . . "Hidden hunger," Dr. Parran, of the U. S. Public Health Service, called it. "Malnutrition in this country is widespread and serious," he said. "We are wasting money trying to educate children with half starved bodies. They cannot absorb teaching; they hold back classes; require extra time of teachers and repeat grades. This is expensive stupidity, but its cost to our educational system is nothing compared to the net cost to the Nation."

The CIO at its Seventh Convention resolved to "support permanent legislation to make it possible for every child to have a hot, well balanced lunch at school, regardless of the resources of the state or local community, regardless of the ability of the family to pay the costs and without discrimination as to race or religion."

See Page 6

SCHOOL LUNCHES

American soldiers know at first hand what hunger does to kids. Here they share rations with Italian children. Youngsters like this, if they grow up, will be firm friends of America, if we help them now. They'll be citizens of a free and democratic country, but they can't help build a future world of security unless they get needed food.

The very old are more used to suffering, or at least they understand it better than the very young. This old woman is waiting in line for her first warm meal in many days, given by the U. S. Army. Her country needs our help to undo the harm the Nazis did to it.

Starvation in Europe Threat To World, U. S. Security

By C. W. FOWLER

A DARK shadow has spread over liberated Europe—the shadow of hunger and mass starvation. One year after D Day—June 6, 1944—millions of men, women and children in the countries once held by the Nazis are facing disease, disability and premature death from lack of food.

This is true not only of eastern Europe. It is true of all Europe, right up to the shores of the Channel that Hitler could not cross. It is verified by American authorities, both military and civilian, and by every GI who returns from the German war. It is known in Washington and London. It will become better known throughout the entire world as next winter comes on—a winter which will be harder on the people of Europe than any since the middle ages, unless something is done.

Last January, the late President Roosevelt sent Judge Samuel Rosenman, one of his closest advisers, to Europe to study conditions and to report to him. Highlights of this study were released to the newspapers by President Truman, with the remark that he is "very sympathetic to the needs of the liberated countries."

In many industrial parts of Europe, a worker's ration is less than a pound of bread and potatoes a day, less than an ounce of meat, less than half an ounce of margarine, less than an ounce of sugar.

Actually, in many countries, only the bread and potatoes can be bought. The black market, which flourished under the Germans, is beyond the workingclass family's wage. In many big industrial cities, there is no gas or electricity to cook the meat and potatoes.

In Holland, the average calorie intake is said to be 1875 a day. Good nutrition demands about 3,000. In Norway, during the Nazi occupation the calorie intake was estimated by the government in exile at around 2,000 a day. France has about 2,000 calories a day for its people. And so on, with even more tragic figures for Greece, Yugoslavia, the other Balkan and eastern European countries.

But the actual physical volume of food is not the only problem. As the summary of Judge Rosenman's report pointed out, coal, transport, raw materials and manufacturing are equally serious problems to be met before the people of Europe can be freed from starvation.

"Except in the rural, food-producing areas, a dangerously low level of nutrition exists; coal production meets not even minimum requirements; ports have suffered great damage by bombing and demolition.

"Railroads, canals and highways have been wholly or partially destroyed. . . . Physical destruction is greater than in the last war. Manufacturing is paralyzed by destruction or damage, lack of raw materials and inadequate plant maintenance."

Judge Rosenman makes several recommendations in the summary recently published. Top priorities for foods, fuel, raw materials and replacement machinery and parts are urged. Above all, he recommends "a widespread official and public campaign to inform the American people of the gravity of the needs of our Allies in liberated Europe."

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA), of which the U. S. is a part, can do a little, but not much, toward relieving the situation. At the present time, UNRRA is almost out of money. About $450,000,000 has been committed through requisitions to various procurement agencies here. That is less than a drop in the bucket of European need.

We have food shortages in the U. S. The total per capita food consumption is higher than ever before. Our food shortages, to a European, look

(Continued on Page 8)

Breakfast time for this European child at a United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation center in the Middle East. Parents keep their children spotlessly clean even under war refugee conditions. Her clothing was supplied by the American Red Cross; more is needed.

Murray: 'Fight for FEPC Now'

THE CIO is "deeply disturbed" at the failure of the House Appropriations Committee to appropriate money to carry on the Fair Employment Practice Committee past June 30, Pres. Murray said this week in a letter to Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.), of the House unit.

Murray's letter was sent the same day that President Truman called for quick passage of the bill (S 101 and HR 2232) to make FEPC a permanent government agency. Writing to Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.), chairman of the House Rules Committee, Truman asked the Committee to give the House version of the bill an early rule and speed it to the floor for debate and vote.

"The war is not over," Truman said. "In fact a bitter and deadly conflict lies before us. To abandon at this time the fundamental principle upon which the FEPC was established is unthinkable.

"The legislation providing for this commission is now in the Rules Committee. Unless it is sent to the floor, the members of the House will have no opportunity to vote upon it. The result will be that on July 1 next, the principle of fair employment practices will have been abandoned by the House of Representatives."

At the same time, Murray wired all CIO affiliates to urge their Congressmen and President Truman to support restoring the appropriation, amounting to $599,000.

In his letter, Murray said that the Appropriations Committee's use of the pending permanent FEPC bill as an excuse for denying currently needed funds is "a cruel hoax not only on the Negro people but on all the progressive elements of our national community.

"The present reconversion period, with its threat of widespread cutbacks, offers a dangerous opportunity for the reintroduction of vicious discriminatory practices in American industry," he added.

"Unless the FEPC is permitted to survive, racial tensions will be engendered which will dissolve overnight the industrial democracy which has thus far been achieved."

In its present state, FEPC operates under an Executive Order issued in 1941 by FDR. As such, it needs a special appropriation, which was authorized by the Bureau of the Budget this year but ignored by the Appropriations Committee.

Urge Action to Aid Displaced Workers

PROMPT steps to help workers thrown out of jobs during reconversion are "absolutely imperative" to prevent the worst effects of inadequate reconversion policies, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in urging affiliates to support the Truman unemployment compensation proposals.

The letter, urging CIO support for Truman's $25 for 26 weeks proposal now before the House Ways and Means Committee, said:

"It is a mockery to talk about reconverting our industrial machinery without a recognition of the primary need of safeguarding our human resources. Workers and their dependents must have assurance that their living standards will not be wiped out in the process of reconversion."

Though the primary task "should be to provide jobs for all workers ready and willing to work, we must at the same time have adequate provision for unemployment compensation for those who may be temporarily unemployed due to inadequate reconversion policies," he said.

Existing state compensation laws cannot meet these needs, he added. The Truman proposal, which calls for use of Federal funds for which would cover Federal workers, maritime workers and others not now covered by State systems, will help in meeting them.

All CIO affiliates, Murray said, should get together with other progressive forces in their communities and wire their Congressmen in House and Senate to support the Truman message. Wires should be sent to Chairman Doughton (D., N. C., and other members of the House Ways and Means Committee, urging immediate action.

Murray At White House

LABOR'S urgent need for a 20% increase in basic wage rates to maintain take-home pay during reconversion was again impressed on President Truman by CIO Pres. Philip Murray last week, in a White House meeting at which he also pressed for adoption of a full employment program.

Murray advised the President that a special meeting of CIO's vice presidents has been called in Washington June 13 to consider the wage program and to press the campaign for a guaranteed annual wage.

He also called to Truman's attention that the CIO has no representation in the Intl. Labor Organization, and asked that the CIO be granted the kind of representation as is now accorded to the AFL.

"A year ago President Roosevelt promised the CIO such representation," Murray said, "but I withdrew our claim at that time because of AFL opposition, making it clear, however, that this should not prejudice our position in the future."

The CIO leader also said that he had asked for a change in WLB rules to allow unions "to engage in free collective bargaining over wages."

Order of Eagles Back Labor for Annual Wage

THE Fraternal Order of Eagles with a national membership of more than 875,000 is solidly behind organized labor's movement for a guaranteed annual wage declared John W. Young, President of the Fraternal Order in Washington this week.

"In fact our organization is one of the leaders in this movement," he continued. "At our Cincinnati convention in August, 1944, we adopted a resolution approving the principle of the guaranteed annual wage.

"The late President Roosevelt, a member of our organization, appointed a special committee to make a study of this problem. It is heartening to learn that his successor, President Truman, also a member of the Eagles, is going forward with this study.

"This special committee under Eric Johnston, President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, will continue to function," the statement said.

Eagle President Young also said:

- The guaranteed annual wage will encourage employment and assure workers a steady income.
- It will remove from the American worker the daily irritation of not knowing what his income will be next week, or next month.
- It will stabilize our economy.
- It will benefit the farmer and the so-called white collar worker.

"The guaranteed annual wage is not an empty, economic dream," he said. "It is a reality that has been achieved by many large industries. The wage pattern set out by these industries can serve as a model for other industries.

"In the months to come the Fraternal Order of Eagles will work with labor, management and the Government in bringing home to the American people the facts of this vital issue," President Young's statement concluded.

Charter Leaders Meet Today

THE national committee of the Labor-Industry charter has its first meeting today.

Last week, CIO's Philip Murray, AFL's President William Green, and Eric Johnston of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce met and gave formal notice to each other and to the public that their respective organizations had ratified the charter and had authorized them to proceed with setting up the national committee, which, in the charter's words, "will seek to promote an understanding and sympathetic acceptance of this code of principles and will propose such national policies as will advance the best interests of our nation."

Rules and procedures will be discussed today, as well as outlining immediate tasks.

Murray Honored by Duquesne And Howard Universities

PRESIDENT Philip Murray was honored with two degrees last week, an honorary degree from Duquesne University in Pittsburgh in the social sciences, and a Doctor of Laws from Howard University in Washington.

At Pittsburgh, Murray said:

"The avocation which finds some of us seeking to improve the lot of our fellow men through unions and collective bargaining must have as its foundation, the beliefs in the inviolability of the human personality. People are not automatons to be moved around and controlled like so many pieces of chess or so many cogs of a machine. Man is composed of body and soul. He is God's creation.

"Mankind is the most important thing on this planet. Political systems, factories, tools and wealth exist to serve mankind. Mankind does not exist to serve them.

"I accept this degree with the knowledge that I am the fortunate recipient of a distinction which is directed towards aims and objectives of the entire labor movement, rather than to an individual."

At Howard University, Murray declared: "I shall treasure the degree that has been awarded me because it symboizes the close kinship of labor and education.

"It has taken the most disastrous war of all time, and the killing of millions of human beings, to awaken men to the importance of education. When I say education I do not mean the false thing that has passed for education through the years—the old ideas that education meant teaching a boy or a girl only enough to enable them to work in a menial capacity until their dying day. When I say "education" I mean the process by which all boys and girls, regardless of their race, creed or national ancestry can avail themselves of all the good and constructive experiences of men from the beginning of history.

"I am proud of the position that organized labor from the day it came into being, has taken in defense and furtherance of education. I am prouder still of the fight that the Congress of Industrial Organizations has made consistently for more and more education for all our people. We will continue to fight to remove what we call the high, restrictive tariffs that place education in many fields beyond reach of the common man and his children. When school boards meet to consider budgets, it is never the spokesmen for organized labor who appear to oppose increases in the educational budget. It is the grasping few who count education, as they count all other things—in pennies.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations has great admiration and respect for the work that is being done here at Howard by both faculty and student body."

Duquesne University conferred on Philip Murray the honorary degree of a Doctor of Social Sciences last week in Pittsburgh. Left to right are: Very Reverend Raymond V. Kirk, President of the University; Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, Duquesne chancellor, and Philip Murray. In accepting Philip Murray said: "I accept this degree with the knowledge that I am the fortunate recipient of a distinction which is directed towards the aims and objectives of the entire labor movement, rather than to an individual."

Salute Labor In New York's Central Park

THE largest joint labor rally in support of the war effort will take place Sunday, June 17th, at Central Park Mall.

The U. S. Treasury Department is joining with the CIO and AFL in Greater New York in sponsorship of a Salute to Labor's Win-the-War efforts.

CIO President Philip Murray, AFL President William Green and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Jr., will be the only speakers. A special show is being written for the rally and will be presented with top-notch stage and radio stars in the cast. It will be a gala day for all organized labor with recognition for the part labor is playing in the war effort given national emphasis.

Incomplete Coverage

Pass the Truman Proposals

Labor's Share Cut

BEFORE the war, the average American worker produced twice as much as the worker in Britain, USSR, Germany and Japan, and production per man-hour ranged from twice to four times as much, according to a WPB survey.

Since the war, despite the great increases in all the other warring countries, American labor's productivity has still retained its lead, the WPB says.

The freezing of U. S. wage rates during the war means that labor's share of what it produces has been most sharply cut.

As Philip Murray points out, at least 10% of the 20% increase in wage rates asked by CIO is necessary to restore even the pre-war relationship between wages and productivity.

Jobs for All

The fiscal program for full employment prepared by the labor committee of the Natl. Planning Association and described in this issue is another demonstration that "jobs for all" is not just a pleasing slogan but a practical possibility, and indeed an urgent necessity for our national welfare.

It supplements President Murray's CIO Reemployment Plan by showing how taxation can be used to increase and not curtail purchasing power, and how public funds can be used to stimulate business and private employment and raise the standard of living of all Americans.

Among the first steps necessary for full employment is the bill sponsored by Senators Wagner, Murray and others to establish national economic accounting and responsibility, so that steps may be taken to prevent unemployment before it occurs, whether through stimulation of private employment or through useful public works to make up the lag that still remains.

There is encouraging evidence of increasing public support for this full employment bill. But much more will have to be forthcoming to secure its enactment and to establish the principle expressed in it that "all Americans able to work and seeking work have the right to useful, remunerative, regular and full-time employment."

So Many, So Far

One of CIO's most important reconversion demands is for payment of transportation costs for workers who must travel long distances to new jobs when laid off their war jobs.

A slight idea of how many workers have had to travel how far for war employment, is given by these figures on the dislocation of war workers from their former homes:

In the Puget Sound area (Seattle, etc.) there have been 269,000 in-migrants; Portland, Ore., 220,000; San Francisco, 515,000; Los Angeles, 783,000; San Diego, 165,000; Hampton Roads, Va., 166,000; Detroit, 254,000; and Mobile, Ala., 84,000 in-migrants.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WHEN a feller needs a friend, he won't find so many as when he doesn't.

When jobs are plentiful and labor scarce, the workingman has almost as many friends as before elections.

But when the tide turns, as it's doing now, it's hard to convert backslapping into ready cash or to pay the grocer's bills with campaign promises.

Our best friends then are our own folks and those who most closely share our lot.

★ ★ ★

The pioneer, who faced the wilderness alone, depended chiefly on his own efforts to pull him through hard times.

But today no man can stand alone. Our jobs and livelihood depend on conditions we can only influence by joining our efforts with those of countless others.

To improve his lot, the worker today must join with all his fellow workers in a union. To prevent or pull through hard times, he and his union must join with a national labor movement like the CIO.

★ ★ ★

The dread dismissal slip is appearing in many pay envelopes today, as war orders drop off, and the take-home pay in others is sharply cut.

Individually, you can do little about this but look for another job, at a time when jobs are getting scarcer and scarcer.

Through your union, you can fight unnecessary layoffs, prod employers into obtaining other orders, or negotiate wage increases to offset loss of earnings from shorter hours.

But even your union, by itself, cannot go far enough. Most layoffs are caused by national, and sometimes world, conditions. And wage increases are limited by governmental restrictions.

So to meet your immediate bread-and-butter problems, you and your union have to join with the whole CIO in fighting for revision of the Little Steel formula; and in promoting a full employment program.

This program, to keep folks at work in your local plants, has to cover reconversion planning and production programming, a guaranteed annual wage and projects like the Missouri Valley Authority, taxes; and Bretton Woods and Reciprocal Trade agreements to expand foreign trade.

But even higher wages and steady jobs won't mean much, if price controls are lifted and living costs soar beyond the reach of wages.

So you and your union have to join with the CIO pressuring Congress to support OPA and renew the Price Control Act without inflationary amendments.

★ ★ ★

But while we fight for full employment, unemployment from cutbacks is already on the rise, and if you are one of the jobless you can't live on hope until there are jobs for all.

So you must depend on your union and the CIO to fight for adequate unemployment benefits for all laid-off war workers, and for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill to protect you against the hazards of unemployment, ill-health, old age, etc., in the future.

★ ★ ★

Congress is full of friends of labor, to hear them tell it. But it has allowed the present layoffs to get under way without providing any protection for those laid off. So labor has to do the fighting for emergency benefits, aided by Pres. Truman and those Congressmen whom labor's political efforts helped to elect.

Administration leaders and politicians galore have said workers' take-home pay should not be reduced. But that is happening now, and it's the CIO that has to make the fight for a 20% increase in basic wage rates.

Most folks in public life say full employment is their goal. But employment is much less than full already, and millions more are expected to become unemployed in the next few months.

Yet the full employment bill is far from enactment in Congress; WPB officials complacently accept the rising unemployment as inevitable and talk of dropping all programming of civilian production, and nobody but labor seems to feel any sense of urgency.

So again the CIO has to fight to keep the goal of full employment to the fore, to prepare plans that show it to be practicable, and to oppose all steps in the opposite direction.

In a word, when a worker needs a friend, it's his union and the CIO on which he must depend.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux.....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925

Vol. 8 June 11, 1945 No. 24

Around The World...

Nazis In Argentina

LUIS Victor Sommi, member of the Woodworkers Union of Argentina and imprisoned in the Neuquen penitentiary from November, 1943, to April, 1945, for belonging to the underground labor opposition to the Argentine regime, is now in Montevideo, has just published a book exposing "German Capital in Argentina." He charges: German trusts control some 200 incorporated companies; that direct and indirect investments and minority shares in non-German undertakings total 1,800,000,000 pesos ($450,000,000) and that yearly profits are more than $37,500,000. Also: the German electric trust AEG—Siemens Schukert—alone controls an estimated $250,000,000; they have been operating with a Spanish disguise through Swiss firms. Big trusts such as I. G. Farben and Thyssen control directly and indirectly numerous companies which were never blacklisted, and they use devious methods in obtaining United Nations' materials.

Jouhaux In Paris

"Great satisfaction" with the steps taken toward the formation of the new World Federation of Trade Unions was expressed here this week by Leon Jouhaux, general secretary of the French General Confederation of Labor (CGT). "I have always been in favor of such an organization and it gives me great satisfaction to see the unity that has been achieved." During his long captivity, he said, a clandestine radio enabled him and other prisoners to keep in constant touch with international events.

French Miners Strike

Recent strikes among miners in northern France and the Pas-de-Calais and among civil servants and industrial workers of Lyons were due to general dissatisfaction with the food situation and with wage scales fixed by the government. The General Confederation of Labor (CGT) has been demanding a minimum basic wage of 23 francs (46c) an hour, the establishment of three wage zones with a maximum difference of 20 per cent between them and equal wages for women. Against this the Ministry of Labor has fixed a basic wage of 20 francs (40c) and a 10 per cent reduction for women, and has maintained the six wage zones instituted by Vichy, with a difference of 33 per cent between the highest and lowest zones.

Polish Trade Unions

UNRRA reports the restoration of trade union organizations in Poland, undertaken immediately after the liberation of Polish territory. On November 21, 1944, a trade union conference was held in Lublin at which the Central Trade Union Commission was formed. The six most important unions are: the textile workers, 70,000 members; miners, 27,000; oil workers, 7,000; metal workers, 57,000; sugar refinery workers, 23,000, and railwaymen numbering 133,000. The total membership of the trade union movement on April 1, 1945, was registered at 544,000 workers.

Jobs For All Is Golden Opportunity For Worker — Nation — Business

A well-housed and healthy America with educational opportunities for all, and our soil, rivers and forests developed for all the people should be the basis of our nation's prosperity.

That's the conclusion of the Fiscal Policy for Full Employment, issued this week by the labor committee on national policy of National Planning Assn.

The report outlines a U. S. fiscal policy offering labor full employment, business its greatest opportunity for expansion and Congress a balanced budget.

The report, written by Dr. John H. G. Pierson of the Labor Dept., was sponsored by the committee as a technical document. The 22-man committee is headed by Clinton S. Golden of the CIO Steelworkers and includes Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and seven other CIO leaders as well as representatives of the Railroad Bortherhoods.

CIO committee members liken the report to a house resting on the foundation of the plan of CIO Pres. Philip Murray for 60 million jobs. They point out that the Murray plan with its industry and national production councils needed to turn the national resources into wealth — need for prosperity — through the cooperative effort of labor, management, agriculture and the government.

The NPA committee plan contains an analysis of what is necessary for making the U. S. peacetime economy operate well and finds the answer is:

A five-billion-dollar-a-year basic program of public investment, financed by taxation to provide housing, health, education, conversation, the development of natural resources and social security.

A tax program "which would finance public expenditures in a manner that will as far as possible avoid cancelling out private expenditures that would otherwise have been made."

A program to close any gap between production and expenditures including two planks:

1. Tax refunds, chiefly to low income groups so that they would increase their spending.

2. "An ample, diversified and geographically distributed reserve shelf of public works and work projects," Federal, State and local, all to be operated when private employment is insufficient.

SOURCE OF OPPOSITION

While the CIO has been pressing justifiably and for a long time for full employment, it has received little support from Congress and business.

Business interests have feared that public expenditures would interfere with business expansion and opportunities and hence with profits, without which, of course, there is no point to private enterprise.

Conservative congressmen, on the other hand, have feared deficit financing more than hunger and suffering.

The plan answers both objections.

To the objection of the businessman and industrialist the answer is that "$25 billion has never been spent for private capital formation in any year up till now, the closest approach being $19 billion at slightly lower prices in 1941, when we were tooling to become the arsenal of democracy." The plan would provide the $25 million yearly expenditure.

"The suggested amount is more than half again as large as the total of publicly financed war facilities of this war," the report continues, "some 15 times the value of the net tangible assets of all automobile manufacturing plants in the U. S. in 1938 (here adjusted for price change), not including parts, accessory, body, and tire manufactures; one-third as great as the present estimated value of all tangible farm property in the U. S., including land and livestock along with buildings and machinery."

The economist also states in answer to conservative Congressmen's objection that tax refunds and the reserve shelf of public works working together would "keep budget deficits as low as possible consistent with maintaining full employment in an economy in which the over-saving tendency still exists. Moreover, they would have the advantage, peculiar to insurance mechanisms, of removing insecurity while limiting the remedy to the need as it actually develops."

In addition to Golden and Carey other CIO members of the NPA committee are:

Pres. S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers; Pres. Emil T. Rieve of the Textile Workers Union; Walter Reuther, vice president of the Auto Workers; Solomon Barkin, research director, Textile Workers Union; Ted F. Silvey, chairman of the reconversion committee; Katherine Pollak Ellickson, asst. research director. Raymond Walsh, former CIO research director, also served on the committee.

"Copyright 1945, the Newspaper PM, Inc."

Willow Run Employes Picket

Laidoff workers from Willow Run, 30 miles west of Detroit, invaded the downtown section June 2 and picketed the office building of the war manpower commission. A woman picket carried a sign, "My Husband Is Not Expendable, We Got 4 Kids," referring to the airy statement of Henry Ford II that the plant was "as expendable as a battleship."

The pickets, members of Bomber Local 50, CIO United Auto Workers, Protested WMC statements that there were jobs available at good wages for most of the thousands laid off. The plant closes down this month. It will be used for storing battered bombers until a buyer is found for the government-owned model plant.

Labor Management Meet On Manpower Control Plans

PLANS to relax manpower controls for the reconversion period were worked out at a joint labor-industry-government meeting held here this week under auspices of the War Manpower Commission.

The meeting brought about 200 representatives of labor and industry, together with WMC regional and area directors, to Washington, with Clinton S. Golden, Asst. to the President of the United Steelworkers, heading the CIO delegation and presiding over several of the sessions.

Main items on the agenda were winning the war against Japan, releasing manpower controls to speed reconversion and full employment, and more flexibility in the areas of the WMC.

Both labor and management delegates urged strict adherence to a 30 day advance notice of coming cutbacks, which would end the present practice of keeping management and workers in the dark until the cutback comes.

Removal of controls should be left to area labor-management committees, and the present appeals system retained, the conference said. Following the meeting, the delegates visited President Truman to give him their proposals. Truman accepted the proposals, as did WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt, and emphasized the need for active planning for orderly reconversion now.

1—Children need 3,000 calories of bone building, body building food daily to help them grow in mind and body. If they do not get this quantity of food, they are malnourished, another way of saying they are starving. The problem of malnutrition in America was dramatically brought before the country, when Selective Service found that two out of every five young men rejected for military service were for causes traceable to malnutrition. Some 9,000,000 American children are malnourished. Anemia, rickets, bad teeth and valvular heart are results of malnutrition. A school lunch program can give an adequate diet.

2—But not until 1943 was there a federal approp The War Food Administration helped communit sponsor of the program for part of the cost of fo week in Congress. Representative John W. Flannag priate $50,000,000 annually for the furtherance o being of the Nation's children." The cost of the l

4—Cumberland in Allegany County is the second largest city in Maryland. The parents of these children are working at the Celanese plant which employs 15,000, at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. which employs 1700, or at the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. which employs 1500, all organized into internationals of the CIO.

"KIDS

Story by Helen Ka

5—The CIO at its Seventh Convention resolved to "support pern every child to have a hot, well-balanced lunch at school, rega community, regardless of the ability of the family to pay the c or religion." HR 3370 was originally planned for a $100,000,000 support the full appropriation of this bill. In testimony before S. Public Health Service declared: "When you improve the diet formance and their physical conditions." Hungry children slow up riation for the feeding of America's school children. ies improve the nutrition of children by imbursing the od for lunches served to children at school. Last an (D. Va.) introduced a bill, HR 3370, to appro- f this program to "safeguard the health and well- ack of such a program is too high to the Nation.

3—The CIO NEWS went to Cumberland, Maryland, to see how their lunch program operated. Here 12,000 children were fed a Type A, or hot lunch, or a Type C, or milk lunch. The complete Type A lunch must be balanced and contain one-third of the child's daily nutritional requirements; must not exceed 15c, including one-half pint of whole milk. 20% of these lunches are served free. 79 cooks are employed throughout the county. They have been required to take courses in cooking, nutrition and sanitation under qualified instructors, and pass a health examination. Kitchens are inspected periodically.

EAT DEMOCRACY"

Pictures by Rebecca Snyder

nanent legislation to make it possible for rdless of the resources of the state or local osts and without discrimination as to race appropriation. Urge your Congressman to the Committee, Dr. W. H. Sebrell of the U. of children, you always improve their per- classes; can't absorb learning.

6—He also said: "I feel there is no question that a school lunch program would go a very long ways toward preventing a great deal of malnutrition in school children." A good mind must have a healthy body to nourish it. A nation depends upon its children. They are its future. A child must have the right to eat good, nourishing food. HR 3370 is a bill "to improve the health and the physical stamina of our country." Surgeon General Thomas A. Parran declared: "A good school lunch program will contribute to the general health by keeping children and youth fit to work up to capacity in the classroom and by establishing good food habits which carry over into daily living." Bright, healthy children nourish democracy! Yes, they eat it.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Julius Emspak, Secy.-Treas., UERMWA-CIO, reports: production and maintenance workers at Rex Products Co., New Rochelle, N. Y., CIO 495; against 389. Sylvania Electric Products Co., Point Pleasant, W. Va., CIO 199; against 15. This is the seventh Sylvania plant for which the UE has won collective bargaining rights.

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, Md., reports: Guards at Key Highway and Bethlehem Shipyard voted CIO. Key Highway, IUMSWA-CIO 161; against 76. Bethlehem Fairfield Shipyard, IUMSWA-CIO 159; against 35. The following representatives were in charge of the campaigns: Ray Trachtman, Bethlehem Fairfield; Joe DeKleva and Richard Carter, Key Highway.

John J. Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Syracuse, N. Y., reports: Armstrong Cork Co., Fulton, N. Y., Textile Workers Union, 192; against 20. Harry Walton, TWU organizer, was in charge.

Morris Muster, Pres., UFWA-CIO, reports: Jasper Cabinet Co., Jasper, Ind., CIO 67; against 26.

W. H. Crawford, Dist. Dir., USA-CIO, reports: Mascot Stove Works, Chattanooga, Tenn., CIO 56; AFL 2; neither 19. Lee J. Sorsby was in charge, assisted by William Frazier and J. C. Stafford.

John C. Lawson, Secy-Treas., US&APWA, reports: Southern Cotton Oil Co., Columbia, S. C., CIO 41; against 0. Rep. Sam H. Scott was in charge. Card check showed that 30 out of 34 employes at the Whiteford, Md., plant of Staso Milling Co. had selected USAPWA-CIO as bargaining agent. Rep. J. B. Foreman and Niles Alwine organized the job.

Helen Kingery, Dir. of Publications, UOPWA-CIO, reports: Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. agents in Indiana, CIO 154; against 134. Indiana is the 11th state to come under the UOPWA's national contract with Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

T. D. DuCuennois, CIO Field Rep., Richmond, Va., reports: Texas Co., Norfolk, Va., OWIU-CIO 39; against 16. Gravely Novelty Furniture Co., Martinsville, Va., UFWA-CIO 59; against 17.

R. W. Starnes, Acting CIO Reg. Dir., New Orleans, La., reports: Oyster Shell Products Co., Morgan City, La., UGCCWA-CIO certified as result of card check. Some 125 workers are involved. Rep. Noah Ford was in charge. Clerical workers at Celotex Corp., Marrero, La., also selected UGCCWA-CIO as their bargaining agent as result of card check; 125 workers involved. UGCCWA Representatives Ford and Zebal were in charge.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, Ga., reports: Kroger Warehouse, URWDSEA-CIO 19; AFL 1; no union 1. Miss Frances Schulter assisted by Tom Walson and C. H. Webb from Local 343, handled the organizing. Kingan Packing Co., UPWA-CIO 41; AFL 7. Dir. G. R. Hathaway in charge.

Wm. Mayo, CIO Acting Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, Ind., reports: Container Corp., Anderson, Ind., PWOC-CIO 87; AFL 3; no union 4. Representatives Paul Elzea, Pete Markunas, and Charles Mitchell handled the drive. Fred B. Prophet Co., Allison Div., URWDSEA-CIO 42; against 20. The union's representative, Ruth Bennett, was in charge, assisted by both Pete Markunas and H. L. McNamara of the CIO staff.

AT HIGHLANDER SCHOOL

The writer had the pleasure of addressing the close of the session of the Highlander Folk School, where a number of members of our local unions from different internationals have been attending a month's course there. Classes were in the main supervised by our Southern regional directors. The writer can state positively that they are teaching trade unionism, the history of the movement, parliamentary procedure, etc., in a manner that is a credit to them and can serve the students well in developing talent for our unions in different capacities.

Miles Horton and his wife and staff are to be complimented on the splendid work they are doing. I would also like to take this opportunity of complimenting our regional directors and the directors of our different international unions on the work done there. There is plenty of good talent in the school.

Miss Helen Blanchard, organization director, CIO Women's Auxiliaries, reports a successful trip through Ohio. She said that the State Council of CIO Women's Auxiliaries laid out a program for intensifying organizing campaigns.

The women took action on the Price Control Act, and opposed any crippling amendments. An additional organizing committee composed of leading women of Cleveland, Lorain and Warren was established, which will work under Miss Blanchard's direction. Mrs. Faye Stephenson, CWA national president, also attended the meeting.

Four Backdoor AFL Contracts Thrown Out by Labor Board

Four backdoor agreements signed between the AFL United Auto Workers and the Ken-Rad Tube & Lamp Corp. a year ago were recently ordered thrown out by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Plants involved are at Bowling Green, Ky. and Tell City, Rockport and Huntingburg, Ind.

Charges that the company had signed collusive agreements with the AFL union were filed with the Board in June, 1944 by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The Board found that the AFL-UAW contracts were invalid because the union did not represent a majority of the employes, and the company had assisted the AFL union in executing them.

Big Four Pact Means Millions For CIO Packinghouse Workers

An agreement which the CIO United Packinghouse Workers estimate will bring between 20 and 30 million dollars to the union's members was finally reached last week in Chicago with the Big Four meat packers—Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson.

Lewis J. Clark, the union's international president, said the terms of the agreement "represent substantial gains for our membership and mark a very great step forward for our union." They were reached after many months of weary waiting while negotiations, hearings, and conferences dragged on endlessly, and the union's patience was sometimes near the breaking point.

The additional money that will go to the Big Four workers is not in the form of a wage increase, but in pay adjustments involving intra-plant inequalities and such fringe items as paid time allowed for changing clothes (12 minutes a day) an allowance of 50 cents a week for clothes, and the furnishing by the company of tools such as knives, steels, whetstones, meat trimmers and overhauling hooks.

The adjustments are retroactive to various dates extending from August, 1942, to August, 1944. The union estimates that all the adjustments and retroactivity will bring the wage gains in the four chains to a grand total of $27,842,000 divided as follows:

Swift	$9,450,000
Armour	11,275,000
Cudahy	4,118,050
Wilson	3,000,000

Negotiations with the Morrell Packing Co., which were still pending this week but are expected to be concluded shortly, will bring the total gains still higher.

Including the increases that will come to packing house workers not members of the CIO union, the UPWA estimates that the total in wage adjustments will approximate $60,000,000.

The agreement in Chicago was reached after an attempt at settlement made last week before the War Labor Board in Washington broke down. Union and company representatives then returned to Chicago and resumed negotiations which resulted in the final agreement.

UAW President Finds Kaisers' Postwar Ideas Startling But Practical

Shipbuilder Henry Kaiser, like the CIO United Auto Workers, "refuses to accept the defeatist view that mass unemployment is inevitable in the years ahead," UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said this week, following a conference with Kaiser on the West Coast.

"Accompanied by several technicians associated with the UAW-CIO," Thomas stated, "I went to California to observe the Kaiser organization at work in its manifold endeavors. I wanted also to interest Mr. Kaiser, if possible, in certain specific postwar industrial activities which would make possible utilization of displaced war workers and unused wartime facilities in the automotive industries."

Kaiser revealed certain advanced projections he has been working on in the field of motor cars, busses, community housing and mechanical housekeeping appliances, Thomas related.

"We found his conceptions in these field startingly different, but intensely practical. His entrance into production on any of these items would, I feel, provide employment and low-priced consumer goods beyond what is now being contemplated by less imaginative sections of business.

"I urged Mr. Kaiser, particularly, to enter the automotive field. In this connection I indicated the existence and availability now and in the postwar period of certain plants and facilities for which the automotive industries as now constituted say they have no plans. The Willow Run plant was one of these plants."

"No Lasting Peace in Hungry World"—Truman

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Do shivers run down your back when you think of Hoover invited to the White House again after twelve years? I guess most working people feel that way. We will never forget the complete lack of even elementary humanity which characterized the Hoover era.

It was only after Franklin Roosevelt took over that steps were taken to relieve our suffering through WPA, to protect our unions through the Wagner Act, to provide some measure of permanent assistance to the old and the unemployed through the Social Security Act and to set certain minimum standards of employment.

We don't think that a man who could do nothing to assist Americans in their great time of hunger could make any contribution to solving the food problems of our allies. And those problems are really critical. President Truman has issued an urgent appeal to us, based no doubt, on the reports of Judge Samuel Rosenman.

First drain on our resources are the tremendous military requirements.

Then comes the needs of the liberated peoples. Most of the population of France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Italy, Jugoslavia and Greece are so seriously undernourished that their health is in danger of permanent injury. Infant death rates are shockingly high. The United States is one of the few places to which they can look for help.

We must help them—not just out of common humanity but also because, as President Truman says, "There can be no lasting peace in a hungry world."

Americans will respond, too, if they understand the urgency of the need. Many groups are already in motion. From South Bend, Ind., for instance, we hear that the UAW-CIO Auxiliaries there are part of a Food For Our Allies Committee in which 23 organizations are cooperating.

What is needed is a tremendous national drive to reach every American family with information on the critical nature of the world food situation and what they can do to help. The response on the United National Clothing Drive in April was terrific.

There are two immediate steps which all of us must take now. First is to flood our Congressmen and Senators with letters urging renewal of the Price Control Act for the next year without amendment. That will ensure fair distribution of essential foods

Second is to step up our personal efforts to add to the food supply by expanding our victory gardens, by planning our home canning program, and by pledging ourselves, each in our own home, that no food is wasted.

Starvation In Europe

(Continued from Page 2)

like—and are—plenty

It is not humanity alone that makes it imperative for us to take effective steps to end this tragedy of starvation. Our own postwar security and well-being depend upon it. As Judge Rosenman reported:

"U. S. economy too, will be deeply affected unless northwest Europe again resumes its place in the international exchange of goods and services. Furthermore, a chaotic and hungry Europe is not fertile ground in which stable, democratic and friendly governments can be reared."

To have 60,000,000 jobs in this country, we have to export enough goods to keep about five million people working. The rest will be employed satisfying the domestic market. That five million, as CIO President Murray has pointed out, is the margin between prosperity and depression.

The Nazis used starvation as a political weapon. They used it to kill millions of European men, women and children, not only in gas chambers but also by the cheaper and less laborious method of starving them.

The United Nations must use food not as a weapon but as a tool of reconstruction.

Of the United Nations, the U. S. will have to play the greatest part in this reconstruction. Our country is the strongest and best producing nation, is untouched by physical war destruction. When we have done our full part in feeding the hungry and clothing the ragged, we can be certain that we have done a service to humanity, to postwar security—and to ourselves.

102 Firms Defy U. S., Four Plants Seized

U. S. seizure of four plants where management disobeyed War Labor Board orders in disputes with CIO unions has made a slight dent in the cases of employer non-compliance with WLB orders. The official WLB figures are that there are 102 cases, 42 of them involving CIO unions.

In three of the four cases in which President Truman ordered seizures within the past two weeks, one of the issues was maintenance of membership, and in the remaining unsettled cases that is the most common disputed point on which management fails to yield.

Management had disobeyed the WLB for two years before the four plants were seized. There are no cases awaiting presidential action, and the fact that President Truman has cleared off his desk is regarded as showing a stiffening attitude on the part of the White House to employers disobeying the WLB.

The WLB admits that most of the 102 cases are pretty old. CIO representatives say many of them are awaiting hearings from WLB before they are sent to Stabilization Director Davis who in turn sends them to the White House. Others are in various stages of the long, tedious process before hearings. In addition there are a large number of employer non-compliance cases awaiting action by the regional WLBs.

Plants seized, the issues and unions involved and who seized them follow: Humble Oil and Refining Co. plant, Ingleside, Tex., a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, maintenance of union membership, the Oil Workers Intl. Union; seized by Petroleum Administrator Ickes.

Pure Oil Co.'s Cabin Creek Oil Field, Dawes, W. Va., maintenance of membership, checkoff and other contract provisions, the Oil Workers Intl. Union, seized by Petroleum Administrator Ickes.

Gaffney Mfg. Co., Gaffney, S. C., check-off, Textile Workers Union, seized by the Army.

Mary-Leila Cotton Mills, Inc., Greensboro, Ga., checkoff and maintenance of membership, Textile Workers Union, seized by the Army.

Detective Chief Says CIO Program Fights Crime

THE CIO program of full employment and good wages was hailed by Walter C. Monaghan, inspector of Pittsburgh detectives, as the best guarantee against a lawless America in the post-war era at a meeting of employees of the Pittsburgh Steel Foundry Corp., of Glassport, last week.

"Whether this country will experience a major post-war crime wave similar to the one which swept the country after World War I or not will depend on whether we offer the returning servicemen and the millions now employed jobs or breadlines," Inspector Monaghan said.

After paying tribute to the "immeasurable contribution which American industry and labor have made to the recently won victory in Europe and to the approaching inevitable victory in the Pacific," Inspector Monaghan said that, together, they can do an equally magnificent job in the era of peace.

Inspector Monaghan recommended adoption by all industries and by all labor, unorganized as well as organized, of the Labor-Management Post-War Charter drawn up by Philip Murray, CIO president; William Green, president of the AFL; and Eric Johnston, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

"War," Inspector Monaghan stated, "doesn't make criminals though it may sometimes expose previously suppressed criminal inhibitions. Killing does not necessarily make a killer and the men in our Armed Forces make a distiction between killing for the honor of and in defense of one's country and killing solely to steal another's purse. Desperation, however, born of hunger and destitution could easily warp a man's reason to the point where he could no longer make this distinction."

He asked what better solution could be offered than that proposed by Philip Murray, president of the CIO—full employment at good wages, a good home, educational opportunities for all children, insurance against unemployment, sickness, old age and premature death.

Union Men Heroes Of Franklin

CIO members in the Navy who miraculously escaped death on the USS Franklin, the Navy's 27,000-ton aircraft carrier which refused to be sunk despite two direct hits by Jap armor-piercing bombs, tell a vivid story of heroism and devotion to duty.

John Steffora, seaman, second class, a member of Local 171, CIO United Steelworkers, at the Superior Steel Corp., Carnegie, Pa., was manning a gun when the Franklin was hit.

When his gun was knocked out he held a firehose alongside Lt. Comdr. Joseph T. O'Callahan, the hero-chaplain on the ship, and helped fight the holocaust all that day and through the next night. "The chaplain who risked his life a dozen times, had more courage than any man I've ever seen," Steffora said.

Guido Cavallo, yeoman, third class, of Akron, Ohio, member of Local 5 CIO Rubber Workers at the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., recalls he was "living on borrowed time, thanks to Providence and a shipmate who gave me his life jacket a couple of minutes before he perished in the sea."

IN SEA FIVE HOURS

Fire and smoke stopped Cavallo from reaching his battle station after the first bomb exploded. Finally he worked his way to the fantail where he found fresh air and hope of safety. Cavallo then jumped overboard and spent five hours in the water before a destroyer picked him up.

Calvin F. Corrigall, another CIO United Steelworker member on board, a member of Local 897 at the Ross Heater & Mfg. Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., braved intense flames to reach his post in the engine room. While bombs and rockets exploded above, Corrigall donned a gas mask and tried to put the ship's engines in operation again. "When fumes and smoke saturated one mask," Corrigall said, "we would just put on another. We seemed to have plenty of masks."

Union Contract Remains Valid

By unanimous action, the War Labor Board has directed that a union contract be continued in full effect, despite a change in ownership of the plant. This order pertained to the Erdette Hosiery Mill, Curdensville, Pa., which must continue to comply with a contract with the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers which includes a closed shop provision originally agreed to in 1941.

Murray Urges U.S. World Trade Study

CREATION of a U. S. inter-departmental committee to survey foreign trade and its relations to full employment, with representatives of labor, industry and agriculture acting in an official advisory capacity was urged by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a statement submitted last week to the Foreign Trade Subcommittee of the Senate Small Business Committee.

Murray said that the CIO favors eternal vigilance by the Dept. of Justice under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act against monopoly, and expressed the hope that the United Nations and especially the Big Three would destroy, if possible, cartels which have their roots in the Axis countries.

"We of the CIO hope," he continued, "that the Depts. of Commerce and State and the Treasury are jointly working on a program to tie together the machinery of Bretton Woods (both the Stabilization Fund and the World Bank), with the Export-Import Bank, the Reciprocal Trade Agreements, the facilities of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and the Foreign Economic Administration.

"The time is coming when the administration should set up some inter-departmental committee which can survey the entire field of U. S. foreign commerce and relate its findings to full employment after the war. In such an undertaking, industry, labor and agriculture should be consulted, and enjoy some official advisory capacity."

During Vacation Go Back to Farm

The War Manpower Commission in New York is urging at least ten thousand workers to voluntarily give up their vacations this summer and work on the farms in upstate New York.

CIO Broadcast To Urge Bond Sales

"Buy a Bond" will be the keynote of a special radio broadcast conducted by the CIO on June 19 on the Blue Network between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, in a special bond drive program.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St. - Chicago, Ill.

L. J. IMBER COMPANY
Founded by L. J. Imber, Formerly of Green Duck Co.

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS

for ADVERTISING
UNION DUES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS
EMPLOYEES' BADGES
Recognized Union Labels
No Charge for Designs and Sketches
Also Specializing in
Light and Heavy Stamping
Coining and Embossing
Small, Intricate and Special Stampings.
Tools and Dies
N. Y. Representative
HERBERT R. LERMAN
AL. 4-3356
37 E. 14th St.
Detroit Representative
Herbert E. Lennig
Trinity 1-4600
6432 Cass Avenue
(Directly across from UAW-CIO Office)
L. J. IMBER COMPANY BRUnswick 7815
1725-41 W. North Ave.
CHICAGO, 22, ILLINOIS

SEALS - STAMPS

"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
Stencils Dues Bronze
Badges Buttons Tablets
THE BAUMGARTEN COMPANY
925 11th St., N.W.
100% UNION MADE
SEALS
RUBBER STAMPS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

VACATION WITH EDUCATION: Members of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers—social workers, office employees, insurance agents, bank clerks and other white collarites—will combine study and play at the union's summer school to be held on the campus of the University of Wisconsin at beautiful Lake Mendota, the week of July 30—Aug. 5.

The school project, arranged by the UOPWA in cooperation with the Abraham Lincoln School in Chicago, is intended to promote better leadership among the union's members. In between studying union history, policies, procedure, the American and World Scene, students will boat, fish, swim, hike, dance and play tennis.

The above picture shows a group of UOPWA students on the lawn at last year's session at Lake Mendota, listening to Morris Yanoff, UOPWA regional director, who will be one of the instructors again this year.

UAW GRADUATES: This group of workers from the Delco Remy plant, Anderson, Ind., finished a course at the United Auto Workers' summer school held last year at the University of Indiana. A similar course will be given there and at other educational institutions this summer.

Book Review

Case for Annual Wages

The first popular treatment in book form of the case for the much discussed annual wage has just been published by the University of Minnesota Press.

"Guaranteed Annual Wages," by Jack Chernick and George C. Hellickson, presents the theory that the traditional wage system is out-of-date, and that for the well-being of individuals and for society as a whole, it must be supplanted by a wage system that will stabilize the operation of the nation's economy.

As former Pres. Roosevelt said when he went on record publicly for the annual wage, what counts is "How much a fellow gets by December 31st instead of how much he gets per hour," the authors point out.

The book reviews some annual wage pioneers and their ideas, and describes three of the well established annual wage plans operated by the Proctor & Gamble soap concern, Nunn-Bush shoe manufacturers and Hormel & Co., meat packers of Austin, Minn.

It is the Hormel plan, started in 1931, and extended to a plant-wide basis in 1935 that is of most interest to the CIO as the company has an agreement with a local of the United Packinghouse Workers. This plan was worked out by (1) determining the annual volume of work; (2) estimating the man-hours of labor required to turn out the work; and (3) figuring the labor costs for the year on the basis of going hourly wage scales.

"By distributing the labor-cost figure among employes in 52 installments the company was able to overcome the former inevitable correlation between the working hours and earnings in any one week," the writers state.

What the Hormel plan has meant to the prosperity of the Minnesota town is described in a chapter called "Austin Speaks for Itself" which reports that the annual wage system is "favored alike by management, workers and the community at large. Social consequences of the Layoff are outlined in the final chapter.

Guaranteed Annual Wages by Jack Chernick and George C. Hellickson; University of Minnesota Press, Minneapolis.

A poll taken by Negro Digest of a cross-section of the Negro population shows that most Negroes favor the CIO over the AFL: Here are the figures:

	AFL	CIO	Undecided
North	14%	79%	7%
West	11%	82%	7%
South	19%	67%	14%

Negroes Rate CIO Fairer, Poll Shows

